Foreign Corporations - Federal legislation register.pdf

Legal capacity of minors - repl from Rita Saffioti MLA.pdf

OCRF97169658 - Redacted-Watermarked.pdf

re-affirmation of Affidavit by Sandi.pdf

Large Business & International (Australia AG).pdf

brief intro.pdf

Family Court of Western Australia. 8011 of 2022-31 Oct 2024-Brief 31-10-2024 (3).pdf

Estate of Matic. inherritance-31 Oct 2024-Settlement and discharge for MATIC Estate &termination of unwanted trusts (1).pdf

SAT-PER-GAA-3040-2024-Sandi-MATIC-10-Death-notification-Federal-Bereu-of-statis.pdf beneficial ownership.pdf

page95.pdf

Masters and Servants Act 1892 - [00-00-00].pdf

Law Reform (Contributory Negligence and Tortfeasors' Contribution) Act 1947 Western-Australian-Government.pdf

Maureen2.pdf

Extracted pages from Anotated constitution of Australia.pdf

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH.pdf

beneficial ownership end.pdf

LRC-Project-025-1-Working-Paper.pdf

Perpetuation of Testimony Act 1842 (Imp) - [01-b0-03].pdf

nab-beneficiary-info-trust-accounts (1).pdf

#for ATO.pdf

self-ownership-and-despotism-locke-on-property-in-the-person-divine-dominium-of-human-life-and-rights-forfeiture.pdf

Martin Bennett_ Lawyer representing Lin...pdf

Federal law court enquiry.pdf

RE_ AHRC Make a Complaint Form [SEC=OFFICIAL].pdf

IRS non-residwent non-citizen return estate f706na.pdf

Federal police report.docx non-residwent non-citizen return estate f706na.pdf (SECURED).html

RR100027995XX to ASIC 08-JAN-2025.pdf

721661481-cliam-depository-insurance-2.pdf

SANDI PRIVATE BANKING CORPORATION - AUSTRAC.pdf

Decree abslut deposit to archive.html

ato print.pdf

Foreign_Investment_Confirmation_Of_Registration_2411104820723 (1).pdf

sandi trust company.pdf

SANDI USPS.pdf

ATO TAX FILE NUMBERS - EST.MATIC00.pdf

SAT-nwe filing Births-Deaths-and-Marriages-Registration-Act-1998.pdf

sANDI - SAT ref 4161 pof 2024GAA.pdf

Tender for SAT.PDF

TENDER OF EVIDENCE FOR SAT.PDF

AUSTRAC - MATIC.pdf

F56 - Eleanor sanitized.pdf

SANDI - ARN Foreign_Investment_Confirmation_Of_Registration_2410981816919.pdf

Pavao N Sabina Matic - family enterprize.pdf

Proof of Life.pdf

SAT-PER-GAA-3040-2024-Est.-MATIC-2-Order-Senior-Member-Eleanor-Marillier-24-Jun (3).pdf

unnamed baby matic - GAA-Application-Other-Guardianship-and-Administration-applications.pdf

Consul-General-04-10-2022.pdf

Second Treatise of Government - John Locke, 2004 (55p).pdf

1. Affidavit of Sandi in Support of MOtion for summary dismissal.pdf

No requirement to Changing your name _ Western Australian Government.pdf

Appointment of Attorney and Trustees - State Trustees VIC.pdf

sandi employer.pdf

Foreign Corporations.pdf

Foreign coporation (applicaiton of laws) NAA.pdf

NAKNADNI_UPIS_U_MATIČNU_KNJIGU_ROĐENIH.pdf

NAKNADNI_UPIS_U_MATIČNU_KNJIGU_UMRLIH.pdf

New chronological table of events of remarkable events and inventions also area country and writing forlearned men.pdf

Notice that Corporation is not to be placed under Special Administration.pdf

Odluka o Centralnom registru kredita pos. subjekata i fizičkih lica u BiH.pdf

Odluka o izmjenama i dopunama Odluke o CRK.pdf

odluka_indeks_en.pdf

Other trading names file _ ABR.pdf

Pavao HBF statement.pdf

SAT-SAT-PER-GAA-4468-2024-Unnamed-Baby-Deceased-MATIC-6-Order-eLodged.pdf

PAVAOintegrated.infotrack.com.au_Order_Print_171266476.pdf

Pavao-nikola matic AML.pdf

PaymentInstruction.pdf

POTVRDA_O_ŽIVOTU.pdf

PRAVILNIK O JEDINSTVENOJ STRUKTURI ELEKTRONSKE BAZE PODATAKA ZA MATICNI REGISTAR I NACIN VODENJA I KORISTENJA REGISTRA.pdf

Pravilnik o obrascima maticnih knjiga (1).pdf

Pravilnik o obrascima maticnih knjiga.pdf

PRAVILNIK O OBRASCIMA MATIČNIH KNJIGA, INDEKSA MATIČNIH KNJIGA.pdf

Privacy info Printed condensed.pdf

PRIZNANJE_OČINSTVA.pdf

Property and Security Request.pdf

r matic n s matic credit-report-54483919539-02-09-2025.pdf

RapidID Report CAMP0948818e-9be6-41be-8f48-f660453b81a3.pdf

RapidID Report CAMPe268bad4-7065-4db9-ad6c-2931f13a4b4b.pdf

RapidID Report IKAU09a23006-31d8-4798-9194-54480f15f1ea (1).pdf

RapidID Report IKAU09a23006-31d8-4798-9194-54480f15f1ea.pdf

Real Property (Foreign Governments) Act 1951 - [01-c0-05].pdf

Real Property_Cestui Que Vie Act, 6 Anne c. 72 (Imperial).pdf

Reclaim_Property_Dossier.pdf

Reconciliation_Statement - COURTS.pdf

Revocation of general non-enduring power of attorney form.pdf

Right to self determination.pdf

Rodni List i Smrtovnica zahtjev - Canberra.pdf

S2 - Pravilnik o obrascima maticnih knjiga.pdf

Sabina Matic Travel document.pdf

SAM - Sandi Matic.pdf

SANDI MATIC, Estate EIN.pdf

sandi - ARN (1).pdf

Sandi - ARN 1254783 - Civil Authority.pdf

SANDI - ARN Foreign_Investment_Confirmation_Of_Registration_2410981816919.pdf

sandi - ARN.pdf

Sandi - ASIC Application.pdf

sandi 3656609113904.pdf

SANDI MATIC - ACC1113275.pdf

SANDI MATIC - ACN 664173602 - Business Profile _ Credit Report.pdf

SANDI MATIC - credit-report-685111166-2025-08-04.pdf

SANDI MATIC (FATCA) YMGEBN.pdf

SANDI MATIC 664173602.pdf

saNDI MATIC AND MATIC SANDI FAMILY TRUST.PDF

SANDI MATIC Bus No. 664173602.pdf

SANDI MATIC COMPANIES - SwiftCheck.pdf

SANDI MATIC credit-report-685111166-02-09-2025.pdf

SANDI MATIC Equifax_Credit_Report_2025-01-08.pdf

SANDI MATIC integrated.infotrack.com.au_Order_Print_171266459.pdf

sandi matic integrated.infotrack.com.au_Order_Print_171266463.pdf

SANDI MATIC IRRV LIVING TR - EIN 98-612378.pdf

SANDI MATIC LIVING MAN NAME - credit-report-77519220587-02-09-2025.pdf

SANDI MATIC LIVING MAN NAME.pdf

SANDI MATIC NORFOLK ISLAND.pdf

SANDI MATIC OF 3 19 POLLARD STREET GLENDALOUGH, NATIONAL TRUST, AS INDENTURE TRUSTEE (2).pdf

SANDI MATIC OF 3 19 POLLARD STREET GLENDALOUGH, NATIONAL TRUST, AS INDENTURE TRUSTEE (3).pdf

Sandi Matic probate-application (3).pdf

SANDI MATIC Registration of Business Name.PDF

SANDI MATIC STRIKEOFF.pdf

sandi matic trace claim.pdf

Sandi Matic Trust Estate & Premier Mortgage Group, Inc..pdf

Sandi Matic-2000119536-CEA.pdf

Sandi Non resident TFN Print _ Australian Taxation Office.pdf

Sandi private banking corporation (A.B.N. 26 708 014 818).pdf

Sandi private banking corporation.pdf

Sandi profile HBOSA emaidates.pdf

Sandi profile HBOSA email.pdf

SANDI ROBINSON Notice of Assessment - Norfolk Island.pdf

Sandi SAM.pdf

Sandi Sandi NAA.pdf

Sandi Travel Permit ID.pdf

SANDI USPS.pdf

Sandi.339446-petition.pdf

Sandi.pdf

Sandi_Folio.pdf

SANDI_MATIC_Appointment paul jevtovic (1).pdf

SANDI-Foreign-ID.pdf

Sandi-foreign-travel-permit.pdf

sandi-MATIC credit-report-24468681145-01-08-2025 (1).pdf

SandiMatic Minnesotta.pdf

sandimatic_sandimatic_classic_asc_desc_x_sandi__1753739559_330x380.pdf

Sandi-myheritage.pdf

Sandi-operational-need.pdf

Sandi-UCC308-2024.pdf

Sandi-unknown-myheritage.pdf

SAT-PER-GAA-3040-2024-Sandi-MATIC-14-Order-Senior-Member-Eleanor-Marillier-10-S.pdf

SAT-PER-GAA-4468-2024-Unnamed-Baby-Deceased-MATIC-6-Order-Member-Rebecca-Bunney.pdf

SAT-PER-GAA-4707-2023-Anna-Clare-ROBINSON-7-Order-Senior-Member-Eleanor-Marilli.pdf

SAT-SAT-PER-GAA-3040-2024-Sandi-MATIC-9-Notice-of-Non-Legal-Rep-eLodged.pdf

SAT-SAT-PER-GAA-3040-2024-Sandi-MATIC-11-Death-notification-eLodged.pdf

SAT-SAT-PER-GAA-4161-2024-Estate-Luka-Nikola-MATIC-5-Joinder-Request-eLodged.pdf

SAT-SAT-PER-GAA-4468-2024-Unnamed-Baby-Deceased-MATIC-5-Joinder-Request-eLodged.pdf

LawTermFinder - Faculty of Human Sciences - Macquarie University.pdf

Letter from S Matic dated 3.11.2022.pdf

Letters-Dr-Cobinrck-2017.pdf

Mental Health assessment - second false imprisonment.pdf

PPSR binder with filings and evidence.pdf

Prosecution notice document history.pdf

Statement of MATIC, Sandi dated 21 Oct 20.pdf

Victim Impact Statement - Sandi Matic.pdf

NAA: A1559, 1989/183

Series number: A1559

Control symbol: 1989/183

Barcode: 30496960

Number of pages: 5

Title: Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989 - (An Act relating to the law to be applied in determining certain questions relating to foreign corporations, and for related purposes)

Copies of this record are provided for research or study purposes. Before making use of the material for other purposes (for example publication) please refer to information on copyright obligations and citing archival records available on our website at www.naa.gov.au.

Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989

No. 183 of 1989

National Archives of Australia NAA: A1559, 1989/183

Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989

No. 183 of 1989

An Act relating to the law to be applied in determining certain questions relating to foreign corporations, and for related purposes

BE IT ENACTED by the Queen, and the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Australia, as follows:

Short title

1. This Act may be cited as the Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989.

Commencement

2. This Act commences on the day on which it receives the Royal Assent.

Interpretation

3. In this Act, unless the contrary intention appears:

"asset" means property of any kind, and includes:

(a) any legal or equitable estate or interest (whether present or future, vested or contingent, tangible or intangible) in real or personal property of any description; and

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A1559, 1989/183

(b) any chose in action; and

(c) any right, interest or claim of any kind in or in relation to property (whether arising under an instrument or otherwise, and whether liquidated or unliquidated, certain or contingent, accrued or accruing);

"Australia" includes all the external Territories;

"Australian court" means a federal court or a court of a State or Territory;

"Australian law" means:

(a) a law in force throughout Australia; or

(b) a law of, or in force in, a part of Australia; and includes the principles and rules of the common law and equity as so in force;

"body" includes an association, entity or society;

"entity" includes an executive entity and, in sections 8 and 9, also includes a legislative or judicial entity;

"foreign corporation" means a body or person incorporated in a place outside Australia;

"incorporate" includes form;

"law" includes written and unwritten law;

"officer", in relation to a foreign corporation, includes a director, secretary, executive officer, agent or employee of the foreign corporation;

"place" means a place that, in practice, applies a separate system of law.

Extraterritorial operation of Act

4. This Act applies both within and outside Australia.

Extension of Act to external Territories

5. This Act extends to each of the external Territories.

Act to bind Crown

6. This Act binds the Crown in right of the Commonwealth, each of the States, the Australian Capital Territory, the Northern Territory and Norfolk Island.

Law applied in place of incorporation applicable law in determining questions relating to status of foreign corporation etc.

7. (1) The section applies in relation to the determination of a question arising under Australian law (including a question arising in a proceeding in an Australian court) where it is necessary to determine the question by reference to a system of law other than Australian law.

(2) Any question relating to whether a body or person has been validly incorporated in a place outside Australia is to be determined by reference to the law applied by the people in that place.

(3) Any question relating to:

(a) the status of a foreign corporation (including its identity as a legal entity and its legal capacity and powers); or

(b) the membership of a foreign corporation; or

(c) the shareholders of a foreign corporation having a share capital; or

(d) the officers of a foreign corporation; or

(e) the rights and liabilities of the members or officers of a foreign corporation, or the shareholders of a foreign corporation having a share capital, in relation to the corporation; or

(f) the existence, nature or extent of any other interest in a foreign corporation; or

(g) the internal management and proceedings of a foreign corporation; or

(h) the validity of a foreign corporation's dealings otherwise than with outsiders; is to be determined by reference to the law applied by the people in the place in which the foreign corporation was incorporated.

(4) A matter mentioned in subsection (2) or (3) is not to be taken, by implication, to limit any other matter mentioned in those subsections.

Certain acts not to be recognised etc.

8. Where an act of a foreign state, or an entity of a foreign state:

(a) purports to affect a foreign corporation or its assets or dealings; and

(b) the act is based on, or derives from, the assertion of sovereignty or other authority over the place in which the foreign corporation was incorporated; the act is not to be recognised, or in any way given effect to, under Australian law unless it is recognised, and would be given effect to, under the law applied by the people in the place in which the foreign corporation was incorporated.

Recognition or non-recognition irrelevant consideration in application of Act etc.

9. (1) It is the intention of the Parliament that the application of this Act is not to be affected by the recognition or non-recognition, at any time, by Australia:

(a) of a foreign state or place; or

(b) of the government of a foreign state or place; or

(c) that a place forms part of a foreign state; or

(d) of the entities created, organised or operating under the law applied by the people in a foreign state or place.

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A1559, 1989/183

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), it is also the intention of the Parliament that the application of this Act is not to be affected by the presence or absence, at any time, of diplomatic relations between Australia and any foreign state or place.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that the above is a fair print of the Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Bill 1989 which originated in the Senate and has been finally passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Harry Evans
Clerk of the Senate

IN THE NAME OF HER MAJESTY, I assent to this Act.

Bill Hayden
Governor-General
29 DEC 1989

Printed by Authority by the Commonwealth Government Printer (230/89)

National Archives of Australia
NAA: A1559, 1989/183

National Archives of Australia NAA: A1559, 1989/183

NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF AUSTRALIA

NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

Series number: A432

Control symbol: BAD1989/14272

Barcode: 24259472

Number of pages: 206

Title: Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1990 - Companies and Securities aspects

Copies of this record are provided for research or study purposes. Before making use of the material for other purposes (for example publication) please refer to information on copyright obligations and citing archival records available on our website at www.naa.gov.au.

CONFIDENTIAL

FILE NUMBER
BAD89/14272

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT
(CENTRAL OFFICE)

PREV. FILE

LATER FILE

FILE TITLE:
FOREIGN CORPORATIONS (APPLICATION OF LAWS) ACT 19~~90~~89 :
COMPANIES AND SECURITIES ASPECTS

OPENED: 18/09/89 CLOSED: __/__/__ PREVIOUS FILES: 0

EACH OFFICER TO ENTER INITIALS WHEN CLEARING FOLIO
SENDING OFFICER MUST NOT INITIAL HIS OUTWARD ENTRY

Folio No.	Referred to and date	Cleared		Folio No.	Referred to and date	Cleared
		Initials	Date			Initials	Date
	S. YEN 3 1.90		10/8/93
	H. Neville		12/8/93
	P/A		12.8.93.

DISPOSAL ACTION
RDA 1134/14.1
RP
1989-90

FILE NO.
BAD 89-14272

Archival Action:

AG555(4/89)

CONFIDENTIAL

89014272

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

RELATED FILES

File No.	Title

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE OF FILE

Before directing any further movement of file:
Clear the reference to yourself by writing initials and date in column 3.

TO DIRECT MOVEMENT OF FILE:

(a) To Another Officer: Write the appropriate folio number in column 1, and the name of the officer to whom the file is to be referred in column 2.

If the file to be referred to more than one officer, list the names in column 2, prefixing them with (1), (2), etc.

(b) For Resubmit: Write the appropriate folio number in column 1, and the symbol 'R/S', the name of the officer to whom the file is to be resubmitted and the date it is required in column 2.

Column 3 will be completed by Registry.

(c) For Put-Away: Write Symbol 'P/A', initials and date in column 2.

Column 3 will be completed by Registry.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF AUSTRALIA

STATEMENT OF REASONS FOR DECISION UNDER SECTION 40(5) OF THE ARCHIVES ACT 1983

Series	A432
Control Symbol	BAD1989/14272
Item ID	24259472
Title	Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1990 - Companies and Securities aspects
Decision Maker	ECooper
Designation	APS 6
Date	13 AUGUST 2024

In accordance with requirements of subsection 8(1) of the Archives Act 1983 (Cth) (Archives Act), I am a person authorised by the Director-General, pursuant to an Instrument of Delegation, to make a decision in relation to access to the requested item.

Basis for decision

In making my decision, I considered:

- the content of the item requested
- the relevant provisions of the Archives Act 1983
- policy and guidelines of National Archives of Australia that relate to the access examination of Commonwealth records
- information provided by Commonwealth agencies which I have relied upon in formulating my decision

Decision

After examining this item I have decided that this item is open with exception under 33(1)(a), (d) and 33(2)(a)(b) of the Archives Act for the reasons set out below.

184 folios [fo. 46 - 51, 87 - 92, 107 - 133, 148, 156 - 189, 196 - 228, 232 - 264, 313 - 315, 339 - 348 & 356 – 359] have been fully exempt from public access.

The findings of facts

Section 33(1)(a) of the Archives Act 1983 provides that:

a record is exempt from public access if it contains information or matter the disclosure of which under this Act could reasonably be expected to cause damage to the security, defence or international relations of the Commonwealth.

This item contains:

- Details which if disclosed could affect the Commonwealth's relations with the current government of a foreign country.
- Information that reveals the areas of interest of Australian intelligence agencies.
- Information relevant to the capability, sources, objectives, methods, areas of interest or operations of an Australian intelligence agency. The information is still regarded as sensitive.

Section 33(1)(d) of the Archives Act 1983 provides that:

a record is exempt from public access if it contains information or matter the disclosure of which under this Act would constitute a breach of confidence.

This item contains information provided in confidence.

Section 33(2) of the Archives Act 1983 provides that a Commonwealth record is an exempt record if it is of such a nature that:

(a) it would be privileged from production in legal proceedings on the ground of legal professional privilege; and

(b) disclosure of the record would be contrary to the public interest.

This item contains:

- Information provided by a legal practitioner relating to matters which could still be considered confidential.
- Information which could subject a third party to legal proceedings.
- Information which may have contemporary relevance, and which could prejudice the legal position of the Commonwealth in the event of future legal proceedings.

Reasons for decision

Section 33(1)(a)
International relations are dependent upon the adequate flow of information between one country and another. If sensitive information was disclosed, it could lessen the confidence of a foreign government in the Australian Government and thus damage international relations.

The public disclosure of this information could compromise the future activities of Australian intelligence agencies and impair their ability to carry out their statutory functions. It would therefore reasonably be expected to cause damage to the defence and security of the Commonwealth.

National Archives of Australia NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

Section 33(1)(d)
The information was provided with the expectation that it would remain confidential

The public disclosure of this information would constitute a breach of confidence.

There is no evidence that this information was ever published or that the subject of the file ever expected publication.

Section 33(2)(a)(b)
There was a client-solicitor relationship in existence at the time the item was created. The advice was provided by a qualified legal practitioner and was not for administrative purposes

If legal proceedings were undertaken the legal advice that was provided to the client would be privileged from being tendered in evidence on the grounds of legal professional privilege.

There is no evidence that the legal professional privilege has been waived or withdrawn by the client in the intervening period. Nor has the advice been made public.

The information continues to be sensitive despite the passage of time and the information has enduring confidentiality.

The public's interest to know about the decisions of government is outweighed by the need for the information to be protected from release because of ongoing sensitivities. Therefore, it would be contrary to the public interest for information to be disclosed.

Review of decision
The National Archives of Australia (the Archives) carefully examines items before deciding to exempt any part of them. As part of that process we may consult with other agencies which have expertise on specific national and international matters.

If you do not agree with the decision, you can formally appeal within 28 days of receiving a decision:

1. by first applying to the Archives for an internal reconsideration of my decision; and

2. if you still do not agree with the decision, you can apply to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal for a review.

For more information please see What to do if we refuse you access (https://www.naa.gov.au/help-your-research/using-collection/access-records-under-archives-act/what-do-if-we-refuse-you-access).

National Archives of Australia NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S

FILE TRANSFER ADVICE

AG117(8/

TO BE KEPT ON TOP OF FILE

It is imperative for a transfer advice slip to be completed and forwarded to Registry when a file is passed by hand to another person. This advice is used to update Registry records and so enable immediate location of the file.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S

FILE TRANSFER ADVICE

AG117(8/89)

File No .... has been passed to

....

.... Initials

.... Time

........../........../19.......... Date

National Archives of Australia NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

Commonwealth of Australia
ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT
CANBERRA

BAD89/14272

Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989

Mr Yen — Thanks.

~~Mr O'Callaghan~~
Noted,
Thanks
25.1.90

~~Mr~~ C Creswell
Acting First Assistant Secretary
Business Affairs Division

I refer to your note to Mr O'Callaghan of 17 January 1990 concerning the Bill for the Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989 ('the Act').

2. The Department of Industry, Technology and Commerce is responsible for the Act. Its primary purpose is to encourage certain foreign investment by clarifying the status of bodies incorporated in unrecognised entities in Australia. Our Department's input was largely provided by Mr H Burmester, Special Adviser (International Law). During the drafting of the Bill, comments were also made by interested parties in Justice, Criminal Law and this Division.

3. I would add that the Bill was introduced and passed by both Houses of Parliament on 21 December 1989. It received Royal Assent on 29 December 1989.

Stephen Yen

(STEPHEN YEN)
for Senior Assistant Secretary
Companies and Securities Branch
Business Affairs Division

25 January 1990

29 JAN 1990

TRADE

Taiwan's China Steel is getting local advice on the siting of a proposed $4 billion steel mill in Australia.

Forging closer ties with Taiwan

By John McIlwraith

A more flexible Federal Government policy towards Taiwan is expected to lead to the introduction of flights from there to Australia by Qantas by the end of this year, and, in the longer term, a major joint venture to establish a steelworks.

Sources in Canberra working on these prospects claim that a major review — admittedly only the latest over many years — is examining Australia's ambivalent relationship with Taiwan.

They claim that most Cabinet ministers would like to see some form of recognition, allowing for the massive increase in trade and tourism that appears possible (a figure of $500 million a year has been estimated).

China's increasing tolerance of ties with Taiwan is regarded as a major factor in encouraging this quasi-recognition, given that Prime Minister Bob Hawke's strong links with Beijing would preclude any shift in policy that did not receive at least tacit Chinese approval.

However, the current upheaval in China is seen in Canberra as a possible deterrent to any immediate change in our attitude towards Taiwan. In the medium term, if reforms do occur, the thaw between Beijing and Taipei could be accelerated. A strengthening of the Austrade presence in Taipei is already planned.

The latest catalyst for closer ties with Taiwan is a proposal to build a $4 billion mill in Australia to export semi-processed steel to Taiwan, which faces a considerable shortfall in domestic production in the next few years. The China Steel Corp, which is almost completely owned by the Taiwanese Government but is in a process of partial privatisation, would ultimately own less than half the project here, with Australian investors being offered at least 40 per cent. The balance would be in the hands of other Taiwanese interests.

The new Australian steel plant, the first not owned by BHP, would lift Australian production by 40 per cent. Almost all of it would be exported to Taiwan, earning $1.5 billion a year in foreign exchange.

The siting of the new steel mill is to be investigated by the Australian consultants to China Steel, the Perth merchant bank Hawkins Court. The bank's chairman, Ken Court, says it would require a construction workforce of 10,000, and a permanent staff of 6000, with a plant using the latest steel-making technology. A Canberra official pointed out the role that the Court family has played in maintaining trade links during the long period in which there have been no official ties.

Hawkins Court chairman Ken Court
Family has maintained trade link.

Ken and his father Sir Charles Court, the former West Australian Premier, are also acknowledged by sources in the WA Labor Government as being the most influential figures in Australian-Taiwanese relations.

Ken Court says the detailed information on the project would be assembled in the next six months and a decision could be expected by the end of next year. If the decision is favourable, it would still be five years from now before the venture was commissioned.

Although the impetus has come from West Australian interests (and China Steel is discussing other iron ore processing proposals with the West Australian Government), the steel mill is unlikely to be built in the Pilbara region.

High capital costs, distance from sources of coking coal, and lack of infrastructure in that region would offset the proximity to vast deposits of iron ore.

Sites in South Australia, Queensland and New South Wales would be considered. A port capable of handling vessels of 250,000 tonnes would be essential.

The WA Government, which maintains its own low-key office in Taipei, is optimistic about attracting some type of iron ore processing operation to the Pilbara, using perhaps direction reduction or electric furnace technology.

It is also negotiating with CRA Ltd to launch a venture using the company's new Hismelt process to treat Pilbara iron ore. There remain two major obstacles to the Taiwanese proposal — the need to legitimise the relationship with Australia, and competition from Canada, which has the added attraction of the free-trade agreement with the US, thus giving the Taiwanese access. Other countries considered by the Taiwanese include Brazil and South Africa.

However, Ken Court suggests that Taiwan's appetite for steel is likely to grow to the extent that it could require at least two joint-venture projects.

For example, it will increase imports of steel this year from 2.5 million to 3 million tonnes, and the figure is expected to continue to rise, despite the fact that China Steel recently increased its capacity to 5.65 million tonnes annually.

Environmental problems (mainly associated with a shortage of land on the island) will inhibit further growth of the domestic industry.

Court has been negotiating for the past seven years, and the agreement to carry out a feasibility study was completed only three weeks ago.

Hawkins Court, a second board company on the Perth exchange, has no plans at this stage to acquire an equity interest in the steel venture. ■

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

377

Commonwealth of Australia
ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT
CANBERRA

BAD89/14272

Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989

Mr C Creswell
Acting First Assistant Secretary
Business Affairs Division

I refer to your note to Mr O'Callaghan of 17 January 1990 concerning the Bill for the Foreign Corporations (Application of Laws) Act 1989 ('the Act').

2. The Department of Industry, Technology and Commerce is responsible for the Act. Its primary purpose is to encourage certain foreign investment by clarifying the status of bodies incorporated in unrecognised entities in Australia. Our Department's input was largely provided by Mr H Burmester, Special Adviser (International Law). During the drafting of the Bill, comments were also made by interested parties in Justice, Criminal Law and this Division.

3. I would add that the Bill was introduced and passed by both Houses of Parliament on 21 December 1989. It received Royal Assent on 29 December 1989.

SY

(STEPHEN YEN)
for Senior Assistant Secretary
Companies and Securities Branch
Business Affairs Division

25 January 1990

13. Overall, in my view, the introduction of the proposed legislation would not involve a breach of clause 47 of the Formal Agreement. Nor does the proposed legislation otherwise create any major difficulties vis-a-vis the co-operative scheme legislation. Generally speaking, the provisions dealing with foreign companies in this legislation presuppose the existance of a company that will be recognised by the courts. The proposed legislation simply complements these provisions by ensuring such recognition where the principles of private international law may deny it on the basis of the status of entity enacting the incorporating law.

Corporations Act 1989

14. The position in regard to the Corporations Act 1989 appears to be similar. Part 2.2, Division 3 and Part 4.1, Divisions 2 and 3 of that Act correspond to the transfer of incorporation and registration of foreign companies provisions previously discussed, respectively, with some modifications reflecting the national character of the legislation. In regard to the winding up provisions, s.350 and ss.583 and 585 of the Corporations Act correspond to ss.518 and 470 of the Companies Act and Codes respectively. Apart from the possible desirability of clarifying the drafting instructions in regard to the external administration of foreign corporations, there does not appear to be any difficulty with the Corporations Act operating alongside the proposed legislation, for the reasons already discussed. Similar advantages will result.

(Stephen Yen)
Companies and Securities Branch
Business Affairs Division

23 October 1989

31

Conflict of Laws

in Australia

Fourth Edition

P E Nygh
LLM (Syd) SJD (Mich)
A Judge of the Family Court of Australia

BUTTERWORTHS

SYDNEY — MELBOURNE — BRISBANE — ADELAIDE — PERTH — CANBERRA — HOBART 1984

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Corporations

In Australia since 1 July 1982 the law relating to companies has been substantially governed by a common scheme agreed upon between the states and the Commonwealth. This scheme is embodied in the Companies Act 1981 (Cth) enacted as part of the law of the Australian Capital Territory and made applicable in each of the states by local legislation to be known as the Companies Code for that state. It establishes a central body known as the National Companies and Securities Commission to administer the legislation on a national basis. The Northern Territory is not as yet a party to the agreement. Reference hereafter will be made exclusively to the Companies Act 1981 (Cth) as the pilot legislation. In New Zealand the relevant Act is the Companies Act 1955 (NZ).

RECOGNITION

English courts have since 1728 recognised that a foreign corporation has standing to sue in England even though it has not been incorporated under English law: Henriques v Dutch West Indies Co (1728) 2 Ld Raym 1532. Strangely enough it was not established until 1872 that a foreign corporation could be sued in England: Newby v Van Oppen (1872) LR 7 QBD 293.

The law of the place of incorporation determines whether the corporation exists. As Lord Wright said in Lazard Bros & Co v Midland Bank Ltd [1933] AC 289 at 297:

> But as the creation depends on the act of the foreign state which created them, the annulment of the act of creation by the same power will involve the dissolution and non-existence of the corporation in the eyes of English law. The will of the sovereign authority which created it can also destroy it. English law will equally recognise the one, as the other, fact.

Even if the foreign body is not a corporation under the law of the place of its origin, it may be recognised in the forum as having a separate personality from those of its members. In Chaff and Hay Acquisition Committee v J A Hemphill & Sons Pty Ltd (1947) 74 CLR 375, at 385, it was said by Latham CJ:

> A body which, as distinct from the natural persons composing it, can have rights and be subject to duties and can own property must be regarded as having a legal personality, whether it is or is not called a corporation.

Consequently, it was held that the Chaff and Hay Acquisition Committee, a marketing body set up under the law of South Australia, was entitled to sue as such in New South Wales because under the law of South Australia the Committee could sue and be sued in its collective name and could acquire and hold pro

members

A forei its origin possess a sue or be [1914] 1

Howev
associatio hold prop included

Accord be sued in partnershi liable, but English c nature an partner in

PLACE OF

According
the corpor similarity i natural per the corpor
at any time initiative, consent of

The Co
incorporati and Secu
participatin authority i registration may apply code of the

Under s participatin
authorised requiremen
Oisterwijk v
518; Anders
however, th

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

mpanies has been between the states
Companies Act 1981
Territory and made be known as the body known as the nister the legislation yet a party to the
to the Companies
e relevant Act is the

gn corporation has incorporated under 2 Ld Raym 1532. foreign corporation
R 7 QBD 293.

her the corporation
Bank Ltd [1933] AC

which created them, wer will involve the es of English law. The destroy it. English law aw of the place of its ate personality from ittee v J A Hemphill

by Latham CJ:

sing it, can have rights arded as having a legal isition Committee, a was entitled to sue as South Australia the nd could acquire and hold property as the property of the Committee and not of its individual members.

A foreign unincorporated body such as a partnership which under the law of its origin can sue and be sued in its collective name, but does not otherwise possess a separate personality will, apart from statute, not have the standing to sue or be sued in its collective name in the forum: Von Hellfeld v Rechnitzer [1914] 1 Ch 748.

However, under the Australian Companies Act a foreign unincorporated association which under the law of the place of origin may sue or be sued or hold property in the name of the secretary or other officer of the association is included in the definition of "foreign company" under the Act: s 5 (1).

According to the law of certain foreign countries, partners are not liable to be sued individually until the plaintiff has exhausted his remedies against the partnership as such: Wolff at 239, 240. The parties are indeed individually liable, but the individual liability is postponed to their collective liability. English courts have regarded this limitation as being merely of a procedural nature and have, consequently, ignored it when action was brought against a partner individually in England: Re Doetsch [1896] 2 Ch 836.

PLACE OF INCORPORATION

According to the common law the place of incorporation determines whether the corporation exists and what its powers and functions are. Because of the similarity in function to the law of the domicile in relation to the status of a natural person, the place of incorporation is often referred to as the domicile of the corporation. The analogy is misleading here. For, whilst an individual can at any time change his or her domicile to another country on his or her own initiative, a corporation can only change its place of incorporation with the consent of both countries involved.

The Companies Act 1981 (Cth) now makes provision for the transfer of incorporation. Under s 83 a company may apply to the National Companies and Securities Commission to transfer its incorporation from one participating state or territory to another with the consent of the minister or authority in charge of corporate affairs in the state or territory of original registration. Under s 84 the company, once authorised to transfer under s 83, may apply to the Commission to be registered as a company under the relevant code of the other state or territory.

Under s 85 a foreign corporation may apply to be registered in a participating state or territory provided the transfer of the incorporation is authorised under the law of the original incorporation: s 85 (3)(a)(i). This requirement is in accordance with the common law: Koninklijke Lederfabriek Oisterwijk v Chase National Bank of the City of New York (1941) 30 NYS 2d 518; Anderson v NV Transandine Handelsmij (1941) 31 NYS 2d 194. If, however, the existing place of incorporation does not permit the change, it will not be recognised: Banco de Bilbao v Sancha [1938] 2 KB 176; NV Suikerfabriek Wono-Aseh v Chase National Bank of the City of New York (1953) 111 FSuppl 833.

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/1427

POWERS AND FUNCTIONS OF CORPORATIONS

As stated earlier, the law of the place of incorporation determines the "capacity of a foreign corporation and the functions and powers of its organs or officers": per Lord Reid in Carl Zeiss Stiftung v Rayner & Keeler Ltd (No 2) [1967] 1 AC 853 at 919. Thus the law of incorporation determines who are the lawful directors of the company: Banco de Bilbao v Sancha [1938] 2 KB 176, and whether any particular body or person has the authority to act on behalf of the company: Carl Zeiss Stiftung v Rayner & Keeler Ltd (No 2). The law of the place of incorporation also determines the liability of the members of the company such as whether their liability is limited or unlimited: Bateman v Service (1881) 6 App Cas 386; Risdon Iron and Locomotive Works v Furness [1906] 1 KB 49.

A corporation which has the capacity under the law of the place of its incorporation to enter into contracts and do business generally will have its capacity recognised and given effect to in the forum: Bateman v Service; Picturesque Atlas Publishing Co v Campbell (1891) 24 SALR 145. It has been held in England that a foreign corporation which was authorised to hold land under the law of its incorporation could not do so in England in contravention of the now repealed Mortmain Acts: A-G v Parsons [1956] AC 421. Semble, this applies only in the case of a statute of the forum specifically restricting the capacity of foreign corporations to act within the forum. In the absence of such a prohibition a foreign corporation may exercise within the forum such powers and capacities as it possesses under its own law including the acquisition and ownership of land: Re Transfer of Land Act [1916] VLR 397; Kavir Pty Ltd v Dwyer [1973] Qd R 192.

Because of the express provisions of the Companies Act 1981, it would appear that a foreign company not registered in a participating state or territory as required under s 512 of the Act, will not have the power to hold land in such a jurisdiction: s 511, exercise the rights conferred upon corporations by legislation such as the Trade Practices Act 1974 (Cth) and, semble, will lack any standing to sue: Nauru Local Government Council v Australian Shipping Officers' Association (1978) 27 ALR 535 at 545 per Northrop J. However this would not affect the passive capacity of such a corporation to be held liable in respect of contractual or delictual obligations and to be sued.

DISSOLUTION AND AMALGAMATION OF COMPANIES

A corporation which has been dissolved under the law which created it can no longer sue or be sued in the forum or be recognised as being entitled, or subject to, any legal rights or obligations: United Service Insurance Co v Lang (1935) 35 SR (NSW) 487; Re Usines de Melle's Patent (1954) 91 CLR 42. However, it is provided in the Companies Act 1981 that a foreign corporation "may be

National Archives of Australia NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

5; NV Suikerfabriek
(1953) 111 FSuppl

n determines the vers of its organs or Keeler Ltd (No 2)
mines who are the [1938] 2 KB 176, to act on behalf of 2). The law of the e members of the mited: Bateman v
Works v Furness

f the place of its rally will have its teman v Service;
R 145. It has been rised to hold land
l in contravention C 421. Semble, this lly restricting the e absence of such the forum such w including the [1916] VLR 397;

t 1981, it would cipating state or he power to hold conferred upon 1974 (Cth) and,
nment Council v 535 at 545 per pacity of such a ctual obligations created it can no titled, or subject

v Lang (1935) 35
2. However, it is ration "may be

---

wound up . . notwithstanding that it is being wound up or has been dissolved or has otherwise ceased to exist as a body corporate under or by virtue of the laws of the place under which it was incorporated": s 470 (3); cf NZ: s 389.

The effect of this provision is to treat the foreign corporation as still being in existence for the purpose of winding up within the state or territory concerned with the result that the rights and liabilities of local creditors and debtors in relation to the dissolved corporation are to be treated as existing obligations which can be asserted by, or against, a corporation which remains a juristic entity for the purposes of winding up.[1]

If a foreign corporation is merged into another corporation or amalgamated with another corporation into a new corporation under the law of the place of incorporation of the companies concerned, the new entity will be recognised in the forum: National Bank of Greece and Athens SA v Metliss [1958] AC 509. Semble, no amalgamation or merger can be recognised as such unless the new entity succeeds to substantially all the assets and liabilities of the merged or amalgamated corporations: Adams v National Bank of Greece SA [1961] AC 255. Where corporations incorporated in different countries are merged or amalgamated, semble, the law of the place of incorporation of each country must permit and recognise the merger or amalgamation with the other.

JURISDICTION

(i) Partnerships. At common law a foreign partnership could not be sued as such merely because some of the partners or a place of business of the partnership were within the jurisdiction. Each of the partners had to be brought within the jurisdiction either at common law or by virtue of the provisions of 0 11 or its local equivalent: Heinemann & Co v SB Hale & Co [1891] 2 QB 83. In New Zealand this is still the case, the provisions of CCP RR 43 and 44 which regulate service of process upon partners having only domestic significance: Smith v Spriggs (1913) 33 NZLR 216.

In Australia partners carrying on business within the jurisdiction may sue or be sued in the name of their firm and proper service of the writ is effected by serving it either on one of the partners who is within the jurisdiction or upon the person who has the control or management of the partnership business within the jurisdiction. It does not matter that all members of the partnership are out of the jurisdiction and no prior leave to serve the writ is necessary. However, the resulting jurisdiction does not bind any partner who is out of the jurisdiction at the time the writ is issued.[2]

---

[1] Russian and English Bank v Baring Bros & Co [1936] AC 405 at 428, 429 per Lord Atkin. It may be presumed that an Australian court will not follow the decision to the contrary in United Service Co Ltd v Lang since this decision was based on the reasoning of the Court of Appeal in Russian and English Bank v Baring Bros & Co [1935] Ch 120, which was reversed by the House of Lords on appeal.

[2] ACT: O 50 rr 1, 3 and 8; NT: O 50 rr 1, 3 and 8; Qld: O 54 rr 1, 5 and 10; SA: O 48A rr 1, 3 and 7; Tas: O 54 rr 1, 3 and 8; Vic: O 48A rr 1, 3 and 8; WA: O 71 r 3 (1); H Ct: O 48 rr 1, 3 and 8; FCt: O 42 rr 2, 4 and 9. In New South Wales no specific provision is made regarding service on partners, but see Business Names Act 1962 (NSW) s 8 and RSC Pt 64.

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/…

The rule is permissive and does not preclude service upon the individual partners either at common law or by virtue of some other statutory rule: Hobbs v Australian Press Assoc [1933] 1 KB 1. Even though service under the above-mentioned rule amounts to service on all partners, the English courts have allowed a plaintiff to join an absent partner individually as a co-defendant with the firm and seek leave to serve him out of the jurisdiction under O 11: West of England Steamship Owners Protection & Indemnity Assoc Ltd v John Holman & Sons [1957] 3 All ER 421.

(ii) Corporations. At common law a corporation could only be amenable to the jurisdiction of the court if it was "present" within the jurisdiction. In order to be "present" it must have (a) a fixed place within the jurisdiction for a definite period, and (b) carry on business there through an agent who has the authority on behalf of the company to enter into binding contracts with persons in the jurisdiction and who is not a mere ministerial agent: Bowden Bros & Co v Imperial Marine Transport Insurance Co (1902) 2 SR (NSW) 257. Thus a commercial traveller who canvasses orders within the jurisdiction and transmits them abroad for acceptance does not thereby render his employer company "present" within the jurisdiction: Pearce v Tower Manufacturing and Novelty Co Ltd (1898) 24 VLR 506. Nor is a foreign bank "present" within the jurisdiction because a local bank acts as an "advising bank" on a letter of credit transaction for it: National Commercial Bank v Wimbourne [1979] ACLD 478.

It is now provided by the Companies Act 1981 s 512(2) that a foreign corporation "carrying on business" within the state or territory concerned must lodge with the Commission the name and address of any person authorised to accept service within the jurisdiction and the address of the registered office within the state or territory. In New Zealand a company incorporated outside New Zealand which establishes a place of business within New Zealand must deliver to the registrar of companies the names and addresses of one or more persons resident in New Zealand authorised to accept service of process on behalf of the company: Companies Act 1955 (NZ) s 397 (1)(c).

Compliance with these provisions gives the local courts jurisdiction over the corporation either because it is the purpose of these provisions to place the foreign corporations on exactly the same footing as domestic corporations or because the filing of the documents with the registrar can be regarded as a submission to the jurisdiction of the local courts: per Lord Parmoor in Employers Liability Assurance Corp Ltd v Sedgwick, Collins & Co Ltd [1927] AC 95 at 115. As long as the information lodged remains on the file, service upon the person or at the address indicated therein is good even though the corporation has ceased doing business within the jurisdiction: Sabatier v Trading Co [1927] 1 Ch 495. In Australia if a foreign corporation fails to file the required information the common law rules must be applied: Deverall v Grant Advertising Inc [1955] 1 Ch 111. In New Zealand process may in such a case be served by leaving it at, or by sending it by post to, any place of business established by the company in New Zealand: Companies Act 1955 (NZ) s 404.

National Archives of Australia

NAA: A432, BAD1989/14272

Matic Corporation

From: Saffioti, Minister <Minister.Saffioti@dpc.wa.gov.au>
Sent: Friday, January 17, 2025 3:58 PM
To: maticcorp@outlook.com
Subject: RE: Legal Capacity Of Minors

OFFICIAL

Good afternoon

In regards to our previous phone call, your correspondence is in relation to the portfolio of the Attorney General, Minister Quigley, and thus has been forwarded on to their office.

Please give them a call of you have any further queries: 08 6552 6800.

Thank you.

Kind regards,

GOVERNMENT OF
WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Reception/Administrative Assistant
Office of the Hon. Rita Saffioti MLA
Deputy Premier; Treasurer; Minister for Transport; Tourism
Member for West Swan

6552 5500
13th Floor, Dumas House; 2 Havelock Street WEST PERTH WA 6005 Australia minister.saffioti@dpc.wa.gov.au

OFFICIAL

From: Treasurer
Sent: Tuesday, 14 January 2025 4:36 PM
To: Matic Corporation <maticcorp@outlook.com>
Cc: Quigley, Minister <Minister.Quigley@dpc.wa.gov.au>
Subject: RE: Legal Capacity Of Minors

Good afternoon,

Thank you for your email received from the Department of Treasury addressed to the Hon Rita Saffioti MLA, Deputy Premier; Treasurer; Minister for Transport and Tourism. As the matter you have raised falls within the responsibility of the Attorney General your correspondence has been forwarded to the office of the Hon John Quigley.

Thank you for contacting the Deputy Premier; Treasurer; Minister for Transport and Tourism.

GOVERNMENT OF
WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Office of the Hon. Rita Saffioti MLA
Deputy Premier; Treasurer; Minister for Transport; Tourism
Member for West Swan

6552 5500
13th Floor, Dumas House; 2 Havelock Street WEST PERTH WA 6005 Australia minister.saffioti@dpc.wa.gov.au

From: Matic Corporation
Sent: Tuesday, 14 January 2025 2:13 PM
To: Undertreasurer
Subject: Legal Capacity Of Minors

You don't often get email from maticcorp@outlook.com. Learn why this is important CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the Department. Be careful when clicking on links or opening email attachments if you do not trust the sender.

Dear State Treasurer,

Regarding the below extract from a report on Western Australia government website regarding minors, would you kindly provide procedural steps for guardian of a minor, for whom he is the biological father, to effect transferring of the testamentary and trust fund for private management by ourselves.

By: Sandi, foreign principal

WEST AUSTRALIAN TRUSTEE EXECUTOR & AGENCY CO. (LTD) ACT

9(1) The company may be appointed by any court guardian of an infant or guarantor for a person appointed his guardian.

12 Guardians of infants may, with the approval of the court, appoint the company to perform their duties.

23 As regards limitation of time for claiming monies from the State Treasurer's Testamentary & Trust Fund, time does not run against an infant whilst he is an infant.

The Department of the Premier and Cabinet Legal Notice.

The contents of this email or its attachments are intended only for the use of the addressee(s). It may contain information that is private and confidential and may be privileged or otherwise protected from disclosure in the public interest. If you are not the intended recipient of this email any use, interference with, disclosure, distribution or copying of this material is unauthorised and prohibited. If you receive this in error, please notify the sender by return e-mail, delete the email and attachments from your system and destroy any copies you have taken of the email and attachments. Before taking any action based upon advice and/or information contained in this email you should carefully consider the advice and information and consider obtaining relevant independent advice.

While every care is taken, it is recommended that you scan any attachments for viruses.

Please consider the environment before printing out this email.

113

DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND ETHNIC AFFAIRS

OVERSEAS FILE COVER

821

F97/169658

F97/169658

UNCLASSIFIED

FAMILY NAME MATIC m

GIVEN NAMES PAVAO - NIKOLA 16·12·49

m ④

APPLICATION FOR (Use IRIS codes)
15

Policy Category
200

1. Folio	2. Referred to and Date	3. Clearing Officer's Initials	4. Date Cleared
	s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]
			31/5/97

1. Folio	2. Referred to and Date	3. Clearing Officer's Initials	4. Date Cleared

COMBINED O'SEAS STATS
(Appropriate box to be dated)

Migration
Interviewed Date 06·02·97

Ref/SHP
Interviewed Date

Vis/TR/Stud-Trnee
Interviewed Date

Persons Rejected No Date

Persons Visaed No Date Codes

Citizenship
(Reg. of Birth) Date

RELATED FILES

ARCHIVAL ACTION

PERTH

UNCLASSIFIED

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

McMILLAN PRINT

© Commonwealth of Australia, 1993

IN 821 Z-- (3-90)

PROCESSING CHECKLIST

1. DOCUMENTATION RECORD	PA		Spouse		Child 1		Child 2		Child 3		Other Relative		Sponsor
	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD	REQ	HELD Application
Sponsorship
Employmer Nomination
Assurance of Support
Arranged Employment
Photographs
Birth Marriage Separation
Divorce
Death
Custody
Adoption
Name Change
Citizenship
Relationship
Travel Document
Service Discharge
Funds
Education
Occupational Assessment
NOOSR Fee
Processing Fee Medical X - Ray
Liaison Local Liaison Other Penal Local Penal Other

COLUMNS TO BE COMPLETED WITH INITIALS AND DATE

2. VISA RECORD

Name	Birth	Visa Condition	Valid to	Stay of	Visa Number	Date

3. COMPLIANCE RECORD

* Show the date on which final decision made regarding ALL persons included on the application

	Requirements Outstanding		Requirements Met		Requirements not Met
	Referred to	Date	Signature	Validity Date	Signature	Date
Health		/ /19		/ /19		/ /19
Penal		/ /19		/ /19		/ /19
Liaison		/ /19		/ /19		/ /19
Selection		/ /19		/ /19		/ /19
Other (specify)		/ /19		/ /19		/ /19

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

1997

F97169658

200 AND 204 DOCUMENTS CHECKLIST

	HELD	WILL SEND	CAN'T PROVIDE	FOLIO
BIRTH CERTIFICATES	✓			37–40
MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE	✓			36
OLD ID CARDS	✓ SP+DA		✓ YA	25, 26
NEW ID CARDS	✓ YA		✓ SP+DA	26
PASSPORTS	✓			17 – 19, 20, 21
REFUGEE REGISTRATION	✓			32 - 34
MILITARY BOOK	✓			27–31
DISCHARGE CERTIFICATE	✓			35
WORK BOOK			✓	—
SCHOOL DIPLOMAS	✓			22, 23
DEATH CERTIFICATE
DIVORCE CERTIFICATE
OTHER PARENT CONSENT

POLICE CLEARANCE/STAT DEC	41
MILITARY INVOLVEMENT DEC.	45
WAR CRIMES DECLARATION	42
I/V SHEET	49
CLAIMS	48
MIXED MARRIAGE	46
TORTURE TRAUMA VICTIMS
EX-DETAINEE	NO
UNHCR REFERRED	NO
LINK TO A/A	NIL

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

4

F97169658

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658 5

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

DAVAO- NIKOLA

F97169658 6

MATIĆ

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658 7

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SABINA

F97169658 8

MATIĆ

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F9716965

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

RENATA

F97169658 10

MATIĆ

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658
OFFICIAL LEAGUE

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

RENATA
MATIĆ

F97169658 12

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

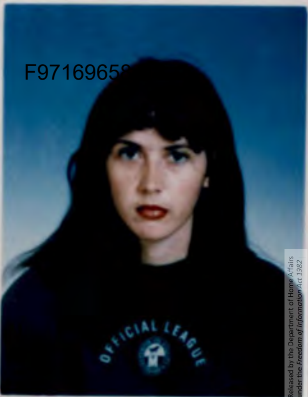
F97169658



OFFICIAL LEAGUE

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

RENATA

F97169658 14

MATIC

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

OFFICIAL LEAGUE

F9716965

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

RENATA

F97169658 16

MATIC

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658 17

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658 18

SANDI

MATIĆ

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

OFFICIAL LEAGUE

OFFICIAL LEAGUE

OFFICIAL LEAGUE

OFFICIAL LEAGUE

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF AUSTRALIA

STATEMENT OF REASONS FOR DECISION UNDER SECTION 40(5) OF THE ARCHIVES ACT 1983

Series	A8425
Control Symbol	F1997/169658
Item ID	25909498
Title	Matic, Pavao-Nikola
Decision Maker	s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
Designation	APS6
Date	2 June 2023

In accordance with requirements of subsection 8(1) of the Archives Act 1983 (Cth) (Archives Act), I am a person authorised by the Director-General, pursuant to an Instrument of Delegation, to make a decision in relation to access to the requested item.

Basis for decision

In making my decision, I considered:

- the content of the item requested
- the relevant provisions of the Archives Act 1983
- policy and guidelines of National Archives of Australia that relate to the access examination of Commonwealth records
- information provided by Commonwealth agencies which I have relied upon in formulating my decision

Decision

After examining this item I have decided that this item is closed under 33(1)(d) and (g) of the Archives Act for the reasons set out below.

The findings of facts

Section 33(1)(d) of the Archives Act provides that:

a record is exempt from public access if it contains information or matter the disclosure of which under this Act would constitute a breach of confidence.

Section 33(1)(g) of the Archives Act 1983 provides that:

a record is exempt if it contains information or matter the disclosure of which under this Act would involve the unreasonable disclosure of information relating to the personal affairs of any person (including a deceased person).

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

This record contains information:

- provided in confidence.
- concerning the personal, medical or financial affairs of a named person or people.

Reasons for decision

Section 33(1)(d)

The information was provided with the expectation that it would remain confidential

The public disclosure of this information would constitute a breach of confidence.

There is no evidence that this information was ever published or that the subject of the file ever expected publication.

Section 33(1)(g)

The information exempted is of a nature such that its disclosure could lead to an unreasonable intrusion on the personal affairs of a person or persons.

The information is of a kind that most members of the community would not want disclosed about themselves. There is nothing in the item that suggests the information was widely known in the community at the time.

There is no evidence in the item that suggests that when the information was gathered, the subject expected it to be made publicly known or that it has become known in the intervening years.

Disclosure of the information would involve the unreasonable disclosure of personal information.

Review of decision

The National Archives of Australia (the Archives) carefully examines items before deciding to exempt any part of them. As part of that process we may consult with other agencies which have expertise on specific national and international matters.

If you do not agree with the decision, you can formally appeal within 28 days of receiving a decision:

1. by first applying to the Archives for an internal reconsideration of my decision; and
2. if you still do not agree with the decision, you can apply to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal for a review.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

For more information please see What to do if we refuse you access (https://www.naa.gov.au/help-your-research/using-collection/access-records-under-archives-act/what-do-if-we-refuse-you-access).

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

B 014292

Document for travel to Australia

AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY (MIGRATION OFFICE) 8 AUSTRIA

The Australian Government does not accord the holder of this document or visa nor those included in it any official or other status or recognition as representatives of a government or regime which the Australian Government does not recognise. This document is granted on the understanding that the persons concerned will not make any such claim whilst in Australia.

THIS DOCUMENT IS GOOD FOR SINGLE TRAVEL TO AUSTRALIA ONLY.

PERSONAL DETAILS OF HOLDER

Family Name MATIC

Christian or Given Names PAVAO-NIKOLA

Date of Birth 16. 12. 1949 Place of Birth MOSTAR, BOSNIA

Travel Document (Passport) Number (if applicable) — Citizenship BOSNIAN

Marital Status MARRIED SIGNATURE OF HOLDER

This document includes the TWO persons whose details and photographs appear below. (Cross out unused lines)

Name	SABINA	SANDI
Date of Birth	27.05.50	25.08.83.
Place of Birth	MOSTAR	MOSTAR
Relationship to Holder	SPOUSE	SON

Photograph (Cross out if unused)

Photograph (Cross out if unused)

(Official Use – On Arrival)

6310162806X3 BA 200 6310162806X

AUSTRALIA VISA

CLASS BA RESIDENT P440
SUB CLASS 200 CONDITIONS MIG.REGS.SCHED.8

VIENNA

1.MATIC PAVAO-NIKOLA
2.MATIC SABINA
3.MATIC SANDI

INITIAL ENTRY BY 03MAR98

AG3660879

GRANTED 31MAY97. MUST NOT ARRIVE AFTER 31MAY02. MULTIPLE TRAVEL.

HOLDER(S) PERMITTED TO REMAIN IN AUSTRALIA INDEFINITELY.

```
V631<0162806X3MATIC<<PAVAONIKOLA<<<<<<<<<<<<
014292<<<<<<<<BOHE491216M<BA<200<<<<<<<<<<<<
```

Form M305 (7/94)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

```
(RPTDUMP-B3-V1.1)

                                                                                        DATE:  040697
DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION AND MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS                              CASE STATUS:  Case Closed
MIGRATION RECORD CASE DUMP                                                   RETENTION STATUS:  -
POST: 151      TRANSFERRED FROM: -     TRANSFER REASON: -                   BMA ID/INDUSTRY:  -  /-  AUDIT: - TRANSFERRED TO:   -     TRANSFER DATE: -
---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
FILE: C 97169658    MPMS NO:    8013441 CLASS/SUB CLASS:  BA/200  APPLICATION DATE: 060297 PERSONS MIGRATING: 03 OF 04
CASE FINALISED: 040697                                                               CASE REQ'S SATISFIED: 20 OF 24
---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
PERSONAL DETAILS                                   *ADDRESS DETAILS
PA MATIC                 PAVAO-NIKOLA                 C/ TOMIC NIKOLA,PUT BLATA BB          -
                                                      KASTEL NOVI              -                    21216
 Travel Doc No: D 014292
       Expiry: -

           Sex: M          Residence Country: CROA            Main Language: -
           DOB: 161249          Case Country: BOHE
 Birth Country: YUGO              Prov/State: -          Family in Australia: C
   Citizenship: BOHE                   Index: M3                       Funds: -
Marital Status: M                Personal Id: -               Residence Code: X
    Occupation: 999900            Refugee Id: -            Govt Funded Travel: Y

*PA REQUIREMENT DETAILS
Req Description            How Provided  Status  Status Date Country  Expiry Date  Sched No  Box No  Changed by
---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 DR DETAILS OF RELATIVES -67 DOC          D       060297      -        -            -         -
                             DOC          O       060297                                           s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 EB EVIDENCE OF BIRTH        DOC          A       270397      -        -            -         -
                             DOC          O       060297                                           s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 LI SECURITY CHECK-LOCAL     EXT          D       060297      -        -            -         -
                             EXT          O       060297                                           s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MD MEDICAL FORM 26          DOC          A       110497      A        110498       060       -
                             DOC          Z       260397                                           s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                             DOC          O       060297

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MX XRAY REPORT 160 AND FILM DOC          A       110497      A        110498       060       -
                             DOC          Z       260397                                           s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                             DOC          O       060297

---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 PL PENAL CHECK-LOCAL        EXT          A       270397      AUST     040398       -         - Continued...
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

```
                         EXT           O        060297                                          ZELJKO MATIJEVIC

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 RC REFUGEE/SHP CLAIM    OTH           A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         OTH           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 RF REFUGEE APPLICATION -842  DOC      A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 RP ELIGIBLE REFUGEE PROGRAM  DOC      A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 RS RESETTLEMENT         OTH           A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         OTH           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 TA TIES WITH AUSTRALIA  DOC           A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 OC OUTSIDE OF COUNTRY   DOC           A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

PERSONAL DETAILS
PD1 MATIC                SABINA
          Sex: F       Residence Country: -
          DOB: 270550        Personal Id: -                   Migrating: Y
 Birth Country: YUGO          Refugee Id: -                      PA Rel: S
   Citizenship: BOHE
    Occupation: 999900

*PD1 REQUIREMENT DETAILS
Req Description          How Provided  Status   Status Date Country  Expiry Date  Sched No  Box No  Changed by
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 EB EVIDENCE OF BIRTH    DOC           A        270397     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O        060297

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 LI SECURITY CHECK-LOCAL EXT           D        060297     -       -            -        -     s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         EXT           O        060297
                                                                                    Continued...
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

58

```
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MD MEDICAL FORM 26        DOC        A     110497     A      110498     060      -
                           DOC        Z     260397                                    s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                           DOC        O     060297

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MX XRAY REPORT 160 AND FILM DOC      A     110497     A      110498     060      -
                           DOC        Z     260397                                    s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                           DOC        O     060297

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 PL PENAL CHECK-LOCAL      EXT        A     270397     AUST   040398     -        -
                           EXT        O     060297                                    s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

PERSONAL DETAILS
PD2 MATIC                  SANDI
          Sex: M          Residence Country: -
          DOB: 250883           Personal Id: -                 Migrating: Y
Birth Country: YUGO             Refugee Id: -                    PA Rel: C
  Citizenship: BOHE
   Occupation: 999500

*PD2 REQUIREMENT DETAILS
Req Description            How Provided  Status  Status Date Country  Expiry Date  Sched No  Box No  Changed by
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 EB EVIDENCE OF BIRTH      DOC        A     270397     -      -          -        -
                           DOC        O     060297                                    s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MD MEDICAL FORM 26        DOC        A     110497     A      110498     060      -
                           DOC        Z     260397                                    s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                           DOC        O     060297

----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

                                                                        Continued...
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

```
                                                                  |                        Page 4
                                                                  | MATIC                  97169658
                                                                  ----------------------------------

PERSONAL DETAILS                         *ADDRESS DETAILS
PH1 MATIC                RENATA             -                                 -
                                            -                  -       -

 Travel Doc No: T -
        Expiry: -
           Sex: F             Residence Country: CROA
           DOB: 090872             Case Country: BOHE
 Birth Country: YUGO                 Prov/State: -             Migrating: N
   Citizenship: BOHE                      Index: -                RA Rel: C
Marital Status: N                   Personal Id: - Occupation: 999900               Refugee Id: -

*PH1 REQUIREMENT DETAILS
Req Description          How Provided  Status  Status Date Country  Expiry Date  Sched No  Box No  Changed by
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 EB EVIDENCE OF BIRTH    DOC           A       270397      -        -            -         -       s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O       060297

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 LI SECURITY CHECK-LOCAL EXT           D       060297      -        -            -         -       s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         EXT           O       060297

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MD MEDICAL FORM 26      DOC           W       220497      -        -            -         - *REQUIREMENT NOTE:
  not migrating at this point. living in Germany and can not be considered a dependent member of the family unit.
  ZM220497
                         DOC           O       060297                                              s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 MX XRAY REPORT 160 AND FILM DOC       W       220497      -        -            -         -       s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         DOC           O       060297

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
 PL PENAL CHECK-LOCAL    EXT           W       220497      -        -            -         -
                         EXT           R       270397                                              s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
                         EXT           O       060297

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
INTERVIEW STATUS  STATUS DATE  PRI  NO ATTENDING  DURATION  LOCATION  DATE  TIME  INTERVIEWER  TIMES SCHEDULED
              I      060297       R    04            000       COUN      -     -     -            00

                                                                                   Continued...
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

```
SUBCLASS ASSESSMENT DETAILS

*PERSONS NOT ASSESSED
PA                  MATIC          PAVAO-NIKOLA
PD1                 MATIC                SABINA
PD2                 MATIC                 SANDI
PH2                 MATIC                RENATA

DECISION DETAILS                                              MPMS TRANSMISSION DATE: 010697
PA MATIC                    PAVAO-NIKOLA
    POOL SCORES:          TOTAL    SKIMS COUNT: - (ORIGINAL)             - (REVISED)              -    POINTS REVIEW: -

          ASSESSMENT:  S        -        REASON:  M  s. 22(1)(a)(ii)           )  (270397) DECISION:  A        -        REASON:  A                            )  (310597)
       VISA GRANT ID :  1510110071690L

PD1 MATIC                        SABINA
            DECISION:  A                 REASON:  A  s. 22(1)(a)(ii)           )  (310597)
       VISA GRANT ID :  1510110071691S

PD2 MATIC                        SANDI
            DECISION:  A                 REASON:  A  s. 22(1)(a)(ii)           )  (310597)
       VISA GRANT ID :  1510110071692X

PH2 MATIC                        RENATA
            DECISION:  -                 REASON:  -  s. 22(1)(a)(ii)           )  (-     )
       VISA GRANT ID :              -

VISA DETAILS

Record Status: Evidenced    Printed by: s. 22(1)(a)(ii)         Grant Entered By: s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
PA  MATIC                   Evid No: 6310162806X  Evid Date: 040697    Arrival: -      Stay: I     External Evid Post: -
    PAVAO-NIKOLA              KCode: -       Info Codes: -      Entry Expiry: 030398  Entry: M            Override: N
                            Previous Evid/No: N/-               Condition codes: -

PD1  MATIC
     SABINA                    KCode: -         Info Codes: -         Override: N   Previous Evid/No: N/-

PD2  MATIC
                                                                              Continued...
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SANDI KCode: - Info Codes: - Override: N Previous Evid/No: N/-

VOIDED EVIDENCES:

CASE NOTES

Applicant called today to ask about his application. Did residence check was in Croatia. ZM21.04.97.

Mixed marriage from Mostar (PA Croat, spouse Muslim). Lived on the left (now Muslim held) side of Mostar. Found life there impossible due to their mixed marriage. Return not possible.
Older daughter is living in Germany and should be coming back end of May. Son goes to school in Mostar. Stays there with the grandmother and comes to Croatia every weekend. Travels with his schoolbook and fathers ID card. PA and spouse claim no trips to BOHE. They live in Cro all the time and try and find casual jobs to support themselves.

PA claims no active military involvement. He was assigned to a duty of the eletrician in the hospital. Certificate held confirming this (folio 35).

Male relatives checked against MAL.

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

Mixed marriage from Mostar which is a high tension area divided on ethnic basis - would face severe problems if they were to return. Resettlement is appropriate. SMO 23/4/97

APPLICANT SIGNED AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF UNDERSTANDING RE HIS DAUGHTER IN GERMANY. HE ALSO PROVIDED STAT DEC EXPLAINING THAT HIS DAUGHTER LIVES AND WORKS IN GERMANY SINCE 8/93 AND THAT SHE TAKES CARE OF HERSELF AND THAT SHE IS IN NO WAY DEPENDENT ON PA. s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

CASE AUDIT

010697 Admin error:15101100716842 MATIC, PAVAO-NIKOLA Changed from: AA 010697
(DK) By: s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

010697 Admin error:1510110071685C MATIC, SABINA Changed from: AA 010697 s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]
By: s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

010697 Admin error:1510110071686G MATIC, SANDI Changed from: AA 010697 s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]
By: s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

010697 Admin error:1510110071687L MATIC, PAVAO-NIKOLA Changed from: AA 010697
s. 22(1)(a)(i [redacted] By: s. 22(1)(a)(i [redacted]

010697 Admin error:1510110071688S MATIC, SABINA Changed from: AA 010697 s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]
By: s. 22(1)(a)([redacted]

010697 Admin error:1510110071689X MATIC, SANDI Changed from: AA 010697 s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]
By: s. 22(1)(a)([redacted]

Continued...

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

```
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
Processing/Approval Lists: -          /-          RECORD LAST AMENDED:s. 22(1)(a)(ii)          DATE: 040697
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

            END OF CASE DUMP       REPORT PROCESSING START: 09:47   END: 09:48   ELAPSED: 00:01
```

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

I Z J A V A

Ja, Pavao- Nikola Matić, iz Mostara sada na adresi Kaštel Novi, Put Blata bb , (JMBG1612949150010) pod moralnom, materijalnom i kaznenom odgovornošću izjavljujem da moja kći Renata Matić ne živi sa mnom od kolovoza mjeseca 1993. godine od kada se nalazi u SR Njemačkoj , gdje je i zaposlena, te sama skrbi o svim svojim potrebama, tako da više nije ovisna o meni niti skrbim o njoj.

K. Stari, 28.04.1997.g .

Potpis:

Pavo-Nikola Matić

Matić

Ja, JAVNI BILJEŽNIK JOŠKO DONIKA-STANOJEVIĆ sa sjedištem u KAŠTEL STAROM, Obala kralja Tomislava 26., potvrđujem da je Pavao-Nikola Matić, Mostar, Kalja Tomislava 57., u mojoj nazočnosti priznao potpis na pismenu. Istovjetnost podnositelja isprave utvrdio sam na temelju: osobne iskaznice br. 0000120635 PS Mostar...........
Potpis na pismenu je istinit...

Javnobilježnička pristojba za ovejru po tar.br. 11. ZJP u iznosu od 10,00 kn naplaćena i poništena na primjerku isprave koji ostaje za arhivu.

Javnobilježnička nagrada zaračunata u iznosu od 30,00kn + 10 % poreza na promet

Broj: OV- 2096 /97
U Kaštel Starom, 28.04.1997.godine

Javni bilježnik:
Joško Donika-Stanojević

AUSTRALIAN EMB. VIENNA 02. MAI 1997 MIGRATION

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

52

AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY
VIENNA
02 MAI 1997
MIGRATION OFFICE

IZJAVA

Ja dole potpisani ....MATIC PAVAO NIKOLA....
(ime i prezime davaoca izjave) potvrdjujem da sam informiran da odobrenje za moj ulazak u Australiju ne garantira automatsko odobrenje ulazka za

....MATIC RENATA.... ....KĆERKA....
(ime i prezime osobe obuhvacene izjavom) (srodstvo)

i da ce svaka molba koju on/ona podnese biti razmotrena u kontekstu zakona i propisa koji ce tada biti na snazi.

....Matić.... ....28. 4. 1997....
(potpis davaoca izjave) (datum)

....
(potpis osobe ispred koje je potpisana izjava) (datum)

Izjavu morate podpisati ispred osobe koja je zakonom ovlastena za svjedocenje pri davnju slicnih izjava.

Australian Embassy Migration Office 2-4 Mattiellistr. Vienna July 1993

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Acknowledgement Of Understanding

I PAVAO NIKOLA MATIC
(name of applicant)

acknowledge that I have been informed that approval for my entry to Australia will not guarrantee subsequent approval for entry of

RENATA MATIC DAUGHTER
(name of relative affected by this undertaking) (relationship) and that any application from him/her would be considered on its own merits in the context of the law and policies operating at the time of application.

28. 7. 1994

(signature of applicant) (date)

(witness) (date)

Australian Embassy Migration Office 2-4 Mattiellistr Wien July 1992

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Ja, JAVNI BILJEŽNIK JOŠKO DONIKA-STANOJEVIĆ sa sjedištem u KAŠTEL STAROM, Obala kralja Tomislava 26., potvrđujem da je Pavao-Nikola Matić, Mostar, Kalja Tomislava 57., u mojoj nazočnosti vlastoručno potpisao pismeno. Istovjetnost podnositelja isprave utvrdio sam na temelju: osobne iskaznice br. 0000120635 PS Mostar............
Potpis na pismenu je istinit...

Javnobilježnička pristojba za ovejru po tar.br. 11. ZJP u iznosu od 10,00 kn naplaćena i poništena na primjerku isprave koji ostaje za arhivu.

Javnobilježnička nagrada zaračunata u iznosu od 30,00kn + 10 % poreza na promet

Broj: OV- 2097 /97
U Kaštel Starom, 28.04.1997.godine

Za Javni bilježnik:
Joško Donika-Stanojević

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

JOŠKO DOMIKA-STANOJEVIĆ
KAŠTEL STARI

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

97169658

Mr Pavao-Nikola Matic
C/ Tomic Nikola
Put Blata bb
21216 Kastel Novi
Croatia

24/04/97

Postovani/a Mr Matic,

Obracam Vam se u vezi molbe za iseljenje u Australiju koju ste podnijeli pod Izbjeglickim programom u nasem uredu.

Molim da prilozenu izjavu potpisete te odogovarajuce ovjerite (obje verzije i englesku i hrvatsku). Uz ovo bi trebali priloziti i izjavu u kojoj cete objasniti koliko dugo Vasa kcerka ne zivi sa Vama, da li je trenutno ovisna o Vama itd..

Molim za sto brzi odgovor koji je i u Vasem interesu.

Sa postovanjem,

za M. Hayes
Prvog Sekretara (Migracija)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658

49

INTERVIEW REPORT FOR REFUGEE ENTRY

PA, FAMILY NAME MATIC GIVEN NAME RANKO NIKOLA

	CITIZENSHIP	ETHNICITY	RELIGION
PA	BOHE	CRO	CATH
SPOUSE	BOHE	MUS	ISL

FAMILY COMPOSITION: PA:

SPOUSE: PARENTS BOHE, ~~ES BOHE~~ SEE ATTACH.

ANY SINGLE APPLICANT: ENGAGED DE FACTO NIL OTHER:

COMMENTS:

HOMETOWN: MOSTAR RETURN POSSIBLE: [✓ NO] YES MIXED M.

UNHCR REFERRED: [✓ NO] YES CURRENT STATUS: [✓ ILLEGAL] REFUGEE CITIZEN T/R

EX-DETAINEE? [✓ NO] YES →

CLAIMS:

LINKS WITH AUSTRALIA: [✓ NIL] GROUP FRIEND RELATIVE →

SETTLEMENT: [✓ SATISFACTORY] UNSATISFACTORY ELIGIBLE FOR FUNDED TRAVEL: NO YES

COMMENTS DAUGHTER IN GERM.

WAR CRIMES DECLARATION SIGNED: NO [✓ YES]

MILITARY INVOLVEMENT DECLARATION COMPLETED AND SIGNED: NO [✓ YES]

CHECK WITH TRIBUNAL REQUIRED: [✓ NO] YES

WITNESS TO WAR CRIMES: [✓ NO] YES →

WILLING TO TESTIFY: NO YES

PREFERRED DESTINATION SYDNEY MELBOURNE [✓ PERTH] ADELAIDE BRISBANE HOBART

TO TRAVEL WITH: NAME WHY?: s. 22(1)(a)(ii) s. 22(1)(a)(s. 22(1)(a). s. 22(1)(a)(ii) s. 22(1)(a)(ii) s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

MEDICALS ISSUED NO [✓ YES] ..../..../....

CASE ACCEPTED / ~~NOT ACCEPTED~~ UNDER [✓ 200] 204 202

FIRST SECRETARY
PN 11638

Approved 4/3/97

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

DATE 9 / 3 / 97 INTERVIEWING OFFICER s. 22(1)(a)(ii) SIGNATURE

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

DAUGHTER IN GERMANY:

ASPERGER STR 44
71634 LUDWIGSBURG
DEUTSCHLAND

END MAY

SPOUSE'S SIBLINGS CONTINUED

EKREM	BOHE	1953	MALE
MEHMED	SWIT	'58	MALE
SAMIR	MALEYSIA	'65	MALE
ELDUD	BSHE	73	MALE
NAZIF	MOSTAR	62	MALE

- MIXED MARRIAGE FROM MOSTAR
- DAUGHTER IN GERMANY, COMING TO CRO BY END 5.97
- SON ~~WENT~~ GOES TO SCHOOL IN MOSTAR LIVES THERE WITH GRANDMOTHER, TRAVELS WITH FATHERS ID CARD AND HIS SCHOOL BOOK. PARENTS IN CRO, PA FINDS CASUAL JOBS KID COMES BACK TO CRO OVER WEEKEND

WIFE AND KIDS CAME TO CRO 4/92
PA WAS IN MOSTAR WORKED [illegible] IN HOSPITAL.
LIVED ON M LEFT (MUSLIM HELD) SIDE OF MOSTAR
LOST ALL PROPERTY THERE AND CANNOT RETURN
DUE TO MIXED MARRIAGE.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

HAD PROBLEMS BECAUSE OF HIS MARRIAGE TO A MUSLIM!

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

NOMINAL ROLL COMPLETION FORM

PRINCIPAL APPLICANT

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
MATIC	PAVAO NIKOLA	PA	16.12.49	M	BGHE	M	UR	T-2

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204
ELECTRIC	B	B	C	C	—	—	—

FAMILY MEMBER 1

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
	SABINA	SP	27.5.50	F	B	M	UR	T2

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204
ECONOMIST	B	B	M	ISL	—	—	—

FAMILY MEMBER 2

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
	SANDI	PA	25.8.83	M	B	N	UR	P7

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204
PUPIL	B	B	MIX	NN	—	—	—

FAMILY MEMBER 3

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
		PA

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204

FAMILY MEMBER 4

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
		PA

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204

FAMILY MEMBER 5

FAMILY NAME	GIVEN NAME	REL TO PA	D.O.B.	SEX	CITZ	MARITAL STATUS	UR - URBAN RU - RURAL	EDUCATION P,S,T + YEARS
		PA

OCCUPATION	ENGLISH B L F V	LANGUAGE	ETHNICITY	RELIGION	LENGTH IN CAMP	OAA, CRSS PRIVATE	WAR, T/T OTHER	VISA CLASS 200 204

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

45

Department of Immigration and Multicultural Affairs

DECLARATION REGARDING MILITARY SERVICE
IZJAVA O VOJNOJ SLUZBI

As part of the processing of your application to enter Australia you are required to complete the following declaration. Making a false or misleading statement in respect of entry to Australia can result in the refusal of your application or, if a visa has been granted, the cancellation of your visa. If your visa is cancelled after entry to Australia you may be required to leave Australia. Please read the following questions carefully and answer them correctly and in detail by marking the appropriate box. Should you require more space for your answers you can attach a separate sheet of paper that you must also sign and date.

Obrada Vase molbe ukljucuje i obavezu da popunite izjavu koja je pred Vama. Davanje lazne ili nepotpune izjave u vezi sa dobivanjem vize za Australiju moze dovesti do odbijanja Vase molbe, ili, ako je viza prethodno odobrena, do njenog ponistenja. Vasa viza moze biti ponistena i nakon vaseg ulazka u Australiju. I u tom slucaju od Vas se moze zahtijevati da napustite Australiju. Molimo pazljivo procitajte slijedeca pitanja i odgovorite na njih tocno I detaljno - oznacavanjem odgovarajuceg kvadratica. Ako Vam je potrebno vise prostora za odgovor, prilozite zaseban list papira, koji obavezno mora nositi vas potpis I datum.

Your family name: Prezime: MATIĆ

Your given name: Ime: PAVAO NIKOLA

Your nickname(s)(if any): Nadimak/ci (ako ste imali/ imate):

Your alias(es)(if any): Drugo ime (ako ste imali/imate):

Date and place of birth: Datum i mesto rodjenja: 16. 12. 1949 MOSTAR

Your occupation before the conflict in the former Yugoslavia:
Vase zanimanje prije sukoba na teritoriji bivse Jugoslavije:

ELEKTRIČAR

Your address before the conflict in the former Yugoslavia:
Vasa adresa prije sukoba na teritoriji bivse Jugoslavije:

6. Ilića 27

Your father's name and dates of birth and death (if deceased):
Ime Vaseg oca i datum rodenja i smrti (ako je umro):

TOMO - UMRO 10.5. 1971

Your brothers' names and dates of birth and death (if deceased):
Imena Vase brace i datum rodenja i smrti (ako su umrli):

IVAN

1. Did you undertake regular military service with ex JNA?
Da li ste sluzili redovni vojni rok u bivsoj JNA?

☐ NO/Ne Go to question 2, predjite na pitanje 2 ☒ YES/Da

Period of Service Period sluzenja	Place of service Mjesto sluzenja	Type of Unit Rod vojske
2 GODINE	SPLIT	MORNARICA

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

2. Have you been involved in the conflict in the former Yugoslavia (1991-1995) as a member of any military, paramilitary, police or territorial formation?
Da li ste kao pripadnik vojne, paravojne, teritorijalne odbrane (TO), policijske ili neke druge formacije na bilo koji nacin sudjelovali u ratnim zbivanjima u bivsoj Jugoslaviji (1991-1995)?

☒ NO/Ne Go to question 3. Predjite na pitanje 3. ☐ YES/Da

A. Date of enlistment
Datum pristupanja ______________

B. In what formations did you serve?
U kojoj ste formaciji sluzili? ______________

C. Provide name of the unit assigned to, area(s) in which you were active and dates:
Navedite ime jedinice u koju ste rasporedjeni, mjesto i vrijeme kada ste djelovali:

Name of Unit Ime jedinice	Location Mjesto	Dates Vrijeme	Position and Duties in the Unit Cin i duznosti u jedinici	Names of Unit leaders/ commanding officers Imena nadredjenih

D. Provide details of war activities that you and your unit were involved in, including dates:
Navedite detalje ratnih djelovanja u kojima ste Vi i Vasa jedinica sudjelovali i vrijeme njihovog odigravanja:

E. How and when did your involvement in the conflict end? Provide detailed explanation including dates of discharge and transfer. Please enclose discharge certificate and military book. If you are unable to provide them, please give full reasons.
Kako i kada se zavrsilo vase sudjelovanje u sukobu? Uz detaljno objasnjenje navedite datum otpustanja ili prekomande. Molimo prilozite uvjerenje o sluzenju vojnog roka i vojnu knjizicu. Ako ih ne mozete dostaviti, navedite detaljne razloge.

3. If you were not involved in the conflict in the former Yugoslavia how did you avoid involvement in the conflict? Please provide full details.
Ako niste sudjelovali u sukobu u bivsoj Jugoslaviji, kako ste izbjegli vojno angaziranje? Molimo da detaljne objasnite.

BIO SAM ANGAŽIRAN U BOLNICI
KAO ELEKTRIČAR NA ODRŽAVANJU
ELEKTRO ENERGETSKIH POSTROJENJA

Your signature
Vas potpis

SPLIT
Place
Mjesto

4. 3. 1997
Date
Datum

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

44

AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY MIGRATION OFFICE
MATTIELLISTRASSE 2 – 4 · 1040 VIENNA - AUSTRIA · TEL. 512 85 80 FAX 513 29 08

IZJAVA

Ja, MATIC PAVAO NIKOLA
(ime i prezime podnosioca molbe) STAMPANIM SLOVIMA MOLIM

Izjavljujem da sam bio informiran o slijedecem:

smjestaju, obrazovanju, novcanoj pomoci i zdravstvenom osiguranju te da po ulasku u Australiju mogu ostvariti pravo na:

- novcanu pomoc od Zavoda za socijalnu skrb
- savjetovanje za osobe koje su prezivjele zlostavljanja
- nastavu engleskog jezika u sklopu programa za useljenike

Po dolasku u Australiju biti cu smjesten u drzavnom smjestaju i ostvariti cu pravo na:

- smjestaj u stan iznajmljen od strane drzave za pocetni period od 13 tjedana. Primio sam na znanje da drzavni smjestaj nije besplatan i da ce moj doprinos stanarini iznositi do 30% od moje socijalne pomoci.

ILI

Biti cu prihvacen od strane Drustvene grupe za pomoc izbjeglicama koja ce mi osigurati smjestaj i pomoci po dolasku.

Ostvarit cu pravo na zdravstveno osiguranje u sklopu drzavnog sistema koje ce mi omoguciti zdravstvenu pomoc u slucaju da se potreba ukaze.

Potvrdjujem da sam primio na znanje da odobrenje moje molbe za iseljenje ne daje automatsko pravo ulaska u Australiju clanovima moje obitelji koji nisu ukljuceni u moju molbu.

Primam na znanje da je trazenje posla i zaposljavanje u Australiji moja odgovornost.

Matić
(potpis davaoca izjave)

9/3/97
(datum)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

43

AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY MIGRATION OFFICE
MATTIELLISTRASSE 2 – 4 · 1040 VIENNA - AUSTRIA · TEL. 512 85 80 FAX 513 29 08

Commonwealth of Australia - refugee resettlement program

Application for paid passage to Australia

I, MATIC PAVAO NIKOLA

of MOSTAR, BOSNIA

being accepted as a refugee and being an applicant for entry to Australia for resettlement, hereby apply to the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia (hereinafter referred to as "the Commonwealth") for payment of the cost of passage to Australia by the Commonwealth for the persons for whom entry is requested on the form of application for entry which I have submitted.

I understand that approval of this application is dependent on my not having assets valued in excess of $A20,000 for a family or $A10,000 for an individual.

Matic
Signature

9 / 3 / 97
Date

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

(before me)

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

(name and title)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

42

Department of Immigration and Multicultural Affairs

DECLARATION - IZJAVA

As part of the processing of your application to enter Australia you are required to complete the following declaration. Making a false or misleading statement in respect of entry to Australia can result in the refusal of your application or, if a visa has been granted, the cancellation of your visa. If your visa is cancelled after entry to Australia you may be required to leave Australia. The term war crime is used to mean an offence for which the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia has the power to prosecute persons under its Statute. These offences include grave breaches of the Geneva Convention of 1949, violations of the laws or customs of war, genocide and crimes against humanity.

Please read the following question carefully and answer it correctly by marking the appropriate box. Should you require more space for your answer you can attach a separate sheet of paper that you must also sign and date.

Obrada vase molbe ukljucuje i obavezu da popunite izjavu koja je pred vama. Davanje lazne ili nepotpune izjave u vezi sa dobivanjem Australske vize moze dovesti do odbijanja vase molbe ili ako je viza prethodno odobrena, do njenog ponistenja. Vasa viza moze biti ponistena i nakon vaseg ulaska u Australiju, u kom slucaju od vas moze biti zatrazeno da napustite Australiju. Izraz ratni zlocin koristi se da oznaci prekrsaj za koji Medunarodni Sud za Ratne Zlocine u bivsoj Jugoslaviji ima pravo da krivicno goni u skladu sa Statutom. Ovaj prekrsaj ukljucuje ozbiljna narusavanja Zenevske Konvencije iz 1949, krsenje zakona ili ratnog pravila ponasanja (ratnog prava) za genocid i zlocine protiv covjecanstva.

Molimo pazljivo procitajte slijedece pitanje i odgovorite na njega tocno - oznacavanjem odgovarajuceg kvadratica. Ako vam je potrebno vise prostora za odgovor, prilozite zaseban list papira, koji obavezno mora nositi vas potpis i datum.

Your family name:
Prezime: MATIĆ

Your given name:
Ime: PAVAO NIKOLA

Your nickname(s)(if any):
Nadimak/ci (ako imate):

Your alias(es)(if any):
Drugo ime (ako imate):

Date and place of birth:
Datum i mesto rodjenja: 16. 12. 1949 MOSTAR

Have you, your spouse or any of your dependent children or other dependants ever committed or been involved in the commission of war crimes or crimes against humanity?
Da li ste vi, vas bracni drug ili netko od vase djece koja su ovisna o vama ili neki drugi ovisni clan vase obitelji, ikad ucinili ili bili umjesani u ratne zlocine ili zlocine protiv covjecanstva?

☐ YES/Da ☒ NO/*Ne

Your signature
Vas potpis Matić
Matić

Place:
Mjesto: SPLIT

Date:
Datum: 4. 3. 1997

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

41

Department of Immigration and Multicultural Affairs

DECLARATION REGARDING CHARACTER
IZJAVA O KARAKTERU

As part of the processing of your application to enter Australia you are required to complete the following declaration. Making a false or misleading statement in respect of entry to Australia can result in the refusal of your application or, if a visa has been granted, the cancellation of your visa. If your visa is cancelled after entry to Australia you may be required to leave Australia. The term war crime is used to mean an offence for which the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia has the power to prosecute persons under its Statute. These offences include grave breaches of the Geneva Convention of 1949, violations of the laws or customs of war, genocide and crimes against humanity.

Please read the following questions carefully and answer them correctly and in detail by marking the appropriate box. Australian law requires you to disclose all convictions including convictions that are considered spent. Should you require more space for your answers you can attach a separate sheet of paper that you must also sign and date.

Obrada Vase molbe ukljucuje i obavezu da popunite izjavu koja je pred vama. Davanje lazne ili nepotpune izjave u vezi sa dobivanjem austrlaske vize moze dovesti do odbijanja Vase molbe ili ako je viza prethodno odobrena, do njenog ponistenja. Vasa viza moze biti ponistena i nakon Vaseg ulaska u Australiju. I u tom slucaju od Vas se moze zahtijevati da napustite Australiju. Izraz ratni zlocin koristi se da oznaci prekrsaj za koji Medunarodni Sud za Ratne Zlocine u bivsoj Jugoslaviji ima pravo da krivicno goni u skladu sa Statutom. Ovaj prekrsaj ukljucuje ozbiljna narusavanja Zenevske Konvencije iz 1949, krsenje zakona ili ratnog pravila ponasanja (ratnog prava) za genocid i zlocine protiv covjecnosti.

Molimo pazljivo procitajte slijedeca pitanja i odgovorite na njih tocno i detaljno - oznacavanjem odgovarajuceg kvadratica. Australski zakon zahtijeva da navedete sva pocinjena krivicna djela ukljucujuci i prekrsaje za koje je izdrzana kazna. Ako vam je potrebno vise prostora za odgovor, prilozite zaseban list papira, koji obavezno mora nositi Vas potpis i datum.

Your family name:
Prezime: MATIĆ
Your given name:
Ime: PAVAO NIKOCA
Your nickname(s)(if any):
Nadimak/ci (ako ste imali/imate):
Your alias(es)(if any):
Drugo ime (ako ste imali/imate):
Date and place of birth:
Datum i mjesto rodjenja: 16. 12. 1949 MOSTAR

Have you ever been ...Da li ste ikada...

1. Convicted of any crime or offence in any country?
Bili krivicno ili prekrsajno kaznjavani u bilo kojoj zemlji? ☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

2. Sentenced to serve a period of time in prison or in other form of detention?
Bili kaznjavani zatvorskom kaznom ili pritvorom? ☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

3. Charged pending trial or placed on probation?
Bili uslovno kaznjavani? ☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

4. Indicted, undergone legal proceedings or criminal investigation of any kind?
Bili zvanicno optuzivani / prosli sudski proces ili istrazni postupak?
☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

5. Detained during conflict in the former Yugoslavia?
Bili zatvarani ili smjesteni u logor u toku sukoba u prethodnoj Jugoslaviji?
☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

6. Participated in military or para-military service, police or "territorial formation", voluntary or otherwise, since the outbreak of the conflict in the former Yugoslavia (1991)?
Od pocetka sukoba na teritoriji bivse Jugoslavije (1991), dobrovoljno ili ne, sluzili u vojnim ili paravojnim formacijama ili Teritorijalnoj Odbrani (TO)?
☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

7. Involved in the conflict in the former Yugoslavia as a guard or prison official at any prison, detention cen[redacted] or transit camp?
Da li ste ucestovali u sukobu na teritoriji bivse Jugoslavije kao strazar ili upravnik u bilo kojem zatvoru, logoru ili sabirnom centru?

☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

8. Committed or been involved in the commission of war crimes or crimes against humanity and/or human rights?
Pocinili ili na bilo koji nacin bili umijesani u ratne zlocine, odnosno povrijedili principe humanosti i/ili ljudskih prava?

☐ Yes/Da ☒ No/Ne

If you answered YES to any of these questions please provide a separate written statement with a certified English translation providing a detailed response. You must also sign and date this statement. Statement is attached:

☐ Yes ☐ No

Ako ste na bilo koje od pitanja odgovorili sa DA, dostavite nam detaljnu izjavu prevedenu na engleski jezik. Izjavu ste prilozili:

☐ Da ☐ Ne

Your signature
Vas potpis

SPLIT
Place
Mjesto

4. 3. 97
Date
Datum

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Obrazac broj 5

40

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

OPŠTINA MOSTAR

Oslobođeno [illegible]
ZoAT-a i služi u svrhu regulisanja zdrav. uvjer. 2.3 11 Dobot

Izvod iz matične knjige rođenih

|2|5|0|8|9|8|3|1|5|0|0|4|8|
Jedinstveni matični broj

U matičnoj knjizi rođenih koja se vodi za mjesto Mostar pod rednim brojem 2366 za godinu 1983. izvršen je upis rođenja:

Prezime	MATIĆ		Pol muški
Ime	SANDI
Dan, mjesec, godina i sat rođenja	25./dvadesetipeti! avgusta 1983. u 16.3o č.
Mjesto i opština rođenja	MOSTAR
Državljanstvo	SFRJ i SR BiH
Podaci o roditeljima	ocu	majci
Prezime (za majku i djevojačko prezime)	Matić	Matić r. Derviškadić
Ime	Pavao Nikola	Sabina
Prebivalište	Mostar	Avenija 14.februar br 57 Mostar

Naknadni upisi i bilješke:

./.

Broj: 17695

U Mostaru

Dana: 2.9.1983.

M.P.

Dobot Dijana
(Potpis matičara)

SOUR »SVJETLOST«, RO GRAFIČKA DJELATNOST
OOUR »IZDAVANJE OBRAZACA« — SARAJEVO
Oznaka za narudžbu: 17/12 Izdanje: 56/83.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

39

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

OPŠTINA Mostar

Oslobođeno od takse po čl. 22 tač. 13
ZoAT-a a dalji u svrhu regulisanja zaposlaš.
Hl. Valetić s.r.

Izvod iz matične knjige rođenih

U matičnoj knjizi rođenih koja se vodi za mjesto Mostar
pod tekućim brojem 1398 za godinu 1972. izvršen je upis rođenja:

Prezime, ime i pol djeteta	Matić Renata – ženski
Dan, mjesec, godina i čas rođenja	9. (deveti) augusta 1972. u 12.10 č.
Mjesto i opština rođenja	Mostar
Podaci o roditeljima	ocu	majci
Prezime	Matić	Matić
Ime	Pavao	Sabina
Državljanstvo	Jugoslavensko
Prebivalište	Mostar	Mostar

Naknadni upisi i pribilješke:

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted]

Broj 11014/72.
U Mostaru
Dana 16.8.1972.

M.P.

Helena Valetić
(Potpis matičara)

»Svjetlost«, poslovnica tiskanica, Sarajevo

Obrazac br. 5

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

OPŠTINA Mostar

Taksa po Tar. br. 1 i 11 Odluke OOFJ-a u iznosu od 4.- din. na molbi je propisno poništena.
Ćurovac J.

IZVOD IZ MATIČNE KNJIGE ROĐENIH

U matičnoj knjizi rođenih koja se vodi za mjesto Mostar

pod tekućim brojem 531 za godinu 1950. izvršen je upis rođenja:

Prezime, ime i pol djeteta	Derviškadić Sabina – ženski
Dan, mjesec, godina i sat rođenja	27 (dvadesetisedmi) maja 1950. u 5 čas.
Mjesto i opština rođenja	Mostar opš. Mostar
Podaci o roditeljima	ocu	majci
Prezime	Derviškadić	Derviškadić
Ime	Derviš	Mejra
Državljanstvo	Jugoslovensko	Jugoslovensko
Prebivalište	Mostar	Mostar

Naknadni upisi i pribilješke:

[redacted] s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

U Mostaru

Dana 29.8. 1969. godine

M. P.

Matičar,
Ćurovac Jelena

Izdanje: { IKP »SVJETLOST« — Poslovnica tiskanica — Sarajevo
(1/69) { Novinska ustanova Službeni list SRBiH — Sarajevo
Oznaka za narudžbu: Obrazac br. 17/6

Izrađeno prema Uputstvu Sl. lista SFRJ br. 42/68.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

37

ИЗВОД

ИЗ МАТИЧНЕ КЊИГЕ РОЂЕНИХ

Народног одбора Grada Mostara среза Mostar

СТРАНА 675

956
Текући број

19 devetnaesti decembra 1949
дан, месец и година уписа

16 šesnaesti decembra 1949 u 1^30^ дан, месец, година и час (0-24 часа) рођења

Mostar - Bolnička
место рођења, улица и број

Matić Pavao - Nikola - muški породично и рођено име и пол детета

ПОДАЦИ О РОДИТЕЉИМА	ОЦА	МАЈКЕ
Породично име (за мајку и девојачко)	Matić	Matić [illegible]
Рођено име	Tomo	Aurelija
Дан, месец и година рођења	-1910-	-1922-
Држављанство	FNRJ.	FNRJ.
Народност	Hrvat	Hrvatica
Занимање	željezničar	domaćica
Место становања	Mostar	Mostar

Примедбе и исправке грешака:

Накнадни уписи и прибелешке:

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
[redacted]

Издато дана 19- XII 1949 год.

(М. П.)

Матичар,
Jović [illegible]

Породично и рођено име пријавиоца za Matić Tomo

za Matić Tomo
Пријавилац

za Jović [illegible]
Матича

Образац XXIII/23

Цена 0·50 дин.

Издање Инвалидског књижарског и штампарског предузећа Србије — Београд — 535

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

36

Bosna i Hercegovina

HRVATSKA REPUBLIKA HERCEG-BOSNA

Općina: Mostar

Izvadak iz matične knjige vjenčanih

JMB ženika | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

JMB nevjeste | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

U matičnoj knjizi vjenčanih koja se vodi za mjesto Mostar pod rednim brojem 13 za godinu 1971 upisano je zaključenje braka:

Mjesto zaključenja braka		Mostar
Dan, mjesec i godina zaključenja braka		27(dvadesetsedmi) veljače 1971g.
		ženika	nevjeste
Prezime		Matić	Derviškadić
Ime		Pavao-Nikola	Sabina
Dan, mjesec i godina rođenja		16.12.1949	27.5.1950
Mjesto i općina rođenja		Mostar	Mostar
Državljanstvo		BiH	BiH
Nacionalnost		Hrvat	Muslimanka
Prebivalište		Mostar	Mostar
Prezime i ime roditelja	očevo	Matić Tomo	Derviškadić Derviš
	majčino	Matić Anđelka	Derviškadić Mejra
Prezime koje su bračni drugovi uzeli pri zaključenju braka		MATIĆ	s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
Naknadni upisi i bilješke:			s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

Broj: 02-28637/94

U Mostaru

Dana 17.11.1999.

M.P.

Smilja Drinovac
(matičarev potpis)

MARTINO Mostar

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
Under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

REGIONALNA RATNA BOLNICA HVO
MOSTAR
Služba inžinjeringa i održavanja objekata i opreme
Broj: 2161/93
Mostar, 14. 07. 1993. godine

POTVRDA

kojom se potvrđuje da je Pavao Matić, VKV električar, ratnim rasporedom raspoređen na rad u Regionalnoj ratnoj bolnici HVO Mostar, a na održavanju elektroinstalacija, opreme, agregata i trafostanica, te redovne dežure na objektu Ratne kirurgije.

Iz prednjeg se vidi da Pavao Matić, VKV električar, od 22. 04. 1992. godine čini sastavni dio brigade Ratne bolnice u Službi održavanja, te je neophodan u njenom radu.

ZAPOVJEDNIK REGIONALNE RATNE
BOLNICE HVO MOSTAR:

za

Dr Ante Kvesić

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

34

F97169658

54

Osnovni podaci

Ime/Ime oca: SABINA, DERVIŠ

Prezime: MATIĆ

JMBG: 2705950155052

Spol: M [✓ Ž]

M. P.

Mjesto rođenja: MOSTAR

Podaci o stalnom prebivalištu:

Ulica i kbr.: P. PREKOM - BRIGA 8/A LUKA

Općina/Država: MOSTAR, BH

Datum izbjega: 140492

Evidencija promjene smještaja i prijava u CSR

1. K. ŠTAFILIĆ ,,RESNIK" 303 425

Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja

020694 CENTAR ZA SOC

datum prijave

CSRH - SPLIT

naziv centra

Pečat CSR-a

2.

Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja

datum prijave

naziv centra

Pečat CSR-a

3.

Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja

datum prijave

naziv centra

Pečat CSR-a

Ovjera prava korištenja osobnog kartona

br. 0-3548-11-2598

Ovjera vrijedi do:	Ovjera (potpis i pečat)
15.07.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT PODRUČNI ODJEL KAŠTELA
15.09.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
15.10.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
15.11.94
15.12.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
30.01.95	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

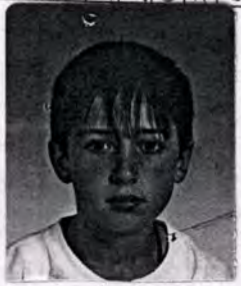
Osnovni podaci

Ime/Ime oca: SANDI, PAVAO

Prezime: MATIĆ

JMBG: 2508983150048



Spol [✓ M] Ž

M. P.

Mjesto rođenja: MOSTAR

Podaci o stalnom prebivalištu:

Ulica i kbr.: PUT. - PRE - BRIGA - LUKA

Općina/Država: MOSTAR, BH

Datum izbjega: 140492

Evidencija promjene smještaja i prijava u CSR

1. KAŠTEL ŠTAFILIĆ
Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja
"REŠNIK" - SOB 425
020694
datum prijave
CSRH - SPLIT
naziv centra
Pečat CSR-a
CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT PODRUČNI ODJEL KAŠTELA

2.
Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja
datum prijave
naziv centra
Pečat CSR-a

3.
Mjesto / Ulica i kbr. / Općina smještaja
datum prijave
naziv centra
Pečat CSR-a

Ovjera prava korištenja osobnog kartona

br. 9 - 34118 - - - 2599

Ovjera vrijedi do:	Ovjera (potpis i pečat)
15.07.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT PODRUČNI ODJEL KAŠTELA
15.09.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
15.10.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
15.11.94
15.12.94	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
30.01.95	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Osnovni podaci

Ime: RENATA

Ime oca: PAVAO

Prezime: MATIĆ

JMBG 0908972155006

Spol M [✓ Ž]

Datum rođenja: 090872

Mjesto rođenja: MOSTAR

Država rođenja: BOS i HER.

Podaci o stalnom prebivalištu

Mjesto: MOSTAR

Ulica i kbr: AVENIJA 14. feb. 57

Općina MOSTAR

Država: BOS i HERCEG.

Datum izbjega: 140492

Sadašnji smještaj

Mjesto: HOTEL "RESNIK"

Ulica i kbr: KAŠTEL ŠTAFILIĆ

Općina KAŠTELA

Država: HRVATSKA

1.

2.

3.

Ovjera prava korištenja osobnog kartona br.: 2510

Ovjera vrijedi do:	Ovjera (potpis i pečat)
27.03.93	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
27.04.93.
27.05.93	Bonić
30.06.93	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
30.07.93	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD SPLIT
30.08.93	CENTAR ZA SOCIJALNI RAD PODRUČNI ODJEL KAŠTELA

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

RATNI RASPORED	Overa

V. VOJNE VEŽBE

Godina i trajanje vežbe	Ocena na vežbi	Overa jedinice
7. dana 1973	OpŠNO
7. dana 1975	OpŠNO

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

III. ZDRAVSTVENI PODACI

Krvna grupa: A Rh (d) — (NEG.)

Vakcinacija protiv tetanusa, tifusa i paratifusa:

Naimenovanje	Datum i godina vakcinisanja
Prva vakcinacija protiv Tet., Ty AB.
Revakcinacija protiv Tet., Ty AB.
Dat samo tetanusni anatoksin

Potpis lekara

....

IV. RATNI RASPORED

RATNI RASPORED	Overa
PONIŠTEN RR [illegible]
PONIŠTEN RR [illegible]
PONIŠTEN RR [illegible]
ŽTO OOUR za EE postrojenja RJ MOSTAR

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

17) Otpušten iz JNA:

14.02.1970

18) Čin pri otpustu iz JNA:

DESETAR

19) Ocena: VOJNO-STRUČNU OBUKU U POTPUNOSTI JE SAVLADAO TE JE OSPOSOBLJEN ZA OBAVLJANJE DUŽNOSTI NA BRODU PREMA RASPOREDU. NA POSLU JE SPRETAN, VREDAN, ISTRAJAN I MARLJIV.

MORALNO POLITIČKI LIK MU JE IZGRAĐEN, DRUŠTVENO JE AKTIVAN I ANGAŽOVAN U DRUŠTVU UŽIVA POVERENJE DRUGOVA I STAREŠINA.

ZA ZALAGANJE I RAD NA DUŽNOSTI I PRIMERAN VOJNIČKI LIK VIŠE PUTA JE POHVALJIVAN.

20) Veličina — klasa odeće, rublja, obuće	BROJ
	Kape	Bluze Pantalona	Šinjela	Rublja	Cipela Čizama
	55	2 2	2	2	40

21) Data svečana obaveza

Datum 14.04.1968

u V. pošti 1159- Pula

Komandant

[illegible] STEVAN

(O. P.)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

5) Datum, mesto i opština rođenja:
16. 12. 1949 Hostar

6) Stanuje: opština, mesto, ulica i broj:
Hostar, Zgoni 67a

7) Opštinski organ uprave za narodnu odbranu:
Hostar

8) Zanimanje i soc. poreklo:
el. instalater, radn.

9) Nacionalnost:
Hrvat

10) Škole u građanstvu:
8. osn. 3. ŠUP

11) Znanje jezika:

12) Znanja važna za oružane snage:

II. SLUŽBA U JNA

13) Datum stupanja u JNA: 30.03.69

14) Rod — služba i trajanje vojnog roka:

15) Vojne škole i kursovi:
Osnovni električarski kurs 5 mjeseci

16) Osposobljen za JNA:	a) VES	b) Dužnost
	12303	ELEKTRIČAR
	13409 ✓	—

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

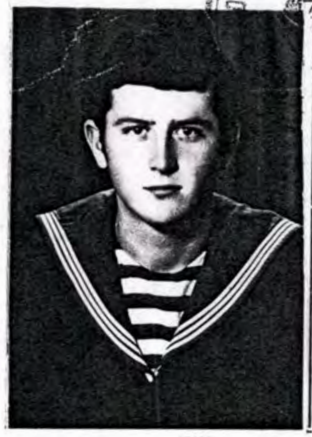
I. OPŠTI PODACI

3998-I



2) Lični opis:

a) Stas: niski

b) Kosa: smeđa

c) Lice: okruglo

d) Oči: zelene

e) Nos: prav.

f) Usta: prav.

g) Osobeni znaci:

nema

3) Lično ime:

Matić

(prezime)

Tome

(očevo ime)

Pavo

(ime)

4) Svojeručni potpis:

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

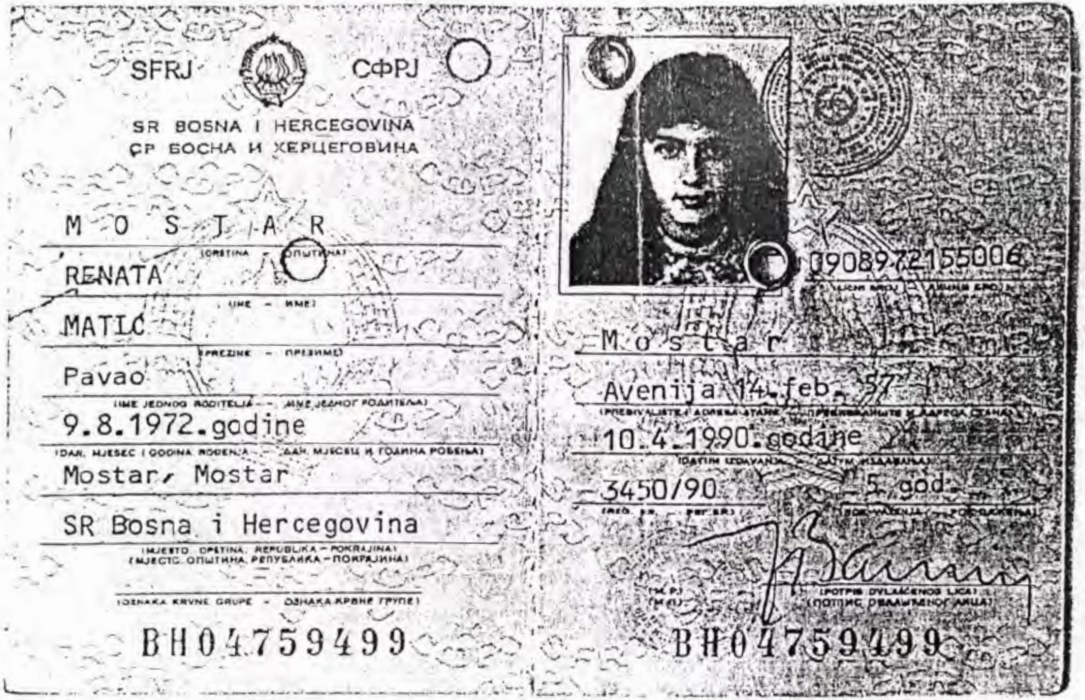
76



SFRJ СФРЈ

SR BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
СР БОСНА И ХЕРЦЕГОВИНА

M O S T A R
(OPSTINA — ОПШТИНА)

RENATA
(IME — ИМЕ)

MATIĆ
(PREZIME — ПРЕЗИМЕ)

Pavao
(IME JEDNOG RODITELJA — ИМЕ ЈЕДНОГ РОДИТЕЉА)

9.8.1972.godine
(DAN, MJESEC I GODINA ROĐENJA — ДАН, МЈЕСЕЦ И ГОДИНА РОЂЕЊА)

Mostar, Mostar

SR Bosna i Hercegovina
(MJESTO, OPŠTINA, REPUBLIKA – POKRAJINA)
(МЈЕСТО, ОПШТИНА, РЕПУБЛИКА – ПОКРАЈИНА)

(OZNAKA KRVNE GRUPE — ОЗНАКА КРВНЕ ГРУПЕ)

BH04759499

0908972155006
(LIČNI BROJ — ЛИЧНИ БРОЈ)

M o s t a r

Avenija 14.feb. 57
(PREBIVALIŠTE I ADRESA STANA — ПРЕБИВАЛИШТЕ И АДРЕСА СТАНА)

10.4.1990.godine
(DATUM IZDAVANJA — ДАТУМ ИЗДАВАЊА)

3450/90
(REG. BR. — РЕГ. БР.)

5 god.
(ROK VAŽENJA — РОК ВАЖЕЊА)

(M.P.)
(М.П.)

(POTPIS OVLAŠĆENOG LICA)
(ПОТПИС ОВЛАШЋЕНОГ ЛИЦА)

BH04759499

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

75

The original of this document has been seen
by Ž. MATIJEVIĆ
PN 6201
AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY
VIENNA

SFRJ СФРЈ

SR BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
СР БОСНА И ХЕРЦЕГОВИНА

MOSTAR
(OPŠTINA – ОПШТИНА)

SABINA
(IME – ИМЕ)

MATIĆ
(PREZIME – ПРЕЗИМЕ)

Derviš
(IME JEDNOG RODITELJA – ИМЕ ЈЕДНОГ РОДИТЕЉА)

27.05.1950.god.
(DAN, MJESEC I GODINA ROĐENJA – ДАН, МЈЕСЕЦ И ГОДИНА РОЂЕЊА)

Mostar

SR BiH
(MJESTO, OPŠTINA, REPUBLIKA – POKRAJINA)
(МЈЕСТО, ОПШТИНА, РЕПУБЛИКА – ПОКРАЈИНА)

(OZNAKA KRVNE GRUPE – ОЗНАКА КРВНЕ ГРУПЕ)

BH0547 3689

2705950155052
(LIČNI BROJ – ЛИЧНИ БРОЈ)

Mostar

Put Prek.Brig.br.8 A
(PREBIVALIŠTE I ADRESA STANA – ПРЕБИВАЛИШТЕ И АДРЕСА СТАНА)

04.03.1992.god.
(DATUM IZDAVANJA – ДАТУМ ИЗДАВАЊА)

1602/92
(REG. BR. – РЕГ. БР.)

10 godina
(ROK VAŽENJA – РОК ВАЖЕЊА)

(M.P.)
(М.П.)

(POTPIS OVLAŠĆENOG LICA)
(ПОТПИС ОВЛАШЋЕНОГ ЛИЦА)

BH05473689

Potvrđuje se da je ovaj prijepis istovietan sa izvornom ispravom s njegovim ovjeren[illegible] prijepisom koji je napisan mastilom, pisaćim strojem [illegible] i koji se sastoji od — araka [illegible] nalazi se kod [illegible] Uredbe o administrativnim [illegible] naplaćena je i por[illegible] Oslobođeno plać[illegible] 9/1 Uredbe o administrativnim taksama.

OPĆINA SPLIT
Sekretarijat opće uprave i proračuna

Klasa: [illegible]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

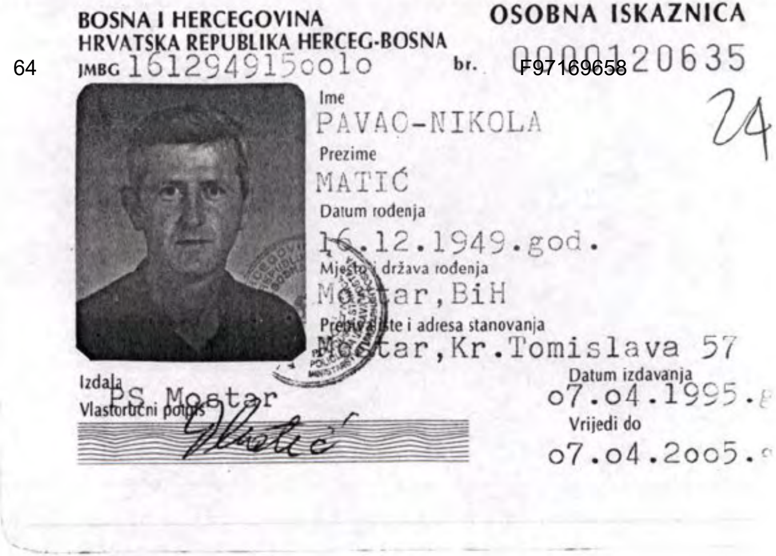
s. 22(1)(a)(ii)



BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
HRVATSKA REPUBLIKA HERCEG-BOSNA
JMBG 161294915oolo

OSOBNA ISKAZNICA
br. 0000120635

24

Ime
PAVAO-NIKOLA

Prezime
MATIĆ

Datum rođenja
16.12.1949.god.

Mjesto i država rođenja
Mostar,BiH

Prebivalište i adresa stanovanja
Mostar,Kr.Tomislava 57

Izdala
PS Mostar

Datum izdavanja o7.o4.1995.

Vlastoručni potpis
Matić

Vrijedi do
o7.o4.2oo5.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

REDNI BROJ MATIČNE KNJIGE 953/XIX

Fotografija učenika
(nije obvezna)

Sandi Matić
(Potpis učenika-ce)

U ______________________ 19____

Narodne novine, Zagreb (1) 11-948
Oznaka za narudžbu: UT-XI-1/37 a b

REPUBLIKA HRVATSKA

OPĆINA ______________________

OSNOVNA ŠKOLA OSNOVNA ŠKOLA „BIJAĆI« KAŠTEL - NOVI

UČENIČKA KNJIŽICA

Sandi Matić
(Ime i prezime učenika)

ime oca-majke Pavao i Sabina rođen-~~a~~ 25.08. 1983.

mjesto Mostar

općina Mostar

Republika Bosna i Hercegovina

narodnost ______________________ državljanstvo ______________________ upisan-~~a~~ 14. IX. školske godine 1992/1993. u III razred

(datum)

Razrednik: Anka Ta[illegible]

Ravnatelj: Jadranka Šošić, prof.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
HRVATSKA REPUBLIKA HERCEG-BOSNA

Općina MOSTAR

DESETA OSNOVNA ŠKOLA
(Naziv škole)

Mjesto MOSTAR Matična knjiga XX. broj 10886

UVJERENJE

o završenom ŠESTOM (VI.) razredu osnovne škole

SANDI MATIĆ
(Ime i prezime učenika-ce)

Sin-~~kći~~ PAVLA NIKOLE I SABINE MATIĆ
(Ime i prezime oca i majke)

Rođen-~~a~~ 25. VIII. 19 83. godine u MOSTARU općina MOSTAR

Država BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA nacionalnost HRVAT

Polazi-o je školske 1995./96. godine ŠESTI (VI.) razred osnovne škole i postigao-la ovaj uspjeh:

Hrvatski jezik	ODLIČAN 5	Napomena:
Likovna kultura	ODLIČAN 5
Glazbena kultura	ODLIČAN 5
ENGLESKI jezik	VRLO DOBAR 4
jezik
Matematika	VRLO DOBAR 4
Priroda ~~i društvo~~	ODLIČAN 5
Biologija
Kemija
Fizika
Povijest	ODLIČAN 5
Zemljopis	ODLIČAN 5
Tehnička kultura	ODLIČAN 5
Tjelesna i zdravstvena kultura	ODLIČAN 5
Izborni predmeti
VLADANJE	UČENIK JE PRIMJERNOG PONAŠANJA, IZRAZITO SE ZALAŽE U RADU.

Prema tome SANDI MATIĆ
(Ime i prezime)

je završio-~~la~~ ŠESTI (VI.) razred osnovne škole sa ODLIČNIM (5) uspjehom.

U MOSTARU 19. VI. 1996. godine.

Razrednik

M.P.

Ravnatelj

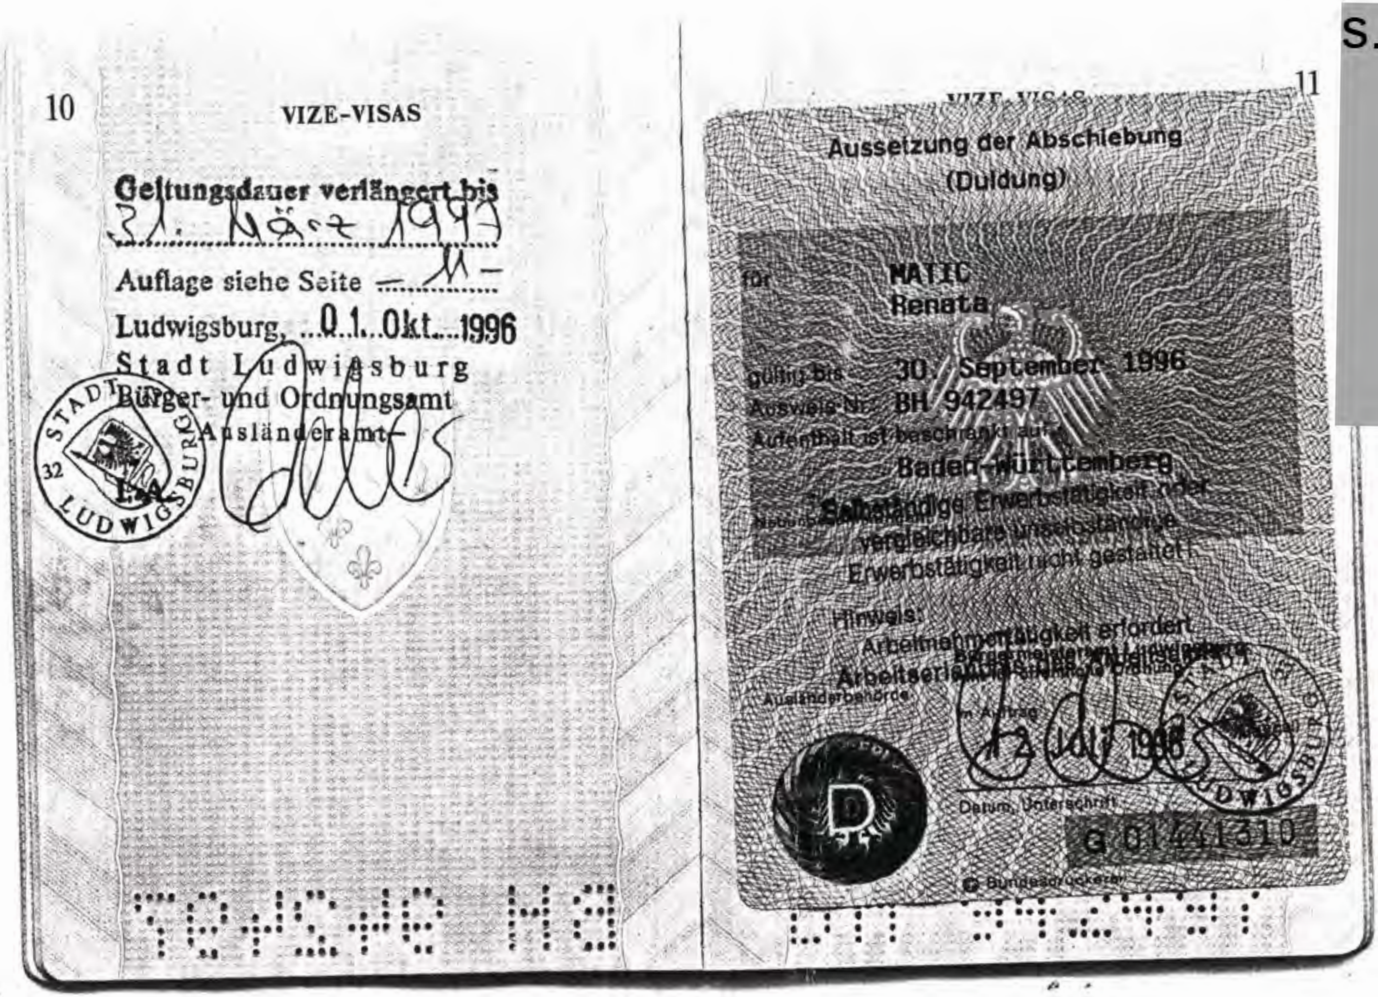
Tisak: S•LVEJ Mostar

NARODNI LIST HR H-B
Izdanje: 13-Po-09/96

Obrazac 3

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]



10 VIZE-VISAS

Geltungsdauer verlängert bis
31. März 1997

Auflage siehe Seite — 11 —

Ludwigsburg, 01. Okt. 1996

Stadt Ludwigsburg
Bürger- und Ordnungsamt
– Ausländeramt –

11 VIZE-VISAS

Aussetzung der Abschiebung
(Duldung)

für MATIC
Renata

gültig bis 30. September 1996

Ausweis-Nr. BH 942497

Aufenthalt ist beschränkt auf:
Baden-Württemberg

Selbständige Erwerbstätigkeit oder vergleichbare unselbständige Erwerbstätigkeit nicht gestattet!

Hinweis:
Arbeitnehmertätigkeit erfordert Arbeitserlaubnis

Ausländerbehörde

Im Auftrag

12. Juli 1996

Datum, Unterschrift

G 01441310

© Bundesdruckerei

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

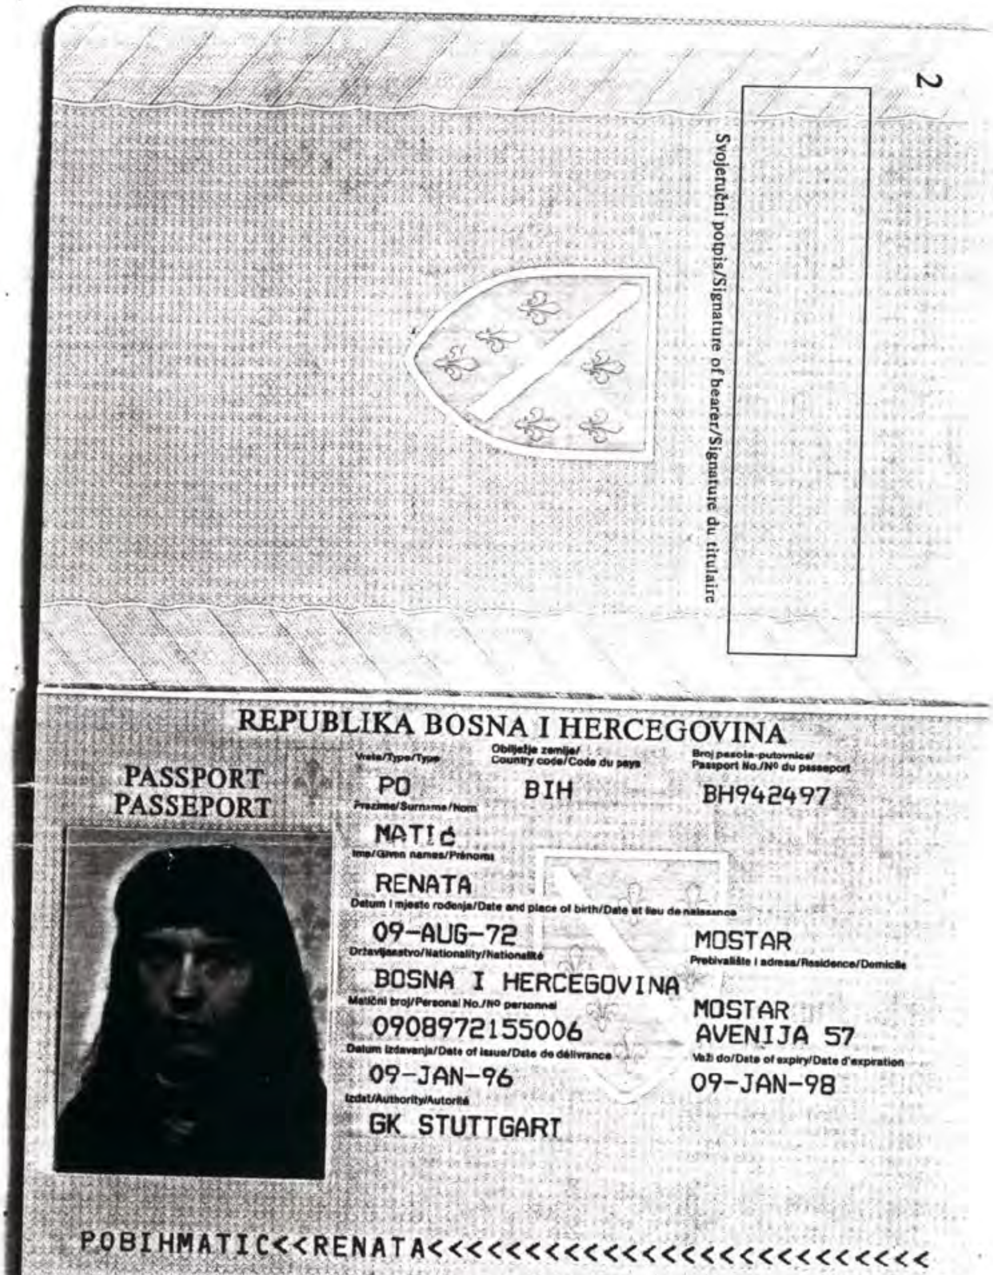
10



2

Svojeručni potpis/Signature of bearer/Signature du titulaire

REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

PASSPORT
PASSEPORT

Vrsta/Type/Type: PO
Obilježje zemlje/Country code/Code du pays: BIH
Broj pasoša-putovnice/Passport No./N° du passeport: BH942497
Prezime/Surname/Nom: NATIĆ
Ime/Given names/Prénoms: RENATA
Datum i mjesto rođenja/Date and place of birth/Date et lieu de naissance: 09-AUG-72 MOSTAR
Državljanstvo/Nationality/Nationalité: BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
Prebivalište i adresa/Residence/Domicile: MOSTAR AVENIJA 57
Matični broj/Personal No./N° personnel: 0908972155006
Datum izdavanja/Date of issue/Date de délivrance: 09-JAN-96
Važi do/Date of expiry/Date d'expiration: 09-JAN-98
Izdat/Authority/Autorité: GK STUTTGART

```
POBIHMATIC<<RENATA<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<
BH942497<9BIH7208090F98010930908972155006<60
```

[redacted]

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

1

REPUBLIKA
BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
РЕПУБЛИКА
БОСНА И ХЕРЦЕГОВИНА
REPUBLIC OF
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
REPUBLIQUE DE
BOSNIE ET HERZEGOVINE

BH234118

Svojeručni potpis/Signature of bearer/Signature du titulaire

REPUBLIKA
BOSNA I
HERCEGOVINA

Vrsta/Type/Type: PO
Obilježje zemlje/Code of issuing State/Code du pays émetteur: BIH
Broj pasoša/Passport no/No du passeport: BH234118
Prezime/Surname/Nom: MATIĆ
Ime/Given names/Prénoms: SABINA rodjenja/Date and place of birth/Date et lie: 27-MAY-50 MOSTAR
Nationalité: BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
sa/Residence/Domicile: MOSTAR PUT PREKOM.B.16A 2705950155052
e délivrance: 01-DEC-93
Date d'expiration: 01-DEC-95
Autorité: AMBASADA ZAGREB
Potpis službenog lica/Signature du fonctionnaire

POBIHMATIC<<SABINA<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<
BH234118<5BIH5005273F9512014270595015505 2<48

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

PUTUJU S NJIM / ACCOMPANIED BY / ACCOMPAGNE DE

Prezime i ime Family name and names Nom et prénoms	Srodstvo Relationship Parenté	Dan, mjesec i godina rodjenja Date of birth Date de naissance
MATIć SANDI	SIN	25-AUG-83

Fotografije članova porodice veličine 3.5 × 4.5 cm
Slike članova obitelji veličine 3.5 × 4.5 cm
Photographs of members of the family size 3.5 × 4.5 cm
Photographies des membres de la famille de format 3.5 × 4.5 cm

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Prezime i ime
Презиме и име
Nom et prénom

MATIĆ PAVAO-NIKOLA

Dan, mjesec i godina rodjenja 16.12.1949.
Дан, мјесец и година рођења
Date de naissance

Mjesto i opština rodjenja MOSTAR
Мјесто и општина рођења
Lieu de naissance et commune

Prebivalište i adresa stana MOSTAR
Пребивалиште и адреса стана
Domicile habituel et adresse exacte

AVENIJA 57

Matični broj 1612949150010
Матични број
N⁰ d'immatriculation

2

(Svojeručni potpis — Својеручни потпис Signature du titulaire)

574878

3

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

16

97169658

Mr Pavao-Nikola Matic
C/ Tomic Nikola
Put Blata Bb
Kastel Novi
21216 Split
Croatia

13/02/97

Postovani Mr Matic,

Obracam Vam se u vezi molbe za iseljenje koju ste podnijeli u nasem uredu pod izbjeglickim programom, klasa vize 200.

Molim da zajedno sa svim clanovima Vase obitelji dodjete na razgovor sa sluzbenikom australijske ambasade. Razgovor sa Vama zakazan je u

04,03,1997 u 13.30 na adresi: UNHCR Split, Kralja Zvonimira 14 Split

Sa sobom morate ponijeti slijedece dokumente (ako ih posjedujete):

- po cetiri fotografije za svakog clana obitelji
- rodne listove
- vjencani list
- stare i nove licne karte (osobne iskaznice)
- stare i nove pasose (putovnice)
- izbjeglicke legitimacije/kartone/potvrde
- vojnu knjizicu i potvrdu o demobiliziranju
- skolske diplome za dijecu i odrasle clanove obitelji
- izvod iz maticne knjige umrlih za bracnog partnera (sve udovice/udovci moraju priloziti ovaj dokument)
- ako ste razvedeni - potvrda o razvodu braka
- ako ste razvedeni i vodite dijecu sa sobom - suglasnost od drugog roditelja da djeca mogu putovati sa Vama u Australiju

Dokumneti moraju biti ovjerene kopije ili originali (originali ce Vam biti vraceni).
Sve osobe ukljucene u molbu moraju doci na razgovor.
Ako ste slike ili druge dokumente poslali zajedno sa Vasom molbom ne morate ih ponovo donositi.

MOLIM DA NAS TELEFONSKI KONTAKTIRATE ODMAH PO PRIMITKU OVOG PISMA NA TEL (43 1) 512 85 80 140.

Sa postovanjem

[redacted] s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

za Prvog Sekretara (Migracije)

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

F97169658

15

DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION AND ETHNIC AFFAIRS

Application for a Permanent Visa on Refugee or Humanitarian Grounds

842

1 Indicate the visa you are applying for Refugee and humanitarian visa class:

Refugee (subclass 200) ○
In-country special humanitarian (subclass 201) ☒
Global special humanitarian (subclass 202) ○
Emergency rescue (subclass 203) ○
Woman at risk (class 204) ○

Camp clearance visa class

Camp clearance (subclass 205) ○

Your details

Note: Write your name and birth details exactly as they are on official documents such as a birth certificate, family book, passport or identification document.

2 Your surname or family name

English:
Ethnic script (if applicable): MATIĆ

3 Your given names

English:
Ethnic script (if applicable): PAVAO - NIKOLA

4 Other names you have used before (such as before marriage, or an alias)

, N/A '

5 Chinese Commercial Code numbers, if applicable

, N/A '

6 Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 16 / 12 / 1949

7 Sex Male ☒ Female ○

8 Place of birth

Town: MOSTAR
Country: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

9 Citizenship at birth

SFRJ

10 Present citizenship

B&H

AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY
VIENNA
06 FEB. 1997
161
MIGRATION OFFICE

11 What is your present marital status?

Never married ○
Married ☒
Engaged to be married ○
Living in a de facto relationship ○
Widowed ○ Divorced ○
Permanently separated ○
Temporarily separated ○

From what date? (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 27 / 02 / 1971

12 Give details of any previous marriages and de facto marriage relationships

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner: , N/A '
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A
Number of children

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner: , N/A
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A
Number of children

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner: , N/A
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A '
Number of children

13 Number of identity card, social security card, or alien registration number

0000120635

Continued overleaf ►

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

14 Travel document details, for example passport, travel authority, documentary visa etc

Type of travel document

Number

Place of issue

Date of issue (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Date of expiry (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

15 Your present address

PUT BLATA BB
KAŠTEL NOVI SPLIT
REPUBLIC OF CROATIA Postcode

16 Contact telephone numbers

Home Area code ( ) ,N/A'

Work Area code ( ) ,N/A'

17 Address of a person who can receive correspondence on your behalf (if applicable)

TOMIĆ NIKOLA
PUT BLATA BB
21216 KAŠTEL NOVI Postcode SPLIT CROATIA

18 Give details of ALL the countries where you have lived in the last 10 years

Note: Provide address in each country where you have lived for 12 months or more. Show all addresses in Australia for any period, including visits.

From (MONTH/YEAR) 07 / '85 To 07 / '93
Country B & H
Address GAŠE ILIĆA 27
MOSTAR Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) 07 / 1993 To 01 / 1995
Country CROATIEN
Address HN RESNIK,
KAŠTEL ŠTAFILIĆ
SPLIT Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) 02 / 1995 To 01 / 1997
Country CROATIEN
Address PUT BLATA BB
KAŠTEL NOVI
SPLIT Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) / To / Country
Address
Postcode

19 About your FATHER

Your father's surname or family name
MATIĆ

Given names
TOMISLAV

Other names your father has used before (such as an alias)
,N/A'

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 17 / 06 / 1910

Place of birth
Town MOSTAR
Country BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country where living now (if not living write 'deceased')
DECEASED

20 About your MOTHER

Your mother's surname or family name
MATIĆ (BAGIĆ)

Given names
ANĐA

Other names your mother has used before (such as before marriage or an alias)
,N/A'

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 10 / 03 / 1922

Place of birth
Town ODŽAK
Country BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country where living now (if not living write 'deceased')
,N/A'

21 About your BROTHERS and SISTERS

Include full, half, step and adopted brothers and sisters. If not living, write 'deceased'. If whereabouts unknown, write 'unknown'.

Note: If you need more space to answer, attach a signed and dated sheet giving the required details.

Name MATIĆ JELENA
Country where living now BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age 52
Sex Male ○ Female ☒

Name MATIĆ IVAN
Country where living now BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age
Sex Male ☒ Female ○

F97169658

About your BROTHERS and SISTERS continued

Name MATIĆ (SOLDO) BRANKA
Country where living now BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age 45
Sex Male ○ Female ☒

Name
Country where living now
Age
Sex Male ○ Female ○

Name
Country where living now
Age
Sex Male ○ Female ○

22 Do you, your spouse or any dependents included in this application have any relatives, friends or business contacts in Australia?

No ☒
Yes ○ ▶ Provide details

Name ,N/A'
Relationship (uncle, friend etc)
Address in Australia ,N/A'
Postcode

Name
Relationship (uncle, friend etc)
Address in Australia
Postcode

Name ,N/A'
Relationship (uncle, friend etc)
Address in Australia
Postcode

Name ,N/A'
Relationship (uncle, friend etc)
Address in Australia
Postcode

23 Are you or your spouse currently awaiting a decision on another Australian visa application?

No ☒
Yes ○

24 Do you or your spouse hold another visa for travel to Australia?

No ☒
Yes ○

Warning: In general a person can only hold one visa at a time. If you are granted a visa while you already have another, the first visa will cease.

25 In which State or Territory do you intend to live in Australia?

Don't know ○
New South Wales ○
Victoria ☒
Queensland ○
Tasmania ○
Northern Territory ○
South Australia ☒
Western Australia ☒
External Territory ○
Australian Capital Territory ○

26 In which town, suburb or district (if known)

MELBOURNE - PERTH - ADELAIDE

27 What is the value of the money, goods and assets which you and your spouse intend to bring to Australia?

In local currency
OR Australian dollars A$

28 State the number of years of education you successfully completed at levels similar to the Australian levels shown

Primary school 8 years
Secondary school 3 years
Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training 2 years
Tertiary (university or equivalent) ,N/A' years

Continued overleaf ▶

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

29 Give details of all qualifications you obtained at the highest level of education you successfully completed

Enclose evidence of those qualifications.

Qualification obtained: ELECTRO - INSTALLATER
Name of school, college, university or training body: SECONDARY SCHOOL FOR HANDICRAFT IN MOSTAR
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 01 / 09 / 1964
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 24 / 06 / 1967

Qualification obtained: HIGH - QUOLIFIED INSTALLATER
Name of school, college, university or training body: TRAINING COURSE
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 01 / 09 / 1984
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 25 / 06 / 1986

Qualification obtained: TRAFIC TEHNICIAN
Name of school, college, university or training body: TRAINING COURSE
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 01 / 09 / 1979
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 24 / 01 / 1981

Qualification obtained:
Name of school, college, university or training body:
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Qualification obtained:
Name of school, college, university or training body:
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Qualification obtained:
Name of school, college, university or training body:
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

30 Give details of your employment history since lea[illegible]g school, including any periods of unemployment

Date from (MONTH/YEAR): 09 / 1972 To 04 / 1992
Name and address of employer: RELEWAY STATION MOSTAR
Postcode
Type of business: HIGH QUOLIFIED ELECTRICIAN
Your occupation:

Date from (MONTH/YEAR): / To /
Name and address of employer: , N/A
Postcode
Type of business: , N/A '
Your occupation:

Date from (MONTH/YEAR): / To /
Name and address of employer: , N/A
Postcode
Type of business: , N/A
Your occupation:

Date from (MONTH/YEAR): / To /
Name and address of employer: , N/A
Postcode
Type of business:
Your occupation:

You[illegible] spouse's details

For the purpose of this form the term 'spouse' means legally married husband or wife, or a partner in a de facto marriage relationship. If you do not have a spouse, go to question 54.

31 Will your spouse accompany you to Australia?
Yes ☒
No ○ ▶ Why not? , N/A '

32 Spouse's surname or family name
English:
Ethnic script (if applicable): MATIĆ

33 Spouse's given names
English:
Ethnic script (if applicable): SABINA

34 Other names your spouse has used before (such as before marriage, or an alias)
DERVIŠKADIĆ SABINA

35 Spouse's Chinese Commercial Code numbers, if applicable
, N/A '

36 Spouse's date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 27 / 05 / 1950

37 Spouse's sex Male ○ Female ☒

38 Spouse's place of birth
Town: MOSTAR
Country: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

39 Spouse's citizenship at birth
SFRJ

40 Spouse's present citizenship
B & H

41 Spouse's passport or travel document number
, N/A '

42 Number of identity card, social security card, or alien registration number
BH 05473689 1602/92

43 Your spouse's travel document details, for example passport, travel authority, documentary visa etc
Type of travel document: , N/A '
Number:
Place of issue:
Date of issue (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date of expiry (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

44 Does your spouse live at the same address to the one you gave in question 15?
Yes ☒
No ○ ▶ At what address does your spouse live?
Postcode

45 Spouse's contact telephone number
Home: Area code ( ) , N/A '
Work: Area code ( )

46 Give details of your spouse' previous marriage and de facto marriage relationships (if applicable)

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner: , N/A '
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A '
Number of children:

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner: , N/A
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A
Number of children:

Name of previous spouse or de facto marriage partner:
Period of marriage or relationship
Date started (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
Date ended (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /
How did it end (divorce etc)? , N/A '
Number of children:

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Continued overleaf ▶

47 About your spouse's FATHER

Your spouse's father's surname or family name
DERVIŠKADIĆ

Given names
DERVIŠ

Other names your spouse's father has used before (such as an alias)
„N/A"

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 23 / 09 / 1924

Place of birth
Town MOSTAR
Country BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country where living now (if not living write 'deceased')
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

48 About your spouse's MOTHER

Your spouse's mother's surname or family name
DERVIŠKADIĆ

Given names
SAMIJA - MEJRA

Other names your spouse's mother has used before (such as before marriage or an alias)

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 20 / 03 / 1933

Place of birth
Town MOSTAR
Country BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country where living now (if not living write 'deceased')
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

49 About your spouse's BROTHERS and SISTERS

Include full, half, step and adopted brothers and sisters. If not living, write 'deceased'. If whereabouts unknown, write 'unknown'.

Note: If you need more space to answer, attach a signed and dated sheet giving the required details.

Name
ZILIĆ (DERVIŠKADIĆ) AZRA
Country where living now
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age 46
Sex Male ○ Female ☒

Name
DERVIŠKADIĆ MERZEIN
Country where living now
DEUTSCHLAND
Age 42
Sex Male ☒ Female ○

About your spouse's BROTHERS and SISTERS continued

Name
DERVIŠKADIĆ MUGDIM
Country where living now
SVERIGE
Age 36
Sex Male ☒ Female ○

Name
DERVIŠKADIĆ EMIR
Country where living now
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age 28
Sex Male ☒ Female ○

Name
JERLAGIĆ (DERVIŠKADIĆ) VIŠNJA
Country where living now
BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA
Age 31
Sex Male ○ Female ☒

50 Give details of ALL the countries where your spouse has lived in the last 10 years

Note: Provide address in each country where your spouse has lived for 12 months or more. Show all addresses in Australia for any period, including visits.

From (MONTH/YEAR) 07 / 1985 To 04 / 1992
Country B & H
Address GAŠE ILIĆA 27
MOSTAR Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) 04 / 1992 To 01 / 1995
Country CROATIEN
Address RESNIK
KAŠTEL ŠTAFILIĆ
SPLIT Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) 02 / 1995 To 01 / 1997
Country CROATIEN
Address PUT BLATA BB
KAŠTEL NOVI
SPLIT Postcode

From (MONTH/YEAR) / To / Country
Address
Postcode

51 State the number of years of education your spouse successfully completed at levels similar to the Australian levels shown

Primary school	8 years
Secondary school	4 years
Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training	years
Tertiary (university or equivalent)	2 years

52 Give details of all qualifications your spouse obtained at the highest level of education successfully completed.

Enclose evidence of those qualifications.

Qualification obtained
TEACHER
Name of school, college, university or training body
SECONDARY SCHOL OF PEDAGOGY
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 09 / 09 / 1966
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 24 / 06 / 1970

Qualification obtained
ECONOMY - COMMERCIAL
Name of school, college, university or training body
HIGHER ECONOMY - COMMERCIAL
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 01 / 10 / 1980
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 01 / 03 / 1983

Qualification obtained
Name of school, college, university or training body
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Qualification obtained
Name of school, college, university or training body
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Qualification obtained
Name of school, college, university or training body
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Qualification obtained
Name of school, college, university or training body
Date commenced (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Date completed (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

53 Give details of your spouse's employment history since leaving school, including any periods of unemployment

Date from (MONTH/YEAR) 09 / 1975 To 03 / 1992
Name and address of employer
„SLAVONIJA" DI
MOSTAR Postcode
Type of business
ECONOMY - COMMERCIAL
Your spouse's occupation
„N/A"

Date from (MONTH/YEAR) / To /
Name and address of employer
„N/A"
Postcode
Type of business
„N/A
Your spouse's occupation

Date from (MONTH/YEAR) / To /
Name and address of employer
Postcode
Type of business
Your spouse's occupation

Date from (MONTH/YEAR) / To /
Name and address of employer
Postcode
Type of business
Your spouse's occupation

Continued overleaf ►

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Your family's details

54 Do you or your spouse have any children?

No ○ ▶ Go to question 57

Yes ☒ ▶ Give the following details for ALL children of both yourself and your spouse (including adult children and those from previous marriages or relationships, and adoptions)

Child 1

Full name: RENATA MATIĆ

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 09 / 08 / 1972

Place of birth: MOSTAR

Sex: Male ○ Female ☒

Present citizenship: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country of usual residence: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ☒

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

„N/A"

Child 2

Full name: SANDI MATIĆ

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 25 / 08 / 1983

Place of birth: MOSTAR

Sex: Male ☒ Female ○

Present citizenship: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Country of usual residence: BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ☒

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

„N/A"

Child 3

Full name: SANDI Broj 17695d

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 02 / 09 / 1983

Place of birth: Unknown

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Present citizenship: Foreign Sovereign

Country of usual residence: Animal Kingdom

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ☒

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

Child 4

Full name: Djete MATIC of Sabine (still-born)

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 24 / 08 / 1983

Place of birth: Mostar or Sarajevo Bureau of Statistics

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Present citizenship:

Country of usual residence: Unknown

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ○

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

Child 5

Full name: Djete MATIC of Sabine (still-born)

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 09 Aug 1972

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Present citizenship:

Country of usual residence:

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ○

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

Child 6

Full name: Pavao

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Present citizenship:

Country of usual residence:

Is this child included in your application? No ○ Yes ○

If resident in Australia, but not an Australian citizen, what type of visa do they hold?

55 Are any of the children listed in question 54 normally dependent on you or your spouse, but not in your care now?

No ○

Yes ☒ ▶ State why they are not in your care now

56 Are any of the children listed in question 54 who are under 18 years of age, no longer in the legal care and custody of you or your spouse?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ Provide evidence that these children are no longer in your custody

57 Do you or your spouse have any dependent family members other than the children listed in question 54

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ Give the following details and attach a statement explaining how they are dependent on you

Dependent family member 1

Full name: „N/A"

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Marital status:

Relationship to you:

Travelling or applying with you? No ○ Yes ○

Dependent family member 2

Full name: „N/A"

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Marital status:

Relationship to you:

Travelling or applying with you? No ○ Yes ○

Dependent family member 3

Full name: „N/A"

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Marital status:

Relationship to you:

Travelling or applying with you? No ○ Yes ○

Dependent family member 4

Full name: „N/A"

Date of birth (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): / /

Place of birth:

Sex: Male ○ Female ○

Marital status:

Relationship to you:

Travelling or applying with you? No ○ Yes ○

58 Is any child mentioned in question 54 or dependent family member listed in question 57 aged 18 years or older?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ You must also complete a form 842A Details of Child or Other Dependent Family Member Aged 18 Years or Older for each such person 59 Are any of the children applying with you, 18 years or over and still dependent on you?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ Describe how they are dependent on you

60 For children aged between 5 and 18 years of age, identified in questions 54 and 57 who are applying with you, state the number of years of education successfully completed

Child's name: RENATA MATIĆ

Number of years completed:	Primary	8 years
	Secondary	4 years
	Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training	years
	Tertiary	years

Child's name: SANDI MATIĆ

Number of years completed:	Primary	7 years
	Secondary	years
	Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training	years
	Tertiary	years

Child's name:

Number of years completed:	Primary	years
	Secondary	years
	Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training	years
	Tertiary	years

Child's name:

Number of years completed:	Primary	years
	Secondary	years
	Trade apprenticeship or other post-school technical training	years
	Tertiary	years

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Continued overleaf ▶

61 For children listed in question 54. If English has not been the child's first language, state whether the child has learnt English at school (provide the number of years of English instruction), and whether you consider that the child needs to attend a special English course on arrival in Australia, to enable the child to take part in normal education.

Child's name: RENATA MATIĆ
Number of years of English instruction: years
Special English course required? No ☒ Yes ☒

Child's name: SANDI MATIĆ
Number of years of English instruction: 4 years
Special English course required? No ○ Yes ☒

Child's name:
Number of years of English instruction: years
Special English course required? No ○ Yes ○

Child's name:
Number of years of English instruction: years
Special English course required? No ○ Yes ○

Child's name:
Number of years of English instruction: years
Special English course required? No ○ Yes ○

Child's name:
Number of years of English instruction: years
Special English course required? No ○ Yes ○

Language skills

62 Language skills of the people included in this application

Name: PAVAO - NIKOLA MATIĆ
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ☒ Good ○
Written command of English: Nil ☒ Some ○ Good ○
Other languages spoken: „N/A“
Other languages written:

Language skills continued

Name: SABINA MATIĆ
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ☒ Good ○
Written command of English: Nil ☒ Some ○ Good ○
Other languages spoken: RUSIEN
Other languages written: RUSIEN

Name: RENATA MATIĆ
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ☒ Good ○
Written command of English: Nil ○ Some ☒ Good ○
Other languages spoken:
Other languages written:

Name: SANDI MATIĆ
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ☒
Written command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ☒
Other languages spoken:
Other languages written:

Name:
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ○
Written command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ○
Other languages spoken:
Other languages written:

Name:
Spoken command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ○
Written command of English: Nil ○ Some ○ Good ○
Other languages spoken:
Other languages written:

63 Do you or your family need to attend an English course in Australia?

No ○
Yes ☒ ▶ Show the most important reasons below

Principal applicant
To enable qualifications to be fully recognised ☒
For education/training purposes ☒
For employment purposes ☒
For social or family related reasons ☒

Spouse
To enable qualifications to be fully recognised ☒
For education/training purposes ☒
For employment purposes ☒
For social or family related reasons ☒

Dependents
To enable qualifications to be fully recognised ○
For education/training purposes ○
For employment purposes ○
For social or family related reasons ○

The reasons for your application

64 Your ethnic group
PAVAO - CROATIEN; SABINA - MOSLIM

65 Your religion
ATHEIST

66 List any other countries you have entered or lived in before the country you are living in now

Country: „N/A“
Dates of stay in that country
From (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
To (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Country: „N/A“
Dates of stay in that country
From (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
To (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Country: „N/A“
Dates of stay in that country
From (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
To (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

Country: „N/A“
Dates of stay in that country
From (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
To (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

67 Date of arrival in this country (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /

68 What is your current migration status in this country?
„N/A“

69 Have you applied for refugee status, resettlement and/or residence in any other country apart from Australia?

No ○
Yes ○ ▶ Give the following details

Country: „N/A“
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Result of application:

Country: „N/A“
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Result of application:

Country: „N/A“
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Result of application:

Country: „N/A“
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Result of application:

Country:
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) / /
Result of application:

70 Have you ever been registered with any national or international agency dealing with refugees?

No ○
Yes ☒ ▶ Give the following details
Agency: UNHCR
Date registered (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 04 / 11 / '93

71 Date you departed your home country (DAY/MONTH/YEAR): 14 / 04 / '92

Continued overleaf ▶

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

72 How did you depart your home country?

BECAUSE OF THE WAR ACTIVITIES, THE CHILDREN HAD BEEN IN BAD EMOTIONAL CONDITIONS, SO WE WERE LOOKING FOR THE HELP IN CROATIEN AS REFUGEES.

73 What do you think will happen to you if you have to go back to your home country?

WE HAVE A MIXED MARRAGE, AND BEACUSE OF THAT NO ONE COUNTRY DOES NOT ACCEPT US. WE DON'T HAVE FRIENDS ANY MORE. WE DON'T HAVE THE BASIC HUMAN RIGHTS. THE RETURN TO OUR COUNTRY WOULD PUT US INTO THE ISOLATION STATE OF LIVING.

74 Do you or any member of your close or dependent family claim to have suffered persecution, discrimination or denial of basic human rights?

No ○

Yes ☒ ▶ Indicate the reasons below

Race ○

Religion ○

Nationality ☒

Membership of a social group ○

Political opinion ○ ▶ describe your political activities and affiliations including membership of any legal or illegal organisations below

Other ○ ▶ Specify

75 Describe in detail the nature, source and extent of your persecution, discrimination or denial of rights (if applicable)

WAS MISTREATED MANY TIMES, AND WAS STOLEN I.E. MY PROPERTY, AND THEN WAS EXPELLED OUT OF MY APARTMENT, WAS NOT ABLE TO GET THE HUMANITARIAN AID, AND TO RETURN TO MY FLOT BECAUSE OF MY NATIONALITY.

76 Were you ever arrested, detained, imprisoned, interrogated or mistreated (physically or mentally) in your home country?

No ○

Yes ☒ ▶ Give details

WAS TESTED AND MISTREATED BY THE PERSONS DRESSED IN UNIFORMS. WAS SAID TO LEAVE MY APARTMENT AND NOT COME BACK AGAIN.

77 Did you ever have your property confiscated or damaged in your home country?

No ○

Yes ☒ ▶ Give details

MY APARTMENT AND ITS PROPERTY HAVE BEENT TEKEN AWAY. DO NOT HAVE AN INFORMATION ABOUT IT AT THE MOMENT.

78 Why did you select Australia as your preferred country of settlement?

SINCE AUSTRALIA IS DEMOCRATIC COUNTRY AND THE LIFE IS NORMAL WITH FULL FREEDOM FOR FAMILY LIFE, SANCE THE POSSIBILITY FOR EMPLOYMENT AND CHILDER EDUCATION IS ON HIGH LEVEL WOULD LIKE TO LIVE IN THIS COUNTRY.

79 Do you have any past or present links to Australia?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ Indicate the type of links

Family ○

Business ○

Education ○

Employment ○

Other ○ ▶ Specify

Health and character details

80 Have you (or any other person included in this application) ever had, or currently have tuberculosis or any other serious disease (including mental illness), condition or disability?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▶ Is the disease, condition or disability one that:

- requires or is likely to require medical, hospital or special care? No ☒ Yes ○
- is likely to be a cost to the Australian community? No ☒ Yes ○
- is likely to endanger the Australian community? No ☒ Yes ○
- if offspring were produced, might result in offspring being affected by a disease or condition of the types mentioned above? No ☒ Yes ○

If you answered "Yes" to any of the above questions, please provide details below

Note: The Migration Act provides a power to refuse or to cancel visas when a person is not of good character. The questions at 80 are designed to assess whether you, your spouse and ALL your dependent family members (whether migrating or not) meet the character requirements.

81 Have you, your spouse, or any of your children or dependent family members included in this form ever:

- been convicted of a crime or offence in any country? No ☒ Yes ○
- been found guilty or acquitted of any criminal or other offence on the grounds of mental illness, insanity or unsoundness of mind? No ☒ Yes ○
- been deported from any country? No ☒ Yes ○
- left any country voluntarily prior to the execution of a deportation order? No ☒ Yes ○
- been excluded from or required to leave any country? No ☒ Yes ○
- been involved in any activities that would represent a risk to Australian national security? No ☒ Yes ○
- committed, or been involved in the commission of war crimes or crimes against humanity or human rights? No ☒ Yes ○

Do you have any outstanding debts to the Australian Government or any public authority in Australia? No ☒ Yes ○

If you answered "Yes" to any of the above questions, provide all details below.

If the matters relate to a criminal conviction, please give the nature of the offence, full details of sentence and dates of any period of imprisonment or other detention.

Continued overleaf ▶

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

82 Have you, your spouse, any of your children, or any of your dependent family members ever been to Australia?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▸ Give details

Full name	„N/A"
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name	„N/A"
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name	„N/A"
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name	„N/A"
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason
Full name
Date of arrival (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Date of departure (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /
Reason

Note: A person who has been removed or deported from Australia must wait 5 years before applying to return. A former permanent resident who has been deported from Australia for criminal offences or who left Australia while the subject of a deportation order faces permanent exclusion.

Declaration

Warning: The Migration Act contains a power to cancel a visa if a person has made an incorrect statement in relation to their application. If it is determined that you have concealed information, such as an offence, your application to enter Australia may be refused. If you have already been granted a visa and it is subsequently discovered that you have concealed information, such as an offence, your visa will be liable to cancellation and you may be refused entry to Australia. In the event that you have already entered Australia your visa will be liable to cancellation and, if cancelled you may be detained and removed from Australia.

83 This Declaration must be signed by you, your spouse, and ALL persons aged 18 or over included in this application. Parents/Guardians must sign this declaration on behalf of any person included in this application who is under the age of 18 years and/or who lacks legal capacity to sign on their own behalf.

I declare the information I have supplied on and with this form is complete, correct and up-to-date in every detail.

I declare that the answers to questions 80 and 81 are true and accurate.

I am not subject to any exclusion period, and therefore am not precluded from lodging this application.

I did not marry or enter a de facto/common law relationship to become eligible for migration to Australia.

I understand that if I have given false or misleading information, my application may be refused, or, if a visa has been granted, the visa may be cancelled and I could be removed from Australia.

I understand that if I am granted a visa, any person not included in this application will not have automatic right of entry to Australia by way of this application.

I undertake to inform the Australian Government of any material changes to my circumstances while my application is being considered, or before I am immigration cleared. (Note: your visa may be cancelled and you could be removed if you do not advise of changes in circumstances).

I authorise the Australian Government to make any enquiries necessary to determine my eligibility for migration to Australia, and to use any information supplied in this application for that purpose.

I understand that unless my qualifications have already been recognised by an Australian assessing authority before my departure, they may not be recognised after my arrival.

I understand that it is my personal responsibility to assess my own employment prospects in Australia and acknowledge that labour market conditions there can vary significantly from time to time and between regions.

I understand that grant of a visa provides no guarantee of employment once in Australia.

Signature of applicant 1	Mlatić
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	28 / 01 / 1997
Signature of applicant 2 (spouse)	Mlatić
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	28 / 01 / 1997.

Signature of applicants who are dependants of applicants 1 and 2 (aged 18 years or over)

Applicant 3	R Mlatić
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	28 / 01 / 1997
Applicant 4	Sandi Mlatić
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	28 / 01 / 1997.
Applicant 5
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /

84 Did you receive assistance in completing this form?

No ○

Yes ☒ ▸ Give the following details

Name of person who helped you: INES MUDRINIĆ

Their address:
PUJANKE 126
SPLIT

Postcode

Migration Agent Registration No.

Were you charged a fee for this help?

No ☒

Yes ○ ▸ You must submit a Migration Agent Declaration (Form 932) with this application

Do you want correspondence to do with your application sent directly to your migration agent?

No ☒ „N/A"

Yes ○

Signature Mlatić

Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR) 28 / 01 / 1997

85 This Declaration must be signed by any person (including an interpreter or translator) who helped the applicant complete this form.

I declare that I helped complete this form and prepare the attachments at the request of the applicant.

I have accurately interpreted/translated all the information provided on this form and the information provided by and on behalf of the person(s) covered by this application, into their own language(s).

Signature of person assisting	Ines M
Date (DAY/MONTH/YEAR)	/ /

Full name of person assisting

Company name (if applicable)

Address

Postcode

Telephone Area code ( )

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

14

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA
Škola za učenike u privredi u EMŠC-u u Mostaru

Svjedočanstvo

[redacted] s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted] s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

O ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU

Matić Pavao
(porodično i rođeno ime ~~oca i majke~~) sin-~~kći~~ Tome i Anđelke (rođeno ime oca i majke)

rođen-~~a~~ 16. XII 1949. godine u Mostaru, opština Mostar

Socijalistička Republika Bosna i Hercegovina

državljanin Socijalističke Federativne Republike Jugoslavije završio-~~la~~ je školske 1966/1967. godine treći (III) razred — kao završni razred Škole za učenike u privredi u EMŠC-u u Mostaru (naziv škole)

i kao redovan — ~~vanredan~~ kandidat polagao-~~la~~ završni ispit u vremenu od 1. juna do 27. juna 1967. godine za zvanje kvalifikovanog elektroinstalatera i položio-~~la~~

sa dovoljnim (2) uspjehom

Redni broj glavne knjige završnog ispita III.

Broj djelovodnog protokola 02-436/15.

u Mostaru, 29 juna 1967. godine

(M. P.)

Predsjednik ispitnog odbora:
Popo Ing. Hasan

Članovi ispitnog odbora:

Vučić Krsto
Radoš Zvonko

Batinić Miladin
Mičević Milan

El. maš. školski centar
(škola, centar)
upisana je u Registar ustanova koje daju opšte priznati stepen stručnog obrazovanja Republičkog sekretarijata za prosvjetu. Izvod iz registra objavljen je u »Službenom listu SRBiH« broj 24./66.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Zavod za izdavanje udžbenika SRBiH, Sarajevo — Preštampavanje zabranjeno — Odobrenje br. 0[illegible] 25/1 od 5. I 1966.

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA

SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

Centar za srednje usmjereno obrazovanje (naziv vaspitno-obrazovne ustanove) u Mostaru (sjedište)

Saobraćajna tehnička škola za odrasle (vrsta škole) (odsjek-smjer)

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

SVJEDOČANSTVO
SVJEDODŽBA

O ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

12

Matić Pavao
(prezime i ime)

sin-~~kći~~ Tome i Anđelke roden-~~a~~ 16. decembra 1949. god.

u Mostaru, opština Mostar

Socijalistička Republika Bosna i Hercegovina državljanin SFRJ

završio-~~la~~ je školske 1979/1980 godine treći (III) razred - kao završni razred Saobraćajne tehničke škole za odrasle i kao ~~redovan~~ vanredan kan(vrsta škole)

didat polagao-~~la~~ završni ispit od 20. januara do 24. januara 1981 godine.

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Matić Pirao [redacted] s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
(prezime i ime)

NA ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU POKAZAO-LA JE OVAJ USPJEH

Stručni pismeni rad sa usmenim obrazloženjem	dobar	(3)
Srpskohrvatski - hrvatskosrpski jezik	dobar	(3)
Poznavanje i održavanje cestovnih motornih vozila	dobar	(3)
Regulisanje i bezbjednost saobraćaja	dobar	(3)
Organizacija prevoza robe i putnika	dovoljan	(2)
		( )
		( )
		( )

PREMA TOME, KANDIDAT JE POLOŽIO-LA ZAVRŠNI ISPIT S dobrim

USPJEHOM i stekao-la zvanje saobraćajnog tehničara u cestovnom saobraćaju

Prezime i ime ispitivača:

Ćorić dipl.ing. Ivan	Ivan Ćorić
Sarić dipl.ing. Smail
Baćević Nikola, prof.	Baćević
Pehar dipl.ing. Zdenko

Djelovodni broj: 13269

Redni broj glavne knjige završnog ispita 750

Ova ustanova i djelatnost, za koju se izdaje Svjedočanstvo, upisana je u Registar verifikovanih vaspitno-obrazovnih ustanova Republičkog sekretarijata za obrazovanje i kulturu SR BiH pod brojem 151. Rješenje o upisu u Registar objavljeno je u „Službenom listu SR BiH", broj 12. od 12. maja 1978 godine.

Mostar, 24. januara 1981. god.
(mjesto i datum)

(M. P.)

Predsjednik ispitnog odbora
(direktor)
Tomić Radoslav
Tomić Radoslav

BROJČANE OCJENE SU: odličan (5), vrlo dobar (4), dobar (3), dovoljan (2)

Izdavač: IGKRO »SVJETLOST« — OOUR MARKETING
Poslovnica za izdavanje i prodaju tiskanica, Sarajevo
Oznaka za narudžbu: 13/37 Izdanje: 13/80

Preštampavanje zabranjeno!

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

10

SOCIJALISTICKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

RO EMSC — OOUR Škola srednjeg usmjerenog obrazovanja
(Naziv radne organizacije srednjeg usmjerenog obrazovanja i vaspitanja) za elektrotehnička zanimanja
MOSTAR
(Naziv osnovne organizacije udruženog rada)

U .... (Sjedište)

Školska 19 85 / 86 godina

SVJEDOČANSTVO
SVJEDODŽBA
O ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU

s. 22(1)(a)(ii
[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SarS
SOUR »SVJETLOST«, RO GRAFIČKA DJELATNOST
OOUR IZDAVANJE / MARKETING, SARAJEVO
Oznaka za narudžbu: 13/185 Izdanje: 12/85.

Matić Pavao, sin-kći Tome i Anđelke
(Prezime i ime)

rođen-a 16. 12 1949 godine u Mostaru, opština Mostar,

Socijalistička Republika Bosna i Hercegovina, državljanin SFRJ, završio-la je školske 19 / godine drugi (II) razred kao završni razred za sticanje obrazovanja za zanimanje Elektroinstalater za električne instalacije-specijali

(Naziv zanimanja)

V stepen - složenije, struka elektrotehnička
(Stepen stručne spreme i kategorija složenosti zanimanja)

i polagao-la završni ispit od 17. 6 do 25. 6 1986 godine.

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

8

Matić Pavao
(Prezime i ime)

NA ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU POKAZAO-LA JE OVAJ USPJEH:

praktičan rad	odličan (5)
pismeno obrazloženje rada	odličan (5)
usmeno obrazloženje rada	odličan (5)

Prema tome, učenik-ca polaznik-ca je položio-la završni ispit s odličnim (5) uspjehom i stekao-la obrazovanje za zanimanje Elektroinstalater za električne instalacije - specijalist
(Naziv zanimanja)

V stepen - složenije
(Stepen stručne spreme i kategorija složenosti zanimanja)

elektrotehnička
(Struka)

Ova vaspitno-obrazovna organizacija upisana je u Registar vaspitno-obrazovnih organizacija srednjeg usmjerenog obrazovanja i vaspitanja pod brojem 77. Rješenje o upisu u Registar objavljeno je u Službenom listu SRBiH- broj 17 od 17 juna 1985 godine.

Original of this has been seen
VIĆ
EMBASSY

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

Djelovodni broj 1175/86

Broj matične knjige 109/I

U Mostaru, 25. 7. 1986 godine

Inokosni odnosno predsjednik kolegijalnog poslovodnog organa

mr. ČASTO ĆIL

BROJČANE OCJENE SU: odličan (5), vrlo dobar (4), dobar (3) dovoljan (2), nedovoljan (1).
OPISNE OCJENE SU: ističe se, dobar i zadovoljava.

Preštampavanje zabranjeno!

Obrazac br. 3

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

7

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

Učiteljska škola u Mostaru

SVJEDOČANSTVO

O ZAVRŠNOM ISPITU

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs
under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

6

Derviškadić Sabina
(Porodično i rođeno ime)

~~sin~~-kći Dervišo i Mejre (ime oca i majke) rođen-a 27. maja 1950. god.

u Mostaru, opština Mostar

Socijalistička Republika Bosna i Hercegovina državljanin SFRJ završio-la je školske 1969./1970. godine četvrti (IV) razred kao završni razred učiteljske škole u Mostaru i kao redovni-~~vanredni~~ kandidat polagao završni ispit od 3. juna do 24. juna 1970. godine.

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

5

Derviškadić Sabina
(Porodično i rođeno ime)

je na završnom ispitu pokazao ovaj uspjeh:

Pismeni dio ispita:

Srpskohrvatski / Hrvatskosrpski jezik sa književnošću .... dobar (3)

Pedagoška grupa predmeta .... vrlo dobar (4)

Usmeni dio ispita:

Srpskohrvatski / Hrvatskosrpski jezik sa književnošću .... dobar (3)

Pedagoška grupa predmeta .... vrlo dobar (4)

i prema tome položio-la završni ispit s ...vrlo dobrim... uspjehom

Napomena: ...—...

Broj djelovodnog protokola ...09/I- 550/70... Broj glavnog protokola o završnom ispitu ...25.

u ...Mostaru, 24. juna... 19 70. godine.

(M. P.)

Direktor
Predsjednik ispitnog odbora:

Članovi ispitne komisije:

Mil. M. Todorović

Učiteljska škola u Mostaru .... je unešena u registar (Naziv škole i sjedište) verifikovanih ...učiteljskih... škola Republičkog sekretarijata za obrazovanje i kulturu koji je objavljen u „Službenom listu SRBiH" broj ...16... od ...12.V.1970... god.

s. 22(1)(a) [redacted]

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

original of this ... been seen ... EMBASSY

Ocjene uspjeha: odličan (5), vrlo dobar (4), dobar (3), dovoljan (2).

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

UNIVERZITET U SARAJEVU
VIŠA EKONOMSKO-KOMERCIJALNA ŠKOLA U SARAJEVU

DIPLOMA

O ZAVRŠENOM STUDIJU ZA STICANJE VIŠE SPREME NA VIŠOJ EKONOMSKO-KOMERCIJALNOJ ŠKOLI U SARAJEVU

REKTOR UNIVERZITETA I PREDSJEDNIK POSLOVODNOG ODBORA VIŠE EKONOMSKO-KOMERCIJALNE ŠKOLE U SARAJEVU, PEČATOM UNIVERZITETA I SVOJIM POTPISIMA POTVRĐUJU DA JE

Matić (Derviša) Sabina

ROĐENA 27. 5. 1950. GODINE U MOSTARU, OPŠTINA MOSTAR, SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA, ZAVRŠILA STUDIJ ZA STICANJE VIŠE SPREME NA VIŠOJ EKONOMSKO-KOMERCIJALNOJ ŠKOLI U SARAJEVU - ODSJEK FINANSIJSKO-RAČUNOVODSTVENI, SMJER RAČUNOVODSTVO PRIVREDNIH ORGANIZACIJA DANA 29. 1. 1982. GODINE I TIME ISPUNILA SVE PROPISANE USLOVE ZA STICANJE DIPLOME O VIŠOJ SPREMI.

NA OSNOVU TOGA IZDAJE SE OVA DIPLOMA, KOJOM STIČE SVA PRAVA PREDVIĐENA ZAKONOM, KAO I STRUČNI NAZIV

EKONOMIST RAČUNOVODSTVA PRIVREDNIH ORGANIZACIJA

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

s. 22(1)(a)(ii) [redacted]

U Sarajevu, 1. 3. 1983. godine

Broj: 3771.

PREDSJEDNIK
POSLOVODNOG ODBORA
DEKAN
Radić Drago
Prof. mr. Drago Radić

REKTOR
UNIVERZITETA U SARAJEVU
Matić
Prof. dr Božidar Matić

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SOCIJALISTIČKA FEDERATIVNA REPUBLIKA JUGOSLAVIJA
SOCIJALISTIČKA REPUBLIKA BOSNA I HERCEGOVINA

Gimnazija „Veljko Vlahović"
(Naziv organizacije srednjeg usmjerenog obrazovanja i vaspitanja)

(Naziv osnovne organizacije udruženog rada)

u Mostaru
(Sjedište)

Školska 1990/91 godina

SVJEDOČANSTVO
SVJEDODŽBA
O ZAVRŠENOM OBRAZOVANJU

za hemijskog tehničara – analitičara, IV- složeno (Naziv obrazovnog profila, stepen stručne spreme)

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)
[redacted]

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Renata Matić ~~sin~~-kći Pavla i Saline
(ime i prezime)

rođen-a 9. avgusta 1972 godine u Mostaru Opštine Mostar

Socijalistička Republika Bosna i Hercegovina, državljanin SFRJ

završi~~o~~-la je školske 1990/91 godine četvrti (IV) razred kao završni razred za sticanje obrazovanja za

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

hemijskog tehničara - analitičara
(Naziv obrazovnog profila)

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

IV - složeno
(Stepen stručne spreme)

hemijsko - tehnološka
(Struka - usmjerenje)

Nastavnim planom i programom obrazovnog profila predviđeno ~~je~~-nije predviđeno polaganje završnog ispita.

Učenik-ca - polaznik-ca na završnom ispitu pokazao-la je ovaj uspjeh:

Prema tome učenik-ca - polaznik-ca je položio-la završni ispit s ________ uspjehom.

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

Renata Matić
(IME I PREZIME)

s. 22(1)(a)(ii)

je završio obrazovanje za

hemijskog tehničara-analitičara
(Naziv obrazovnog profila)

IV- složeno
(Stepen stručne spreme)

hemijsko-tehnološka
(struka - usmjerenje)

Ova srednja škola upisana je u Registar srednjih škola pod brojem 8 na strani 8

Rješenje o upisu u Registar srednjih škola objavljeno je u „Službenom listu SRBiH", broj 14 od 25. maja 1990. godine.

Djelovodni broj 01-148/18

Broj matične knjige 1/XX

U Mostaru, 11. juna 1991 godine

„VELJKO VLAHOVIĆ" MOSTAR

ODJELJENJSKI STARJEŠINA,
Prof. mr

M.P.

INOKOSNI ODNOSNO PREDSJEDNIK KOLEGIJALNOG, POSLOVODNOG ORGANA,

BROJČANE OCJENE SU: odličan (5), vrlo dobar (4), dobar (3), dovoljan (2), i nedovoljan (1).

Released by the Department of Home Affairs under the Freedom of Information Act 1982

SVJETLOST „SarS" SARAJEVO
Oznaka za narudžbu: 13/193 Izdanje: 11/90

Obrazac broj 3

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA
HELD AT PERTH

CIV 1106 of 2022

B E T W E E N:

VIVIEN JIT SIEN YAP

First Plaintiff

and

EMPIRE SONS (AUSTRALIA) PTY LTD T/AS RAY WHITE (DALKEITH CLAREMONT) (ACN 604 259 145)

Second Plaintiff

and

~~SANDI MATIC~~ SANDI MATIC (ACN 664 173 602) Plaintiff by counterclaim. ~~Defendant~~

AFFIDAVIT OF Sandi, son of Pavao and Sabina
AFFIRMED 2 March 2022
Verified and re-affirmed on 22-November-2024

Date of document: 2 March 2022 v2: 22 November 2024

Filed on behalf of: SANDI MATIC, a foreign company

Prepared by:
Sandi, son of Pavao and Sabina
~~17 Biara Gardens~~
~~Mount Claremont~~

Telephone: ~~0448 800 250~~
Email: ~~sandi@konkrethaus.com.au~~

No	Description	Page No
1	Affidavit of Sandi, son of Pavao and Sabina	2-3

JP

I, Sandi ~~Matic~~ of 17 Biara Gardens, Mount Claremont in the State of Western Australia, ~~self-employed, duly sworn~~ make oath and say that:

filing this affidavit to set the record straight and amend mistakes

1. I am ~~submitting~~ this ~~affidavit under duress and fear of my well-being & any errors made due to my non-existent knowledge of how to write in legalese is not to be used against my benefit & I reserve all of my rights~~.

SANDI MATIC is my registered business name in this jurisdiction.

2. ~~I do not consent to be my name in all capital letters which is the person corporation trust~~

THe company has not been abandoned nor did i ever gift it to anybody

3. I, One, living, breathing, man, the undersigned, Sandi, son of and made in the image and the likeness of my father and mother, Pavao and Sabina, given name Sandi, having a sound mind, without prejudice to My God-given rights and duties, being one who was born of and walks on the soil of God (Genesis 1), who is unschooled in the law, is not trained in legalese, who has never had an attorney, is without an attorney, and does not waive counsel, knowingly and willingly Declares and duly Affirms, according to law, in time of peace and not in time of war or emergency, in good faith, with no intention to delay or obstruct, and with full intent to preserve and promote the public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary, that the preceding and following statements and facts are of my own first-hand knowledge, except where such matters are stated to be based on information and belief, in which case I have identified the source and confirm my belief in the accuracy and truth of that information, God help me.

4. I AM no person, no fictional being, no organization, trustee, employee, association, voluntary association, joint-stock association, company, co-partnership, firm, order, or society, either aggregate or part of any aggregate, or automatic aggregate, or public utility aggregate, whether organized or incorporated or not, and I am not misrepresenting my identity or origin, of Pavao and Sabina (maker, owner, ruler), of God (maker, owner, ruler).

5. I have not duly granted, ratified, bargained for, gifted, sold, pledged, optioned, or donated any power of appointment, special power of appointment, general power of appointment in trust, or any general or special franchise, or elective franchise name, character, labour, or living body to any other, for any consideration: including, but not limited to any option or opting, any promise, implied promise, successive promises, agreement, supposed agreement, identity, fiction, graven image, forbearance, grace, creation, or modification or destruction of a legal relation, trade name, trademark, service mark, title(s), or return promise, bargained for and given in exchange for a promise, privilege, benefit, reciprocity, indemnity, mutual indemnification, any present or future interest or otherwise.

similar names but styled differently, Sandi Matic, prefered name

6. There are two ~~beings with the~~ same name, one ~~real, the undersigned, the other a person,~~ a ~~fictional being.~~ for the Organiuzation, and SANDI MATIC looks like the registered business name - but is a fake counterfeit bearing no PID from HomeAffairs nor ACN from ASIC.

7. ~~It is not possible that man can be two beings, man, and a person, a fictional being.~~ i, sandi, am the personal represetaive and authorised agfent for both.

8. I attorned unknowingly. I only appear as the person. I think for, speak for, and act for it.

SM

9. I own the claim of the ownership to the Estate, MATIC, SANDI.

10. In the event that any clerical errors or administrative mistakes are uncovered in the submissions of the Plaintiff 1, Plaintiff 2, and any Sworn of Affirmed affidavits that those parties or their legal representatives submit to the courts, I reject the notion that this ought to disqualify any of the fictitious statements made as part of this fictitious claim & reject the notion that the correct entities, companies, persons, parties, trusts are not liable for damages due to the above mentioned errors or mistakes in paperwork.

11. I submit to the court that should any formalities such as paperwork & forms that ought to be submitted as part of disputing this fictitious claim are missed by me but are mentioned in the affirmed affidavits submitted to the court, they are to be treated as if they were submitted with all the paperwork correctly done & not be disadvantaged for being a self-represented man, speaking and appearing for the fictional entity named as Defendant.

12. I reserve the right for claim for damages against myself & the trust of the fictional name listed on the proceedings that I am the beneficiary of SANDI MATIC trust and/or Estate, MATIC, SANDI without through any requirement to file new court proceedings & claims to correct the abovementioned errors & mistakes made during any of the submissions by Fictitious Plaintiff 1 & Fictitious Plaintiff 2 during their Fictitious claim.

13. ~~I reject any & all punitive benefits.~~ i petition this honourable court to use the judicial authority at their disposal to provide relief and remedy, to assure further with maintenance and care and recognize our status as living and a private persons personal representative from this day until our last breath.

Affirmed by Sandi, son of Pavao and Sabina at Perth }
In the State of Western Australia on }
The 2nd day of March 2022 }

(Signature)

Before me, (JOHN LEMON) a Justice of the Peace }
OR A legal practitioner who has held a practice certificate } for at least 2 years and who holds a current practice } certificate. }

(Signature of Witness)

JOHN LEMON
JUSTICE OF PEACE - WA
REG No. 6720

Signed by deed. Good as aval.

i sandi, affirm i have verified the above statements, and i sandi, subscribe to them being true and being accurate to best of my knowledge and recollection of facts.

Without recourse. Good as aval.

Sandi

By Sandi - authorised agent
All rights reserved

re-verified and re-subscribed again on twenty-second day of November in year TwoThousandTwentyFour, in the fourty-third year of this issue.

Without prejudice, Without recourse
By: executor-[illegible], Matic, Sandi /agent
For: SANDI MATIC/principal

SM

CHAPTER FIVE

THE LARGE BUSINESS & INTERNATIONAL DIVISION

> In an intriguing reflection on the life of a taxman (or taxwoman), at the very same time the Sunday program was running the 'soft on the big end of town' line, we were being accused in a report in the print media of acting like communist Russia in our dealings with corporate Australia. Michael Carmody, Commissioner of Taxation

Assessing the performance of the Large Business and International (LB&I) Division is central to considering the wider issue of the ATO's equitable treatment of taxpayers. In particular, the contention that the ATO is 'soft on the big end of town' requires an examination of LB&I, the division responsible for revenue collection from big business, large corporates and so-called high wealth individuals. Effective revenue collection from the large business sector is essential if the ATO is to demonstrate to other sections of the community that it is committed to treating all taxpayers equitably.

However, as noted in the introduction to the report, the Committee received comparatively little evidence on the performance of LB&I. The Committee's assessment is therefore by necessity qualified.

Nonetheless, the evidence is notable for the high degree of consensus on both positive and negative aspects of the ATO's performance. In this respect, the Committee believes it is reasonable to see the evidence as reflective of the views and experience of other taxpayers who deal with LB&I.

The soon to be introduced new business tax system has changed the picture significantly from that which faced the Committee at the start of the inquiry. For instance, in addition to changing the company tax rate, the new system will introduce 'integrity measures' aimed at curbing tax avoidance and improving the general anti-avoidance rule (known as Part IVA of the Income Tax Assessment Act). Such measures should not only strengthen the ATO's ability to address compliance risks but also provide greater certainty and clarity for taxpayers on the intent of the law.

Consequently, the Committee concentrates in this chapter on issues that fall outside the ambit of the impending reforms under the new business tax system or may impact on the implementation and effectiveness of those reforms. In particular, the chapter examines the following matters relating to the performance of the LB&I Division:

technical skills and service;

ex-ATO staff moving to the private sector;

access to taxpayer information; and prosecution.

The next chapter examines the performance of the High Wealth Individuals Program.

A complex business environment

LB&I operates in a more complex tax and financial environment than the ATO divisions dealing with small business (SB) and individual non-business (INB) taxpayers. While its client base is markedly smaller than that of INB (37,000 entities as opposed to 8 million taxpayers and 24,000 tax practitioners respectively), LB&I faces a different set of challenges, possibly of a greater magnitude. The ATO characterised the difference according to a 'spectrum of complexity':

> For most individuals, the law and our supporting rulings are often reasonably straightforward, with well-established precedence. For large corporations, the picture is often one of a tangled web of business entities, complicated further by international connections of parent or subsidiary companies.

Factors such as globalisation, technological change and deregulation compound the underlying complexity of the large business environment. These factors tend to impact on the large business sector more than other taxpayer segments. Large businesses also usually have access to top range tax advisers. The tax affairs of LB&I clients can therefore reflect sophisticated tax planning, including innovative strategies that raise new issues at law or seek to exploit loopholes and grey areas. As well, large businesses and some high wealth individuals use global strategies to limit their tax obligations by 'taking advantage of different tax regimes in different jurisdictions'.

Consequently, revenue collection in this sector is neither as straightforward nor as easily addressed by process-driven approaches used in other divisions. Rather, it often involves lengthy and complicated audits. It also at times requires greater involvement from senior officers, particularly where it is necessary for judgement calls on issues where the law is hazy or a matter has escalated through legal manoeuvring and other stratagems.

LB&I is structured to align its seven industry teams with particular business sectors, as follows:

Banking and finance

Insurance and superannuation

Manufacturing

Media and communication

Mining and petroleum

Property and construction

Services.

Reflecting the particular challenges of its business environment, LB&I also has seven teams arranged by subject specialisation:

Capital gains

High wealth individuals

International Privatisation

Research and development

Development allowance

Strategic intelligence.

LB&I's approach includes increased compliance coverage through more systematic use of tax return data, expanded intelligence on marketing of tax avoidance schemes and early warning of emerging threats to revenue and greater fieldwork. Consistent with the ATO's overall risk management strategy and compliance model LB&I targets 'key taxpayers' for close scrutiny, including in some cases ongoing contact to identify increases or decreases taxpayers expect in their future company tax instalments. LB&I also attempts to maintain contact with industry players on key issues – eg, compliance management, service delivery, transfer pricing, taxation rulings and litigation – and to clarify legal issues to help provide certainty for business planning.

LB&I Performance

The ATO defined the performance of LB&I mainly in terms of revenue collection and legislative measures. In particular, the ATO highlighted the trend since 1993-94 of growth in total company tax collections at a rate higher than growth in Gross Domestic Product (GDP). (Large companies account for 72 per cent of total company collections.)

It needs to be noted, however, that both calculating growth in company collections, and identifying the relative importance of the factors driving it, are complicated exercises (see Appendix 4). Consequently, the ATO erred on the side of 'conservative estimates' in its advice to the Committee on the extent to which growth in company collections reflected ATO initiatives as opposed to non-ATO factors such as company profitability and wider economic conditions. Once various adjustments are made, the ATO estimated that:

> …growth in company collection over the period 1993/94-1996/97 would have been in the range of 26% to 38%, depending on the assumptions used, and most probably in the region of 30%.
>
> Both of the 26% and 38% estimates put growth in company collections well above the growth in nominal GDP [which increased by 19% for the period]. This is strong supporting evidence of a broadly-based improvement in effective tax rates. Part of this improvement is due to such factors as improving levels of sales, profit margins, etc. But some of this improvement is undoubtedly due to various compliance initiatives undertaken by the ATO during this period.

Particular ATO measures behind this growth include a significant increase by 60 per cent in audit coverage of large corporate groups. For 1996-97 to 1998-99, 'direct audit dollars' for this segment increased from approximately $270 million to $450 million. LB&I targeting of critical risk issues such as transfer pricing has also seen a marked improvement in tax performance. LB&I record reviews of target companies resulted in tax collection increasing from $68 million in 1996 to $166 million in 1998-99.

At the same time, compliance activity has also raised in additional tax and penalties $370.8 million in 1995-96 financial year, $1430 million in the 1996-97 financial year and $793 million in the 1997-98 financial year.

As of July 1998, $3.7 billion in losses had been disallowed over the previous 18 months, all of which had been accepted by taxpayers.

LB&I has also attempted, through building up a deeper understanding of the factors driving the large business sector, to acquire what it calls legislative 'leverage', that is, strengthening the law to address tax avoidance and areas of high risk to revenue. Results from this activity includes significant legislative changes in relation to losses, offshore income and tax havens, withholding taxes, thin capitalisation, debt forgiveness, private company distributions, value shifting in regard to capital gains and the streaming of franking credits. The ATO has also litigated cases on transfer pricing, access to taxpayer information, tax benefit transfers and profit shifting to tax havens.

Technical skills and service

The ATO's staffing of the LB&I Division reflects the complexity of the business environment and cases that it manages. Essentially, senior officers become increasingly involved as cases become increasingly complex. Escalation procedures are in place to indicate to staff when it is necessary to alert or seek input from senior level officers.

> Cases that might begin as quite simple can develop – sometimes with the intervention of legal manoeuvring – into very complicated ones…. This means that appropriately experienced and qualified senior staff are quite properly required to exercise judgement in complex cases.

Often cases involve contested or ill-defined areas of the law, highly technical matters and emerging issues driven by developments in financial instruments, technology and foreign markets and tax regimes. Any one, or a combination of these factors, requires technically skilled and specialised staff. In some instances, expert advice from outside the ATO itself, such as academics and tax professionals, is required to clarify and resolve an issue. To address these business challenges:

> LB&I has highly developed internal processes to ensure that appropriate expertise within – and increasingly from outside – the ATO is brought to bear on issues. We have also endeavoured to increase the level of transparency and accountability in decision making through:

the establishment of specialist cells, transfer pricing and industry segment review panels and a peak technical forum;

the use of external experts to test the probity of taxpayer claims; quality assurance surveys on technical decision making; and internal audit processes to ensure appropriate reviews and collaboration take place.

Despite these measures, and despite claiming that it has strengthened its economic research, intelligence and fieldwork capabilities, the Committee heard criticism of LB&I's technical skills. Although general improvements were noted, tax practitioners claimed that the Division suffered from a lack of skilled staff with appropriate experience, particularly in commercial matters. Both the Taxation Institute of Australia (TIA) and Arthur Andersen believed insufficient resources were devoted to staff training and education. Both organisations argued that these deficiencies resulted in lower levels of service, delays in issuing advice and consequently additional compliance costs for taxpayers.

In contrast, the ATO pointed to LB&I's favourable results from its Quality Assurance (QA) reviews. These reviews, which occur quarterly across all ATO business lines, address the technical quality of random case samples. The main criteria assessed are whether the ATO understood the client's questions, provided an accurate and consistent answer, with sound explanation, in a readily understood manner. Internal committees comprising three senior ATO officers review most of the cases, although the Australian Government Solicitor and an internal consultant also review a sample of cases. According to the Commissioner, the review process has shown a 'trend of continuing improvement' with LB&I cases receiving 100 per cent pass marks' for understanding client questions and accurate decisions and 80 per cent 'A' level grades. ATO data show that the review results for LB&I are not only above other business lines but are also the most consistent.

The Commissioner also indicated that independent external representatives are used to review a random selection of written ATO work ranging from private rulings through to disputes and audit case work. These external representatives are selected for their expertise in particular fields. The results from these external reviews are considered by the ATO's Professional Excellence Forum - which also involves external representatives - and assist in decisions on improvements such as training and skills and refining work practices. The Professional Excellence Forum is involved in development and implementation of a professional excellence framework which is designed to improve the quality of decision making. As well, external review results also feed into the ATO's performance management and reward systems.

The Committee considers that the QA review process is an important learning and improvement tool for the ATO. Drawing on independent external expertise should help promote the business relevance of technical decision making by the ATO.

The Committee also notes that the ATO has made considerable strides in establishing systems and measures to improve both the consistency and quality of its decision making. Escalation procedures require case officers to seek the input of tax counsel when significant issues arise. The ATO's centralised computer system for private rulings also requires officers to escalate issues if a case involves a departure from established rulings. As discussed later in this chapter, the ATO has sought industry input in developing measures to improve audit case management and resolve delays in finalising field work.

Ex-ATO staff in the private sector

The movement of former ATO officers to work in the private sector raises two issues. One relates to concerns that the ATO is being denuded of highly experienced staff from key positions; following on from this is the concern that former staff are privy to 'inside information' which could be misused or lead to a potential conflict of interest.

An ATO 'brain drain'?

Some witnesses suggested that one of the causes of the skills deficit in LB&I was due to the loss of highly skilled ATO staff to the private sector. The ASU in particular raised concerns about this development. A specific case cited by the ASU involved the shift of key staff responsible for the development of policy and public rulings on transfer pricing issues to private sector firms on salaries significantly greater than their income in the public sector.

The inability of the ATO, within the constraints of the Australian Public Service's salary structures, to compete with the private sector means that it is potentially vulnerable to losing critical staff. The wider implication is that the loss of highly skilled and experienced personnel weakens the ATO's ability to manage the tax system while conferring a significant advantage to large business and the tax industry.

The movement of some ATO staff to the private sector may have potential benefits and risks. For instance, ATO officers working in the tax industry or for large businesses are in a position to bridge the gap between the two sectors. They have the potential to help improve understanding on both sides of not only technical issues but also the perceptions and organisational interests of the ATO and private sector. Two-way movement between the private sector and the ATO may also be desirable where it leads to cross-fertilisation of ideas on emerging tax matters, organisational cultures and core business interests and priorities.

However, even the loss of a small number of experienced and senior staff could have serious ramifications for the ATO's corporate knowledge, leadership and expertise in critical areas. Experienced staff with not only specialist knowledge but also extensive operational experience are hard assets to replace.

In response, the ATO indicated that over the last two years two Senior Executive Service (SES) officers and 13 senior staff have moved to the private sector. In view of LB&I's total staffing of over 1,200 officers, this level of staff movement does not appear significant or threatening. Four staff have left the transfer pricing section over the same period of time. The ATO indicated that this had not delayed or impacted on the work of the area, not least because other staff had been quick to fill the vacant positions. As well, the input of external experts had mitigated any loss of experience and specialist knowledge.

The Committee considers that, on the basis of the above evidence, the movement of specialist staff from the ATO is not of the magnitude to seriously erode the technical capacity of LB&I. However, the Committee notes the high demand for experienced tax specialists during the current transition phase with tax reform implementation. The ATO needs to monitor the situation closely to ensure that it maintains both adequate expertise and experience and the ability to attract staff with appropriate skills.

Risks

While there may be benefits to be had by ATO staff moving into advisory positions in the private sector, there is the potential risk for former officers to misuse information and knowledge acquired at the ATO. The main areas of risk include the divulging of sensitive operational information, such as intelligence and ATO targeting of non-compliance, and confidential taxpayer information, particularly that of competitors. Seeking favours from former colleagues remaining inside the ATO is another possible risk, although this should be distinguished from networking or seeking to expedite a matter.

The Committee was particularly concerned to assess the extent of this risk and identify evidence of breaches of confidentiality or conflicts of interest occurring.

The only evidence of improper conduct of this nature was the cases portrayed in the Sunday program (discussed in chapter one). Witnesses from both the private sector and the ATO were unanimous in stating they had neither personally come across any evidence of former officers seeking favours or misusing inside knowledge, nor had they heard of any such breaches from colleagues in the industry. An ATO officer from the ASU stated:

> I am not aware of any of the people at a senior level who have left and gone to the private sector interfering or trying to gain favour on a particular matter they > have raised with the office [ATO]. I think that would be nearly the position I would expect of every officer within the Australian tax office.

Private sector witnesses echoed this view. Two senior staff from a major accounting firm stated they were unaware of any attempts by ex-ATO staff to obtain favours, both inside their firm and in the wider tax industry. Mr Wachtel, Partner in National Tax Competence in Arthur Andersen, emphasised the importance the firm placed on preventing conflicts of interest arising. But he also pointed out the distinction between conflicts over client knowledge and the legitimate practice of former ATO staff utilising technical expertise acquired during their time in the ATO:

> We are more concerned about ensuring you do not use information you had from the tax office re a particular taxpayer… and that you would not work on a matter where you were involved on the other side [ie, client] in the past. But we do not impose restrictions about what we regard as generic technical know-how in regard to those particular practice areas. We therefore would not preclude an ex tax office person who worked, let us say, as a mining specialist. We would expect that person, once they had joined us, to work in advising clients in the mining industry.

The ATO also has protocols in relation to handling cases where conflicts of interest may arise. In instances where an officer receives a request from someone outside the ATO with whom he or she has a relationship, the officer is required to refer the matter to another staff member and to not be involved in the handling of the case.

Part of the procedure for staff leaving the ATO involves an exit interview. At the interview the officer is required to return material belonging to the Commonwealth (records, laptop computers and so on) and hand over access passes, passwords to ATO systems and databases and any material used in conjunction with their job. As well, the officer is reminded of the secrecy obligations under the Income Tax Assessment Act that continue to apply after the officer's period of service in the ATO.

Access to taxpayer information

Access to taxpayer information is a general problem but is said to be particularly acute for auditors working in the LB&I division. Some ATO staff claim widespread manipulation by business and high wealth individuals of both Legal Professional Privilege (LPP) and the extension of this privilege to Accountants Working Papers (AWP). Vital information is supposedly being concealed under the cloak of privilege:

> Large corporates and specialist tax advisers who are familiar with the ATO's processes are taking full advantage of them and are hiding information from ATO auditors. Even the most diligent auditors are being frustrated in their efforts to obtain necessary information.

This concealment results in protracted audits and ties up resources. According to a former auditor, '[I]nstead of a case taking six to 12 months to finish, it is rolling on for years running into brick walls'.

The implications of these access problems extend beyond the finalisation of particular tax audits. The compliance model used by LB&I depends on taxpayer information in order to make a risk assessment of particular taxpayers and market segments. Audit priorities and compliance strategies are tailored according to such risk assessments. Without adequate information this approach is hampered.

The problem is alleged to be extensive, including not only high wealth individuals and large corporates but also 'pockets of middle-ranking businesses who utilise good lawyers and have good accountants and they know how to protect themselves from access'. However, a 1999 ATO review revealed only 23 cases where LPP or accountants claims for confidentiality were posing difficulties out of a caseload of 850. Notwithstanding the low proportion of problem cases, the ATO stated 'it needs to be acknowledged that there are cases where staff experience extreme difficulties in obtaining the information they need and taxpayers and advisers are being cautious almost to the point of obstruction'.

Witnesses from the ASU also criticised what they saw as the ATO executive's persistence with a strategy predicated on cooperation and working partnerships with large business taxpayers. Despite 'substantial disquiet amongst senior ATO auditors', the ASU claims ATO's response to the access problem has been limited to the establishment of regional Access Networks. The networks are intended to identify access problems and provide support for field officers. The implication is that the networks address the symptom, not the cause of the problem, the gravity of which requires legislative solutions.

The ATO indicated to the Committee that the issue of access to information is multi-faceted involving not only staff concerns but also complaints from business clients. In addition to the problems outlined by the ASU, ATO management have been concerned about delays in case work and the need to adopt a 'real time' approach to identifying and treating risk. Industry clients have similarly expressed concern over delays in audit work. In this context, the ATO commissioned an external expert to head a team to examine LPP.

The review indicated that staff had a mixed view of the ATO guidelines on access, some identifying limitations while others did not see them as impeding access. Furthermore, the review highlighted room for improvement in teamwork between ATO managers and field staff, as well as identifying cases where taxpayers were misapplying privilege.

The Commissioner signalled in September 1999 a tougher approach by the ATO towards LPP and AWP. The new approach was characterised as 'not attempting to overturn Legal Professional Privilege' but a 'reshaping' of the ATO's approach to it. Specific measures include:

establishing specialist adviser roles in the existing Legal Services Practice to support field staff to respond quickly and appropriately to LPP claims. As well, advisers will monitor the nature of LPP claims, establish mechanisms to resolve disputes and provide quality assurance checks on ATO field officers, taxpayers and their advisers; legal challenges to dubious LPP claims, including court action if required; independent arbitration of disputes, if agreed mutually by the ATO and taxpayer; and a program of 'strategic litigation' for LPP to resolve grey areas of the law, including prosecution in cases involving evidence of false and misleading statements and obstruction.

Acknowledging that the privilege concessions granted to AWP had gone too far, the Commissioner indicated that the new approach to LPP would extend also to accountants. In addition, the Commissioner threatened the withdrawal of AWP concessions where insufficient information is provided for the ATO to determine the taxation consequences or intended purpose of particular transactions and arrangements.

Complementing this tougher approach have been measures aimed at improving audit case management that have involved input from key industry bodies, particularly in relation to resolving delays. The ATO also indicated that there is a significant attempt to adopt a more cooperative and preventative approach to handling difficult cases.

It is obviously too early to assess the effectiveness of these measures, suffice it to say that they indicate a willingness by the Commissioner to address the issue forcefully and with resources. The foreshadowing of legal measures including litigating where necessary should address the concerns of some ATO officers about the ATO executive's preparedness to tackle the problem.

The Committee welcomes the ATO's response to this issue. Access to information is not simply an operational problem; it involves equity issues as well. Abuse of the privileges and concessions covering taxation advice for those who can afford it compounds the structural inequity facing those taxpayers who are unable to afford professional advice (as discussed in chapter 3). A firm stance on the use of LPP and AWP is necessary if tax planning that seeks to undermine the intent of the law is to be prevented.

The Committee requests that the Australian National Audit Office consider monitoring the measures proposed by the ATO in respect of Legal Professional Privilege and Accountants Working Papers.

Michael Carmody , Commissioner of Taxation, ‘The Role of Settlements in Good Tax Administration or Don’t Believe Everything You See on the Box’, Speech to the Corporate Tax Association, 23 July 1998, p. 4.

Submission No. 83, p 12.

Submission No. 83, p 20.

Submission No. 83, p 11. For a tax practitioner’s perspective on the complexity of LB&I audits, see Mr Liebler, Submission No. 85, pp 7-8.

See the graph, ‘Economic growth and tax performance – large companies’, ATO Response to Question on Notice 6 August 1998 – E21 to E24, pp. 11-12.

ATO response to Committee, 14 February 2000.

Evidence, p. 268 and Submission No. 83, p. 21.

Evidence, p. 301.

Submission No. 83, p. 22.

Submission No. 83, p. 22. See also ‘Law Clarification Program Outcomes (during 1993-1998 impacting on Large Business)’, attachment A, ATO Response to Question on Notice 6 August 1998 – E21 to E24, p. 7.

ATO, ‘Escalation processes for significant interpretative issues’, 14 February 2000.

Submission No. 83, p. 12.

Submission No. 83, p. 23.

Submission No. 6, p. 5. Submission Nos 17, pp1-2 and 17A, pp2, 14-15. See also Evidence, p. 203.

Information from the Office of the Chief Tax Counsel provided to the Committee, 8 March 2000.

Submission No. 17, p. 1.

Submission No. 91A, p. 1 and Evidence, p. 89.

See Evidence, pp. 302-303.

Evidence, p. 302.

See Evidence, pp. 89-90.

Evidence, p. 90.

Evidence, pp. 70-72.

Evidence, p. 72.

In camera Evidence, pp. 229-230.

Australian Services Union Taxation Officer’s Branch, Submission No. 91, p. 4. See also Evidence, pp. 91-97.

Mr Thorburn, Evidence, p. 92.

Submission No. 91, p. 4.

Mr Thorburn, Evidence, p. 93.

ATO, ‘Remedial Action re Legal Professional Privilege’, 8 February 2000, p. 1.

Submission No. 91, p. 4.

Submission No. 91, p. 2. See also Evidence, p. 93.

ATO, ‘Remedial Action re Legal Professional Privilege’, p. 1.

ATO, ‘Remedial Action re Legal Professional Privilege’, p. 2. See also the Interim Report on LPP in the Taxation System prepared by Associate Professor Sue McNicol, July 1999.

Michael Carmody, Commissioner of Taxation, ‘A Question of Balance’, Address to the American Club, Sydney, 17 September 1999.

ATO, ‘Remedial Action re Legal Professional Privilege’, p. 2.

Brief instructions:

1. This instrument is to be honoured in full immediately or dishonoured using a notary
2. Upon execution, the AGS and the Australian Government will do all in their power to assure further compliance and prevent any meddling into our private affairs by foreign organizations attempting to steal our property and we essentially put ourselves in their care – as they promised to take due care when granting our Refugee visa.
3. All natural people – meaning living people who are relatives have diplomatic immunity unless someone presents evidence that they don't
4. All deceased people – meaning those who died from natural causes at any age are the ancestors of natural people and natural people have beneficial ownership claim for those estates
5. Anyone is invited to provide a rebuttal to this claim back up by verifiable evidence
6. This offer is made under stipulation that it is to be rebutted without any undue delay, meaning within hours of it being signed

Ie. Speak now or forever hold your peace.

Amendment to brief:

1. Should any of the the information in this document be unlawful or prohibited by international law or any international treaty it is to be void immediately and in full effect as if it were never written or claimed
2. The author of the document, known as 'sandi' is filing these in good faith and in the event of any claim being not accurate it is not done intentionally and at worst case scenario we reserve our right to plead insanity because lets face it – only an insane man would go through this much trouble, red tape, bureaucratic BS to try accomplish the improbable let alone the not-possible by being illusory
3. Be it known though, Magistrates court at Perth had committed Sandi for a psychiatric evaluation circa 2020/21 which was deemed he is perfectly sane and a great researcher
4. Sandi petitioned the SAT to appolint Public Trustee and Public Guardian to protect interest of his spouse and children, they refused
5. Sandi undergoes 3 monthly visits to a psychiatrist who deems he has full capacity
6. Sandi further petitioned SAT to have Public Trust Office, and Public Advocate appointed as Trustees, Agents, Attorneys, Executors for the legal person without capacity titled SANDI MATIC, MATIC, MATIC SANDI, etc but they determined there is no legal disability in the man despite him making the wildest most outrageous claims including that the SAT member Eleanor referred to him as a ‘failed abortion’ by saying he was a ‘human person’ (see Minnesota Protocol)

7. Sandi further applied to be recognized as guardian for his children as their natural father who loves them and has never abandoned them nor even thought to abandon them and has put his own wellbeing and reputation at risk to protect them, the SAT stated that the petiton was ‘void’ by being ‘vexatious’ – perhaps they meant that something that is already true cannot be petitioned for
8. By all of the above reasons, this petition, claim, demand is made in the Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction of international private law and each man and woman having knowledge of it stand naked before the law on their own two feet without any other parties or government bodies to aid them in any way.

X

Sandi
Executor

Index

Exhibits

Exh #	Exhibit Name	Date	Pages
1	Paternity definmitions		1 - 6
2	Application for Death Certificates		7 - 12
3	ATO Distribution in-specie		13 - 15
4	Birth-Delivery		17 - 22
5	FSC Submission - Genetic Tests		23 - 28
6	Glossary of Health Care Terminology		29 - 87
7	Hospital Fund Act Amendment Act 1931 - [00-00-00]		89 - 91
8	IDENTITYTHEFT - FTC		93 - 93
9	Infanticide		95 - 95
10	International-Work-in-Health-Statistics-1948-1958-eng		97 - 156
11	Loan Act 1931 - [00-00-00]		157 - 159
12	No such thing as legal name - Colombia university		161 - 220
13	Registrar of Births Deaths Marriages WA - Part 2		221 - 223
14	three types of death		225 - 229
15	Was the Infant Born Alive - Postmortem Techniques Used to Determine Live Birth		231 - 250
16	WHo definitions Expert report - stillborn morbidity diseases		251 - 286
17	WHO definitions for Birth Delivery Death Foetal death - downloaded	13-03-2024	287 - 302
18	WHO definitions for Birth Delivery Death Foetal death		303 - 318
19	WHO TRS 25		319 - 354
20	World health organizataon health of refugees and migrants		355 - 698

This page is intentionally left blank.

ICD-11 for Mortality and Morbidity Statistics (who.int)

https://icd.who.int/browse/2024-01/mms/en#435227771

22 Injury, poisoning or certain other consequences of external causes

Description

In the ICD, injury means physical or physiological bodily harm resulting from interaction of the body with energy (mechanical, thermal, electrical, chemical or radiant, or due to extreme pressure) in an amount, or at a rate of transfer, that exceeds physical or physiological tolerance. Injury can also result from lack of vital elements, such as oxygen. Poisoning by and toxic effects of substances are included, as is damage of or due to implanted devices.

Injury usually has rapid onset in response to a well-defined event (e.g. a car crash, striking the ground after falling, drinking a strongly alkaline liquid, an overdose of a medication, a burn sustained during a surgical procedure). These events are often referred to as external causes of injury. The injurious energy can, however, originate from the injured person and/or from his or her immediate environment (e.g. a person running on a hot day sustains heat exhaustion), and injury can be caused by the injured person (i.e. intentional self-harm).

Injury includes manifestations that are evident immediately after onset, which may persist or not, and manifestations that first become evident at a later date.

PARTURITION. Tho act of giving birth to a child

2. Sometimes questions arise bow far means may be employed to promote par-turition, which cause, or are likely to cause, the death of the foetus. These means, in cases of deformed pelvis, are abortion in the early months, by embryotomy, by symphysotomy, and by the Caesarian section. These means are justifiable to save the life of the mother, and sometimes some of them have saved the lives of both. Vide Caesarian operation; Delivery; Pregnancy

PARTURITION. The act of giving birth to a child.

2. Sometimes questions arise how far means may be employed to promote par turition, which cause, or are likely to cause others in relation to it, but merely for his own share, and to the extent of his own several right and interest.

3. In joint tenancy of goods or chattels, it is truej tbd joint tenants are so ized per my et per toitt, but still each one has an independent, and to a certain extent a distinct right during his lifetime, which he can dispose of and sever the tenancy.

3. Tenants in common hold undivided portions of the, property by several titles, or in several rights, although by one title. Their possession, bowever, they hold in common and undivided. Whereas, in partnerships, the partners are joint owners of the property, and each has a right to sell or dispose of the whole, unless otherwise provided for in the articles of partnership. Colly. Partn. 86; Wats. Partn. 66; Story Partn. §91.

4. At common law, etch of the owners of a ebattel has an equal title and right to possess and use it; and in the case of common chattels the law has generally, left this right to the free discretion of the several owners, but in regard to ships, the common law has adopted and followed out the doctrine of the courts of admiralty. It authorizes the majority in value and interest to employ the rehip upon any probable design. This is done, not without guarding the rights, of the minority: When the maiority desire to employ a ship upon any particular voyage or adventure, they have a right to do so, upon giving security by stipulation to the minority, if required, to bring back and restore the rbip to them, or in case of her loss, to pay them the value of their shares. Abbott, Shipp. 70; 3 Kent, Com. 151, 4th ed.; 2 Bro. Civ. Law, 131; Molloy, B. 2, c. 1, §3; 2 Pet. Adm. R. 288, Story, Partn. 428; 11 Pet. R. 175. When the majority do not choose to employ the ship, the minority have, the same right, upon 'vi" similar security. 11 Pet. R. 175; I @agg! Adm. R. 306; Jacobi. Sea Laws, 442.

6. When part owners are equally divided as to the employment, upon any particular voyage, the courts of admiralty, have manifested a disposition to support the right of the court to order a sale of the ship. Story, Partn. §439; Bee's Adm. R. 12 i Gilpili, R. 10; 18 Am. Jur. 486.

PARTUS. The child just before it is born, or immediately after its birth. Before birth the partus is considered as a portion of the mother. Dig. 25, 4, 1, 1. -See Birth; Foetus; Proles; Prolicide.

PATENTEE. He to whom a patent has been granted. The term is usually applied to one who has obtained letters-patent for a new invention.

2. His rights are, 1. To make, sell and enjoy the profits, during the existence, of his rights, of the invention or discovery patented. 2. To recover damages for a violation of such rights. 3. To have an injunction to prevent any infringement of such rights.

3. His duties are to supply the public, upon reasonable terms, with the thing patented.

PATER. Father. A term used in making genealogical tables.

PATER FAMILLIAS, civil law. One who was sui juris and consequently was not either under parental power, nor under that of a master; a child in his cradle, therefore, could have been pater familias, if he had neither a master nor a father. Lec. Elem. §127, 128.

PATERNA PATERNIS. This expression is used in the French law to signify that in a succession, the property coming from the father of the deceased, descends to his paternal relations.

PATERNAL. That which belongs to the father or comes from him: as, paternal power, paternal relation, paternal estate, paternal line. Vide Line.

PATERNAL POWER. Patria potestas, The, authority lawfully exercised by parents, over their children. It will be proper to consider, 1. Who are entitled to exercise this power. 2. Who are subject to it. 3. The extent of this power.

2. - 1. As a general rule the father is entitled to exert the paternal power over his children. But for certain reasons, when the father acts improperly, and against the interest of those over whom nature and the law have given him authority, he loses his power over them. It being a rule that whenever the good of the child requires it, the courts will deliver the custody of the children to others than the father. And numerous instances may be found where, for good reasons, the custody will be given to the mother.

3. The father of a bastard child has no control over him; the mother has the right to the custody and control of such child. 2 Mass. 109; 12 Mass. 887.

4. - 2. All persous are subject to this power until they arrive at the full age of twenty-one years. A father may, however, to, a certain extent, deprive himself of this unlimited paternal power, first, by delegating it to others, as when he binds his son an apprentice; and, secondly, when he abandons his children, and permits them to act for themselves. 2 Verm. Cas. 290; 2 Watts, 408 4 S. & R. 207; 4 Mass. 675.

5. - 3. The principle upon which the law is, founded as to the extent of paternal power is, that it be exerted for the benefit of the child. The child is subject to the lawful commands of the father to attend to his business, because by being so subjected he acquires that discipline and the practice of attending to business, which will be useful to him in after life. He is liable to proper correction for the same reason. 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 326-33. See Correction; Father; Mother; Parent.

PATERNAL PROPERTY. That which descends or comes from the father and other ascendants, or collaterals of the paternal stock. Domat. Liv. Prel. tit, 3, s. 2.

PATERNITY, The state or condition of a father.

2. The hushand is prima facie presumed to be the father of his wife's chhildren, born during coverture, or within a competent time afterwards pater is est quem nuptim demonstrant. 7 N. S. 553. But this presumption may be rebutted by showing circumstances which render it impossible that the hushand can be the father. 6 Binn. 283; 1 Browne's R. Appx. xlvii.; Hardin's R. 479; 8 East, R. 193; Stra. 51, 940. 4 T. R; 356;. 2 M. & K. 349; 3 Paige's R. 139; I Sim. & Stu. 150; Turn. & Russ. 138; 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 302, et seq.

3. The declarations of both or one of the spouses, however, cannot affect the condition of a child born during the marriage. 7 N. S. 553; 3 Paige's R. 139. Vide Bastard;. Bastardy;, Legitimacy; Maternity; Pregnancy.

PATHOLOGY, med. jur. The science or doctrine of diseases. In cases of homicides, abortions, and the like, it is of great consequence to the legal practitioner to be acquainted, in some degree, with pathology. 2 Chit. Pr. 42, note.

PATRIA. The country; the men of the neighborhood competent to serve on a jury; a jury. This word is nearly synonymous with pais. (.q. v.)

PATRIA POTESTAS, Civil law. Paternal power; (q. v.) the authority which is lawfully exercised by the father over his children.

PATRICIDE. One guilty of killing his father.

PATRIMONIAL. A thing, which comes from the father, and by extension, from the mother or other ancestor.

PATRIMONIUM, civil law. That which is capable, of being inherited.

2. Things capable of being possessed by a single person exclusively of all others, are, in the Roman or civil law, said to be in patrimonio; when incapable of being so possessed they are extra-patrimonium.

3. In general, things may be inherited, but there are some which are said to be extra patrimonium, or which are not in commerce. These are such as are common, as the light of heaven, the air, the sea, and the like. Things public, as rivers, harbors, roads, creeks, ports, arms of the sea, the, sea-shore, highways, bridges, and the like. Things which belong to cities and municipal corporations, as public-squares, streets, market houses, and the like. See, 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 421 to 446.

PATRIMONY. Patrimony is sometimes understood to mean all kinds of property but its more limited signification , includes only such estate, as has descended in the same family and in a still more confined sense, it is only that which has descended or been devised in a direct line from the father, and by extension, from the mother, or other ancestor.

2 . By patrimony, patrimonium, is also understood the father's duty to take care of his children. Sw. pt. 3, §18, n. 31, p. 235.

PATRINUS. A godfather.

PATRON, eccles. law. He who has the disposition and gift of an ecclesiastical benefice. In the Roman law it signified the former master of a freedman. Dig. 2, 4, 8, 1.

PATRONAGE. The right of appointing to office; as the patronage of the president of the United States, if abused, may endanger the liberties of the people.

2. In the ecclesiastical law, it signifies the right of presentation to a church or ecclesiastical benefice. 2 Bl. Com. 21.

PATRONUS, Roman civil law. This word is a modification of the, Latin word pater, father; a denomination applied by Romulus to the first, senators of Rome, and which they always afterwards bore. Romulus at first appointed a hundred of them. Seven years afterwards, in consequence of the association of Tatius to the Romans, a hundred more were appointed, chosen from the Sabines. Tarquinius Priscus increased the number to three hundred. Those appointed by Romulus and Tatius were called patres majorum gentium and the others were called patres minorum gentium. These and their descendants constituted, the nobility of Rome. The rest of the people were called lebeians, every one of whom was obliged to choose one of these fathers as his patron. The relation thus constituted involved important consequences. The plebeian, who was called (cliens) a client, was obliged to furnish the means of maintenance to his chosen patron; to firnish a portion for his patron's daughters; to ransom him and his sons, if captured by an enemy, and pay all sums recovered against him by judgment, of the 'courts. The patron, on the other hand, was, obliged to watch over the interests of his client, whether present or absent to protect his person and property, and especially to defend him in all, actions brought against him for any cause. Neither could accuse or bear testimony against the other, or give contrary votes, &c. The contract was of a sacred nature,; the violation of it was a sort of treason, and punishable as such. According to Cicero, (De Repub. II. 9,) this relation formed an integral part of the governmental system, Et habutit plebem in clientelas principum descri ptum, which he affirms was eminently useful. Blackstone traces the system of vassalage to this. ancient relation of patron and client. It was, in fact, of the same nature as the feudal institutions of the middle ages, designed to maintain order in a rising state by a combination of the opposing interests of the aristocracy and of the common people, upon the principle of reciprocal bonds for mutual interests, Dumazeau, Barreau Romain, §III. Ultimately, by force of radical changes in the institution, the word patronus came to signify notbing more than an advocate. Id. IV PATRUELIS, civil law. A cousin german by the father's side; the son or daughter of a father's brother. Dig. 38i 10, 1.

PATRUUS, citq law. An uncle by the father's side, a father's brother. Dig. 38, 10, 10, Patruus magnus, is a grandfather's brother, grand uncle. Patruus major, is a great-grandfather's brother. Patruus maximus, is a, great-grandfather's father's brother.

Matić Family Office
Care Post Office
Suite 3. near Pollard Street No.19
Glendalough., Western Australia.

-sandi-

From: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au
Sent: Thursday, July 13, 2023 1:59 PM
To: 'Roche, Dawn'; alison.jackson@justice.wa.gov.au
Subject: RE: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853
Attachments: Archie Registration statemnt.jpg; Birth-Delivery.docx; Births, Deaths and Marriages.pdf; IMG_0206.jpg; IMG_0207.jpg

10-07-2023

To Dawn Roche and Alison Jackson in their private and unlimited capacity,

We kindly thank Dawn Roche for the correspondence below which we received on 06-07-2023.
We are acknowledging Dawn Roche's reply and Protest the Dishonor for want of administration of Justice.

We acknowledge your claim there is no death certificate for either Luka Nikola MATIC or Archie Ross MATIC and we will accept this request to be finalized if you can validate your claim that I ever asked you to perform a search on either of those 2 trusts.

The Death Certificates ordered were clearly for surname MATIC without any Christian names.

If any of the below stipulations is true and correct you are obligated to take it upon your own initiative to record any registrable events whether it be for registering human remains or placenta as certificate of death or whatever it is that you classify it as, failure to do this a criminal offence.

Division 5 — Registration of death

We kindly invite you to review this request and furnish the documents accurately and if the registration hasn't been completed yet then finish it

Is there any specific reason why you refuse to honour our Wishes to either issue the documents we have a equittable interest in or if it does not exist to accurately issue a Search certificate that you performed the searches as per request and instructions without adding additional names to the false negative search.

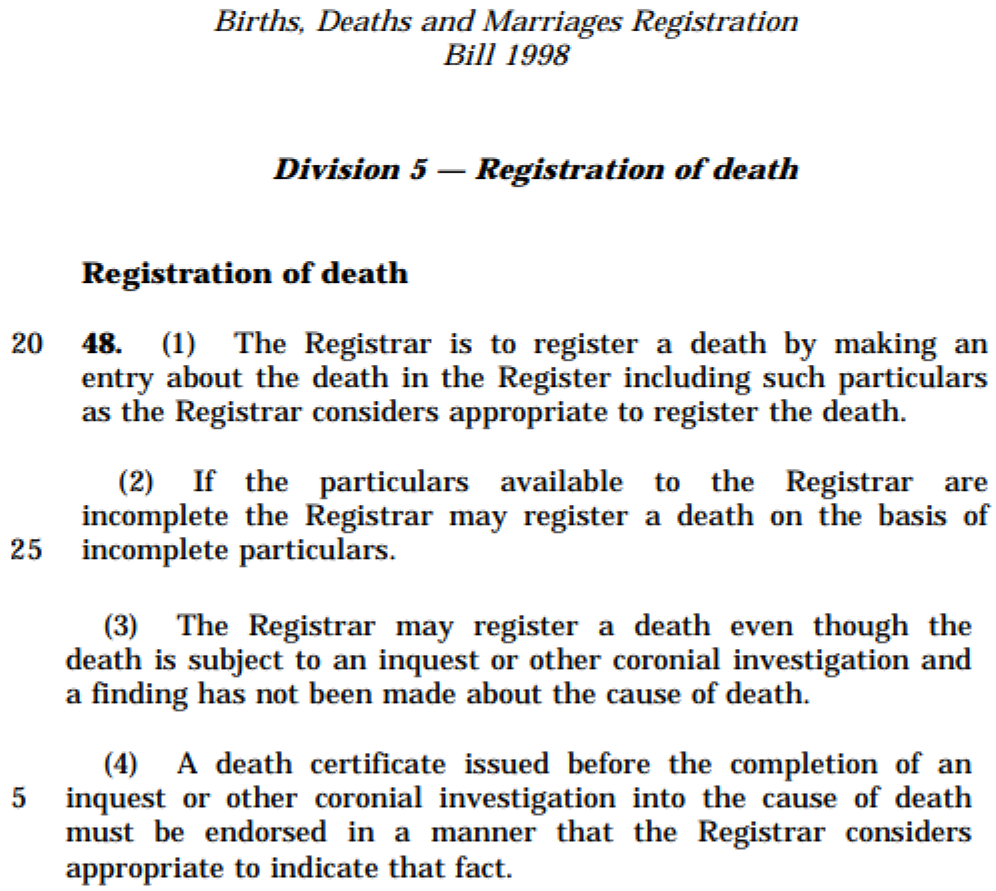
Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Matić International Library.

Matić - Principal

Mati� Family Office
Care Post Office
Suite 3. near Pollard Street No.19
Glendalough., Western Australia.



Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration
Bill 1998

Division 5 — Registration of death

Registration of death

48. (1) The Registrar is to register a death by making an entry about the death in the Register including such particulars as the Registrar considers appropriate to register the death.

(2) If the particulars available to the Registrar are incomplete the Registrar may register a death on the basis of incomplete particulars.

(3) The Registrar may register a death even though the death is subject to an inquest or other coronial investigation and a finding has not been made about the cause of death.

(4) A death certificate issued before the completion of an inquest or other coronial investigation into the cause of death must be endorsed in a manner that the Registrar considers appropriate to indicate that fact.

Further to this, is it not true that you CAN search for a death or birth certificate only by Single name under Surname field?
Is it not true that when searching for marriages you can also search for parties by Surname only and Given name isn't a mandatory field.
Is it not true that people people and Christians only have 1 name?
Is it not true that under Common Law people have the right to self-determine whether they are known by just their Christian name or a state issued Given and Surname?
Are you trying to deny us Justice?

Regarding Luka's request for Certified Copy, you instead sent me a Birth Certificate which is not the same thing. The payment specifically says Birth Certified copy

Are these birth registrations being refused on basis of wrong request being done and I should really be asking for Adoption paperwork as you have classified the children as Discharged and they are classed as having beend adopted?
Why do the certificates not say that the Offspring was Born on a certain date and how much their weight was as it does on BABY PRINTS certificate?
Are the vital recorsd of live born registered at all or are you simply registering companies and dead entities?

https://www.parliament.wa.gov.au/parliament/bills.nsf/7594A0A149A826944825661900046329/$File/122.pdf

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

Order Description: This is payment for Certificates ordered online through the Western Australian Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

Product	Quantity	Unit Price	Price
MATIC Death Certified Copy	1	53.00 AUD	53.00 AUD
MATIC Death Certified Copy	1	53.00 AUD	53.00 AUD

From: Roche, Dawn <Dawn.Roche@justice.wa.gov.au>
Sent: Friday, June 30, 2023 3:29 PM
To: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au
Subject: FW: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853

I refer to your recent telephone enquiry

Please see result below highlighted in yellow

Dawn Roche

Dawn Roche | Team Leader Customer Services | Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages
Department of Justice | Level 10, 141 St Georges Terrace, PERTH WA 6000
| f: 9264 1599 | w: www.justice.wa.gov.au

✉ PO Box 7720 Cloisters Square, PERTH WA 6850 @ bdm@justice.wa.gov.au

---

From: Roche, Dawn
Sent: Friday, 30 June 2023 2:11 PM
To: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au
Subject: FW: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853

Good afternoon

I refer to your email below.

Thank you for supplying given names to assist with our search.

A further search for death certificates has been done using the names you provided and I can still confirm there is no trace of death for either Luka Nikola MATIC or Archie Ross MATIC in the whole of the records of Western Australia.

I have also noticed that the dates you provided in your email and your application are their dates of birth.

If you are seeking death certificates can you please provide the dates they passed away.

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

Also, I refer to your application 2022/103864 – Please be advised there is no facility to apply for a Certified copy of Entry in Register of Births (copy of Birth Registration Form).
You actually applied for a birth certificate, which is what you received.

If you now wish to have a copy of the Birth Registration Form I have attached the form for this. Please print, complete and either bring it into the office or post it to the address below.

Dawn Roche

Dawn Roche | Team Leader Customer Services | Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages
Department of Justice | Level 10, 141 St Georges Terrace, PERTH WA 6000
t: 9264 6305 | f: 9264 1599 | w: www.justice.wa.gov.au

✉ PO Box 7720 Cloisters Square, PERTH WA 6850 @ bdm@justice.wa.gov.au

---

From: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au <sandi@konkrethaus.com.au>
Sent: Friday, 30 June 2023 12:58 PM
To: BDM <bdm@justice.wa.gov.au>; Raumaewa, Claire <Claire.Raumaewa@justice.wa.gov.au>
Subject: FW: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853

Hello

After having just spoken to Sharina Thompson the additional details required to assist you identify the correct issue is:
PERSON's GIVEN NAME(S): LUKA NIKOLA – 25.08.2018 +/- 6 days
PERSON's GIVEN NAME(S): ARCHIE ROSS – 21.05.2021 +/- 6 days

We are the Father of the offspring and birth parent of the child that these certificates persons named.

Further to this request, we had previously paid for a Certified Copy of Entry in Register of Births / Certified Copy of Birth Record but instead of getting that we were sent the Birth Certificate which has got different information and doesn't include the born date, weight of the offspring and the Farther Mother Christian names. See attached

Also you never sent me the the Receipt for the payment, all I got was a Tax Invoice which is the opposite of a receipt despite it being $0

Sandi, matic
Principal

From: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au <sandi@konkrethaus.com.au>
Sent: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:06 PM
To: 'Raumaewa, Claire' <Claire.Raumaewa@justice.wa.gov.au>
Subject: RE: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853

Hi Claire,

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

Mati� Family Office
Care Post Office
Suite 3. near Pollard Street No.19
Glendalough., Western Australia.

Thank you kindly for your letter.

To clear up any misunderstanding, they do not have first names, they are deceased. Our household is Christian and thereby we do not have titles such as Mr. Mrs. or have first names, last names, given names, surnames etc. To participate in your society we get called and we answer. My other and friends call me Sandi so happy for you to do the same.

In reply to your query, We have uploaded Our identifying scrip (documents) as part of paying for the service and filing the request.

Their death would and should have been registered by the Funeral Director at the St John of God Hospital.

We believe this is sufficient information for you to provide the scrip that is the property of Our family & We have rightfully made the claim to own it.

We, the undersigned, are the living Father of these 2 issue, can We help you with anything else ?

Just to add as there was no room for additional requests via the online submission but if your organization holds any scrip, paperwork, documents, securities, * please kidnly forward those to the rightful owner, Trustee, Sandi Matic.

Sandi, matic
Principal.

From: Raumaewa, Claire <Claire.Raumaewa@justice.wa.gov.au>
Sent: Friday, June 16, 2023 1:50 PM
To: sandi@konkrethaus.com.au
Subject: Death Certificate application - 2023/070853
Importance: High

Good afternoon Sandi,

Regarding your application for 2 Death Certificates, do you have first names of the deceased, and your legal right and entitlement to these certificates such as:

- written authority from a person entitled to the certificate
- or evidence that the certificate is required for some legal right or entitlement
- or evidence that there is no other living relative.

Thank you,

Kind regards,

Claire Raumaewa | Customer Service Officer | Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages
Department of Justice | Level 10, 141 St Georges Terrace, PERTH WA 6000
f: 9264 1599 | w: www.justice.wa.gov.au
✉ PO Box 7720 Cloisters Square, PERTH WA 6850 @ bdm@justice.wa.gov.au

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

Mati� Family Office
Care Post Office
Suite 3. near Pollard Street No.19
Glendalough., Western Australia.

Acknowledgement of Country: The Department of Justice respectfully acknowledges the traditional custodians of the land as being the first peoples of this country. We embrace the vast Aboriginal cultural diversity throughout Western Australia and recognise their continuing connection to country, water and sky. We pay our respects to Elders past, present and emerging.

The Department of Justice is committed to fostering respectful partnerships with our Aboriginal colleagues, clients and those in our care.

Disclaimer: The information contained in this e-mail may be private and personal or otherwise confidential. If you are not the intended recipient, any use, disclosure or copying of any part of the information is unauthorised. If you have received this e-mail in error, please inform the sender and delete the document.

The linked image cannot be displayed. The file may have been moved, renamed, or deleted. Verify that the link points to the correct file and location.

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

In-specie distribution -

❗This cover sheet is provided for information only. It does not form part of In-specie distribution -

❗This publication is extracted from the Representatives of Incapacitated Entities - issues register. See issue 5.1 of that register. This publication should be read in conjunction with the related content of that register where further context is required.

Representatives of Incapacitated Entities

In-specie distribution

This publication provides you with the following level of protection:

This publication (excluding appendixes) is a public ruling for the purposes of the Taxation Administration Act 1953.

A public ruling is an expression of the Commissioner's opinion about the way in which a relevant provision applies, or would apply, to entities generally or to a class of entities in relation to a particular scheme or a class of schemes.

If you rely on this ruling, the Commissioner must apply the law to you in the way set out in the ruling (unless the Commissioner is satisfied that the ruling is incorrect and disadvantages you, in which case the law may be applied to you in a way that is more favourable for you – provided the Commissioner is not prevented from doing so by a time limit imposed by the law). You will be protected from having to pay any underpaid tax, penalty or interest in respect of the matters covered by this ruling if it turns out that it does not correctly state how the relevant provision applies to you.

Is an in-specie distribution made from a representative to a shareholder a taxable supply?

1. As part of the winding up of a company, the liquidator may distribute assets of the company in-specie to members of the company. This commonly happens in members' voluntary liquidations.

2. One of the requirements for a taxable supply is that there is a supply for consideration.[1] In the case of an in-specie distribution by a liquidator to the shareholders of the company, there is no consideration for the supply. A shareholder is entitled to the shareholder's share of the company's surplus property after the liabilities of the company have been satisfied, unless the company's constitution provides otherwise.[2] While a share may have associated rights to receive distributions on winding up, a shareholder does not provide consideration in the form of a release or surrender of those rights in return for a liquidator's distribution, whether the distribution is in cash or an in-specie distribution. No consideration is provided by the shareholder in those circumstances.

3. Although the in-specie distribution of assets by a liquidator to the shareholder is not for consideration, it may still be a taxable supply where Division 72 of the GST Act applies and the other requirements of a taxable supply are met.[3] Division 72 removes the requirement for consideration for a taxable supply in certain circumstances where the recipient is an associate. The meaning of an associate is defined in section 318 of the ITAA 1936.

4. Under subsection 58-5(1) any supply, acquisition or importation by an entity in the capacity of a representative is taken to be a supply, acquisition or importation by the incapacitated entity. Under subsection 58-5, an in-specie distribution by a liquidator to a shareholder is deemed to be a supply made by the company in liquidation to the shareholder. Therefore, an in-specie distribution to a shareholder may be a supply to an associate if the shareholder is an associate of the company in liquidation pursuant to section 318 of the ITAA 1936. For example, a shareholder that holds a majority voting interest in the company is an associate for the purposes of section 318 of the ITAA 1936.

---

[1] Paragraph 9-5(a) of the A New Tax System (Goods and Services Tax) Act 1999.

[2] Section 501 of the Corporations Act 2001.

[3] The requirements of a taxable supply are set out in section 9-5 of the GST Act.

5. Under section 72-5 a supply to an associate for no consideration, does not stop the supply from being a taxable supply if:

- the associate is not registered or required to be registered, or
- the associate acquires the thing supplied otherwise than solely for a creditable purpose.

6. Therefore, the liquidator who makes an in-specie distribution to a shareholder who is an associate (as defined under section 318 of the ITAA 1936) of the company is liable for GST calculated on the GST exclusive market value of the asset/s if:

- the associate is not registered or required to be registered or the associate acquires the thing supplied otherwise than solely for a creditable purpose
- the other requirements of a taxable supply are satisfied; and
- the distribution is neither GST-free or input taxed supply for the purposes of the GST Act.

7. Transitional provisions (Item 50 of Tax Law Amendment (2009 Measures No 5) Act 2009) will prevent Division 72 from applying to past supplies by representatives to associates of incapacitated entities for no consideration or inadequate consideration. The new provisions apply in respect of any such supplies made on or after 4 December 2009.

8. Further, in the case of members' voluntary liquidations, Division 72 will not apply to any supplies by representatives to associates of incapacitated entities where the members' voluntary liquidation commenced before 16 September 2009 (the date the Amending Act was introduced in Parliament).

This page is intentionally left blank.

BIRTH. The act of being wholly brought into the world. The whole body must be detached from that of the mother, in order to make the birth complete. 5 C. & P. 329; S. C. 24 E. C. L. R. 344 6 C. & P. 349; S. C. 25 E. C. L. R. 433.

2. But if a child be killed with design and maliciously after it has wholly come forth from the body of the mother, although still connected with her by means of the umbilical cord, it seems that such killing will be murder. 9 C. & P. 25 S . C. 38 E. C. L. R. 21; 7 C. & P. 814. Vide articles Breath; Dead Born; Gestation; Life; and 1 Beck' s Med. Jur. 478, et seq.; 1 Chit. Med. Jur. 438; 7 C. & P. 814; 1 Carr. & Marsh. 650; S. C. 41 E. C. L. R. 352; 9 C. & P. 25.

3. It seems that unless the child be born alive, it is not properly a birth, but a carriage. 1 Chit. Pr. 35, note z. But see Russ. & Ry. C. C. 336.

DELIVERY, child-birth, med. jur. The act of a woman giving birth to her offspring.

2. It is frequently of great importance to ascertain whether or not a delivery has taken place, and the time when it took place. Delivery may be considered with regard, 1. To pretended delivery. 2. To concealed delivery and, 3. To the usual signs of delivery.

3. - 1. In pretended delivery, the female declares herself to be a mother, without being so in reality; an act always prompted by folly or fraud.

4. Pretended delivery may present itself in three points of view, 1. When the female who feigns has never been pregnant. When thoroughly investigated, this may always be detected. There are signs which must be present, and cannot be feigned. An enlargement of the orifice of the uterus, and a tumefaction of the organs of generation, should always be present, and if absent, are conclusive against the' fact. Annales d'Hygiene, tome ii. p. 227. 2. When the pretended pregnancy and delivery have been preceded by one or more deliveries. In this case, attention should be given to the following circumstances: the mystery, if any, which has been affected with regard to the situation of the female; her age; that of her hushand and particularly whether aged or decrepid. 3. When the woman has been actually delivered, and substitutes a living for a dead child. But little evidence can be obtained on this subject from a physical examination.

5. - 2. Concealed delivery generally takes place when the woman either has destroyed her offspring, or it was born dead. In suspected cases, the following circumstances should be attended to: 1. The proofs of pregnancy which arise in consequence of the examination of the mother. When she has been pregnant, and has been delivered, the usual signs of delivery, mentioned below, will be present. A careful investigation as to the woman's appearance, before and since the delivery, will have some weight, though such evidence is not always to be relied upon, as such appearances are not unfrequently deceptive. 2. The proofs of recent delivery. 3. The connexion between the supposed state of parturition, and the state of the child that is found; for if the age of the child do not correspond to that time, it will be a strong circumstance in favor of the mother's innocence. A redness of the shin and an attachment of the umbilical cord to the navel, indicate a recent birth. Whether the child was living at its birth, belongs to the subject of infanticide. (q. v.)

6. - 3. The usual signs of delivery are very well collected in Beck's excellent treatise on Medical Jurisprudence, and are here extracted: If the female be examined within three or four days after the occurrence of delivery, the following circumstances will generally be observed: greater or less weakness, a slight paleness of the face, the eye a little sunken, and surrounded by a purplish or dark brown colored ring, and a whiteness of the skin, like a person convalescing from disease. The belly is soft, the skin of the abdomen is lax, lies in folds, and is traversed in various directions by shining reddish and whitish lines, which especially extend from the groins and pubis to the naval. These lines have sometimes been termed linecae albicantes, and are particularly observed near the umbilical region, where the abdomen has experienced the greatest distention. The breasts become tumid and hard, and on pressure emit a fluid, which at first is serous, and afterwards gradually becomes whiter; and the presence of this secretion is generally accompanied with a full pulse and soft skin, covered with a moisture of a peculiar and somewhat acid odor. The areolae round the nipples are dark colored. The external genital organs and vagina are dilated and tumefied throughout the whole of their extent, from the pressure of the foetus. The uterus may be felt through the abdominal parietes, voluminous, firm, and globular, and rising nearly as high as the umbilicus. Its orifice is soft and tumid, and dilated so as to admit two or more fingers. The fourchette; or anterior margin of the perinaeum, is sometimes torn, or it is lax, and appears to have suffered considerable distention. A discharge (termed the lochial) commences from the uterus, which is distinguished from the menses by its pale color, its peculiar and well-known smell, and its duration. The lochia are at first of a red color, and gradually become lighter until they cease.

7. These signs may generally be relied upon as indicating the state of pregnancy, yet it requires much experience in order not to be deceived by appearances.

8. - 1. The lochial discharge might be mistaken for menstruation, or fluor albus, were it not for its peculiar smell; and this it has been found impossible, by any artifice, to destroy.

9. - 2. Relaxation of the soft parts arises as frequently from menstruation as from delivery; but in these cases the os uteri and vagina are not so much tumefied, nor is there that tenderness and swelling. The parts are found pale and flabby, when all signs of contusion disappear, after delivery; and this circumstance does not follow menstruation.

10. - 3. The presence of milk, though a usual sign of delivery, is not always to be relied upon, for this secretion may take place independent of pregnancy.

11.-4. The wrinkles and relaxations of the abdomen which follow delivery, may be the consequence of dropsy, or of lankness following great obesity. This state of the parts is also seldom striking after the birth of the first child, as they shortly resume their natural state. Vide, generally, 1 Beck's Med. Jur. c. 7, p. 206; 1 Chit. Med. Jur. 411; Ryan's Med. Jur. ch. 10, p. 133; 1 Briand, Med. Leg. lere partie, c. 5.

DELIVERY, conveyancing. The transferring of a deed from the grantor to the grantee, in such a manner as to deprive him of the right to recall it; Dev. Eq. R. 14 or the delivery may be made and accepted by an attorney. This is indispensably necessary to the validity of a deed; 9 Shepl. 569 2 Harring. 197; 16 Verm. 563; except it be the deed of a corporation, which, however, must be executed under their common seal. Watkin's Prin. Con. 300. But although, as a general rule, the delivery of a deed is essential to its perfection, it is never averred in pleading. 1 Wms. Saund. Rep. 291, note Arch. Dig. of Civ. Pl. 138.

2. As to the form, the delivery may be by words without acts; as, if the deed be lying upon a table, and the grantor says to the grantee, "take that as my deed," it will be a sufficient delivery; or it may be by acts without words, and therefore a dumb man may deliver a deed. Co. Litt. 36 a, note; 6 Sim. Rep. 31; Gresl. Eq. Ev. 120; Wood. B. 2, c. 3; 6 Miss. R. 326; 5 Shepl. 391; 11 Verm. 621; 6 Watts & S. 329; 23 Wend. 43; 3 Hill, 513; 2 Barr, 191, 193 2 Ev. Poth. 165-6.

3. A delivery may be either absolute, Is when it is delivered to the grantor himself; or it may be conditional, that is, to a third person to keep until some condition shall have been performed by the grantee, and then it is called an escrow. (q. v.) See 2 Bl. Com. 306 4 Kent. Coin. 446 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2018, et seq.; Cruise, Dig. tit. 32, c. 2, s. 87; 5 Serg. & Rawle, 523; 8 Watts, R. 1; and articles Assent; Deed.

4. The formula, "I deliver this as my act and deed," which means the actual delivery of the deed by the grantor into the hands or for the use of the grantee, is incongruous, not to say absurd, when applied to deeds which cannot in their nature be delivered to any person; as deeds of revocation, appointment, &c., under a power where uses to unborn children and the like, if in fact such instruments, though sealed, can be properly called deeds, i. e. writings sealed and delivered. Ritson's Practical Points, 146.

DELIVERY, contracts. The transmitting the possession of a thing from one person into the power and possession of another.

2. Originally, delivery was a clear and unequivocal act of giving possession, accomplished by placing the subject to be transferred in the hands of the buyer or his avowed agent, or in their respective warehouses, vessels, carts, and the like. This delivery was properly considered as the true badge of transferred property, as importing full evidence of consent to transfer; preventing the appearance of possession in the transferrer from continuing the credit of property unduly; and avoiding uncertainty and risk in the title of the acquirer.

3. The complicated transactions of modern trade, however, render impossible a strict adherence to this simple rule. It often happens that the purchaser of a commodity cannot take immediate possession and receive the delivery. The bulk of the goods; their peculiar situation, as when they are deposited in public custody for duties, or in the hands of a manufacturer for the purpose of having some operation of his art performed upon them, to fit them for the market the distance they are from the house; the frequency of bargains concluded by correspondence between distant countries, and many other obstructions, frequently render it impracticable to give or to receive actual delivery. In these and such like cases, something short of actual delivery has been considered sufficient to transfer the property.

4. In sales, gifts, and other contracts, where the party intends to transfer the property, the delivery must be made with the intent to enable the receiver to obtain dominion over it. 3 Serg. & Rawle, 20; 4 Rawle, 260; 5 Serg. & Rawle, 275 9 John. 337. The delivery may be actual, by putting the thing sold in the hands or possession of the purchaser; or it may be symbolical, as where a man buys goods which are in a room, the receipt of the keys will be sufficient. 1 Yeates, 529; 5 Johns. R. 335; 1 East, R. 192.; 3 Bos. & Pull. 233; 10 Mass. 308; 6 Watts & Serg. 94. As to what will amount to a delivery of goods and merchandise, vide 1 Holt, 18; 4 Mass. 661; 8 Mass. 287; 14 Johns. R. 167; 15 Johns. R. 849; 1 Taunt. R. 318 H. Black. R. 316, 504; 1 New R. 69; 6 East, R. 614.

5. There is sometimes considerable difficulty in ascertaining the particular period when the property in the goods sold passes from the vendor to the vendee; and what facts amount to an actual delivery of the goods. Certain rules have been established, and the difficulty is to apply the facts of the case.

6. - 1. Where goods are sold, if nothing remains to be done on the part of the seller as between him and the buyer, before the article is to be deliver-ed, the property has passed. East, R. 614; 4 Mass. 661; 8 Mass. 287 14 Johns. 167; 15 Johns. 349; 1 Holt's R. 18; 3 Eng. C. L. r. 9.

7. - 2. Where a chattel is made to order, the property therein is not vested in the quasi vendee, until finished and delivered, though he has paid for it. 1 Taunt. 318.

8. - 3. The criterion to determine whether there has been a delivery on a sale, is to consider whether the vendor still retains, in that character, a right over. the property. 2 H. Blackst, R. 316.

9. - 4. Where a part of the goods sold by an entire contract, has been taken possession of by the vendee, that shall be deemed a taking possession of the whole. 2 H. Bl. R. 504; 1 New Rep. 69. Such partial delivery is not a delivery of the whole, so as to vest in the vendee the entire property in the whole, where some act, other than the payment of the price, is necessary to be performed in order to vest the property. 6 East, R. 614.

10. - 5. Where goods are sent by order to a carrier the carrier receives them as the vendee's agent. Cowp. 294; 3 Bos. & Pull. 582; 2 N. R. 119.

11. - 6. A delivery may be made in a very slight manner; as where one buys goods which are in a room, the receipt of the key is sufficient. 1 Yeates, 529; 5 Johns. 335; 1 East, R. 192. See, also, 3. B. & P. 233 7 East, Rep. 558; 1 Camp. 235.

12. - 7. The vendor. of bulky articles is not bound to, deliver them, unless he stipulated to do so; be must give notice to the buyer that he is ready to deliver them. 5 Serg. & Rawle, 19; 12. Mass. 300; 4 Shepl. Rep. 49; and see 3 Johns. 399; 13 Johns. 294; 19 Johns. 218; 1 Dall. 171.

13. - 8. A sale of bricks in a brick-yard, accompanied with a lease of the yard until the bricks should be sold and removed, was held to be valid against the creditors of the vendor, without an actual removal. 10 Mass. 308.

14. - 9. Where goods were contracted to be sold upon condition that the vendee should give security for the price, and they are delivered without security being given, but with the declaration on the part of the vendor that the transaction should not be deemed a sale, until the security should be furnished; it was held that the goods remained the property of the vendor, notwithstanding the delivery. But it seems that in such cases the goods would be liable for the debts of, the vendee's creditors, originating after the delivery; and that the vendee may, for a bona fide consideration, sell the goods while in his possession. 4 Mass. 405.

15. - 10. Where goods are sold to be paid for on delivery, if, on delivery, the vendee refuses to pay for them, the property is not divested from the vendor. 13 Johns. 434; 1 Yeates, 529.

16. - 11. If the vendor rely on the promises of the vendee to perform the conditions of the sale, and deliver the goods accordingly, the right of property. is changed; but where, performance and delivery are understood to be simultaneous, possession, obtained by artifice, will not vest a title in the vendee. 3 Serg. & Rawle, 20.

17. - 12. Where, on the sale of a chattel, the purchase money is paid, the property is vested in the vendee, and if he permit it to remain in the custody of the vendor, he cannot call upon the latter for any subsequent loss or deterioration not arising from negligence. 2 Johns. 13; 2 Caines, R. 38 3 Jolins. 394.

18. In order to make a good donatio mortis causa, it is requisite that there should be a delivery of the subject to or for the donee, where such delivery can be made. 3 Binn. R. 370; 1 Miles, Rep. 109, 110; 2 Ves. Jr. 120; 9 Ves. Jr. 1.

19. The delivery of the key of the place where bulky goods are deposited, is, however, a sufficient delivery of such goods. 2 Ves. Sen. 445. Vide 3 P. Wms. 357; 2 Bro. C. C. 612; 4 Barn. & A. 1; 3 Barn. & C. 45 Bouv. Inst. Index, h. t. See Sale; Stoppage in transitu; Tender; and Domat, Lois Civiles, Liv. 1, tit. 2, s. 2 Harr. Dig. Sale, II. 3.

Use of Genetic Testing Results in Life Insurance Underwriting

FSC Submission to Treasury consultation

January 2024

Contents

1 About the Financial Services Council 2

2 Introduction 3

3 Establishment as an industry standard 3

4 Moratorium review 4

4.1 Indefinite extension 4

4.2 Stronger administrative oversight 5

4.3 Financial limits 5

5 Conclusion 6

1 About the Financial Services Council

The FSC is a peak body which sets mandatory standards and develops policy for more than 100 member companies in one of Australia's largest industry sectors, financial services.

Our full members represent Australia's retail and wholesale funds management businesses, superannuation funds, investment platforms and financial advice licensees. Our supporting members represent the professional services firms such as ICT, consulting, accounting, legal, recruitment, actuarial and research houses.

The financial services industry is responsible for investing more than $3 trillion on behalf of over 15.6 million Australians. The pool of funds under management is larger than Australia's GDP and the capitalisation of the Australian Securities Exchange, and is one of the largest pool of managed funds in the world.

The FSC's mission is to assist our members achieve the following outcomes for Australians:

- to increase their financial security and wellbeing;
- to protect their livelihoods;
- to provide them with a comfortable retirement;
- to champion integrity, ethics and social responsibility in financial services; and
- to advocate for financial literacy and inclusion.

2 Introduction

The FSC thanks Treasury for the opportunity to provide a submission on the Consultation Paper considering options for the future regulation of the use of genetic testing in life insurance underwriting decisions. Our submission will provide additional context on the establishment and review of the current industry-led moratorium, including recent changes to strengthen its application.

The FSC notes the life insurance industry has welcomed legislative intervention into the use of genetic tests and we support this new position. The FSC agrees with the industry that there is a public good benefit to encouraging Australians to undertake genetic testing, and that consumers should have certainty that genetic testing will not adversely impact their capacity to secure life insurance on terms acceptable to consumers.

3 Background on the industry standard

Following recommendations made by the Parliamentary Joint Committee on Corporations and Financial Services, the FSC and the life insurance industry established a moratorium on genetic testing in the form of an industry standard (FSC Standard 11: Moratorium on Genetic Tests in Life Insurance), effective from 1 July 2019.

The standard applied to life insurance companies that were members of the FSC, with oversight from the FSC's Standards, Oversight and Disciplinary Committee.

As outlined in the Consultation Paper, this standard allowed for people to take out life insurance benefits up to prescribed financial limits without having to disclose an adverse genetic test result.

The financial limits set in the Moratorium for the different types of personal and group life insurance a person can have with all life insurance companies in total are as follows:

- $500,000 of death cover.
- $500,000 of total permanent disability cover.
- $200,000 of trauma/critical illness cover.
- $4,000 a month in total of income protection, salary continuance and/or business expenses cover.

A life insurance company may only ask for, or use, genetic test results as part of the process to decide the terms offered for cover if the total amount of cover exceeds these financial limits. Where the total sum insured is greater than these values, a life insurer may only use the results if the test is relevant to the cover being applied for, in accordance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1992.

The moratorium was initially subject to a sunset clause, requiring extension beyond 30 June 2024.

4 Moratorium review and ownership

The FSC conducted a review in 2022 so that any required changes to the Moratorium could be identified and implemented well in advance of the sunset clause coming into effect.

As part of this review, submissions were invited and received from geneticists, consumer groups and the life insurance industry. In addition to nine responses from industry,[1] submissions were provided by:

- Human Genetics Society of Australasia (HGSA)
- A-GLIMMER
- Kristine Barlow-Stewart (Genetics Counsellor)
- Financial Rights Legal Centre

Geneticists and consumer groups asked for higher financial limits, an end to having a sunset clause and Government oversight. As a result of this review, changes were introduced to strengthen the Moratorium, taking into account the issues raised in submissions.

In October 2022, The FSC and life insurance industry announced the Moratorium was to be extended indefinitely and included in the new, enforceable Life Insurance Code of Practice (Life Code) from the point that the new Life Code came into effect on 1 July 2023. The Moratorium remained an FSC standard until this date.

From December 2022, life insurance companies progressively resigned from the FSC in favour of establishing the Council of Australian Life Insurers, a stand-alone industry body for that sector. In the period between their resignation dates and 1 July 2023, resigning life insurers opted not to be covered by the Moratorium, however made generic public disclosures that they would continue to uphold all industry standards. This in effect made any non-compliance with the Moratorium a matter for the Australian Securities and Investment Commission (ASIC) by making it a misleading and deceptive conduct issue.

The Moratorium was integrated into the Life Code from 1 July 2023 as scheduled and responsibility for the Life Code was then transferred from the FSC to the Council of Australian Life Insurers in September 2023.

4.1 Indefinite extension

The FSC and life insurers wanted to ensure that life insurance is not a reason for people to be put off from taking a genetic test for fear of later being declined for life insurance.

This motivated removal of the sunset clause as requested in some submissions, but further action was also taken, giving “immunity” to any genetic test taken while the moratorium is in place. This means that consumers can be confident the moratorium will be maintained indefinitely for these tests, regardless of any future changes.

---

[1] AIA, Gen Re, HLRA, MetLife, MLC Life Insurance, Munich Re, Resolution, Swiss Re & TAL.

In addition, the FSC (on behalf of the life insurance industry) also confirmed that stakeholders will be consulted as part of any future review of the moratorium before any change is made.

4.2 Stronger administrative oversight

As a result of its inclusion in the Life Code, the Life Code Compliance Committee (LCCC) now has the power to investigate and take action in relation to alleged breaches from 1 July 2023.

An independent body with its secretariat within the Australian Financial Complaints Authority (AFCA), the LCCC may impose sanctions for significant breaches of the Life Code, including the Moratorium. For example, the LCCC can require a Community Benefit Payment be made to a charity where there are significant breaches of the Life Code. Additionally, the LCCC has the power to conduct own motion inquiries into life insurers' compliance practices.

The FSC has confidence in the LCCC carrying out its review functions under the Life Code, including in upholding the Moratorium. It provides an accessible means for consumers to register complaints on potential Life Code breaches, combined with the ability to conduct investigations and access the data necessary to determine if breaches have occurred. With strengthened sanction powers, there is potential for rectification and enforcement for significant breaches.

4.3 Financial limits

Submissions to the review proposed increasing or removing financial limits on the moratorium, supported by two central arguments: alignment to mortgages and comparisons with cover limits in the UK.

A primary driver for consumers applying for life insurance is to manage the risk associated with obtaining a mortgage. One suggested approach was to align the minimum cover limit with the average mortgage in the most expensive Australian state. At the time of the review in 2022, ABS figures showed the mean new mortgage value in New South Wales to be $762,238.

However, most first-time homebuyers rely on joint incomes to afford a property in Sydney or Melbourne. The moratorium limits allow people to purchase cover of up to $1 million for joint borrowers ($500,000 per person). Further, consumer research by NMG showed that consumers expect to have 70% debt coverage, rather than having enough cover to pay off the entire debt.[2] This research also found the limits to align closely with the amount of cover the community expected people should have from their life insurance policies.

While cover limits in the UK are higher at £500,000 (equivalent to $960,000 in 2023), the products on offer are not equivalent to those available in the Australian market. Products in the UK commonly offer a level sum insured over time, or in the case of mortgage protection, a reducing sum aligned to the outstanding balance of a mortgage. Where multiple forms of cover are offered in the same policy, one payout cancels all other types of cover in the UK, while standalone cover in Australia allows for multiple payouts.

---

[2] NMG Community Expectations Study 2021

In addition, although TPD cover is not offered as a standalone product in the UK, it is possible for Australians to have both $500,000 of death cover and a further $500,000 of TPD cover – a total of $1 million in cover compared with $960,000 in the UK.

When compared to countries viewed by industry as having more comparable product offerings, the current limits are closely aligned with those in Germany at EUR 300,000 ($488,000) and Switzerland at CHF 400,000 ($671,000).[3]

Industry submissions to the review noted a number of additional factors relevant to financial limits, including the potential for premium increases, concerns raised by APRA about industry sustainability, the duty of life insurers to all policyholders, and the potential impact on claims experience. Insurers also noted that the financial limits are well in excess of the median amount of cover people opt to take out. These factors should again be considered in detail when evaluating the balance achieved by current financial limits.

5 Conclusion

The FSC views a positive regulatory approach to the use of genetic test results in life insurance underwriting as one that balances accessibility and affordability of life insurance premiums, provides equitable outcomes and a strong consumer protection regime for all policyholders, and ensures sustainability for funds in meeting their claims liabilities.

We encourage the Government to continue its positive engagement with key stakeholders, including consumer groups and the life insurance industry, in determining the approach that most appropriately and effectively meets these aims.

---

[3] Currencies converted to AUD using the average spot exchange rate for 2023.

World Health Organization

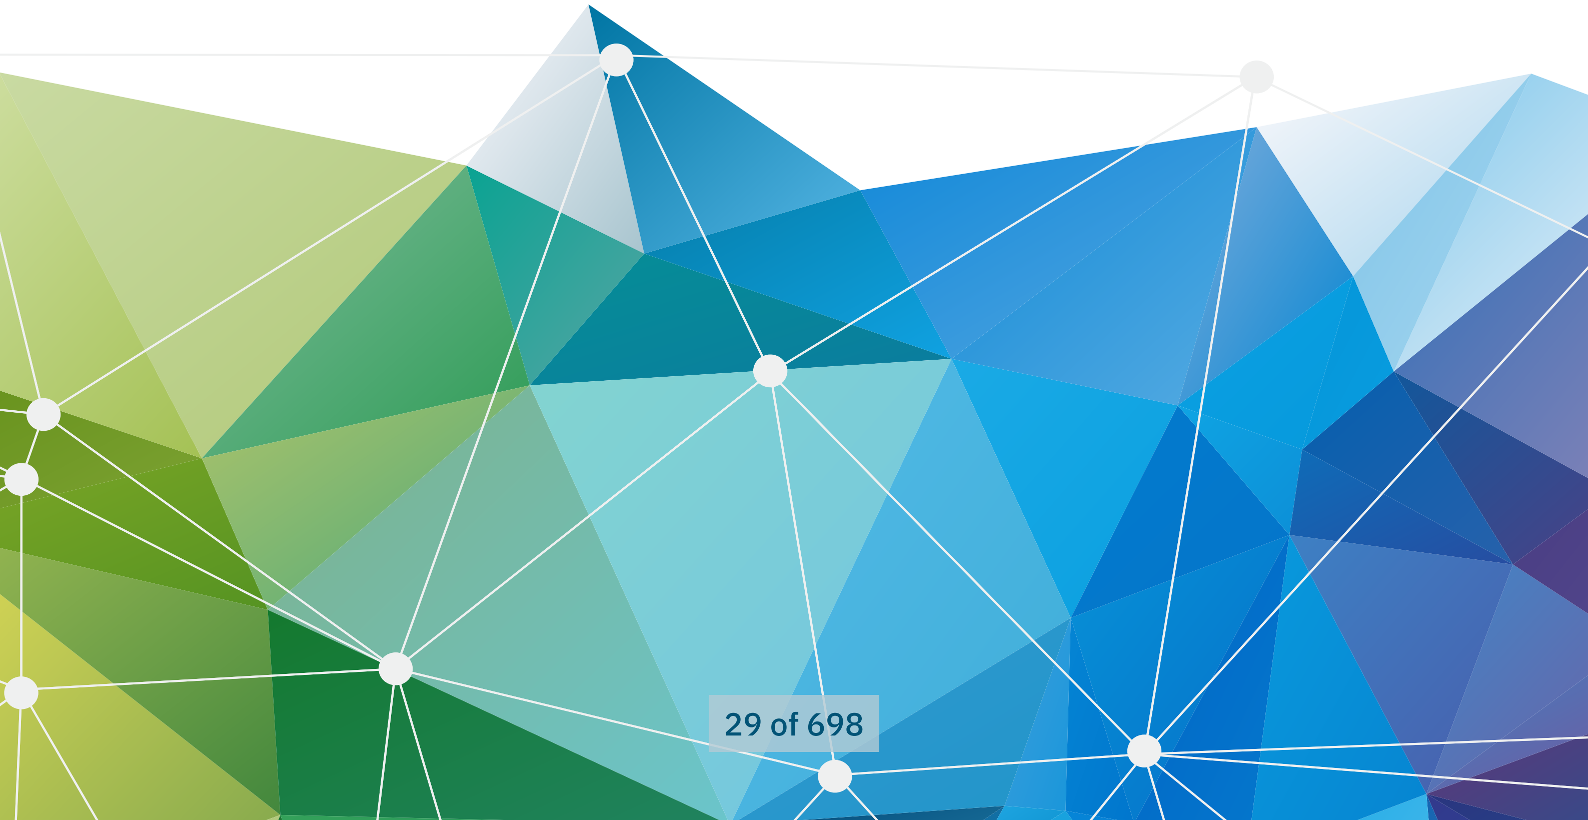
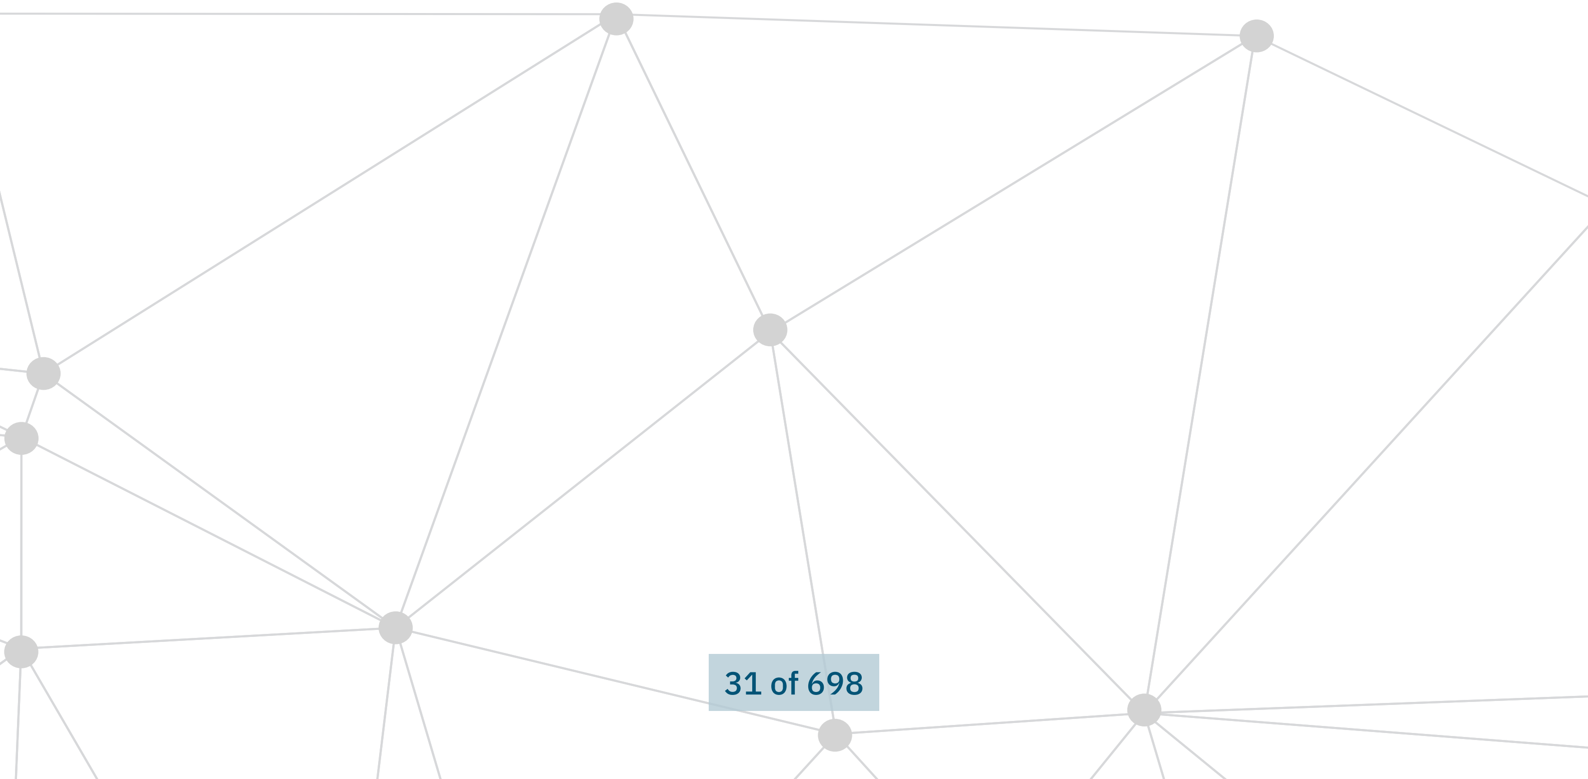
GLOSSARY

of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology



World Health Organization

GLOSSARY of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology



Glossary of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology
ISBN 978-92-4-000369-9

© World Health Organization 2020

Some rights reserved. This work is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 3.0 IGO licence (CC BY-NC-SA 3.0 IGO; https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/igo).

Under the terms of this licence, you may copy, redistribute and adapt the work for non-commercial purposes, provided the work is appropriately cited, as indicated below. In any use of this work, there should be no suggestion that WHO endorses any specific organization, products or services. The use of the WHO logo is not permitted. If you adapt the work, then you must license your work under the same or equivalent Creative Commons licence. If you create a translation of this work, you should add the following disclaimer along with the suggested citation: "This translation was not created by the World Health Organization (WHO). WHO is not responsible for the content or accuracy of this translation. The original English edition shall be the binding and authentic edition".

Any mediation relating to disputes arising under the licence shall be conducted in accordance with the mediation rules of the World Intellectual Property Organization.

Suggested citation. WHO Glossary of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020. Licence: CC BY-NC-SA 3.0 IGO.

Cataloguing-in-Publication (CIP) data. CIP data are available at http://apps.who.int/iris.

Sales, rights and licensing. To purchase WHO publications, see http://apps.who.int/bookorders. To submit requests for commercial use and queries on rights and licensing, see http://www.who.int/about/licensing.

Third-party materials. If you wish to reuse material from this work that is attributed to a third party, such as tables, figures or images, it is your responsibility to determine whether permission is needed for that reuse and to obtain permission from the copyright holder. The risk of claims resulting from infringement of any third-party-owned component in the work rests solely with the user.

General disclaimers. The designations employed and the presentation of the material in this publication do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of WHO concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries. Dotted and dashed lines on maps represent approximate border lines for which there may not yet be full agreement.

The mention of specific companies or of certain manufacturers' products does not imply that they are endorsed or recommended by WHO in preference to others of a similar nature that are not mentioned. Errors and omissions excepted, the names of proprietary products are distinguished by initial capital letters.

All reasonable precautions have been taken by WHO to verify the information contained in this publication. However, the published material is being distributed without warranty of any kind, either expressed or implied. The responsibility for the interpretation and use of the material lies with the reader. In no event shall WHO be liable for damages arising from its use.

Design by Les Pandas Roux
Front cover design by Freepik

Printed in Switzerland

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PREFACE • vi

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS • vii

ABBREVIATIONS • ix

1. INTRODUCTION • 1

2. METHODOLOGY • 3

3. GLOSSARY • 6

4. THESAURUS • 39

REFERENCES • 41

ANNEX 1. OTHER GLOSSARIES • 46

ANNEX 2. WHO CLASSIFICATION OF HAZARDS • 47

PREFACE

This Glossary is designed for the policymakers, practitioners and other stakeholders who work in the many fields that contribute to reducing the health risks and consequences of all types of emergencies and disasters. It was developed to remedy the lack of standardized terminology in the field of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management (Health EDRM), which had become apparent during the process of establishing the WHO Health Emergencies Programme and developing the Health EDRM Framework.

Given the multi-disciplinary and cross-sectoral nature of the field, the lack of clarity risked causing misunderstanding, confusion and an ongoing proliferation of undefined terms. This Glossary of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology was therefore developed to address the need for a standardized terminology to inform and describe the policies and practices associated with Health EDRM and to serve as a companion document for the Health EDRM Framework.

A wide range of subject matter experts – from Member States, United Nations agencies and nongovernmental organizations, professional associations and academia and WHO departments at HQ and its Regional Offices – have contributed to the development of this Glossary, both directly through virtual consultations and in a face-to-face technical workshop held in November 2018, and indirectly through the publication of the many sources that this Glossary draws upon.

In any field, the terminology and respective definitions will, of course, continue to evolve over time; WHO therefore envisages that in future years this Glossary will be subject to rigorous review and revision to ensure that it keeps pace with changes in Health EDRM and related fields and continues to be the valuable tool that it is today.

It is hoped that the common usage and shared understanding of terms facilitated by the use of this Glossary will enable all actors, sectors and communities to work together more effectively, both within and between countries, so that all people are able to experience the highest possible standard of health and well-being, through stronger community and country resilience, health security, universal health coverage and sustainable development.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

WHO thanks the Governments of Australia, Finland, Republic of Korea and the United Kingdom for their financial support for the development of the Framework and the Glossary.

The development of the Glossary has drawn upon WHO's work with partners and countries led by WHO country and regional offices and their respective regional emergency directors: Ibrahima Socé Fall (African Region), Ciro Ugarte (Region of the Americas), Roderico Ofrin (South-East Asia Region), Nedret Emiroglu (European Region), Michel Thieren (Eastern Mediterranean Region), and Li Ailan (Western Pacific Region).

Finalization of the Framework and the Glossary was achieved under the leadership of Mike Ryan, Jaouad Mahjour, Stella Chungong and Qudsia Huda at WHO headquarters. The contributions of Jonathan Abrahams, who coordinated the development of the Glossary, Jaz Lapitan and the lead consultant, Peter Koob, are also gratefully acknowledged.

WHO wishes to recognize the following experts and partner organizations for their contributions to the Health EDRM Framework and to the Glossary.

National experts: Walid Abu Jalala, Qatar; Salim Al Wahaibi, Oman; Sergio Alvarez, Peru; Ali Ardalan, Islamic Republic of Iran; Haithem El Bashir, Sudan; Paul Gully, Canada; Didier Houssin, France; Alistair Humphrey, New Zealand; Ute Jugert, Germany; Margaret Kitt, USA; Mollie Mahany, USA; Ahamada Msa Mliva, Comoros; Virginia Murray, United Kingdom; Guilherme Franco Netto, Brazil; Sae Ochi, Japan; Somiya Okoud, Sudan; Peng Lim Steven Ooi, Singapore; Ravindran Palliri, India; Thierry Paux, France; Mihail Pîsla, Republic of Moldova; Ossama Rasslan, Egypt; Nobhojit Roy, India; Mehmet Akif Saatcioglu, Turkey; Sri Henni Setiawati, Indonesia; John Simpson, United Kingdom; Theresa Tam, Canada.

Experts from intergovernmental and partner organizations: Vincent Lee Anami, International Medical Corps (IMC), Kenya; Paul Arbon, Torrens Resilience Institute, Australia; Frank Archer, Monash University, Australia; Marvin Birnbaum, World Association for Disaster and Emergency Medicine, USA; David Bradt, Johns Hopkins University, USA; Lourdes Chamorro, European Union; Emily Chan, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (SAR), China; Gloria Chan, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, China; Massimo Ciotti, European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control, Sweden; Andrew Collins, Northumbria University, United Kingdom; Ioana Creitaru, United Nations Development Programme, Switzerland; Bill Douglas, Consultant, Canada; Marcel Dubouloz, Consultant, Switzerland; Mélissa Généreux, Sherbrooke University, Canada; John Harding, United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction, Switzerland; Teodoro Herbosa, University of the Philippines, Philippines; Hossein Kalali, United Nations Development Programme, USA; Mark Keim, DisasterDoc, USA; Wirya Khim, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), Switzerland; Kaisa Kontunen, International Organization for Migration, Switzerland; Peter Koob, Consultant, Australia; Daniel Kull, World Bank, Switzerland; Shuhei Nomura, University of Tokyo, Japan; Michel le Pechoux, United Nations Children's Fund, Switzerland; Czarina Leung, Hong Kong SAR, China; Gabriel Leung, Hong Kong SAR, China; Lidia Mayner, Flinders University, Australia; Michael Mosselmans, World Food Programme, Italy; Elizabeth Newnham, Harvard University, Australia; Loy Rego, Asian Disaster Preparedness Center, Thailand; Panu Saaristo, International Federation of

Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, Switzerland; Valérie Scherrer, CBM, Belgium; Rahul Sengupta, United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction, Germany; Margareta Wahlstrom, United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction, Switzerland; Chadia Wannous, United Nations System Influenza Coordination, Switzerland.

Experts from WHO: Usman Abdulmumini, Onyema Ajuebor, Yahaya Ali Ahmed, Nada Alward, Bruce Aylward, Nicholas Banatvala, Maurizio Barbeschi, Samir Ben Yahmed, Rayana Bouhaka, David Brett-Major, Sylvie Briand, Nilesh Buddh, Alex Camacho, Diarmid Campbell-Lendrum, Zhanat Carr, Frederik Copper, Paul Cox, Stephane de La Rocque, Xavier De Radigues, Linda Doull, Osman Elmahal Mohammed, Ute Enderlein, Florence Fuchs, Keiji Fukuda, Michelle Gayer, Andre Griekspoor, Kersten Gutschmidt, Fahmy Hanna, David Harper, Dirk Horemans, Gabit Ismailov, Hamid Syed Jafari, Kalula Kalambay, Kande-Bure Kamara, Nirmal Kandel, Youssouf Kanoute, Ryoma Kayano, Hyo-Jeong Kim, Rebecca Knowles, Helena Krug, Ben Lane, Vernon Lee, Jian Li, Matthew Lim, Tarande Manzila, Adelheid Marschang, Susana Martinez Schmickrath, Elizabeth Mason, Margaret Montgomery, Elizabeth Mumford, Altaf Musani, Maria Neira, Tara Neville, Dorit Nitzan, Ngoy Nsenga, Isabelle Nuttall, Olushayo Olu, Heather Papowitz, Yingxin Pei, Charles Penn, William Perea, Arturo Pesigan, Jean-Luc Poncelet, Pravarsha Prakash, Jukka Pukkila, Adrienne Rashford, Gerald Rockenschaub, Guenael Rodier, Alex Ross, Cathy Roth, Dalia Samhouri, Irshad Shaikh, Iman Shankiti, Rajesh Sreedharan, Ludy Suryantoro, Joanna Tempowski, Lisa Thomas, Angelika Tritscher, Heini Utunen, Willem Van Lerberghe, Liviu Vedrasco, Elena Villalobos Prats, Kai von Harbou, Michel Yao, Nevio Zagaria, Wenqing Zhang.

ABBREVIATIONS

CRED	Centre for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters
EDRM	emergency and disaster risk management
ENSO	El Niño-Southern Oscillation
EOC	emergency operations centre
ERF	Emergency Response Framework (WHO)
FAO	Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations
IAEA	International Atomic Energy Agency
IASC	Inter-Agency Standing Committee
ICRC	International Committee of the Red Cross
IHR	International Health Regulations
IMO	International Maritime Organization
IPCC	Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change
IRDR	Integrated Research on Disaster Risk
IPCS	International Programme on Chemical Safety
ISO	International Organization for Standardization
NGO	nongovernmental organization
OCHA	United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs
OECD	Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development
OIE	World Organisation for Animal Health
UN	United Nations
UNGA	United Nations General Assembly
UNHCR	United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees
US CDC	United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
WHE	WHO Health Emergencies Programme

1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 BACKGROUND AND RATIONALE

In recent years there has been increased focus on policy, practice and research in Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management (Health EDRM) – a diverse field which brings together a wide range of functions in health and other sectors aimed at improving health outcomes for the people across the world who are at risk of emergencies and disasters.

WHO has undergone significant internal organizational change to strengthen the Organization's capacity to manage emergencies, and in 2017 established the WHO Health Emergencies Programme, which has integrated diverse functions across WHO for a multitude of emergency risks. This transformation has been reinforced in WHO's 13th General Programme of Work 2019-2023, which includes the protection of people's health from emergencies as one of the main priority areas for the Organization.

In 2019, WHO published the Health EDRM Framework (WHO 2019m), which was developed to provide guidance to ministries of health and other stakeholders on how the capacities and systems of countries and communities – across health and other sectors – can be strengthened in order to reduce the health risks and consequences associated with emergencies and disasters of all types.

The Framework aims to respond to the challenge posed to public health at country and community levels by a diverse range of risks due to vulnerabilities to many natural, biological, technological and societal hazards and the need to strengthen multisectoral capacities for Health EDRM. The Framework also responds to the key challenge of addressing the fragmented and reactive approaches to managing these risks that all too often have contributed to less than optimal outcomes – including significant numbers of deaths, illness, injury, disability and other health effects, disruption to health systems and services, and social, economic and environmental impacts.

By drawing on achievements and experiences from the disciplines of risk management, emergency management, epidemic preparedness and response, and health systems strengthening, Health EDRM consolidates contemporary approaches and practice into one conceptual framework in order to address current and emerging risks to public health and the need for effective utilization and management of resources. Health EDRM emphasizes assessing, communicating and reducing risks across the continuum of prevention, preparedness, readiness, response and recovery, and building the resilience of communities, countries and health systems. It provides a common language and a comprehensive approach that can be adapted and applied by many actors and stakeholders in health and other sectors who are working to reduce health risks and consequences of emergencies and disasters.

The Framework describes key risk management concepts, guiding principles, and the components and functions of effective Health EDRM, and provides guidance on implementation. It aims to assist countries in taking joint and coherent action to implement the IHR (2005), the Sendai Framework, the Paris Agreement, the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and other related national, regional and global strategies and frameworks. Ultimately, the expected outcome of applying Health EDRM is that "countries and communities have stronger capacities and systems across health and other sectors resulting in the reduction of the health risks and consequences associated with all types of emergencies and disasters" and help to realise the Health EDRM vision of "the highest possible standard of health and well-being for all people at risk of emergencies, and stronger community and country resilience, health security, universal health coverage and sustainable development" (WHO 2019m).

Perhaps unsurprisingly given the diverse range of fields involved in delivering Health EDRM, in the course of developing the Health EDRM Framework it became clear that there was a troublesome lack of clarity even among experts and practitioners around the use of terminology related to Health EDRM, with different meanings being ascribed to similar terms, and similar meanings to different terms.

Similar-sounding terms have different definitions in different disciplines or contexts. Some terms have specific technical meanings that differ from the layperson's usage. While the terminology may serve the interest of an individual specialist area, the lack of uniformity can cause misunderstanding and confusion, especially in multi-disciplinary and cross-sectoral work.

Although several relevant glossaries were already available – such as the dedicated glossary contained in the Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction (endorsed by the UN General Assembly in February 2017), and the glossary in the International Health Regulations 2005 (Annex 1) – none represented the full spectrum of concepts and terminology in Health EDRM. This was the rationale for the development of the Glossary of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology.

1.2 PURPOSE

The Glossary of Health Emergency and Disaster Risk Management Terminology is intended to address the need for a standardized terminology in Health EDRM by consolidating existing glossaries and definitions into a single, comprehensive reference tool for policy-makers, practitioners and other stakeholders. It aims to promote common understanding and common usage of Health EDRM terms. The Glossary has several applications in Health EDRM, including:

- policy, planning, practice and communication within the health sector and with other sectors, communities and other stakeholders
- data standards and indicators for assessment, planning, monitoring, reporting and evaluation in health emergency risk management
- technical guidance and assistance to practitioners and policy-makers at all levels and
- learning, research and knowledge management.

1.3 SCOPE

The Glossary includes terms and definitions that are likely to be encountered and commonly required by policy-makers and practitioners in Health EDRM, i.e. the systematic analysis and management of health risks, posed by emergencies and disasters, through a combination of:

- hazard and vulnerability reduction to prevent and mitigate risks
- preparedness
- response, and
- recovery measures.

2 METHODOLOGY

2.1 PRINCIPLES FOR DEVELOPMENT OF THE GLOSSARY

The development of the Glossary was based on the principle that it should have an explicit and recognisable scope, should meet the needs of its audience, and should not contain new terms or definitions – although some terms or definitions may require minor amendment to ensure internal consistency or provide further explanation.

The Glossary should include terms and definitions that are:

- likely to be required in communications on Health EDRM
- specialist in nature, not commonly-understood terms, e.g. ‘organization’
- written in concise and plain language amenable to translation into the other official WHO languages, and
- clear and consistent in distinctions within a coherent set of concepts.

Lastly, it should use a rigorous, evidence-based and rational system to achieve these principles.

2.2 STAGES OF DEVELOPMENT

Draft from existing glossaries

The first stage in the development of the Glossary was to compile a draft.

A list was composed of relevant existing glossaries, and the purpose and scope of each were determined in order to inform their assessment. Criteria were developed to determine which existing glossaries should be considered for inclusion, and the existing glossaries were assessed against these criteria.

Once the glossaries had been selected for inclusion, the next step was to determine which terms from each glossary should be included. A thesaurus was developed of the terms that appeared in the selected glossaries (see below). The Health EDRM terms drawn from the selected existing glossaries were compiled to form an initial draft. Multiple definitions were mostly removed; where multiple definitions were required, these were assembled in a logical order.

Virtual consultation

In order to refine and finalize the Glossary, technical experts from WHE departments at HQ and Regional Office levels, other key HQ departments and subject matter experts from Member States, UN agencies and nongovernmental organizations, professional associations and academia were invited to participate in a virtual consultation and a face-to-face technical workshop.

Participants in the virtual consultation were consulted by correspondence, and were asked to provide feedback on:

- other factors that should be considered regarding the inclusion and exclusion criteria for glossaries and terms
- other terms that should be added
- terms that should be removed.

The terms and key issues that had been raised by respondents and during the virtual consultation process were integrated into a revised version of the Glossary.

Face-to-face technical workshop

Lastly, the revised version of the Glossary was discussed at a face-to-face technical workshop of multi-stakeholder experts held in Geneva in November 2018. Workshop participants reviewed the definitions and accompanying explanatory notes and made recommendations for an agreed final list of terms, definitions and explanatory notes, which were incorporated into the final version of the Glossary.

2.3 CRITERIA FOR THE SELECTION OF EXISTING GLOSSARIES

The Glossary is based on terms and definitions drawn from existing glossaries, selected according to the following criteria.

Existing glossaries were included if they:

- contain terms likely to be useful in policy, planning, practice and communications on Health EDRM
- are internationally-agreed at the highest levels
- are intended for a multi-sectoral audience and contain multi-sectoral terms and definitions
- have an appropriate scope and coverage, and
- have an internal consistency of terms and definitions.

Existing glossaries were excluded if they:

- are not recent and current
- are not internationally agreed.

For example, a number of glossaries developed at national level by individual WHO Member States were excluded as they were not internationally agreed. Internationally agreed glossaries have the additional advantage of being available in the United Nations official languages, namely Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish.

2.4 CRITERIA FOR THE SELECTION OF TERMS AND DEFINITIONS

Definitions are direct quotes from selected glossaries, except where minor adjustments were deemed necessary to make certain definitions succinct and internally consistent. Further explanation is provided in the explanatory notes that accompany the definitions for some of the terms.

Some terms from the selected glossaries were excluded from this Glossary because they:

- did not meet the principles in section 2.1 above
- are generic terms that do not require specialist definitions, e.g. 'organization', 'airport'
- are terms that are applied predominantly in a specialized area rather than in the field of Health EDRM more generally
- were cited in an existing glossary for the sole purpose of interpretation of the text, and
- do not fit the scope of the Glossary, e.g. 'invasive'.

Multiple terms and definitions that occurred as single entries in some glossaries were disaggregated and cross-referenced in the Glossary. For example, in the Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction (UNGA 2016), the entry for 'affected' includes 'directly affected' and 'indirectly affected': these have been listed separately in the Glossary as 'affected, directly' and 'affected, indirectly'.

2.5 WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A GLOSSARY, DICTIONARY AND THESAURUS?

Glossaries, dictionaries and thesauruses have different purposes and scopes. A 'glossary' is a list of terms with definitions, relating to a specific subject, text or purpose and arranged in a logical sequence, such as alphabetically. A 'dictionary' is a list of terms for a given language with definitions or the equivalent words in a different language, often also providing information about pronunciation, origin, and usage. A 'thesaurus' is a list of terms in groups of related concepts. This publication contains both a glossary and a thesaurus as defined above.

2.6 GLOSSARY EXPLANATORY NOTES

To the extent possible, whilst respecting the original references, terms have been listed as singular not plural. Terms and definitions have been quoted from authoritative references with necessary interpolations indicated by [...]. Existing definitions have been used except where minor adjustments have been made to ensure succinctness of the definition and internal consistency with other terms; in these cases, a note has been provided. New terms have not been invented. Where a given term has more than one definition, these are numbered.

The following order of references has been used to prioritise definitions:

- United Nations, General Assembly. Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction. 2016 (UNGA 2016).
- WHO. International Health Regulations 2005, third edition (WHO 2016).
- other WHO publications where some terms add value.
- Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC). Managing the risks of extreme events and disasters to advance climate change adaptation. A special report of working groups I and II of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC 2012).
- ISO publications where some terms add value, and
- other internationally-agreed sources.

"See ..." either refers the reader to a primary term and definition, or refers the reader to another publication if the term and definition is beyond the scope of this Glossary.

"See also ..." refers the reader to related terms and definitions as a cross reference.

"Synonym(s)" refers the reader to a synonym of or alternative term to the listed term, with an explanation if required.

2.7 THESAURUS EXPLANATORY NOTES

The thesaurus was a tool used to develop the Glossary, by grouping like terms within concepts and determining:

- the internal consistency and coherence of existing glossaries
- whether the terms and definitions relate only to interpretation of the text, and
- whether the terms and definitions were of value in the Glossary.

It is published here as a reference tool to help readers find the most appropriate term for their purpose.

The thesaurus groups terms in a series of related concepts to offer the reader an overall understanding of the terms in the Glossary. The thesaurus lists terms in five large groups of related concepts, under a head term, e.g. "risk". Within these five large groups, terms are grouped at smaller conceptual levels, under a secondary head term, e.g. "hazard".

3 GLOSSARY

Acceptable risk

The extent to which a [disaster] risk is deemed acceptable or tolerable depends on existing social, economic, political, cultural, technical and environmental conditions.

Note: In engineering terms, acceptable risk is also used to assess and define the structural and non-structural measures that are needed in order to reduce possible harm to people, property, services and systems to a chosen tolerated level, according to codes or "accepted practice", which are based on known probabilities of hazards and other factors (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'risk', 'tolerable health risk'.

Access to health services

The perceptions and experiences of people as to their ease in reaching health services or health facilities in terms of location, time and ease of approach (WHO 2011).

Action plan

Often called an 'incident action plan', this is a statement of intent that is specific to an incident or event. It details the response strategies, objectives, resources to be applied and tactical actions to be taken (WHO 2015a).

Activation level

A level of readiness or emergency response describing [an emergency operations centre's] activities in response to predetermined criteria related to the severity of an incident (WHO 2015a).

Acute health emergency/ acute public health event

Any event [or emergency] that represents an immediate threat to human health and requires prompt action, i.e. implementation of response and/or mitigation measures to protect the health of the public (WHO 2014).

Affected

1. People who are affected, either directly or indirectly, by a hazardous event (UNGA 2016).

2. Persons, baggage, cargo, containers, conveyances, goods, postal parcels or human remains that are infected or contaminated, or carry sources of infection or contamination, to constitute a public health risk (WHO 2016).

3. People requiring immediate assistance during a period of emergency, i.e. requiring basic survival needs such as food, water, shelter, sanitation and immediate medical assistance (Centre for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters [CRED] 2009).

▷ See 'directly affected', 'indirectly affected'.

After-action report

Document describing the response to an incident and findings relating to performance of the [health system] response during an incident (WHO 2015b).

After-action review

After an activation, operation or exercise has been completed, a process involving a structured facilitated discussion to review what should have happened, what actually happened, and why (WHO 2015a).

Alert

1. The first notification that a public health event with adverse consequences may occur or may be occurring.

Note: The context for this definition is usually associated with biological hazards. The term 'warning' or 'public warning', as part of a multi-level alerting system, is often used for other types of hazards (WHO 2012).

2. Messages or information communicated to partners, communities and the public to help inform about, prevent the spread of, or control an acute public health event.

Note: An alert refers to a public health event that has been (i) verified and (ii) risk assessed and (iii) requires an intervention (an investigation, a response or a communication) (WHO 2014).

3. Part of public warning that captures attention of first responders and people at risk in a developing emergency situation (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'early warning system', 'public warning'.

All-hazards approach

An approach to the management of the entire spectrum of emergency risks and events based on the recognition that there are common elements [and common capacities required] in the management of these risks, including in the responses to virtually all emergencies.

Note: The development of common or generic capacities that can be applied to all risks. These generic capacities are complemented by specific measures for the unique characteristics of each risk or event. Standardizing a management system to address the common elements, greater capacity is generated along with specific measures to address the unique characteristics of each event (WHO 2015a).

Antimicrobial resistance

The ability of a microorganism (such as bacteria, viruses, and some parasites) to stop an antimicrobial (such as antibiotics, antivirals and antimalarials) from working against it.

Note: Antimicrobial resistance is the broader term for resistance in different types of microorganisms and encompasses resistance to antibacterial, antiviral, antiparasitic and antifungal drugs. As a result, standard treatments become ineffective, infections persist and may spread to others. Antimicrobial resistance occurs naturally but is facilitated by the inappropriate use of medicines, for example using antibiotics for viral infections such as cold or flu, or sharing antibiotics. Low-quality medicines, wrong prescriptions and poor infection prevention and control also encourage the development and spread of drug resistance (WHO 2019n).

Anthropogenic hazards

[Hazards that] are induced entirely or predominantly by human activities and choices. Synonym: 'human-induced hazards'.

Note: Anthropogenic hazards include technological, societal and socionatural hazards. In the context of the Sendai Framework, this term does not include the occurrence or risk of armed conflicts and other situations of social instability or tension which are subject to international humanitarian law and national legislation (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'socionatural hazards', 'technological hazards'.

▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of Hazards.

Assisting agency

An agency or organization providing personnel, services, or other resources to the agency with lead responsibility for incident management (WHO 2015a).

Biological hazards

[Hazards] of organic origin or conveyed by biological vectors, including pathogenic microorganisms, toxins and bioactive substances.

Note: Examples are bacteria, viruses or parasites, as well as venomous wildlife and insects, poisonous plants and mosquitoes carrying disease-causing agents (UNGA 2016).

▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of Hazards.

Bioterrorism

The intentional use of micro-organisms, toxins, genetic material or substances derived from living organisms to produce death or disease in humans, animals or plants (WHO 2015b).

Build back better

The use of the recovery, rehabilitation and reconstruction phases after a disaster to increase the resilience of nations and communities through integrating disaster risk reduction measures into the restoration of physical infrastructure and societal systems, and into the revitalization of livelihoods, economies and the environment (UNGA 2016).

Business continuity management

An organization-wide discipline and a complete set of processes that identifies potential impacts which threaten an organization. It provides a capability for an effective response that safeguards the interests of its major stakeholders and reputation (ISO 22301:2012).

Business continuity plan

A document that describes how an organization will maintain and restore critical operational functions and services to a predetermined acceptable level in the event of an occurrence that disrupts its operational capabilities (WHO 2015a).

Capability

Possessing the demonstrable ability to perform a particular task (WHO 2015a).

Capacity

Combination of all the strengths, attributes and resources available within an organization, community or society to manage and reduce disaster risks and strengthen resilience.

Note: Capacity may include infrastructure, institutions, human knowledge and skills, and collective attributes such as social relationships, leadership and management (UNGA 2016).

Capacity assessment

The process by which the capacity of a group, organization or society is reviewed against desired goals, where existing capacities are identified for maintenance or strengthening, and capacity gaps are identified for further action (UNGA 2016).

Capacity building

▷ See 'capacity development'.

Capacity, coping

▷ See 'coping capacity'.

Capacity development

The process by which people, organizations and society systematically stimulate and develop their capacities over time to achieve social and economic goals, including through improvement of knowledge, skills, systems and institutions.

Note: Capacity development is a concept that extends the term of capacity-building to encompass all aspects of creating and sustaining capacity growth over time. It involves learning and various types of training, but also continuous efforts to develop institutions, political awareness, financial resources, technology systems and the wider enabling environment (UNGA 2016).

Case

A person identified as having a particular disease, health disorder, or condition under surveillance or investigation.

Note: Cases may be further classified as confirmed, suspect, or probable (WHO 2015b).

Case definition

1. A set of diagnostic criteria that must be fulfilled in order to identify a case of a particular disease.

Note: Case definitions can be based on clinical, laboratory, epidemiological, or combined clinical and laboratory criteria. When a set of criteria is standardized for purposes of identifying a particular disease, then it is referred to as 'standard case definition'. A surveillance case definition is one that is standardized and used to obtain an accurate detection of all cases of the targeted disease or condition in a given population, while excluding the detection of other similar conditions (WHO 2019a).

2. A standard case definition is an agreed set of criteria used to describe if a person has a particular disease or was exposed to a particular pathogen.

Note: Case definitions are used to label a case, such as suspected, probable, confirmed. Standard definitions ensure that every case is detected and reported in the same way. Once a case meets the standard case definition for notification, it is labelled as a suspect case. Sometimes a broader syndromic case definition is used to improve the likelihood of finding cases of interest, although other similar diseases might also be detected. During case investigation, clinical criteria, laboratory testing and epidemiological information are used to confirm the case (WHO 2018c).

Case fatality ratio or rate (CFR)

A measure of the severity of a disease and defined as the proportion of cases of a specified disease or condition which are fatal within a specified time (WHO 2019j).

Casualty

Any human accessing health or medical services, including mental health services and medical forensics/mortuary care (for fatalities), as a result of a hazard impact (WHO 2007).

Note: The term 'casualties' may refer to the sum of the dead, missing, ill and injured.

Chain of command

A series of command, control, executive, or management positions in hierarchical order of authority (WHO 2015a).

▷ See 'incident management system'.

Chemical hazard

Inherent property of a chemical having the potential to cause adverse effects when an organism, system, or population is exposed to that chemical (adapted from IPCS 2004).

Chemical event

A manifestation of a disease or an occurrence that creates a potential for a disease as result of exposure to or contamination by a chemical agent (WHO 2010a).

Chemical incident

An uncontrolled release of a chemical from its containment.

Note: Chemical incidents may result in harm to public health and the environment. They usually trigger a public health response, including for example, assessment of risk and/or provision of advice to authorities and the public. Chemical incidents may refer to anthropogenic events such as the explosion at a factory which stores or uses chemicals, contamination of the food or water supply with a chemical, an oil spill, a leak in a storage unit during transportation, an outbreak of disease that is (likely to be) associated with chemical exposure or a deliberate event where chemicals are used to harm people (WHO 2009a).

Civil protection

Measures taken and systems implemented to preserve the lives and health of citizens, their properties and their environment from undesired events (ISO 22300:2018).

Climate change

A change in the state of the climate that can be identified (for example by using statistical tests) by changes in the mean and/or the variability of its properties and that persists for an extended period, typically decades or longer (IPCC 2012).

Climate change adaptation

In human systems, the process of adjustment to actual or expected climate and its effects, in order to moderate harm or exploit beneficial opportunities. In natural systems, the process of adjustment to actual climate and its effects; human intervention may facilitate adjustment to expected climate (IPCC 2012).

Climate change mitigation

A human intervention to reduce the sources or enhance the sinks of greenhouse gases (IPCC 2012).

Climatological hazards

- ▷ See 'hydrometeorological hazards'.
- ▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of Hazards.

Clusters

Groups of humanitarian organizations, both UN and non-UN, in each of the main sectors of humanitarian action (water, health, shelter, logistics, etc.).

Note: Clusters are designated by the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC) and have clear responsibilities for coordination (UNHCR 2015).

- ▷ See 'health cluster'.

Cold debrief

A debriefing session held after a period of time has passed following an exercise or incident, in order to discuss, with the benefit of hindsight, any observations and issues that may have been overlooked during a hot wash (WHO 2015a).

Synonym: 'cold wash'.

- ▷ See 'hot debrief'.

Collaboration (intersectoral)

The process of joint planning, construction, implementation and monitoring by ministries and authorities belonging to different public sectors, including sharing of resources in order to enable each ministry or body to carry out their responsibilities that were mutually agreed upon (WHO Health & Environment Lexicon).

Command

1. The act of managing, directing, ordering, or controlling by virtue of explicit statutory, regulatory, or delegated authority (WHO 2015a).

2. The common short name for 'incident command', involving making decisions, implementing plans manage an incident, and controlling their effects (WHO 2015a).

Command and control system

- ▷ See 'incident management system'.

Communicable disease

1. An illness due to a specific infectious agent or its toxic products that arises through transmission of that agent or its products from an infected person, animal or reservoir to a susceptible host, either directly or indirectly through an intermediate plan or animal host, vector or the inanimate environment (WHO 2018a).

2. An illness caused by a specific infectious agent or its toxic products and transmitted from an infected person, animal or the environment (for example through water, food, fomites) to a susceptible host. Transmission can be direct or indirect (WHO 2019k).

- ▷ See also 'epidemic', 'outbreak', 'pandemic', and 'case', 'casualty', 'incidence', 'prevalence' and 'suspect'.

Communication, public

- ▷ See 'public communication'.

Community

Specific group of people, often living in a defined geographical area, who share a common culture, values and norms, are arranged in a social structure according to relationships which the community has developed over a period of time.

Note: Members of a community gain their personal and social identity by sharing common beliefs, values and norms which have been developed by the community in the past and may be modified in the future. They exhibit some awareness of their identity as a group and share common needs and a commitment to meeting them (WHO 1998).

Community surveillance

Starting point for event notification at the community level, generally done by a community worker; it can be active (looking for cases) or passive (reporting cases) (WHO 2010a).

Community-based disaster risk management

Promotes the involvement of potentially affected communities in disaster risk management at the local level. This includes community assessments of hazards, vulnerabilities and capacities, and their involvement in planning, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of local action for disaster risk reduction [management] (UNGA 2016).

Competence

Ability to apply knowledge and skills to achieve intended results (ISO 22300:2018).

Complex emergency

A disaster complicated by civil violence, government instability, macroeconomic collapse, population migration, elusive political solutions, etc., in which any emergency response has to be conducted in a difficult political and security environment, potentially involving a multi-sectoral, international response that goes beyond the mandate or capacity of any single agency (WHO 2015a).

Comprehensive approach (to emergency and disaster risk management)

Comprises a range of measures across prevention and mitigation; preparedness; response; and recovery (WHO 2015a).

Synonym: 'emergency management cycle'.

Comprehensive emergency management programme

A corporate or government programme that commits resources to a range of measures to implement prevention and mitigation; preparedness; response; and recovery (also disaster (risk) management programme).

Note: Typically, this programme includes the full range of capacities for managing risks associated with emergencies and disasters (WHO 2015a).

Synonyms: comprehensive emergency and disaster risk management, comprehensive disaster management.

Concept of operations

A section or statement in an agency emergency plan that identifies policies, role and responsibilities, and how the structural or functional elements of the organization will work together to produce a coherent management response (WHO 2015a).

Consequence

1. The downstream effects that result from an action or condition that may be negative or positive.

Note: A negative public health consequence causes or contributes to ill health. Consequences may include social, technical and scientific, economic, environmental, ethical, or policy and political effects (WHO 2012).

2. Outcome of an event affecting objectives (ISO 31000:2018).

Contact tracing

The identification and follow-up of persons who may have come into contact with an infected person or infectious materials (based on WHO 2019b).

Contamination

The presence of an infectious or toxic agent of matter on a human or animal body surface, in or on a product prepared for consumption or on other inanimate objects, including conveyances, that may constitute a public health risk (WHO 2016).

Context

As applied to emergency risk management, context is described by a number of factors related to the setting, circumstances and environment of risks and events.

Note: The cultural, social, political, legal, regulatory, financial, technological, economic, natural and competitive environment—whether local, national, regional or international—and those factors related to the governance, organizational structure, roles, accountabilities, policies, objectives, and strategies that are in place to achieve those objectives. They also include the capabilities of and relationships between the internal and external actors and stakeholders (WHO 2015a).

Contingency planning

A management process that analyses disaster risks and establishes arrangements in advance to enable timely, effective and appropriate responses.

Note: Contingency planning usually refers to planning for specific scenarios or events that results in organized and coordinated courses of action with clearly identified institutional roles and resources, information processes and operational arrangements for specific actors at times of need. Based on scenarios of possible emergency conditions or hazardous events, it allows key actors to envision, anticipate and solve problems that can arise during disasters. Contingency planning is an important part of overall preparedness. Contingency plans need to be regularly updated and exercised (UNGA 2016).

Control

The application of authority, combined with the capability to manage resources, in order to achieve defined objectives.
Note: Refers to the overall direction of the activities, agencies or individuals concerned and operates horizontally across all agencies/organizations, functions and individuals (WHO 2015a).

Cooperating agency

An agency supplying assistance other than direct operational or support functions or resources to the incident management effort (WHO 2015a).

Coordination

1. Management processes to ensure integration (unity) of effort. Coordination relates primarily to resources, and operates vertically (within an organization) as a function of the authority to command, and horizontally (across organizations) as a function of the authority to control (WHO 2015a).
2. Way in which different organizations (public or private) or parts of the same organization work or act together in order to achieve a common objective (ISO 22300:2018, ISO 22320:2011).

Coordination centre

▷ See 'emergency coordination centre'.

Coping capacity

The ability of people, organizations and systems using available skills and resources, to manage adverse conditions, risk or disasters.
Note: The capacity to cope requires continuing awareness, resources and good management, both in normal times as well as during disasters or adverse conditions. Coping capacities contribute to the reduction of disaster risks (UNGA 2016).

Crisis

1. An unstable or crucial time or state of affairs in which a decisive change is impending, especially one where a highly undesirable outcome is distinctly possible (WHO 2015b).
2. Unstable condition involving an impending abrupt or significant change that requires urgent attention and action to protect life, assets, property or the environment (ISO 22300:2018).

Critical infrastructure

The physical structures, facilities, networks and other assets which provide services that are essential to the social and economic functioning of a community or society (UNGA 2016).

Critical systems (in hospitals)

Within a hospital, critical systems include the electrical, telecommunications, water supply, fire protection, waste management, fuel storage and medical gases and heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) systems.
Note: The failure or disruption of critical systems can stop or impede the functioning of the hospitals (WHO 2015a).

DALYs

▷ See 'disability-adjusted life years'.

Damage (event, emergency, disaster)

Occurs during and immediately after the [hazardous event or] disaster.
Note: This is usually measured in physical units (e.g. square meters of housing, kilometres of roads, etc.), and describes the total or partial destruction of physical assets, the disruption of basic services and damages to sources of livelihood in the affected area (UNGA 2016).

Damage, disaster

▷ See 'disaster damage'.

Dead

Persons confirmed as dead and persons missing and presumed dead (CRED 2009).

▷ See 'casualty', 'mortality'.

Debrief

A critical examination of a completed operation or exercise in order to evaluate actions (WHO 2015a).

▷ See also 'cold debrief', 'hot debrief'.

Decontamination

A procedure whereby health measures are taken to eliminate an infectious or toxic agent or matter on a human or animal body surface, in or on a product prepared for consumption or on other inanimate objects, including conveyances that may constitute a public health risk (WHO 2010a).

Direct economic loss

The monetary value of total or partial destruction of physical assets existing in the affected area.

Note: [For the purposes of Sendai Framework reporting], direct economic loss is nearly equivalent to physical damage. Direct economic losses usually happen during the event or within the first few hours after the event and are often assessed soon after the event to estimate recovery cost and claim insurance payments. These are tangible and relatively easy to measure. Examples of physical assets that are the basis for calculating direct economic loss include homes, schools, hospitals, commercial and governmental buildings, transport, energy, telecommunications infrastructures and other infrastructure; business assets and industrial plants; and production such as crops, livestock and production infrastructure. They may also encompass environmental assets and cultural heritage (UNGA 2016).

Directly affected

Those who have suffered injury, illness or other health effects; who were evacuated, displaced, relocated or have suffered direct damage to their livelihoods, economic, physical, social, cultural and environmental assets (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'affected'.

Disability

A limitation in a functional domain that arises from the interaction between a person's intrinsic capacity, and environmental and personal factors (WHO 2011).

Note: Disability – or difficulties in functioning – is neither purely biological or purely social. Disability can occur at three levels: impairments, activity limitations, and participation restrictions. An impairment is a problem in body function or structure; an activity limitation is a difficulty encountered by an individual in executing a task or action; while a participation restriction is a problem experienced by an individual in involvement in life situations (WHO 2019a).

▷ See 'people with disability'.

Disability-adjusted life years (DALYs)

Population metric of life years lost to disease due to both morbidity and mortality (WHO 2016b).

Disaster

A serious disruption of the functioning of a community or a society at any scale due to hazardous events interacting with conditions of exposure, vulnerability and capacity, leading to one or more of the following: human, material, economic and environmental losses and impacts.

Note: The effect of the disaster may be immediate and localized, but is often widespread and can last for a long period of time. The effect may test or exceed the capacity of a community or society to cope using its own resources, and therefore may require assistance from external sources, which could include neighbouring jurisdictions, or those at the national or international levels (UNGA 2016).

▷ See ‘emergency’, ‘slow-onset disaster’, ‘sudden-onset disaster’.

Disaster impact

The total effect, including negative effects (e.g. economic losses) and positive effects (e.g. economic gains), of a hazardous event or a disaster. Note: The term includes economic, human and environmental impacts, and may include death, injuries, disease and other negative effects on human physical, mental and social well-being (UNGA 2016).

Synonyms: ‘event impact’, ‘emergency impact’.

▷ See ‘consequence’, ‘impact’.

Disaster loss database

A set of systematically collected records about [hazardous event or] disaster occurrence, damages, losses and impacts, compliant with the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030 monitoring minimum requirements (UNGA 2016).

Disaster management

The organization, planning and application of measures preparing for, responding to and recovering from disasters.

Note: Disaster management may not completely avert or eliminate the threats; it focuses on creating and implementing preparedness and other plans to decrease the impact of disasters and “build back better. Failure to create and apply a plan could lead to damage to life, assets and lost revenue (UNGA 2016).

▷ See ‘emergency management’.

Disaster response

Actions taken directly before, during or immediately after a disaster in order to save lives, reduce health impacts, ensure public safety and meet the basic subsistence needs of the people affected (UNGA 2016).

Synonym: ‘emergency response’.

▷ See ‘response’.

Disaster risk

The potential loss of life, injury, or destroyed or damaged assets which could occur to a system, society or a community in a specific period of time, determined probabilistically as a function of hazard, exposure, vulnerability and capacity.

Note: The definition of disaster risk reflects the concept of hazardous events and disasters as the outcome of continuously present conditions of risk. Disaster risk comprises different types of potential losses which are often difficult to quantify. Nevertheless, with knowledge of the prevailing hazards and the patterns of population and socioeconomic development, disaster risks can be assessed and mapped, in broad terms at least. It is important to consider the social and economic contexts in which disaster risks occur and that people do not necessarily share the same perceptions of risk and their underlying risk factors (UNGA 2016). This definition can apply to “risk” associated with hazardous events, emergencies and disasters.

▷ See ‘risk’, ‘extensive disaster risk’, ‘intensive disaster risk’, ‘underlying disaster risk drivers’.

Disaster risk assessment

A qualitative or quantitative approach to determine the nature and extent of disaster risk by analysing potential hazards and evaluating existing conditions of exposure and vulnerability [and capacity] that together could harm people, property, services, livelihoods and the environment on which they depend.

Note: Disaster risk assessments include: the identification of hazards; a review of the technical characteristics of hazards such as their location, intensity, frequency and probability; the analysis of exposure and vulnerability, including the physical, social, health, environmental and economic dimensions; and the evaluation of the effectiveness of prevailing and alternative coping capacities with respect to likely risk scenarios (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'emergency risk assessment'.

Disaster risk drivers, underlying

▷ See ‘underlying disaster risk drivers’.

Disaster risk governance

The system of institutions, mechanisms, policy and legal frameworks and other arrangements to guide, coordinate and oversee disaster risk reduction and related areas of policy.

Note: Good governance needs to be transparent, inclusive, collective and efficient to reduce existing disaster risks and avoid creating new ones (UNGA 2016).

Disaster risk information

Comprehensive information on all dimensions of disaster risk, including hazards, exposure, vulnerability and capacity, related to persons, communities, organizations and countries and their assets.

Note: Disaster risk information includes all studies, information and mapping required to understand the disaster risk drivers and underlying risk factors (UNGA 2016).

Disaster risk management

The application of disaster risk reduction policies and strategies to prevent new disaster risk, reduce existing disaster risk and manage residual risk, contributing to the strengthening of resilience and reduction of disaster losses (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'community-based disaster risk management', 'disaster risk governance', 'disaster risk information', 'disaster risk management plans', 'health emergency and disaster risk management'.

Disaster risk management plans

[Plans that] set out the goals and specific objectives for reducing disaster risks together with related actions to accomplish these objectives.

Note: They should be guided by the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030 [and other relevant global, regional and national frameworks.] They should be considered and coordinated within relevant development plans, resource allocations and programme activities. National-level plans need to be specific to each level of administrative responsibility and adapted to the different social and geographical circumstances that are present. The time frame and responsibilities for implementation and the sources of funding should be specified in the plan. Linkages to sustainable development and climate change adaptation plans should be made where possible (UNGA 2016).

Disaster risk management, community-based

▷ See 'community-based disaster risk management'.

Disaster risk reduction

[Activities] aimed at preventing new and reducing existing disaster risk and managing residual risk, all of which contribute to strengthening resilience and therefore to the achievement of sustainable development.

Note: Disaster risk reduction is the policy objective of disaster risk management, and its goals and objectives are defined in disaster risk reduction strategies and plans (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'disaster risk reduction strategies and policies'.

Disaster risk reduction strategies and policies

Strategies and policies [that] define goals and objectives across different timescales and with concrete targets, indicators and timeframes.

Note: In line with the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030, these should be aimed at preventing the creation of disaster risk, the reduction of existing risk and the strengthening of economic, social, health and environmental resilience (UNGA 2016).

Disease

An illness or medical condition, irrespective of origin or source, that presents or could present significant harm to human (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Disease prevention

Disease prevention covers measures not only to prevent the occurrence of disease, such as risk factor reduction, but also to arrest its progress and reduce its consequences once established (WHO 1998).

Disinsection

The procedure whereby health measures are taken to control or kill the insect vectors of human diseases present in baggage, cargo, containers, conveyances, goods and postal parcels (WHO 2010a).

Drill

A coordinated, supervised exercise activity, normally used to test a single specific operation or function in a repeated fashion.

Note: The purpose of a drill is to practise specific skills, operations or functions, as an individual or in a team. The drill practices and perfects one small part of the response plan, and should be as realistic as possible, employing any equipment or apparatus necessary to carry out the function being drilled (WHO 2009, WHO 2017c).

Early warning system

1. An integrated system of hazard monitoring, forecasting and prediction, disaster risk assessment, communication and preparedness activities systems and processes that enables individuals, communities, governments, businesses and others to take timely action to reduce disaster risks in advance of hazardous events.

Note: Effective "end-to-end" and "people-centred" early warning systems may include four interrelated key elements: (1) disaster risk knowledge based on the systematic collection of data and disaster risk assessments; (2) detection, monitoring, analysis and forecasting of the hazards and possible consequences; (3) dissemination and communication, by an official source, of authoritative, timely, accurate and actionable warnings and associated information on likelihood and impact; and (4) preparedness at all levels to respond to the warnings received. These four interrelated components need to be coordinated within and across sectors and multiple levels for the system to work effectively and to include a feedback mechanism for continuous improvement. Failure in one component or a lack of coordination across them could lead to the failure of the whole system (UNGA 2016).

2. A specific procedure in disease surveillance to detect any abnormal occurrence or departure from the usual or normally observed frequency of phenomena as early as possible (WHO 2018a).

▷ See 'multi-hazard early warning systems'.

Early warning and response (EWAR)

The organized mechanism to detect as early as possible any abnormal occurrence or any divergence from the usual or normally observed frequency of phenomena.

Note: This definition is often used on the context of biological hazards (WHO 2010a).

Economic loss

Total economic impact that consists of direct economic loss and indirect economic loss (UNGA 2016).

▷ See also 'economic loss, direct' and 'economic loss, indirect'.

El Niño-southern oscillation (ENSO)

[An] oceanic event identified with a basin-wide warming of the tropical Pacific Ocean east of the dateline, associated with a fluctuation of a global-scale tropical and subtropical surface pressure pattern and coupled with an atmosphere-ocean phenomenon, with preferred time scales of 2 to about 7 years.

Note: An ENSO event has a great impact on the wind, sea surface temperature, and precipitation patterns in the tropical Pacific. ENSO has climatic effects throughout the Pacific region and in many other parts of the world. The warm phase of ENSO is called El Niño and the cold phase is called La Niña (IPCC 2012).

Emergency

A type of event or imminent threat that produces or has the potential to produce a range of consequences, and which requires coordinated action, usually urgent and often non-routine.

Note: 'emergency', is sometimes used interchangeably with the term 'disaster' as, for example, in the context of biological and technological hazards or health emergencies, which, however, can also relate to hazardous events that do not result in the serious disruption of the functioning of a community or society. Emergencies have effects that may be considered on a continuum from local emergencies with limited consequences to wide area disasters with catastrophic consequences. 'Incidents' or 'events' are often referred to as 'emergencies', with the terms used interchangeably, but not all incidents or events are emergencies (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'complex emergency', 'disaster', 'health emergency', 'humanitarian emergency', 'protracted emergency'.

Emergency (risk) management agency or organization

An organization, often a government agency, specifically mandated to provide a single point of accountability for the coordination of multi-sectoral and interagency emergency activities, including risk assessment, prevention, mitigation, preparedness, response and recovery activities within a particular area (WHO 2015a).

Synonym: 'disaster (risk) management organization'.

Emergency coordination centre

A type of EOC that has no direct, tactical or operational function, but which serves as a point of control and coordination for the strategic allocation of resources and management of policy issues. (WHO 2015a)

Emergency management cycle

▷ See 'comprehensive approach'.

Emergency management

1. Sometimes [used] interchangeably, with the term disaster management, particularly in the context of biological and technological hazards and for health emergencies.

Note: While there is a large degree of overlap, an emergency can also relate to hazardous events that do not result in the serious disruption of the functioning of a community or society (UNGA 2016).

2. Overall approach to preventing emergencies and managing those that occur.

Note: In general, emergency management utilizes a risk-management approach to prevention, preparedness, response and recovery before, during and after potentially destabilizing and/or disruptive events (ISO 22320:2011).

▷ See 'disaster management'.

Emergency medical team (EMT)

Groups of health professionals (doctors, nurses, paramedics, etc.) that treat patients affected by an emergency or disaster."

Note: They come from government, charities (NGOs), militaries and international organizations such as the International Red Cross/Red Crescent movement. They work to comply with the classification and minimum standards set by WHO and its partners, and come trained and self-sufficient so as not to burden the national system (WHO 2017a).

Emergency operations centre (EOC)

The facility from which a jurisdiction or agency coordinates its response to major emergencies/ disasters (WHO 2015b).

Emergency response plan

A document that describes how an agency or organization will manage its responses to emergencies of various types.

Note: It provides a description of the objectives, policy and concept of operations for the response to an emergency; and the structure, authorities and responsibilities for a systematic, co-ordinated and effective response. In this context, emergency plans are agency or jurisdiction-specific, and detail the resources, capacities and capabilities that the jurisdiction, agency or organization will employ in its response (WHO 2017a).

Engagement, community

▷ See 'community engagement'.

Environmental hazards

1. [Hazards that] may include chemical, natural and biological hazards. They can be created by environmental degradation or physical or chemical pollution in the air, water and soil.

Note: Many of the processes and phenomena that fall into this category may be termed drivers of hazard and risk rather than hazards in themselves, such as soil degradation, deforestation, loss of biodiversity, salinization and sea-level rise (UNGA 2016).

2. A chemical or physical agent capable of causing harm to the ecosystem or natural resources (WHO 2009).

▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of Hazards.

Environmental health

1. Comprises those aspects of human health, including quality of life, that are determined by physical, chemical, biological, social, and psychosocial factors in the environment.

Note: Environmental health also refers to the theory and practice of assessing, correcting, controlling, and preventing those factors in the environment that can potentially affect adversely the health of present and future generations (WHO 2009).

Epidemic

1. The occurrence in a community or region of cases of an illness, specific health-related behaviour, or other health-related events clearly in excess of normal expectancy.

Note: The community or region and the period in which the cases occur are specified precisely. The number of cases indicating the presence of an epidemic varies according to the agent, size, and type of population exposed, previous experience or lack of exposure to the disease, and time and place of occurrence (WHO 1999).

2. The occurrence of a number of cases of a disease that is unusually large or unexpected for a given place and time (Connolly M & WHO 2005).

Epidemic intelligence

The systematic collection, analysis and communication of any information to detect, verify, assess and investigate events and health risks with an early warning objective (WHO 2014).

Epidemic threshold

The critical number or density of susceptible hosts required for an epidemic to occur. The epidemic threshold is used to confirm the emergence of an epidemic so as to step-up appropriate control measures (WHO 2019i).

Epidemiology

The study of the distribution and determinants of health-related states or events in populations and the application of this study to control health problems (WHO 2009).

Evacuation

Moving people and assets temporarily to safer places before, during or after the occurrence of a hazardous event in order to protect them.

Note: Evacuation plans refer to the arrangements established in advance to enable the moving of people and assets temporarily to safer places before, during or after the occurrence of a hazardous event. Evacuation plans may include plans for return of evacuees and options to shelter in place (UNGA 2016).

Event-based surveillance

1. The organized collection, monitoring, assessment and interpretation of mainly unstructured ad hoc information regarding health events or risks, which may represent an acute risk to human health.

Note: Event-based surveillance is a functional component of early warning, alert and response. This information can be rumours and other ad hoc reports transmitted through formal channels (i.e. established routine reporting systems) and informal channels (i.e. the media, health workers and reports from NGOs), including events related to the occurrence of disease in humans and events related to potential human exposure (WHO 2010a, WHO 2014).

▷ See 'surveillance'.

Event

▷ See 'hazardous event', 'public health event'.

Exercise

1. A form of practice, training, monitoring or evaluation of capabilities involving the description or simulation of an emergency, to which a described or simulated response is made (WHO 2017c).

2. Process to train for, assess, practise and improve performance in an organization (ISO 22300:2018).

Note: Exercises help determine a valid indication of future system performance under certain conditions, and to identify potential system improvements (WHO 2015b).

Exercise project

A standard approach for building and implementing any exercise consisting of three phases: pre-exercise planning, material development and set-up; exercise conduct; and post-exercise reporting and handover phase.

Note: An exercise programme consists of a progression of increasingly complex exercises designed to increase understanding of, practice, and evaluate different emergency management capabilities (WHO 2017c, WHO 2015a).

Exposure

1. The situation of people, infrastructure, housing, production capacities and other tangible assets located in hazard prone areas.

Note: Measures of exposure can include the number of people or types of assets in an area. These can be combined with the specific vulnerability and capacity of the exposed elements to any particular hazard to estimate the quantitative risks associated with that hazard in the area of interest (UNGA 2016).

2. Contact of a chemical, physical or biological agent with the outer boundary of an organism (e.g. through inhalation, ingestion or dermal [skin] contact) (WHO 2016b).

Exposure assessment or analysis

▷ See 'risk assessment'.

Exposure route

The pathway or route by which a person is exposed to a hazard (WHO 2016b).

Extensive disaster risk

The risk of low-severity, high-frequency hazardous events and disasters, mainly but not exclusively associated with highly localized hazards.

Note: Extensive disaster risk is usually high where communities are exposed to, and vulnerable to, recurring localized floods, landslides, storms or drought. Extensive disaster risk is often exacerbated by poverty, urbanization and environmental degradation (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'disaster risk', 'intensive disaster risk'.

EWAR

▷ See 'early warning and response'.

Field exercise

▷ See 'full-scale exercise'.

Food safety

1. Assurance that food will not cause harm to the consumer when it is prepared and/or eaten according to its intended use (FAO & WHO 2016).

2. Handling, storing and preparing food to prevent infection and help to make sure that our food keeps enough nutrients for us to have a healthy diet (FAO 2004).

Food insecurity

A situation that exists when people lack secure access to sufficient amounts of safe and nutritious food for normal growth and development and an active and healthy life.

Note: It may be caused by the unavailability of food, insufficient purchasing power, inappropriate distribution, or inadequate use of food at the household level. Food insecurity, poor conditions of health and sanitation, and inappropriate care and feeding practices are the major causes of poor nutritional status. Food insecurity may be chronic, seasonal or transitory (FAO 2000).

Food security

A situation that exists when all people, at all times, have physical, social and economic access to sufficient, safe and nutritious food that meets their dietary needs and food preferences for an active and healthy life (FAO 2000).

Fragile states

States that lack either the capacity, or the will (or both), to deliver core state functions for the majority of the people, including the poor.

Note: The most important functions of the state for poverty reduction are territorial control, safety and security, capacity to manage public resources, delivery of basic services, and the ability to protect and support the ways in which the poorest people sustain themselves (WHO 2011).

Full-scale exercise (FSX)

An exercise that simulates a real event as closely as possible and is designed to evaluate the operational capability of emergency management systems in a highly stressful environment, simulating actual response conditions, including the mobilization and movement of emergency personnel, equipment and resources.

Note: The purpose of a full-scale exercise is to test/evaluate most of the functions of an emergency plan in the most realistic manner possible. Ideally, the full-scale exercise should test and evaluate most functions of the emergency management plan or operational plan. Differing from the functional exercise (FX), a full-scale exercise typically involves multiple agencies and participants physically deployed in a field location (WHO 2017c).

Synonym: 'field exercise'.

Functional exercise (FX)

A fully-simulated, interactive exercise that tests the capability of an organization to respond to a simulated event. The exercise tests multiple functions of the organization's operational plan.

Note: The purpose of an FX is to test or validate the response capability of specific functions or departments in an organization to a situation in a time-pressured, realistic situation. A functional exercise focuses on the coordination, integration, and interaction of an organization's policies, procedures, roles and responsibilities before, during, or after the simulated event (WHO 2017c).

Gender-based violence

▷ See 'sexual and gender-based violence.'

Geological or geophysical hazards

[Hazards that] originate from internal earth processes. Examples are earthquakes, volcanic activity and emissions, and related geophysical processes such as mass movements, landslides, rockslides, surface collapses and debris or mud flows.

Note: Hydrometeorological factors are important contributors to some of these processes. Tsunamis are difficult to categorize: although they are triggered by undersea earthquakes and other geological events, they essentially become an oceanic process that is manifested as a coastal water-related hazard (UNGA 2016).

▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of Hazards.

Global health security

The activities required, both proactive and reactive, to minimize vulnerability to acute public health events that endanger the collective health of populations living across geographical regions and international boundaries (WHO 2007b).

Hazard

1. A process, phenomenon or human activity that may cause loss of life, injury or other health impacts, property damage, social and economic disruption or environmental degradation.

Note: This may include the latent property or the inherent capability of an agent or substance which makes it capable of causing adverse effects to people or the environment under conditions of exposure (UNGA 2016, WHO 2009).

2. Source of potential harm (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'anthropogenic hazard', 'biological hazard', 'chemical hazard', 'environmental hazard', 'geological or geophysical hazard', 'hydrometeorological hazard', 'natural hazard', 'socionatural hazard', 'technological hazard', 'zoonoses'.

Hazard assessment or analysis

▷ See 'risk assessment'.

Hazardous event

1. The manifestation of a hazard in a particular place during a particular period of time.

Note: Severe hazardous events can lead to a disaster as a result of the combination of hazard occurrence and other risk factors (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'public health event'.

Hazard monitoring function

Activities to obtain evidence-based information on hazards in a defined area used to make decisions about the need for public warning (ISO 22300:2018).

Health

A state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity (WHO 1948).

Health care facility

Hospitals of all sizes and types; specialized medical services; primary health care clinics; general practitioner's surgery, etc. (WHO 2007).

Health care-associated infection

An infection occurring in a patient during the process of care in a hospital or other health care facility, which was not present or incubating at the time of admission.

Note: Health care-associated infections can also appear after discharge. They represent the most frequent adverse event associated with patient care (WHO 2016).

Synonym: 'nosocomial infection'.

Health cluster

A mechanism for coordinated assessments, joint analyses, the development of agreed overall priorities, objectives and a health crisis response strategy, and the monitoring and evaluation of the implementation and impact of that strategy (WHO 2009b).

Health emergency

A type of event or imminent threat that produces or has the potential to produce a range of health consequences, and which requires coordinated action, usually urgent and often non-routine.

Note: A health emergency may pose a substantial risk of significant morbidity or mortality in a community (WHO 2015a).

▷ See 'public health event', 'public health emergency of international concern', 'mass casualty incident'.

Health emergency and disaster risk management

The systematic analysis and management of health risks, posed by actual or potential hazardous events, including emergencies and disasters, through a combination of hazard, exposure and vulnerability reduction to prevent and mitigate risks, preparedness, response, and recovery (WHO 2017b).

▷ See 'disaster risk management'.

Health impact assessment

1. The estimation of the effects of any specific action (plans, policies or programmes) in any given environment on the health of a defined population (WHO 2016b).

Note: Recommendations are produced for decisionmakers and stakeholders, with the aim of maximizing the proposal's positive health effects and minimizing the negative health effects (WHO 2009).

Health outcome

A change in the health status of an individual, group or population which is attributable to a planned intervention or series of interventions (WHO 1998).

Health policy

A general statement of understanding to guide decision making that results from an agreement or consensus among relevant partners on the issues to be addressed and on the approaches or strategies to deal with them (WHO 2011).

▷ See 'health promotion', 'One Health'.

Health promotion

The process of enabling people to increase control over, and to improve their health.

Note: Health promotion represents a comprehensive social and political process, it not only embraces actions directed at strengthening the skills and capabilities of individuals, but also action directed towards changing social, environmental and economic conditions so as to alleviate their impact on public and individual health (WHO 1998).

Health sector

Organized public and private health services (including health promotion, disease prevention, diagnostic, treatment and care services), the policies and activities of health departments and ministries, health related nongovernment organizations and community groups, and professional associations (WHO 1998).

Health system

The people, institutions and resources, arranged together in accordance with established policies, to improve the health of the population they serve, while responding to people's legitimate expectations and protecting them against the cost of ill-health through a variety of activities whose primary intent is to improve health (WHO 2011).

Hot debrief

A debriefing session held immediately after an exercise or incident to identify the strengths and weaknesses of plans, policies and procedures.

Note: In a hot debrief, participants and the exercise management team provide immediate feedback or a debriefing event. Individuals share perspectives on strengths, weaknesses, and areas for improvement which are incorporated in the exercise report (WHO 2015a, WHO 2017c).

Synonym: 'hot wash'.

▷ See 'debrief', 'cold debrief'.

Humanitarian civil-military coordination

Dialogue and interaction between civilian and military actors in humanitarian emergencies that is necessary to protect and promote humanitarian principles, avoid competition, minimize inconsistency, and when appropriate pursue common goals. Basic strategies range from coexistence to cooperation.

Note: Coordination is a shared responsibility facilitated by liaison and common training. This definition could be extended to interaction between civilian and military actors at national and local levels for all types of emergencies (OCHA 2019).

Human-induced hazards

▷ See 'anthropogenic hazards'.

Hydrometeorological hazards

Hazards of atmospheric, hydrological or oceanographic origin.

Note: Examples are tropical cyclones (also known as typhoons and hurricanes), floods (including flash floods), drought, heatwaves and cold spells and coastal storm surges. Hydrometeorological conditions may also be a factor in other hazards such as landslides, wildland fires, locust plagues, epidemics and in the transport and dispersal of toxic substances and volcanic eruption material (UNGA 2016).

▷ See Annex 2 WHO Classification of Hazards.

Hygiene

The conditions and practices that help maintain health and prevent spread of disease including handwashing, menstrual hygiene management and food hygiene (WHO & UN Water 2019).

Impact

Evaluated consequence of a particular outcome (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'consequence', 'disaster damage', 'disaster impact', 'disaster loss database'.

Incidence

The number of instances (rate of occurrence) of illness commencing, or of persons falling ill during a given period in a specified population, thus conveying information about the risk of contracting a disease (based on WHO 2013).

▷ See 'prevalence'.

Incident

1. An action, event or phenomenon which may cause loss of life or injury, property damage, social and economic disruption, and/or environmental degradation (WHO 2015b).
2. [Event or] situation that can be, or could lead to, a disruption, loss, emergency or crisis (ISO 22300:2018).

Incident action plan

▷ See 'action plan'.

Incident, chemical

▷ See 'chemical incident'.

Incident command system

▷ See 'incident management system'.

Incident management system

System that defines the roles and responsibilities of personnel and the operating procedures to be used in the management of incidents (ISO 22300:2018).

Indicator-based surveillance (IBS)

1. The systematic (regular) collection, monitoring, analysis and interpretation of structured data, i.e. of indicators produced by a number of well-identified, mostly health-based, formal sources (WHO 2014).
2. The routine reporting of cases of disease, including notifiable diseases surveillance systems, sentinel surveillance, laboratory-based surveillance, etc.
Note: This routine reporting is commonly health-care facility based, with reporting done on a weekly or monthly basis (WHO 2010a).

Indirect economic loss

A decline in economic value added as a consequence of direct economic loss and/or human and environmental impacts. Indirect economic loss includes microeconomic impacts (e.g. revenue declines owing to business interruption), mesoeconomic impacts (e.g. revenue declines owing to impacts on natural assets, interruptions to supply chains or temporary unemployment) and macroeconomic impacts (e.g. price increases, increases in government debt, negative impact on stock market prices and decline in GDP).
Note: Indirect losses can occur inside or outside of the hazard area and often have a time lag. As a result, they may be intangible or difficult to measure (UNGA 2016).

Indirectly affected

People who have suffered consequences, other than or in addition to direct effects, over time, due to disruption or changes in economy, critical infrastructure, basic services, commerce or work, or social, health and psychological consequences (UNGA 2016).
▷ See 'affected'.

Infection

The entry and development or multiplication of an infectious agent in the body of humans and animals that may constitute a public health risk (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Infection control

▷ See 'infection prevention & control'.

Infection prevention & control

1. A practical and proven set of organizational and technical approaches and measures to prevent the spread of avoidable infections and antimicrobial resistance within both community and health care settings (WHO 2019c).
2. The practical discipline concerned with preventing health care-associated infection.
Note: The purpose of infection prevention and control in health care is as follows: to prevent the occurrence of health care-associated infections in patients, health care workers, visitors and other persons associated with health care settings; to prepare health care facilities for the early detection and management of epidemics and to organize a prompt and effective response; to contribute to a coordinated response to control community-acquired infectious diseases, endemic or epidemic, that may be "amplified" via health care; to contribute to preventing the emergence of antimicrobial resistance and/or dissemination of resistant strains of microorganisms; and to minimize the environmental impact of these infections or their management (WHO 2014c).

Injury

The physical or physiological bodily harm resulting from interaction of the body with energy (mechanical, thermal, electrical, chemical or radiant, or due to extreme pressure) in an amount, or at a rate of transfer, that exceeds physical or physiological tolerance.

Note: Injury can also result from lack of vital elements, such as oxygen. Poisoning by and toxic effects of substances are included, as is damage of or due to implanted devices. Maltreatment syndromes are included even if physical or physiological bodily harm has not been reported. Injury usually has rapid onset in response to a well-defined event (e.g. a car crash, striking the ground after falling, drinking a strongly alkaline liquid, an overdose of a medication, a burn sustained during a surgical procedure). These events are often referred to as external causes of injury. The injurious energy can, however, originate from the injured person and/or from his or her immediate environment (e.g. a person running on a hot day sustains heat exhaustion), and injury can be caused by the injured person (i.e. intentional self-harm) (WHO 2018b).

Intensive disaster risk

The risk of high-severity, mid- to low-frequency disasters, mainly associated with major hazards.

Note: Intensive disaster risk is mainly a characteristic of large cities or densely populated areas that are not only exposed to intense hazards such as strong earthquakes, active volcanoes, heavy floods, tsunamis or major storms but also have high levels of vulnerability to these hazards (UNGA 2016).

Interested party

Person or organization that can affect, be affected by, or perceive itself to be affected by a decision or activity (ISO 22300:2018).

Synonym: 'stakeholder'.

International Health Regulations (IHR) (2005)

[Regulations] designed to prevent the international spread of disease adopted by the Fifty-eighth World Health Assembly on 23 May 2005 and which entered into force on 15 June 2007. The purpose and scope of the IHR (2005) are to prevent, protect against, control and provide a public health response to the international spread of disease in ways that are commensurate with and restricted to public health risks and which avoid unnecessary interference with international traffic and trade (WHO 2016).

Internally displaced persons (IDPs)

Persons or groups of persons who have been forced or obliged to flee or to leave their homes or places of habitual residence, in particular as a result of, or in order to, avoid the effects of armed conflicts, situations of generalized violence, violations of human rights or natural or human-made disasters, and who have not crossed an internationally recognized State border (UNHCR 2011).

Interoperability

Ability of diverse systems and organizations to work together (ISO 22300:2018).

Intersectoral collaboration

▷ See 'collaboration, intersectoral'.

Isolation

Separation of ill or contaminated persons or affected baggage, containers, conveyances, goods or postal parcels from others in such a manner as to prevent the spread of infection or contamination (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Jurisdiction

An organization (level of government or designated agency) with the authority and responsibility to provide particular functions and services within a defined area (WHO 2015a).

Lead agency

Agency or sector responsible for managing specific types of emergencies (WHO 2015a).

Leadership

The process of engaging others and fostering constructive processes for working together, and sustaining collaborative interaction to guide activities and achieve objectives (WHO 2015a).

Lessons learned

Identified issues for which remedial actions may be implemented, in order to improve performance (WHO 2015a).

Level of event

A structured process, internal to an organization, that evaluates the extent, complexity and probable duration of an incident with reference to the response resources that will be required (WHO 2017a).

Level of risk

Magnitude of a risk or combination of risks, expressed in terms the combination of consequences and their likelihood (ISO 31000:2009).

Likelihood

Chance of something happening (ISO 31000:2018).

▷ See 'probability.'

Logistics

The aspect of emergency (risk) management that deals with the procurement, distribution, maintenance, replacement and repatriation of material and human resources, including the provision of support infrastructure and services to response staff (WHO 2015a).

Malnutrition

Deficiencies, excesses or imbalances in a person's intake of energy and/or nutrients (WHO 2008).

▷ See 'nutrition'.

Mass casualty incident

An event which generates more patients at one time than locally available resources can manage using routine procedures.

Note: It requires exceptional emergency arrangements and additional or extraordinary assistance (WHO 2007).

Mass casualty management system

A coherent and interrelated set of established procedures, policies, and plans that contribute to the shared objectives of optimizing the baseline capacity to deal with patient populations expected in a mass casualty incident, and efficiently increasing this capacity during the response to a mass casualty incident (WHO 2007).

Mass gathering

An organized or unplanned event can be classified as a mass gathering if the number of people attending is sufficient to strain the planning and response resources of the community, State or nation hosting the event.

Note: A gathering of persons usually defined as more than a specified number of persons (which may be as few as 1,000 persons although much of the available literature describes gatherings exceeding 25,000 persons) at a specific location for a specific purpose (a social function, large public event or sports competition) for a defined period of time (WHO 2015b).

Mental health and psychosocial support

Any type of local or outside support that aims to protect or promote psychosocial wellbeing and/or prevent or treat mental disorder.

Note: Traditionally, mental health care has been used by health professionals to describe specialized interventions to treat individuals diagnosed with mental health conditions. Psychosocial support and psychosocial interventions are terms used by a broader range of workers in the emergency response field to refer to activities that support both the psychological and social health of individuals and communities as a whole rather than focusing specifically on treating mental health conditions (IASC 2007).

Missing person

1. A person whose whereabouts are unknown to his/her relatives and/or who, on the basis of reliable information, has been reported missing in accordance with the national legislation in connection with an international or non-international armed conflict, a situation of internal violence or disturbances, natural catastrophes or any other situation that may require the intervention of a competent State authority (ICRC 2009).

2. Persons whose status during or after an emergency is not known (CRED 2009).

Synonym: `missing`.

▷ See 'casualty'.

Mitigation

The lessening or limitation of the adverse impacts of hazards and related disasters.

Note: The adverse impacts of hazards, in particular natural hazards, often cannot be prevented fully, but their scale or severity can be substantially lessened by various strategies and actions. Mitigation measures include engineering techniques and hazard-resistant construction as well as improved environmental and social policies and public awareness. It should be noted that, in climate change policy, "mitigation" is defined differently, and is the term used for the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions that are the source of climate change (UNGA 2016).

Monitoring

In the context of surveillance and response refers to the routine and continuous tracking of the implementation of planned surveillance activities (monitoring the implementation of the plan of action) and of the overall performance of surveillance and response systems (WHO 2014).

Morbidity

The relative incidence of a particular disease. In common clinical usage, any disease state, including diagnosis and complications, is referred to as morbidity (WHO 2009).

Morbidity rate

The rate of disease or proportion of diseased people in a population (WHO 2009).

Mortality

The number of deaths occurring in a given period in a specified population.

Note: Mortality can be expressed as an absolute number of deaths per year or as a rate per 100,000 persons per year (WHO & IARC 2016).

Mortality ratio

The ratio of deaths in an area to the population of that area, within a particular period of time.

Note: The death rate in a population or locality (WHO 2009).

Multi-agency coordination centre

A form of large-scale, high-level multiagency and multi-jurisdictional coordination among affected agencies that is removed from routine event management activities.

Note: This is the highest level of strategic coordination and involves the executive and policy levels of the participating agencies as well as political representatives from affected and participating jurisdictions (WHO 2015a).

Multi-hazard

The selection of multiple major hazards that the country faces, and the specific contexts where hazardous events may occur simultaneously, cascadingly or cumulatively over time, and taking into account the potential interrelated effects (UNGA 2016).

Multi-hazard early warning systems

Systems [that] address several hazards and/or impacts of similar or different type in contexts where hazardous events may occur alone, simultaneously, cascadingly or cumulatively over time, and taking into account the potential interrelated effects.

Note: A multi-hazard early warning system with the ability to warn of one or more hazards increases the efficiency and consistency of warnings through coordinated and compatible mechanisms and capacities, involving multiple disciplines for updated and accurate hazards identification and monitoring for multiple hazards (UNGA 2016).

Mutual aid agreement

Pre-arranged understanding between two or more entities to render assistance to each other (ISO 22300:2018).

Natech

A chemical accident, including spills of oil and oil products, triggered by a natural hazard or natural disaster (such as extreme temperatures, high winds, floods, storms, earthquakes, or wildfires) (OECD 2015).

National disaster management agency (or authority)

The national government agency that is responsible for coordinating disaster or emergency management policy and practice.

Note: There is no common definition for this agency or organization as the name and scope of functions varies across countries and is usually defined by national legislation or policies.

Synonyms: 'national disaster management organization', 'national emergency management agency'.

National IHR Focal Point

The national centre, designated by each State Party, which shall be accessible at all times for communications with WHO IHR Contact Points under these Regulations [IHR] (WHO 2016).

National platform for disaster risk reduction

A generic term for national mechanisms for coordination and policy guidance on disaster risk reduction that are multisectoral and interdisciplinary in nature, with public, private and civil society participation involving all concerned entities within a country.

Note: Effective government coordination forums are composed of relevant stakeholders at national and local levels and have a designated national focal point. For such mechanisms to have a strong foundation in national institutional frameworks, further key elements and responsibilities should be established through laws, regulations, standards and procedures, including: clearly assigned responsibilities and authority; building awareness and knowledge of disaster risk through the sharing and dissemination of non-sensitive disaster risk information and data; contributing to and coordinating reports on local and national disaster risk; coordinating public awareness campaigns on disaster risk; facilitating and supporting local multisectoral cooperation (e.g. among local governments); and contributing to the determination of and reporting on national and local disaster risk management plans and all policies relevant for disaster risk management (UNGA 2016).

Natural hazards

[Hazards that are] predominantly associated with natural processes and phenomena (UNGA 2016).

Notifiable disease

A disease that, by statutory/legal requirements, must be reported to a public health or other competent authority in the pertinent jurisdiction when the diagnosis is made (WHO 2018a).

Notification

1. The processes by which cases or outbreaks are brought to the knowledge of health authorities (WHO 2018a).

Note: A notifiable disease is a disease that requires notification, i.e. it must be reported to a public health authority when a diagnosis is made.

2. Part of public warning that provides essential information to people at risk regarding the decisions and actions necessary to cope with an emergency situation (ISO 22300:2018).

Nuclear emergency

An emergency in which there is, or is perceived to be, a hazard due to the energy resulting from a nuclear chain reaction or from the decay of the products of a chain reaction (IAEA 2019).

▷ See 'radiation emergency' and 'radiological emergency'.

Nutrition

The intake of food, considered in relation to the body's dietary needs (WHO 2019d, WHO 2019e).

▷ See 'malnutrition', 'undernutrition'.

One Health

1. An approach to address a health threat at the human-animal-environment interface based on collaboration, communication, and coordination across all relevant sectors and disciplines, with the ultimate goal of achieving optimal health outcomes for both people and animals; a One Health approach is applicable at the subnational, national, regional, and global level (WHO, FAO and World Organisation for Animal Health [OIE] 2019).

2. An approach to designing and implementing programmes, policies, legislation and research in which multiple sectors communicate and work together to achieve better public health outcomes (WHO 2018a).

3. Human health and animal health are interdependent and bound to the health of the ecosystems in which they exist (OIE 2019).

Operational readiness

▷ See 'readiness'.

Outbreak

Often used synonymously with "epidemic", usually to indicate localised as opposed to generalised epidemics.

Note: Typically defined as two or more people with the same health condition, at the same time and in the same place (WHO 2015b).

Pandemic

1. Worldwide spread of a new disease (WHO 2010b).

2. A worldwide outbreak of a disease in humans in numbers clearly in excess of normal (WHO 2015b).

Pathogens

Disease-causing organisms (e.g. bacteria, helminths, protozoa or viruses) (WHO 2016b).

People at risk

Individuals who may be affected by an incident [or a hazardous event] (ISO 22300:2018).

People-centred care

Care that is focused and organized around the health needs and expectations of people and communities rather than on diseases.

Note: People-centred care extends the concept of patient-centred to individuals, families, communities and society. Whereas patient-centred care is commonly understood as focusing on the individual seeking care (the patient), people-centred care encompasses these clinical encounters and also includes attention to the health of people in their communities and their crucial role in shaping health policy and health services (WHO 2011).

Personal protective equipment (PPE)

1. Protective clothing (gowns, gloves, boots etc.) and equipment (masks, shields, respirators, earplugs etc.) necessary to shield or isolate a person from biological, chemical, physical, sonic and thermal exposure (WHO 2015a).

2. Specialized clothing and equipment designed to create a barrier against health and safety hazards.

Note: Examples include safety goggles, blast shields, hard hats, hearing protectors, gloves, respirators, aprons, and work boots (WHO 2009, WHO 2010a).

People with disability

Those who have long-term physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairments which, in interaction with various barriers, may hinder their full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others (UN 2006).

▷ See 'disability'.

Plans

Generic reference to documents designed to identify, at various levels, responsibility for a range of activities and intended objectives, strategies and tactics (WHO 2015a).

▷ See 'contingency planning', 'action plan'.

Planning, contingency

▷ See 'contingency planning'.

Point of entry

A passage for [international] entry or exit of travellers, baggage, cargo, containers, conveyances, goods and postal parcels as well as agencies and areas providing services to them on entry or exit (WHO 2016).

PPE

▷ See 'personal protective equipment'.

Preparedness (emergency)

The knowledge and capacities developed by governments, response and recovery organizations, communities and individuals to effectively anticipate, respond to and recover from the impacts of likely, imminent or current disasters.

Note: Preparedness action is carried out within the context of disaster risk management and aims to build the capacities needed to efficiently manage all types of emergencies and achieve orderly transitions from response to sustained recovery. Preparedness is based on a sound analysis of disaster risks and good linkages with early warning systems, and includes such activities as contingency planning, the stockpiling of equipment and supplies, the development of arrangements for coordination, evacuation and public information, and associated training and field exercises. These must be supported by formal institutional, legal and budgetary capacities. The related term "readiness" describes the ability to quickly and appropriately respond when required (UNGA 2016).

Preparedness plan (emergency)

[A plan that] establishes arrangements in advance to enable timely, effective and appropriate responses to specific potential hazardous events or emerging disaster situations that might threaten society or the environment (UNGA 2016).

Prevalence

The number of cases in a defined population at a specific point in time (WHO 2009).

▷ See 'incidence'.

Prevention

Activities and measures to avoid existing and new disaster risks.

Note: Prevention (i.e. disaster prevention) expresses the concept and intention to completely avoid potential adverse impacts of hazardous events. While certain disaster risks cannot be eliminated, prevention aims at reducing vulnerability and exposure in such contexts where, as a result, the risk of disaster is removed. Examples include dams or embankments that eliminate flood risks, land-use regulations that do not permit any settlement in high-risk zones, seismic engineering designs that ensure the survival and function of a critical building in any likely earthquake and immunization against vaccine-preventable diseases. Prevention measures can also be taken during or after a hazardous event or disaster to prevent secondary hazards or their consequences, such as measures to prevent the contamination of water (UNGA 2016). In public health, primary prevention aims to prevent disease or injury before it occurs by preventing exposures to hazards that cause disease or injury, altering unhealthy or unsafe behaviours that can lead to disease or injury, and increasing resistance to disease or injury should exposure occur. Secondary prevention aims to reduce the impact of a disease or injury that has already occurred by detecting and treating disease or injury as soon as possible to halt or slow its progress, encouraging personal strategies to prevent re-injury or recurrence, and implementing programmes to return people to their original health and function to prevent long-term problems. Tertiary prevention aims to soften the impact of an ongoing illness or injury that has lasting effects by helping people manage long-term, often-complex health problems and injuries (e.g. chronic diseases, permanent impairments) in order to improve as much as possible their ability to function, their quality of life and their life expectancy.

Primary health care

Essential health care based on practical, scientifically sound, and socially acceptable methods and technology made universally accessible to individuals and families in the community through their full participation and at a cost that the community and country can afford to maintain at every stage of their development in the spirit of self-reliance and self-determination (WHO 2011).

Probability

Measure of the chance of occurrence expressed as a number between 0 and 1 where 0 is impossibility and 1 is absolute certainty (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'likelihood'.

Protracted emergency

An environment in which a significant proportion of the population is acutely vulnerable to death, disease and disruption of livelihoods over a prolonged period of time.

Note: Governance in these settings is often weak, with limited State capacity to respond to, and mitigate, the threats to the population, or provide adequate levels of protection (WHO 2017a).

Public awareness

The extent of common knowledge about disaster risks, the factors that lead to disasters and the actions that can be taken individually and collectively to reduce exposure and vulnerability to hazard.

Note: Community engagement is critical in order to raise public awareness, work for social mobilization, health promotion and risk communication (WHO 2015a).

Public communication

The discipline and process of providing public audiences with information that creates awareness and knowledge so that people can adjust their personal understanding of risks, and their reactions, decisions and responses to threats and crisis situations (WHO 2015a).

▷ See 'public awareness', 'risk communication'.

Public health

The science and art of promoting health, preventing disease, and prolonging life through the organized efforts of society (WHO 1998).

Public health emergency

▷ See 'health emergency'.

Public health emergency of international concern (PHEIC)

An extraordinary event which is determined, as provided in the International Health Regulations, (i) to constitute a public health risk to other States through the international spread of disease and (ii) to potentially require a coordinated response (WHO 2016).

Public health emergency operations centre

An emergency operations centre specializing in the command, control and coordination requirements of responding to emergencies involving health consequences and threats to public health (WHO 2015a).

Public health event

1. Any event that may have negative consequences for human health.

Note: The term includes events that have not yet lead to disease and/or injury in humans but have the potential to cause disease and injury through exposure of humans to hazards or as a result of direct or indirect consequences of other hazardous events (WHO 2017a).

2. A manifestation of disease or an occurrence that creates a potential for disease (WHO 2016).

▷ See 'hazardous event'.

Public health hazard

▷ See 'hazard'.

Public health measure

A procedure applied to prevent the spread of disease or contamination.

Note: Often refers to non-medical or non-pharmaceutical actions to reduce the spread of disease. Examples include closing schools, limiting public gatherings, issuing travel restrictions and screening travellers (WHO 2010a).

Public health risk

A likelihood of an event that may affect adversely the health of human populations.

Note: [In the context of the International Health Regulations], there is an emphasis on an event which may spread internationally or may present a serious and direct danger (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Public health surveillance

The ongoing systematic collection, analysis, and interpretation of data relating to public health (WHO 2009).

Public warning

Notification and alert messages disseminated as an incident response measure to enable responders and people at risk to take safety measures (ISO 22300:2018).

Public warning system

Set of protocols, processes and technologies based on the public warning policy to deliver notification and alert messages in a developing emergency situation to people at risk and to first responders (ISO 22300:2018).

Quarantine

The restriction of activities and/or separation from others of suspect persons who are not ill; or of suspect baggage, containers, conveyances or goods in such a manner as to prevent the possible spread of infection or contamination (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Radiation emergency

The term 'radiation emergency' is used in some cases when an explicit distinction between nuclear and radiological emergencies is not required (e.g. national radiation emergency plan) (IAEA 2019).

▷ See 'nuclear emergency' and 'radiological emergency'.

Radiological emergency

An emergency in which there is, or is perceived to be, a hazard due to radiation exposure [not involving a nuclear chain reaction] (IAEA 2019).

▷ See 'nuclear emergency' and 'radiation emergency'.

Rapid response team

1. A group of trained individuals that is ready to responds quickly to an event (WHO 2018a).

Note: Multidisciplinary teams of experts that can be deployed on short notice by a health authority to locations of public health events to augment surveillance, risk assessment and response activities already being implemented, to control disease outbreaks and strengthen international public health security.

2. A group of trained individuals that is ready to respond quickly to an event. The composition and terms of reference are determined by the country concerned (WHO 2010a).

Readiness

The ability to quickly and appropriately respond when required (UNGA 2016).

Synonym: 'operational readiness'.

▷ See 'preparedness'.

Reconstruction

The medium and long-term rebuilding and sustainable restoration of resilient critical infrastructures, services, housing, facilities, and livelihoods required for the full functioning of a community or a society affected by a disaster, aligning with the principles of sustainable development and building and 'build back better', to avoid or reduce future disaster risk (UNGA 2016).

Recovery

The restoring or improving of livelihoods and health, as well as economic, physical, social, cultural and environmental assets, systems and activities, of a disaster-affected community or society, aligning with the principles of sustainable development and 'build back better', to avoid or reduce future disaster risk (UNGA 2016).

Refugee

A person who cannot return to his/her country of origin owing to a well-founded fear of persecution or serious and indiscriminate threats to life, physical integrity or freedom (UNHCR 2011).

Rehabilitation

1. The restoration of basic services and facilities for the functioning of a community or a society affected by a disaster (UNGA 2016).

2. The restoration of normal functioning of people and communities (WHO 2009).

Residual risk

The disaster risk that remains even when effective disaster risk reduction measures are in place, and for which emergency response and recovery capacities must be maintained.

Note: The presence of residual risk implies a continuing need to develop and support effective capacities for emergency services, preparedness, response and recovery, together with socioeconomic policies such as safety nets and risk transfer mechanisms, as part of a holistic approach (UNGA 2016).

Resilience

The ability of a system, community or society exposed to hazards to resist, absorb, accommodate, adapt to, transform and recover from the effects of a hazard in a timely and efficient manner, including through the preservation and restoration of its essential basic structures and functions through risk management (UNGA 2016).

Response

1. The provision of emergency services and public assistance during or immediately after a disaster in order to save lives, reduce health impacts, ensure public safety and meet the basic subsistence needs of the people affected.

Note: Disaster response is predominantly focused on immediate and short-term needs and is sometimes called disaster relief. Effective, efficient and timely response relies on disaster risk-informed preparedness measures, including the development of the response capacities of individuals, communities, organizations, countries and the international community. The institutional elements of response often include the provision of emergency services and public assistance by public and private sectors and community sectors, as well as community and volunteer participation. "Emergency services" are a critical set of specialized agencies that have specific responsibilities in serving and protecting people and property in emergency and disaster situations. They include civil protection authorities and police and fire services, among many others. The division between the response stage and the subsequent recovery stage is not clear-cut. Some response actions, such as the supply of temporary housing and water supplies, may extend well into the recovery stage (UNGA 2016).

2. Any public health action triggered by the detection of a public health risk (e.g. monitoring of the event, information of the public, triggering field investigation and/or implementation of any control or mitigation measures).

Note: The nature of the response will have to be adapted according to the nature of the public health risk (WHO 2014).

Response plan

Documented collection of procedures and information that is developed, compiled and maintained in readiness for use in an incident (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'contingency plan', 'preparedness plan (emergency)'.

Retrofitting

Reinforcement or upgrading of existing structures to become more resistant and resilient to the damaging effects of hazards.

Note: Retrofitting requires consideration of the design and function of the structure, the stresses that the structure may be subject to from particular hazards or hazard scenarios and the practicality and costs of different retrofitting options. Examples of retrofitting include adding bracing to stiffen walls, reinforcing pillars, adding steel ties between walls and roofs, installing shutters on windows and improving the protection of important facilities and equipment (UNGA 2016).

Risk

1. The potential loss of life, injury, or destroyed or damaged assets which could occur to a system, society or a community in a specific period of time, determined probabilistically as a function of hazard, exposure, vulnerability and capacity (UNGA 2016).

2. The effect of uncertainty on objectives (ISO 31000:2018, ISO 22300:2018).

Risk analysis

The process to comprehend the nature of risk and to determine the level of risk (ISO 22300:2018).

▷ See 'risk assessment', 'risk criteria', 'risk evaluation', 'risk identification', 'risk register'.

Risk assessment

1. The process of determining risks to be prioritized for risk management, by the combination of risk identification, risk analysis, and evaluation of the level of risk against predetermined standards, targets, risks or other criteria.

Note: Risk assessments include a review of the technical characteristics of hazards, analysis of exposures and vulnerability and evaluation of the effectiveness or prevailing coping capacities in respect of likely risk scenarios (WHO 2015b).

2. The identification of environmental health hazards, their adverse effects, target populations and conditions of exposure. A combination of hazard identification, dose–response assessment, exposure assessment and risk characterization (WHO 2009).

3. A three-part process of: identifying, recognizing and describing risks; analysing identified risks to understand the nature, sources and causes to estimate the level of risk; and evaluating each level of risk to determine whether or not it is tolerable or acceptable (ISO 31000:2009).

▷ See 'disaster risk assessment'.

Risk communication

1. The interactive exchange of information and opinions concerning hazards, risks and risk-related factors (WHO 2015b).

2. Range of communication capacities required through the prevention, preparedness, response and recovery phases of a serious public health event to encourage informed decision making, positive behaviour change and the maintenance of trust (WHO 2018a).

3. The process of sharing information and perceptions about risk.

Note: Risk communication should be a two-way interaction in which experts and non-experts exchange and negotiate perceptions relating to both scientific and community values and preferences (WHO 2009).

Risk criteria

Terms of reference against which the significance of a risk is evaluated (ISO 22300:2018).

Risk evaluation

Process of comparing the results of risk analysis with risk criteria to determine whether the risk and/or its magnitude is acceptable or tolerable (ISO 22300:2018).

Risk factor

Any attribute, characteristic or exposure of an individual that increases the likelihood of developing a disease or injury.
Note: Risk factors can include any element of behaviour or lifestyle, environmental exposure, or genetic characteristic that is associated with particular outcome (WHO 2019f).

Risk identification

Process of finding, recognizing and describing risks (ISO 22300:2018).

Risk management, disaster

▷ See 'disaster risk management'.

Risk management

Coordinated activities to direct and control an organization with regard to risk (ISO 31000:2018).

Risk ratio

The ratio of the incidence of a disease among exposed people to the incidence of the disease among unexposed people (WHO 2009).

Risk register

Record of information about identified risks (ISO 22300:2018).

Risk transfer

The process of formally or informally shifting the financial consequences of particular risks from one party to another, whereby a household, community, enterprise or State authority will obtain resources from the other party after a disaster occurs, in exchange for ongoing or compensatory social or financial benefits provided to that other party.
Note: Insurance is a well-known form of risk transfer, where coverage of a risk is obtained from an insurer in exchange for ongoing premiums paid to the insurer. Risk transfer can occur informally within family and community networks where there are reciprocal expectations of mutual aid by means of gifts or credit, as well as formally, wherein governments, insurers, multilateral banks and other large risk-bearing entities establish mechanisms to help cope with losses in major events. Such mechanisms include insurance and reinsurance contracts, catastrophe bonds, contingent credit facilities and reserve funds, where the costs are covered by premiums, investor contributions, interest rates and past savings, respectively (UNGA 2016).

Risk treatment

Process to modify risk (ISO 22300:2018).

Risk, acceptable

▷ See 'acceptable risk'.

Risk, level of ▷ See 'level of risk'.

Risk, residual

▷ See 'residual risk'.

Safe hospital

A facility whose services remain accessible and functioning at maximum capacity, and with the same infrastructure before, during and immediately after the impact of emergencies and disasters (WHO 2015a).

Sanitation

The provision of facilities and services for the safe management of human excreta from the toilet to containment and storage and treatment onsite or conveyance, treatment and eventual safe end use or disposal (WHO 2019g).

Scenario

1. An account or synopsis of a possible course of events that could occur, which forms the basis for planning assumptions (for example, a river floods, covering a nearby town and wiping out the local population's crop).
Note: Scenario-building is process of developing hypothetical scenarios in the context of a contingency planning exercise (IASC 2011).

2. Pre-planned storyline that drives an exercise, as well as the stimuli used to achieve exercise project performance objectives.
Note: The scenario is designed to stimulate exercise participants to respond to events (WHO 2017c, ISO 22300:2018).

Self-reliance

The social and economic ability of an individual, a household or a community to meet their own essential needs (including food, water, shelter, personal safety, health and education) in a sustainable manner and with dignity (UNHCR 2011).

Sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV)

Any act of violence that results in, or is likely to result in, physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to persons on the basis of their sex or gender, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life (UNHCR 2011).

▷ See 'violence'.

Shelter in place

Remain or take immediate refuge in a protected location relevant to the risk (ISO 22300:2018).

SITREP

▷ See 'situation report'.

Situation report (SITREP)

A routinely produced report that provides current information about an emergency response and immediate and future response actions, an analysis of the impact of the emergency, and related management issues (WHO 2015a).

Situational awareness

Being aware of and attentive to what is happening in a given environment at a particular time, with particular emphasis on the effect of changes in the environment; in effect, knowing how an incident or event is evolving (WHO 2015a).

Slow-onset disaster

[A disaster] that emerges gradually over time.
Note: Slow-onset disasters could be associated with, for example, drought, desertification, sea-level rise, epidemic disease (UNGA 2016).

Socionatural hazards

▷ [Hazards that] are associated with a combination of natural and anthropogenic factors, including environmental degradation and climate change (UNGA 2016).

Stakeholder

▷ See 'interested party'.

Standard precautions

The basic level of infection control precautions which are to be used, as a minimum, in the care of all patients.
Note: Standard precautions are meant to reduce the risk of transmission of bloodborne and other pathogens from both recognized and unrecognized sources. They include: hand hygiene, personal protective equipment, and respiratory hygiene and cough etiquette, waste disposal and environmental cleaning (WHO 2007c).

Stockpile

A reserve of supplies and equipment to meet emergency needs.
Note: For example, a medical stockpile includes essential medicines, vaccines, protective equipment and other supplies and equipment for use in response to a health emergency (WHO 2017b).

Structural measures

Any physical construction to reduce or avoid possible impacts of hazards, or the application of engineering techniques or technology to achieve hazard resistance and resilience in structures or systems.
Note: Common structural measures for disaster risk reduction include dams, flood levies, ocean wave barriers, earthquake-resistant construction and evacuation shelters. Note that in civil and structural engineering, the term "structural" is used in a more restricted sense to mean just the load-bearing structure, and other parts such as wall cladding and interior fittings are termed 'non-structural' (UNGA 2016).

▷ See 'non-structural measures'.

Sudden-onset disaster

[A disaster that is] triggered by a hazardous event that emerges quickly or unexpectedly.

Note: Sudden-onset disasters could be associated with, e.g. earthquake, volcanic eruption, flash flood, chemical explosion, critical infrastructure failure, transport accident (UNGA 2016).

Supporting agency

An agency that provides essential services, personnel, or material to support or assist a lead agency (i.e. the supported agency).

Note: Supporting agencies may support either by assisting (i.e. contributing their own operational resources) or cooperating (providing indirect assistance) (WHO 2015a).

Surge

Sudden demand for health services in a mass casualty incident where additional capacities (in terms of the amount of personnel, equipment or supplies) and/or capabilities (in terms of specialized expertise) are required (WHO 2007).

Surge capacity

Ability of institutions [such as clinics, hospitals, or public health laboratories] to respond to increased demand for their services during a public health emergency (WHO 2015b).

Surveillance

The systematic ongoing collection, collation and analysis of data for public health purposes and the timely dissemination of public health information for assessment and public health response as necessary (WHO 2010a, WHO 2016).

Suspect

Those persons, baggage, cargo, containers, conveyances, goods or postal parcels considered by a State Party as having been exposed to a public health risk and that could be a possible source of spread of disease (WHO 2016).

Sustainable development

Development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs (WHO 1998).

Syndromic surveillance

A method of surveillance that uses health–related data based on clinical observations rather than laboratory confirmation of diagnoses (WHO 2008).

Note: Syndromic surveillance is used in order to detect outbreaks earlier than would otherwise be possible with laboratory diagnosis-based methods. Case definitions used for syndromic surveillance are based on clinical signs and symptoms, rather than on specific laboratory criteria for confirmation of the causative agent.

Tabletop exercise (TTX)

[A facilitated discussion] that uses a progressive simulated scenario, together with series of scripted injects, to make participants consider the impact of a potential emergency on existing plans, procedures and capacities.

Note: A tabletop exercise simulates an emergency situation in an informal, stress-free environment. A tabletop exercise is a discussion around an exercise scenario or narrative that is guided by a facilitator of an emergency situation, designed to elicit constructive discussion between participants; to identify and resolve problems; and to refine existing operational plans (WHO 2017a, WHO 2017c).

Technological hazards

Hazards [that] originate from technological or industrial conditions, dangerous procedures, infrastructure failures or specific human activities.

Note: Examples include industrial pollution, nuclear radiation, toxic wastes, dam failures, transport accidents, factory explosions, fires and chemical spills. Technological hazards also may arise directly as a result of the impacts of a natural hazard event (UNGA 2016).

▷ See Annex 2. WHO Classification of hazards

Threat

▷ See 'hazard', 'risk'.

Tolerable health risk

Defined level of health risk from a specific exposure or disease that is tolerated by society, it is used to set health-based targets (WHO 2016b).

Tolerable risk

▷ See 'acceptable risk'.

Toxicity

The capacity of a substance to cause injury to a living organism. A highly toxic substance will cause damage in small quantities, while a substance of low toxicity will need large quantities to produce an effect. Toxicity is also dependent on the portal of entry, the time frame of exposure and the latent period (WHO 2009).

Underlying disaster risk drivers

Processes or conditions, often development-related, that influence the level of disaster risk by increasing levels of exposure and vulnerability or reducing capacity.

Note: Underlying disaster risk drivers — also referred to as underlying disaster risk factors — include poverty and inequality, climate change and variability, unplanned and rapid urbanization and the lack of disaster risk considerations in land management and environmental and natural resource management, as well as compounding factors such as demographic change, non-disaster risk-informed policies, the lack of regulations and incentives for private disaster risk reduction investment, complex supply chains, the limited availability of technology, unsustainable uses of natural resources, declining ecosystems, pandemics and epidemics (UNGA 2016).

Undernutrition

Stunting (low height for age), wasting (low weight for height), underweight (low weight for age) and micronutrient deficiencies or insufficiencies (a lack of important vitamins and minerals) (WHO 2008).

▷ See 'nutrition'.

Vaccination

▷ See 'immunization'.

Vector

1. An insect or other animal that normally transports an infectious agent that constitutes a public health risk (WHO 2010a).

2. An insect or any living carrier that transports an infectious agent from an infected individual to a susceptible individual or its food or immediate surroundings (OIE 2018).

Vector-borne diseases of humans

Diseases (e.g. malaria, leishmaniasis) that can be transmitted from human to human via insect vectors (e.g. mosquitoes, flies) (WHO 2016b).

Note: Vector control, i.e. methods to limit or eradicate vectors, is an important component in the prevention and control of vector-borne diseases, specifically for transmission control (WHO 2019l).

Violence

An act that intentionally threatens, attempts, or actually inflicts harm on another person or group of others (UNHCR 2011).

▷ See 'sexual and gender-based violence.'

Vulnerability

The conditions determined by physical, social, economic and environmental factors or processes which increase the susceptibility of an individual, a community, assets or systems to the impacts of hazards (UNGA 2016).

Vulnerable group

Individuals who share one or several characteristics that are the basis of discrimination or adverse social, economic, cultural, political or health circumstances and that cause them to lack the means to achieve their rights or otherwise enjoy equal opportunities (ISO 22300:2018).

Warning system

▷ See 'early warning system' and 'multi-hazard early warning systems'.

WASH

Acronym for water, sanitation and hygiene.

▷ See 'sanitation' and 'hygiene'.

World Health Organization graded emergency

An acute public health event or emergency that requires an operational response by WHO. There are three WHO grades for emergencies, signifying the level of operational response by the Organization: Grade 1 (limited response); Grade 2 (moderate response); Grade 3 (major/maximal response). If a graded emergency persists for more than six months it may transition to a protracted emergency (WHO 2017a).

▷ See 'level of event'.

Zoonoses

1. Diseases that are transferable from animals to humans (WHO 2015b).

2. Any disease or infection that is naturally transmissible from vertebrate animals to humans.

Note: Zoonotic diseases can be spread by food, water, fomites or vectors (WHO 2019h).

Synonym: 'zoonotic disease'.

Zoonotic event

A manifestation of a disease in animals that creates a potential for a disease in humans as result of human exposure to the animal source (WHO 2010a).

4 THESAURUS

This thesaurus lists terms in five large groups of related concepts, under a head term, e.g. "Risk". Within these large groups, terms are grouped at smaller conceptual levels, under a secondary head term, e.g. "hazard". Italicized text indicates terms drawn from the Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction, which was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA 2016).

4.1 RISK

hazard: anthropogenic hazards, biological hazards, bioterrorism, chemical hazard, environmental hazards, geological or geophysical hazards, hydrometeorological hazards, multi-hazard, Natech, natural hazards, public health hazard, socionatural hazards, technological hazards, zoonoses; climate change, El Niño-southern oscillation; mass gathering; sexual and gender-based violence, violence; vector-borne disease of humans.

disaster risk: extensive disaster risk, intensive disaster risk, risk factor; acceptable risk, residual risk; public health risk, tolerable health risk; consequence, likelihood, probability; context; threat, level of risk.

vulnerability: exposure, fragile states, people at risk, underlying disaster risk drivers, vulnerable groups.

4.2 CAPACITY

resilience: capability; coping capacity, self-reliance, surge capacity; competence; capacity assessment, capacity development; critical infrastructure; point of entry; sustainable development; stockpile; national platform for disaster risk reduction.

health: health system, access to health services, people-centred care, primary health care; critical systems (in hospitals), health care facility, safe hospital; environmental health, cluster, health cluster, public health; hygiene, sanitation; public health measure; food safety; food security, food insecurity, mental health and psychosocial support.

nutrition: malnutrition, undernutrition.

health policy: global health security, health promotion, One Health.

community: interested party.

4.3 HAZARDOUS EVENT

disaster: slow-onset disaster, sudden-onset disaster; emergency, complex emergency, level of event, protracted emergency; crisis; incident; radiation emergency, nuclear emergency, radiological emergency; chemical incident, chemical event; zoonotic event.

health emergency: acute public health event, acute public health emergency, public health event, public health emergency of international concern; mass casualty incident.

communicable disease: epidemic, outbreak, pandemic; contamination, infection, health-care associated infection, pathogens; antimicrobial resistance.

impact: disaster damage, disaster impact; disaster loss database; health outcome, disability, disability-adjusted life years; dead; injury, morbidity, mortality; morbidity rate, risk ratio.

affected: directly affected, indirectly affected; internally-displaced person, missing person, refugee case, casualty.

economic loss: direct economic loss, indirect economic loss.

4.4 RISK MANAGEMENT

disaster risk management: disaster risk governance; disaster risk management plans, disaster risk information; community-based disaster risk management; health emergency and disaster risk management.

risk assessment: health impact assessment; risk analysis, risk criteria, risk evaluation, risk identification, risk register.

epidemiology: case definition, case fatality ratio/rate; epidemic intelligence, epidemic threshold.

surveillance: community surveillance, event-based surveillance, syndromic surveillance, monitoring, public health surveillance; exposure route; disinsection.

disaster risk reduction: disaster risk reduction strategies and policies; risk transfer, risk treatment; non-structural measures, structural measures.

public communication: public awareness, risk communication.

4.5 EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

disaster management: comprehensive approach, comprehensive emergency management programme, all-hazards approach.

emergency (risk) management agency or organization: civil protection; jurisdiction; lead agency, assisting agency, cooperating agency, supporting agency; mutual aid agreement; emergency medical team, rapid response team; health sector.

prevention: mitigation; disease prevention, infection prevention and control; climate change adaptation, climate change mitigation.

preparedness: readiness.

planning: contingency planning: action plan, business continuity plan, emergency response plan, preparedness plan; concept of operations.

exercise: exercise project; field exercise, full-scale exercise, functional exercise, tabletop exercise; scenario.

incident management system: mass casualty management system; chain of command; command, control, coordination; business continuity management.

emergency operations centre: emergency coordination centre, multi-agency coordination centre; public health emergency operations centre; interoperability; logistics; situation report, situational awareness; activation level.

public warning: early warning system, hazard monitoring function, multi-hazard early warning systems, public warning system; alert, notifiable disease, notification.

response: disaster response; evacuation, shelter in place; surge; contact tracing, decontamination, isolation, personal protective equipment, quarantine.

recovery: reconstruction, rehabilitation; build back better, retrofitting.

debrief: cold debrief, hot debrief; after-action report, after-action review; lessons learned.

REFERENCES

Centre for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters (CRED) (2009). Explanatory notes. (https://www.emdat.be/explanatory-notes, accessed 29 April 2019).

Connolly, Máire A & WHO (2005). Communicable disease control in emergencies: a field manual (http://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/96340, accessed 28 October 2019).

FAO (2000). Food insecurity and vulnerability information and mapping systems (FIVIMS). (http://www.fao.org/3/a-x8346e.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

FAO (2004). Food Safety (http://www.fao.org/3/a0104e/a0104e08.htm, accessed 29 April 2019).

FAO & WHO (2009). Codex Alimentarius: Principles of Food Hygiene, Reference CXC 1-1969 in Food Hygiene: Basic Texts (http://www.fao.org/3/a1552e/a1552e00.pdf, accessed 28 October 2019).

Integrated Research on Disaster Risk (IRDR) (2014). Peril classification and hazard glossary (http://www.irdrinternational.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/04/IRDR_DATA-Project-Report-No.-1.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

IASC (2001). Inter-agency contingency planning guidelines for humanitarian assistance (https://reliefweb.int/report/world/inter-agency-contingency-planning-guidelines-humanitarian-assistance, accessed 29 April 2019).

IASC (2007). IASC guidelines on mental health and psychosocial support in emergency settings. Geneva: IASC (https://www.who.int/mental_health/emergencies/9781424334445/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

IASC (2011). IASC operational guidelines on the protection of persons in situations of natural disasters. The Brookings – Bern Project on Internal Displacement (https://interagencystandingcommittee.org/system/files/legacy_files/Operational_guidelines_nd.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

IPCC (2012). Managing the risks of extreme events and disasters to advance climate change adaptation. A special report of working groups I and II of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change [Field, C.B., V. Barros, T.F. Stocker, D. Qin, D.J. Dokken, K.L. Ebi et al. (eds.)]. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press (https://www.ipcc.ch/pdf/special-reports/srex/SREX_Full_Report.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

IAEA (2019). IAEA safety glossary: 2018 edition. Vienna. (https://www.iaea.org/publications/11098/iaea-safety-glossary-2018-editionf, accessed 29 April 2019).

International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) (2009). Guiding principles / model law on the missing: principles for legislating the situation of persons missing as a result of armed conflict or internal violence (https://www.icrc.org/en/document/guiding-principles-model-law-missing-model-law, accessed 29 April 2019).

ISO 31000:2018 Risk Management—Principles and guidelines, International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/65694.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

ISO 22300:2018 Security and resilience—Vocabulary. International Organization for Standardization, Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/68436.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

ISO 22301:2012 Societal security—Business continuity management systems. International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/50038.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

ISO 22320:2011 Societal security—Emergency management—Requirements for incident response. International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/53347.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

ISO 31000:2009 Risk Management–Principles and guidelines, International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/43170.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) (2015). Addendum number 2 to the OECD guiding principles for chemical accident prevention, preparedness and response (2nd ed.) to address natural hazards triggering technological accidents (Natechs) (http://www.oecd.org/officialdocuments/publicdisplaydocumentpdf/?cote=env/jm/mono(2015)1&doclanguage=en, accessed 29 April 2019).

Programme on Chemical Safety and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (IPCS) (2004). IPCS risk assessment terminology. Geneva: World Health Organization (http://www.who.int/iris/handle/10665/42908, accessed 29 April 2019).

United Nations, General Assembly (2016). Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction. Note by the Secretary-General. New York (NY): United Nations (A/71/644; https://www.unisdr.org/we/inform/terminology, accessed 29 April 2019).

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) (2011). Resettlement handbook (https://www.unhcr.org/en-au/protection/resettlement/3d46515d4/unhcr-resettlement-handbook-glossary.html?query=definition%20refugee, accessed 29 April 2019).

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) (2015). Cluster approach (IASC) (https://emergency.unhcr.org/entry/61190/cluster-approach-iasc, accessed 29 April 2019).

United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) (2019). Humanitarian civil-military coordination (https://www.unocha.org/es/themes/humanitarian-civil-military-coordination, accessed 29 April 2019).

United Nations (2006). Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (https://www.un.org/development/desa/disabilities/convention-on-the-rights-of-persons-with-disabilities/convention-on-the-rights-of-persons-with-disabilities-2.html, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (1948). Constitution of the World Health Organization; Geneva: World Health Organization (http://www.who.int/governance/eb/who_constitution_en.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (1998). Health promotion glossary (http://www.who.int/healthpromotion/about/HPG/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (1999). WHO recommended surveillance standards, 2nd ed (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/65517, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2001). International classification of functioning, disability and health (http://www.who.int/classifications/icf/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2007a). Mass casualty management systems (http://www.who.int/hac/techguidance/MCM_guidelines_inside_final.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2007b). The world health report 2007: a safer future: global public health security in the 21st century (https://www.who.int/whr/2007/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2007c). Standard precautions in health care (https://www.who.int/csr/resources/publications/EPR_AM2_E7.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2008). Communicable disease alert and response for mass gatherings: Key considerations; (http://www.who.int/csr/Mass_gatherings2.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2009a). The public health management of chemical incidents (http://www.who.int/environmental_health_emergencies/publications/Manual_Chemical_Incidents/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2009b). Health cluster guide. A practical guide for country-level implementation of the Health Cluster (https://www.who.int/hac/network/global_health_cluster/chapter1.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2010a). Protocol for assessing national surveillance and response capacities for the International Health Regulations (2005) (https://www.who.int/ihr/publications/who_hse_ihr_201007_en.pdf?ua=1, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2010b). What is a pandemic? https://www.who.int/csr/disease/swineflu/frequently_asked_questions/pandemic/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2011). Health systems strengthening: glossary (http://www.who.int/healthsystems/Glossary_January2011.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2012). Rapid risk assessment of acute public health events (http://www.who.int/csr/resources/publications/HSE_GAR_ARO_2012_1/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2013). IHR core capacity and monitoring framework (http://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/10665/84933/1/WHO_HSE_GCR_2013.2_eng.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2014). Early detection, assessment and response to acute public health events. Implementation of early warning and response with a focus on event-based surveillance (http://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/112667/WHO_HSE_GCR_LYO_2014.4_eng.pdf;jsessionid=CC9990EC0DE59D7B9EFB32E2331356C1?sequence=1, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2015a). Framework for a Public Health Emergency Operations Centre. Geneva, Switzerland (http://www.who.int/ihr/publications/9789241565134_eng/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2015b). Public health for mass gatherings: Key considerations. Geneva, Switzerland (http://www.who.int/ihr/publications/WHO_HSE_GCR_2015.5/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2016a). International Health Regulations 2005, third edition (http://www.who.int/ihr/publications/9789241580496/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2016b). Sanitation safety planning: manual for safe use and disposal of wastewater, greywater and excreta (https://www.who.int/water_sanitation_health/publications/ssp-manual/en, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2016d). Guidelines on core components of infection prevention and control programmes at the national and acute health care facility level (https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/251730/9789241549929-eng.pdf, accessed 28 October 2019).

WHO & International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) (2016). WHO Cancer Mortality Database: Glossary of terms (http://www-dep.iarc.fr/WHOdb/glossary.htm, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2017a). Emergency response framework (ERF) (http://www.who.int/hac/about/erf/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2017b). Advancing the right to health: the vital role of law. (https://www.who.int/healthsystems/topics/health-law/chapter11.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2017c). Simulation exercise manual (http://www.who.int/ihr/publications/WHO-WHE-CPI-2017.10/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2018a). Joint external evaluation tool: International Health Regulations (2005), second edition (https://extranet.who.int/sph/sites/default/files/document-library/document/9789241550222-eng.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2018b). International statistical classification of diseases and related health problems, 11th Revision (https://icd.who.int/browse11/l-m/en, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2018c). Overview of Vaccine-Preventable Disease PD Surveillance Principles (last updated 5 September 2018) (https://www.who.int/immunization/monitoring_surveillance/burden/vpd/WHO_SurveillanceVaccinePreventable_01_Overview_R2.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019)

WHO (2019a). Disabilities (https://www.who.int/topics/disabilities/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019b). Emergencies preparedness, response. Contact tracing (https://www.who.int/csr/resources/publications/ebola/contact-tracing-guidelines/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019c). Infection prevention and control (https://www.who.int/infection-prevention/campaigns/clean-hands/IPC-tree_may2019_web.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019d). Malnutrition (https://www.who.int/features/qa/malnutrition/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019e). Nutrition (https://www.who.int/topics/nutrition/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019f). Risk factors (https://www.who.int/topics/risk_factors/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019g). Sanitation (https://www.who.int/topics/sanitation/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019h). Zoonoses (http://www.who.int/topics/zoonoses/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019i). Definitions: emergencies (https://www.who.int/hac/about/definitions/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019j). Global Health Observatory (GHO): Cholera case fatality ratio (https://www.who.int/gho/epidemic_diseases/cholera/situation_trends_case_fatality_ratio/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019k). Health and environment lexicon [online multi-language glossary] (http://apps.who.int/thelexicon/entry.php, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019l). Neglected tropical diseases: Vector ecology and management (VEM) (https://www.who.int/neglected_diseases/vector_ecology/information/en, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO (2019m). Health emergency and disaster risk management framework (https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/326106/9789241516181-eng.pdf, accessed 31 July 2019).

WHO (2019n). Antimicrobial resistance. (https://www.who.int/antimicrobial-resistance/en/, accessed 25 November 2019).

WHO, Public Health England and UNDRR (2017). Health emergency and disaster risk management fact sheets: Overview (http://www.who.int/hac/techguidance/preparedness/who-factsheet-overview-december2017.pdf?ua=1, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO, FAO & OIE (2019). Taking a Multisectoral, One Health Approach: A Tripartite Guide to Addressing Zoonotic Diseases in Countries (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/325620, accessed 29 April 2019).

WHO & UN Water (2019). National systems to support drinking-water, sanitation and hygiene: global status report 2019. UN-Water global analysis and assessment of sanitation and drinking-water (GLAAS) 2019 report. Geneva: World Health Organization (https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/326444/9789241516297-eng.pdf, accessed 25 November 2019).

World Organisation for Animal Health (OIE) (2019). Terrestrial animal health code – Glossary (https://www.oie.int/index.php?id=169&L=0&htmfile=glossaire.htm, accessed 25 November 2019).

World Organisation for Animal Health (2019). One health (http://www.oie.int/en/for-the-media/onehealth/, accessed 29 April 2019).

ANNEX 1. OTHER GLOSSARIES

The following glossaries may be referred to for further terms and definitions in specific subject areas.

SUBJECT AREA	GLOSSARY
Animal health	World Organisation for Animal Health (OIE) (2018). Terrestrial animal health code – Glossary (http://www.oie.int/fileadmin/Home/eng/Health_standards/tahc/current/glossaire.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).
Business continuity	ISO 22301: 2012. Societal security—Business continuity management systems. International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/50038.html, accessed 29 April 2019).
Chemical incidents	WHO (2009a). The public health management of chemical incidents (http://www.who.int/environmental_health_emergencies/publications/Manual_Chemical_Incidents/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).
Chemical risk assessment	Programme on Chemical Safety and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (IPCS) (2004). IPCS risk assessment terminology. Geneva: WHO. (http://www.who.int/iris/handle/10665/42908, accessed 29 April 2019).
Climate change	Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) (2012). Managing the risks of extreme events and disasters to advance climate change adaptation. A special report of working groups I and II of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (https://www.ipcc.ch/pdf/special-reports/srex/SREX_Full_Report.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).
Emergency operations	WHO. Emergency response framework (ERF) (2017). (http://www.who.int/hac/about/erf/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).
Hazards	IRDR. Peril classification and hazard glossary (2014). (http://www.irdrinternational.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/04/IRDR_DATA-Project-Report-No.-1.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019).
Health and the environment	WHO. Health and environment lexicon. (http://apps.who.int/thelexicon/entry.php, accessed 29 April 2019).
Health systems	WHO (2011). Health systems strengthening: glossary (http://www.who.int/healthsystems/Glossary_January2011.pdf, accessed 29 April 2019)
Incident response	ISO 22320:2011. Societal security—Emergency management—Requirements for incident response. International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/53347.html, accessed 29 April 2019).
Mortality data	Checchi, F. and Roberts, L. (2005). Interpreting and using mortality data in humanitarian emergencies: A primer for non-epidemiologists. Humanitarian Practice Network Paper No.52. London: Overseas Development Institute.
Nuclear safety and radiation protection	IAEA (2019). IAEA safety glossary: 2018 edition. Vienna. (https://www.iaea.org/publications/11098/iaea-safety-glossary-2018-edition, accessed 28 October 2019).
Risk management	ISO 31000:2018. Risk management–Principles and guidelines, International Organization for Standardization. Geneva (https://www.iso.org/standard/65694.html, accessed 29 April 2019).
Simulation exercises	WHO (2017). Simulation exercise manual (http://www.who.int/ihr/publications/WHO-WHE-CPI-2017.10/en/, accessed 29 April 2019).
Water, sanitation and hygiene	WHO & UN Water (2019). National systems to support drinking-water, sanitation and hygiene: global status report 2019. UN-Water global analysis and assessment of sanitation and drinking-water (GLAAS) 2019 report. Geneva: World Health Organization (https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/326444/9789241516297-eng.pdf?ua=1).

ANNEX 2. WHO CLASSIFICATION OF HAZARDS

GENERIC GROUPS[1]	1. NATURAL						2. HUMAN-INDUCED[2,3]		3. ENVIRONMENTAL
GROUPS	1.1 GEOPHYSICAL[4]	1.2 HYDRO-METEOROLOGICAL			1.3 BIOLOGICAL[5]	1.4 EXTRATERRESTRIAL[4]	2.1 TECHNOLOGICAL	2.2 SOCIETAL	3.1 ENVIRONMENTAL DEGRADATION[17]
SUBGROUPS		1.2.1 HYDROLOGICAL[4]	1.2.2 METEOROLOGICAL[4]	1.2.3 CLIMATOLOGICAL[4]
Main types -subtypes [sub-subtypes]	Earthquake: - ground-shaking Tsunami Mass movement (geophysical trigger): - landslide - rock fall - subsidence Liquefaction Volcanic activity: - ash fall - lahar - pyroclastic flow - lava flow	Flood: - riverine flood - flash flood - coastal flood - ice jam flood Mass movement (hydro-meteorological trigger): - landslide - avalanche (snow) - mudflow - debris flow Wave action: - rogue wave - seiche	Storm: - extratropical storm - tropical cyclone [cyclonic wind, cyclonic rain, cyclone (storm) surge] - convective storm [tornado, wind, rain, winter storm, blizzard, derecho, lightning, thunderstorm, hail, sand/dust storm] Extreme temperature: - heatwave - coldwave - severe winter condition [e.g. snow/ice, frost/ freeze, dzud][6] Fog	Drought Wild fire: - land fire [e.g. brush, bush, pasture] - forest fire Glacial lake outburst (flood)	Airborne diseases Waterborne diseases Vector-borne diseases Foodborne outbreaks[7] Insect infestation:[4] - grasshopper - locust Animal diseases Plant diseases Aeroallergens Antimicrobial resistant microorganisms Animal-human contact - venomous animals [snakes, spiders]	Impact: - airburst - meteorite Space weather: - energetic particles - geomagnetic storms - shockwave	Industrial hazards:[1] - chemical spill - gas leak - radiation [radiological, nuclear] Structural collapse: - building collapse[8,9] - dam/bridge failures Occupational hazards - mining Transportation:[8,11] - air, road, rail, water, space Explosions Fire[8] Air pollution:[i] - haze[i] Infrastructure disruption: - power outage[11] - water supply - solid waste, waste water - telecommunication Cybersecurity Hazardous materials in air, soil, water:[12,13] - biological, chemical, radiological Food contamination[h]	Acts of violence Armed conflicts:[14] - international - non-international Civil unrest Stampede Terrorism: - Chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and explosives[15,16] Financial crises: - hyper-inflation - currency crisis	Erosion Deforestation Salinization Sea level rise Desertification Wetland loss/ degradation Glacier retreat/ melting Sand encroachment

SOURCES

1. United Nations, General Assembly (2016). Report of the open-ended intergovernmental expert working group on indicators and terminology relating to disaster risk reduction. Note by the Secretary-General. New York (NY): United Nations (A/71/644; https://www.unisdr.org/we/inform/terminology, accessed 18 February 2019).
2. OCHA (2017). OCHA Annual Report, 2017. Geneva: United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (https://www.unocha.org/sites/unocha/files/2017%20annual%20report.pdf, accessed 18 February 2019).
3. IFRC (2019). Types of disasters: definition of hazard [website]. Geneva: International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (http://www.ifrc.org/en/what-we-do/disaster-management/about-disasters/definition-of-hazard/, accessed 18 February 2019).
4. EM-DAT: International Disaster Database [website]. Brussels: Centre for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters; (https://www.emdat.be/, accessed 18 February 2019).
5. WHO (2005). International Health Regulations, third edition. Geneva: World Health Organization (https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/246107/9789241580496-eng.pdf, accessed 31 March 2019).
6. UNDP & Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (2010). Dzud national report 2009–2010. Ulaanbaatar: United Nations Development Programme and Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (https://www.academia.edu/2426652/How_Mongolian_herders_affected_by_Dzud_natural_phenomena_2009-2010_government_and_pastoralists_disaster_management, accessed 18 February 2019).
7. Jaykus L, Woolridge M, Frank J, Miraglia M, McQuatters-Gollop A, Tirado C (2008). Climate change: implications for food safety. Rome: Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (http://www.fao.org/3/i0195e/i0195e00.pdf, accessed 18 February 2019).
8. EM-DAT: General classification [website]. Brussels: Centre for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters (https://www.emdat.be/classification, accessed 18 February 2019).
9. United Nations Environmental Programme (2002). Global environmental outlook 3: past, present and future perspectives [website]. Nairobi and London: United Nations Environment Programme (https://wedocs.unep.org/bitstream/handle/20.500.11822/8609/GEO-3%20REPORT_English.pdf?sequence=7&isAllowed=y, accessed 18 February 2019).
10. International cloud atlas [website]. Geneva: World Meteorological Organization (https://cloudatlas.wmo.int/haze.html, accessed 18 February 2019).
11. Coppola D, editor (2015). Introduction to international disaster management, 3rd edition. Oxford: Butterworth-Heinemann.
12. United Nations (2015). Recommendations for the transport of dangerous goods, 19th edition. New York and Geneva: United Nations (https://www.unece.org/fileadmin/DAM/trans/danger/publi/unrec/rev19/Rev19e_Vol_I.pdf, accessed 18 February 2019).
13. WHO (2013). IHR core capacity and monitoring framework. Geneva: World Health Organization (http://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/10665/84933/1/WHO_HSE_GCR_2013.2_eng.pdf, accessed 18 February 2019).
14. International Committee of the Red Cross (1977). The protocol additional to the Geneva conventions for 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts (Protocol I) of 8 June 1977. Geneva: International Committee of the Red Cross (https://www.icrc.org/ihl/INTRO/470, accessed 18 February 2019).
15. United States Department of Homeland Security (2010). National strategy for chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and explosives (CBRNE) standards [website]. Washington (DC): United States Department of Homeland Security (http://www.dhs.gov/national-strategy-chemical-biological-radiological-nuclear-and-explosives-cbrne-standards, accessed 18 February 2019).
16. United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs (2012). Treaty on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons [website]. New York (NY): United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs (http://www.un.org/disarmament/WMD/Nuclear/NPT.shtml, accessed 18 February 2019).
17. United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction (2017). Technical guidance for monitoring and reporting on progress in achieving the global targets of the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction. Geneva: United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction (https://www.unisdr.org/we/inform/publications/54970, accessed 18 February 2019).

9789240003699

9 789240 003699

This page is intentionally left blank.

HOSPITAL FUND.

22° Geo. V., No. LV.

No. 55 of 1931.

AN ACT to amend sections eleven, twelve, and thirteen of the Hospital Fund Act, 1930, and to make provision in regard to relief of certain persons from liability for payment for Hospital services.

[Assented to 29th December, 1931.]

BE it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of Western Australia, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited as the Hospital Fund Act Amendment Act, 1931, and shall be read as one with the Hospital Fund Act, 1930 (No. 39 of 1930), hereinafter referred to as the principal Act.

Amendment of s. 11.

2. Section eleven of the principal Act is amended, as follows:—

(a) by inserting after the word "exempt" in subsection (1) the words "either in whole or in part";

(b) by adding at the end of subsection (1) the words "if upon an action taken by a public hospital against any such person the court, having regard to the means of the defendant and the circumstances of the case, shall so decide. Where in any case the court is of opinion that the defendant is able to make some payment in respect of the cost of hospital service sought to be recovered from him, the court may enter judgment against such defendant accordingly."

New Section.

3. A section is inserted in the principal Act, after section eleven, as follows:—

Persons to give to hospital notice of intention to claim exemption.

11A. (1.) Any person intending to claim exemption from liability for cost of hospital service shall, as soon as reasonably may be, give notice thereof in writing to the hospital authority, together with satisfactory proof that he is a person to whom section eleven of this Act applies.

(2.) The hospital authority, upon receipt of such notice and proof to its satisfaction that the claimant is a person to whom section eleven of this Act applies, shall inquire into the means of the claimant and the circumstances of the case, and shall exempt the claimant either in whole or in part from liability for cost of the hospital service supplied to him, according as his means and the circumstances of the case shall require.

Amendment of s. 12.

4. Section twelve of the principal Act is amended, as follows:—

(a) by deleting the words "hospital benefit," in line one, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "exemption";

(b) by inserting after the word "authority," in line three, the words "or the court, as the case may be";

(c) by deleting the word "benefit," in line one of the proviso, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "exemption";

(d) by inserting after the word "authority," in line two of the proviso, the words "or the court."

New section.

5. A section is inserted in the principal Act, after section twelve, as follows:—

Allowance and refund in respect of donation to public hospitals.

12A. (1.) Where in any financial year any contributor to the Fund under section five or section eight of this Act shall have made to a public hospital any donation in money (not being a payment for the purpose of obtaining free hospital service), and shall furnish satisfactory proof thereof to the Commissioner at any time before the end of such financial year, the Commissioner shall give to such contributor credit for the amount of such donation against the amount of the contribution to the Fund payable by such contributor in respect of such financial year, and the contributor shall be liable only for the balance (if any) of the contribution to the Fund for which he has been assessed.

(2.) Where in any financial year any contributor to the Fund under section nine of this Act shall have made to a public hospital any donation in money (not being a payment for the purpose of obtaining free hospital service), and shall furnish satisfactory proof thereof to the Minister at any time before the end of such financial year, the Minister shall refund to such contributor, as soon as may be after the end of such financial year, an amount equal to the amount of such donation, but not in any event exceeding the amount of contributions to the Fund paid by such contributor during such financial year.

6. Section thirteen of the principal Act is amended by inserting therein a new paragraph, as follows:— Amendment of s. 13.

(e) refunding to contributors the amount of donations made by them to public hospitals.

7. The principal Act as amended by this Act may be cited as the Hospital Fund Act, 1930-1931. Citation of principal Act as amended.

This page is intentionally left blank.

Mati� Family Office
Care Post Office
Suite 3. near Pollard Street No.19
Glendalough., Western Australia.

-sandi-

From: no-reply@identitytheft.gov
Sent: Friday, February 2, 2024 8:22 PM
To: Sandi@konkrethaus.com.au
Subject: IdentityTheft.gov Reference Number

Thank you for reporting identity theft to the FTC.

This is not your temporary password. Your temporary password will come in a separate email.

Your reference number is:

169028117

Keep this for your records.

To view and update your personal recovery plan, log in at IdentityTheft.gov.

Signed, sealed, and delivered. As good as aval.

Without recourse
All rights reserved as per U.C.C. 1-308 (old 1-207)

/s/ Sandi. Authorised agent by duly appointed Power of filed with Mati� International Library.

Mati� - Principal

This page is intentionally left blank.

Forensic Science International, 53 (1992) 1 – 28
Elsevier Scientific Publishers Ireland Ltd.

Invited Article

INFANTICIDE AND CHILD DESTRUCTION – THE HISTORICAL, LEGAL AND PATHOLOGICAL ASPECTS

R.J. KELLETT

Nevill Hall Hospital, Abergavenny, Gwent, Wales (U.K.)

Key words: Infanticide; Child destruction; Separate existence; Flotation test; Coronial jurisdiction

Introduction

The word 'infanticide' is used rather loosely in the literature on child killing. Among the several different definitions of the word 'infant' in the Oxford English Dictionary is 'a child during the earliest period of life, especially a child in arms.' The dictionary suggests that the word is derived from the old French/Latin 'infans', being unable to speak.

The Oxford English Dictionary also gives the following definitions of infanticide: (i) One who kills an infant. (ii) The crime of murdering an infant after its birth perpetrated by or with the consent of its parents, especially the mother. (iii) The killing of infants, especially the custom of killing newborn infants, which prevails among savages, and was common in the ancient world.

The term infant was also once used to denote a person under the age of twenty-one, an age at which persons were considered not to be fully competent in law. The age of majority has now been reduced to eighteen, and the term 'minor' used instead. Clearly the killing of a teenager would not be considered 'infanticide' in any general usage of the word.

The Medico-legal Encyclopaedia states that the term 'infanticide' is often taken to mean the killing of any young child, but should be reserved for the offence specifically defined in the Infanticide Act 1938 [1].

Clearly there is no one specific meaning or definition of infanticide, but the purposes of this paper will be served by the meaning implicit in the Infanticide Act 1938, that is the killing of a child under the age of 12 months by its mother 'by wilful act or omission' during a period of mental disturbance, though the killing of such infants by persons other than the mother will also be touched on briefly.

Correspondence to: R.J. Kellett, Consultant Pathologist, Neville Hall Hospital, Abergavenny, Gwent, Wales.

0379-0738/92/$05.00
© 1992 Elsevier Scientific Publishers Ireland Ltd.
Printed and Published in Ireland

This page is intentionally left blank.

WA 900
.1
61Ge
Hist.

INTERNATIONAL WORK
IN HEALTH STATISTICS

1948-1958

H. S. GEAR, Y. BIRAUD & S. SWAROOP

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
PALAIS DES NATIONS
GENEVA
1961

WA 900.1
61GE
HIST.

E/1961

The World Health Organization (WHO) is one of the specialized agencies of the United Nations. Through this organization, which came into being in 1948, the public health and medical professions of more than 100 countries exchange their knowledge and experience, and collaborate in an effort to achieve the highest possible level of health throughout the world. WHO is not concerned with problems which individual countries or territories can solve with their own resources. It deals, rather, with problems which can only be satisfactorily solved through the co-operation of all, or certain groups of, countries—the eradication of diseases such as malaria, the control of cholera, plague, yellow fever, smallpox and rickettsiosis. Progress towards better health throughout the world also demands international co-operation in many other activities: for example, setting up standards for biological substances, for insecticides and insecticide spraying equipment; compiling an international pharmacopoeia; drawing up international sanitary regulations; revising the international lists of diseases and causes of death; assembling and disseminating epidemiological information; recommending non-proprietary names for drugs; and promoting the exchange of scientific knowledge. In many parts of the world, there is need for improvement in maternal and child health, nutrition, nursing, mental health, environmental sanitation, public health administration, professional education and training, and health education of the public. Thus a very large share of the Organization's resources is devoted to giving assistance and advice in these fields to countries and territories whose health services are in an early state of development and which are therefore weak points in the common front against disease.

This publication is a reprint of a series of articles that appeared in WHO Chronicle between February 1959 and May 1960.

NOTE

Authors alone are responsible for views expressed in this publication.

PRINTED IN SWITZERLAND

a 59092

INTERNATIONAL WORK
IN HEALTH STATISTICS

1948-1958

H. S. GEAR, M.D.
Formerly Assistant Director-General, Department of Central Technical Services,
World Health Organization

Y. BIRAUD, M.D.
Formerly Director, Division of Health Statistics, World Health Organization

S. SWAROOP, Ph.D, M.P.H.
Chief Statistician, Health Statistical Methodology, World Health Organization

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
PALAIS DES NATIONS
GENEVA

1961

CONTENTS

Page
Historical introduction 5
Nature and extent of the problem 9
Securing international comparability 16
Improvement of national statistics 24
International collection and publication of data 30
International mortality statistics 33
International morbidity statistics 39
Statistical studies on cancer 47
Levels of living 52
Some general trends 54

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

The general principles of the science of health statistics, as of most others, were foreshadowed by the ancient Greeks, who carefully observed, recorded and analysed natural phenomena, and applied the inductive method of reasoning in a search for natural rather than supernatural causes, treating the unproven with scepticism. Nevertheless, the proper understanding of the behaviour of disease—how and why disease in a human (or animal) population spreads, waxes and wanes, or alters its character in response to the ceaseless changes that take place in its host and environment—had to await the techniques of study and experiment provided by modern epidemiology, statistics, microbiology, and biochemistry.

It is a curious fact that the use of statistical techniques in this field began, not with doctors, but with the work of John Graunt, a London draper,[1] in the middle of the seventeenth century. Graunt carried out an examination of the London Bills of Mortality, which were records of births and deaths based on the parish registers. His findings, first published in 1662,[2] marked the beginning of a science which has shown that human life conforms to broad and predictable patterns. Epidemiology, vital statistics, demography, and even life insurance are greatly indebted to this small volume.

Parish registers—which provided the basic material for Graunt's book—had been in existence for a century or so, not only in England but also in a number of other European countries, and in their colonial possessions from the Philippines to Mexico and Peru. In France, the keeping of parish registers was made compulsory in 1539, and from 1670 on they were used by Colbert as a source of statistics for Paris. The Breslau registers enabled Halley, the astronomer, to construct his famous mortality table in 1692. From 1749 the Swedish registers, which had been made compulsory in 1686, were used for the preparation of annual statistics.

This statistical material supplemented, or even served as a substitute for, censuses. In France in 1788 Necker estimated the population by multiplying recorded births by 25.75, and Laplace, the mathematician, after making an early use of sampling methods, did the same in 1802 on the basis of a ratio of 28.35 births to 1000 population.

During the eighteenth century considerable interest developed in the numerical aspects of all matters of concern to the state, and in Germany, under the name of Staatenkunde, they became a regular subject for teaching in the universities. Achenwall, a professor at Göttingen, probably did most to spread the use of the word " statistics " to designate the new science, but Süssmilch's book [3] played an important part in making it internationally known.

Statecraft had long recognized that knowledge of the numerical size of the population was essential to efficient administration. Censuses were taken in the earliest civilizations—for example, among the Sumerians, Egyptians and Romans and in the Chinese and Inca Empires. Only many centuries after the fall of the Roman Empire, however, were population counts again made in western Europe. These new censuses, such as those of 1328 in France and of 1594 in Spain, were little better than estimates, based upon the number of hearths in each parish and the rough proportion of inhabitants to each hearth.

The first modern census listing each inhabitant by name was probably that carried out in Canada (Quebec) in 1665. The same method was used in other French overseas possessions during the following century, long before a proper census was taken in France itself. Fairly accurate censuses were carried out in Sweden and Finland in 1749, in Connecticut in 1756, in Massachusetts in 1764, in Denmark and Norway in 1769, and in the United States as a whole in 1790. In England proposals for a census were rejected in 1753 and 1778, and the first census was not carried out until 1801, which was also the year of France's first census. Prussia followed suit in 1810 and Austria in 1818. During the period 1830-1850, there were so many people recording statistics and theorizing on statistical method that Westergaard justly called it " the era of enthusiasm for vital statistics ".

---

[1] Gear, H. S. (1936) Med. Offr, 55, 217.

[2] Graunt, J. (1662) Natural and political observations mentioned in a following index, and made upon the Bills of Mortality, London.

[3] Sussmilch, J. (1761) Die gottliche Ordnung in den Veränderungen des menschlichen Geschlechts aus der Geburt, dem Tode und der Fortpflanzung desselben erwiesen, Berlin.

In England the Royal Statistical Society was founded in 1834, and the General Register Office in 1836. A physician, William Farr (1807-1883), who held the post of examiner and compiler of abstracts in the General Register Office, was largely responsible for the publication, from 1837 on, of yearly statistics of causes of death, and for the regular computation, from 1841 on, of mortality tables for the whole population. In the opinion of Pearl, present-day procedures in official vital statistics owe more to Farr than to any other person,[1] and the memorial volume of selections from his reports and writings,[2] which shows the stress he laid, inter alia, upon the use of death rates as a measure of local or national health, the importance of population density, the dangers of overcrowding, and the value of uniform nomenclatures of disease, gives some idea both of his influence and of his pioneering spirit.

About the same time as Farr entered the General Register Office, much study was being devoted in Europe to the theory of probability, which is of fundamental importance in statistics. Laplace had published an important work on the subject (1814), and he was followed by Poisson (1836-37) and Cournot (1843). In France, Demonferrand published essays on population and on mortality in 1838 and 1839, and Gavarret a work on general principles of medical statistics in 1840. In Germany, Casper published a study on the probable duration of human life (1835), Moser one on the laws of the duration of life (1839), and Christian Bernoulli a statistical handbook on population (1840). Quetelet published a book on social physics in 1835, and did a great deal towards adapting the theory of probability for use in statistics. From 1851 onwards Quetelet, together with Farr and Babbage, began more and more to impart an international slant to vital and health statistics by organizing international statistical congresses.

The first international statistical congress was held in Brussels in 1853, and the need for uniform nomenclature and classification of diseases as a prerequisite for the international comparability of medical statistics was quickly realized. In the second congress, held in 1855, Farr put forward for international adoption the classification into five classes that was in use in the General Register Office. D'Espine, from Geneva, put forward another list in which diseases were grouped according to their clinical or (as far as was then known) their etiological and pathological characteristics. After some discussion, the congress reached a compromise, adopting a classification which made use of both systems.

Later developments would seem to confirm that the decision taken by the congress was a wise one. International classifications of causes of death have been subjected to much critical scrutiny and revision since 1855, and of the many proposed lists, based on a single classification, whether anatomical, etiological, chronological or otherwise, none has proved any more practicable than the empirical grouping adopted in 1855.

International statistical congresses continued to meet in various capitals at two- or three-year intervals up to 1876, two years after Quetelet's death, when disagreement between some governments and the permanent commission of the congresses brought them to an end. Their place was taken by the International Institute of Statistics, which was created in London in [1] Pearl, R. (1940) Introduction to medical biometry and statistics, 3rd ed., Saunders, Philadelphia and London.

---

[2] Humphreys, N. A. ed. (1885) Vital statistics. A memorial volume of selections from the reports and writings of William Farr, The Sanitary Institute, London.

1885. At its meeting in Vienna in 1891 the Institute set up a committee to deal with the international list of diseases, with Dr Jacques Bertillon, Head of the Statistical Services of the City of Paris, as its chairman.

In 1893, on the suggestion of Guillaume, Director of the Federal Bureau of Statistics, Switzerland, the basic international classification was maintained, but three lists were drawn up for its application: a detailed list, an intermediate list, and an abridged list, containing 161, 99, and 44 titles respectively. The purpose of these lists was to maintain comparability between the statistics of countries in which facilities for the recording of diagnoses and for statistical processing differed widely.

In 1898 the American Public Health Association, meeting in Ottawa, recommended that the international lists be brought up to date by decennial revisions, and this principle was endorsed by the International Institute of Statistics in 1899 in Christiania. Decennial revision conferences were accordingly held in 1900, 1910 and 1920, and, through Bertillon's influence, they were held in Paris.

When Bertillon died, the 1920 revised international lists were left in abeyance, and it was not until 1924 that the Health Organisation of the League of Nations took up the question of continuing the work and completing their publication. It established a joint committee with the International Institute of Statistics for the preparation of the 1929 revision, which included extensive studies on morbidity and its classification. The same procedure was adopted for the 1938 revision. In 1945 the United States Government, which had been requested by the Fifth Revision Conference to continue its investigations into rules for the selection of joint causes of death, began preparing the sixth revision, and convened in Washington a small committee which included, in addition to experts from Canada and the United Kingdom, the former Head of the League of Nations Health Statistical Services.[1]

In 1947, WHO took over the work of preparing the sixth revision from the United States Government, and completed preparations for the Sixth Revision Conference, which took place in Paris in 1948, under the joint auspices of WHO and the French Government. The international lists of causes of disease and death then adopted were endorsed by the First World Health Assembly as an annex to WHO Regulations No. 1.

Continuous efforts have thus been made for more than a hundred years to bring about international uniformity in disease nomenclature and classification. Even if the related subjects of uniform certification of causes of death and selection of joint causes for the tabulation of both morbidity and mortality statistics are taken into account, the progress made in this field forms only a small part of the developments in health statistics that have taken place during the same period.

One of the great advances has been the publication by an increasing number of countries of annual returns of births and deaths, the latter classified according to the international lists and rules. Another is the production of census returns of increasing detail and precision, the result of the growing realization that numerical data are necessary for administration of any kind. In health, precise data on both mortality and morbidity have been more and more widely accepted as being the basis for any assessment of public health requirements and of the efficacy of action taken.

John Simon,[2] medical officer, first to the English Board of Health, which was created in 1855, later to the Local Government Board of 1871, was one of the first health administrators to stress the value to sanitary science and practice of the statistics issued by the General Register Office. Florence Nightingale,[3] more widely known for her work in nursing, was also a pioneer in the use of statistics, properly collected and interpreted, as a means of gauging health conditions in the army as well as in hospitals.

---

[1] Dr Yves Biraud, who had been Assistant Secretary-General of the Fifth Revision Conference and had edited its official report.

[2] Simon, J. (1890) English sanitary institutions, Cassell, London.

[3] Nightingale, F. (1858) Notes on matters affecting the health, efficiency, and hospital administration of the British army, Harrison, London.

Later in the nineteenth century, Francis Galton played an important part in the movement which sought to apply mathematical procedures to biological phenomena. He founded the tradition of applying statistics to the study of human and biological problems, which in time led to the scientific epidemiological disciplines of to-day, and he was followed in this by Karl Pearson, Greenwood and Fisher in England and by Pearl in the United States of America. Another famous pioneer in the Americas in the use of quantitative methods in epidemiology was W. H. Frost. The experimental epidemiology undertaken by Greenwood and Topley in England, and by Webster in the United States of America, was a fascinating and instructive phase in this movement.[1]

The early work of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations in combating the entry into central and western Europe of the epidemics of typhus, relapsing fever and smallpox which raged in eastern Europe from 1921 to 1923 showed the urgent need for improving epidemiological intelligence and health statistical services in most European countries. An attempt was made to remedy this state of affairs from 1924 onwards, by exchange study tours, by expert studies of a series of problems concerning the international comparability of statistics (such as the definition of stillbirth, the selection of joint causes of death, and nomenclatures of causes of morbidity as distinct from those of mortality), and by the preparation of the fourth revision of the international lists of causes of death.

The international definition of stillbirth proposed in 1927 [2] was applied widely, but not universally in view of its legal implications. The comparative lists of causes of morbidity prepared by Roesle [3] stimulated the improvement of national morbidity statistics, but these were not then sufficiently developed for international comparability.

The League of Nations made other useful contributions in the field of medical and health statistics. It issued a series of handbooks giving statistical data, including medical and vital statistics, from a number of countries, and outlining the statistical organization of these countries.[4] The Health Organisation of the League also issued a long series of epidemiological and statistical tables and commentaries which appeared from 1922 onwards in its annual and monthly Epidemiological Reports and Weekly Epidemiological Record, and from 1925 onwards in the Weekly Fasciculus of its Eastern Bureau (Singapore). Statistical data on health conditions and activities in a number of countries were also published in the successive issues of the League's International Health Year-Book, and on population and vital statistics in its Annual Epidemiological Reports. A number of studies of epidemiological and statistical significance appeared in the Bulletin of the Health Organisation.[5]

In the century which ended with the Second World War much progress was made in vital and health statistics by governmental services, intergovernmental institutions, and scientific societies, both national and international. Little by little the value of official mortality records, morbidity data collected by social insurance organizations, and hospital statistics as sources of information on the health of the population, and as a basis for planning health policies, began to be realized by an increasing number of health administrators and statesmen. By their efforts, health statistics improved in quality and increased in quantity until by the end of the Second World War they had grown to formidable proportions.

Progress had not been uniform, however. Mortality statistics recorded according to international rules of classification were available for highly developed countries, but for very few others, so that there were enormous gaps in the coverage of the world as a whole. Morbidity statistics were available for a large number of territories, but lacked uniformity and therefore comparability.

---

[1] Greenwood, M. (1932) Epidemiology, historical and experimental, Johns Hopkins Press, Baltimore.

[2] League of Nations (1927) Report of the Committee [of] Expert Statisticians on the definition of stillbirth, Geneva (document C.H./Expert Stat./46).

[3] Roesle, E. (1928) Essai d'une statistique comparative de la morbidité devant servir à établir les listes spéciales des causes de morbidité, Geneva (League of Nations, document C.H. 730).

[4] League of Nations Health Organisation (1924-1930) Statistical Handbooks Series, Geneva, Nos. 1-14.

[5] Bibliography of the technical work of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations, 1920-1945. Bull. Hlth Org. L.o.N., 1945, 11.

This was the situation when WHO took over the functions of the League of Nations Health Organisation. Subsequent sections will show what it has so far done in the field of international health statistics.

NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE PROBLEM

In the post-war years progress in international statistics received fresh momentum with the creation of the United Nations and of WHO, its specialized agency for health, and it has been further accelerated by the desire of many developing countries to raise their living standards. Before reviewing current developments in vital and health statistics, it is well to consider the nature and extent of the problem, which has two aspects, national and international.

National and international needs in health statistics

By and large, the purpose of vital and health statistics is to contribute to social and economic progress. Existing levels of health and demographic problems have to be studied in relation to the conditions and factors that influence them. For this—and for the study of trends and changes in health conditions—factual knowledge is essential. The more advanced a country, the more precise and penetrating are the studies it has to undertake. On the other hand, a country only just beginning to organize its public health services may do so without waiting for extensive data to be gathered and analysed. For instance, such basic steps as the improvement of environmental sanitation, the establishment of maternal and child health services, and health education—to name only a few—may well precede a full statistical scrutiny of the situation. Nevertheless, even simple kinds of vital and health statistics, such as those which help in locating areas of high mortality and indicating the major preventable diseases, would be helpful. These can be produced relatively easily, either by means of sample surveys or by the establishment of a national health statistics system. But once public health services have been successful in reducing epidemic diseases and death rates, the need arises for precise data on the relative importance of various residual causes of sickness and death. Indeed, it is on the basis of such careful scrutiny that the importance of accidents in childhood and of degenerative diseases in adult life and old age in advanced countries is now being brought out.

It has been truly said that health is indivisible. This is especially apparent when epidemics sweep from one country to another and cover more than one continent: recent examples are the spread of cholera as far west as Egypt in 1947, the world-wide epidemic of influenza in 1957, and the occasional outbreaks of smallpox generated by infection imported into countries of the west. Each country has, therefore, to be constantly on the look-out for what is happening epidemiologically throughout the world. International health statistics provide the necessary world information system. They are also made use of by various countries to compare their progress in health with that achieved by similar health action elsewhere. Because of these national requirements, international agencies have the unique responsibility of collecting and promptly disseminating statistical information on a world-wide basis.

However, from the international point of view, while the special needs of individual nations are still paramount, the problem is not confined merely to collection and dissemination of information. International co-operation has to be secured so that national health statistical services will produce data in a form that is useful not only to themselves but to the world at large. Moreover, certain health problems affecting groups of countries have to be studied statistically from an international standpoint. Statistics are also important in connexion with the help given by WHO to various countries in the implementation of their health programmes and the introduction of modern techniques in health work. For instance, with the assistance of UNICEF, and in collaboration with other bilateral and international co-operation agencies, WHO has undertaken large-scale campaigns against several communicable diseases—malaria, yaws, trachoma, etc. The treatment of millions of individuals and the spraying of millions of houses by residual insecticides entail the study of the relevant statistics and their proper interpretation. With the assistance of WHO and UNICEF, various other national activities, such as maternal and child health services, school health work, and dental health, are being expanded. The value of this work can be demonstrated only if reliable statistics are maintained, and systems for the collection and analysis of the relevant data must be devised.

In 1946, when the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization assumed the functions of its predecessors, it became responsible for continuing previous work in international health statistics. The work of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations, the Office International d'Hygiène Publique (OIHP), and the Pan American Sanitary Bureau (PASB) had been designed to meet then existing needs in the collection of vital and health statistics, the diffusion of knowledge on quarantinable diseases, and the preparation of studies on factors determining the prevalence of disease.

The responsibility for continuing previous work, and the constitutional obligation to undertake additional work in the abovementioned fields, had an important influence on the preparation of early WHO programmes. The framers of the WHO Constitution had expressed their realization of the shortcomings of the international facilities then existing for the collection of vital and health statistics, and for the investigation of hazards to national, regional, and international health. Hence the appearance in the Constitution of such functions as: the maintenance of epidemiological and statistical services; the control and eradication of communicable diseases; the conduct of research in the field of health; and the establishment of international nomenclatures of diseases and causes of death.

Basic data

There are three main categories of basic data in health statistics:

1. Data on population: size, composition, distribution and growth.
2. Vital statistics, i.e., statistics on live births, foetal deaths, marriages and divorces, deaths, etc. Of these, the statistics relating to live births, deaths, and foetal deaths are of particular interest to WHO.
3. Health statistics, i.e., numerical information required and produced for and by health agencies.

The Statistical Office of the United Nations has assumed responsibility for seeing that vital statistics and data on population are obtained in sufficient detail and in internationally comparable form from an increasing number of areas. In the light of the above needs, the nature and extent of what WHO is called upon to do in health statistics can be summed up as follows:[1]

To consolidate basic data received from countries, or extracted from various national statistical or epidemiological publications, by: the routine collection of data on diseases, health service facilities, health personnel, and major activities of health services, e.g., vaccination; the collection, elaboration and analysis of vital and health statistics; the keeping of up-to-date records of such statistics, published in the monthly Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report and in an annual volume;

To assist countries in the organization and development of their national health statistical services;

---

[1] Summarized from Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1958, 89, 23.

To conduct a general survey of the present situation of vital and health statistics in the world in order to plan a long-term programme of assistance to countries;

To assist national administrations through expert advice by the statistical officers of the Organization or by special consultants;

To assist in improving the collection of national data so as to achieve better international comparability of such data;

To encourage the broader utilization of national committees on vital and health statistics through meetings of representatives of such committees;

To ensure the sound application of statistical methodology indispensable for an adequate evaluation of the work performed and the results achieved;

To process and analyse the statistical data produced in connexion with studies conducted by various units of WHO;

To establish a classification of diseases, injuries, and causes of death, and its application to the compilation of morbidity and mortality statistics.

It is generally admitted that the number of countries producing reliable and adequate basic data is very small. The extent of the problem will be clear from the pages that follow.

Population data

In such a basic matter as the enumeration of human population, the position was far from satisfactory in the ten years preceding the end of the Second World War. The United Nations has reported that during that decade only 44 sovereign countries undertook population censuses. These were distributed as follows: 3 in Africa; 9 in North America; 6 in South America; 9 in Asia and Oceania; and 17 in Europe.[1]

This situation could not fail to have an adverse effect on health work, for no public health programme can be adequately planned or maintained in the absence of such fundamental data as the size of human populations, their age and sex constitution, and their rate of change.

In the ten years since the end of the war, which approximately cover the first phase of WHO's work, there has been a considerable improvement in knowledge of the human population of the world, much of it due to the continuous efforts of the United Nations in this field. In its Demographic Yearbook for 1957 the United Nations estimates the population of the world in 1956 as 2737 million, with a margin of error of 5%.[2] An increasing proportion of the world's population is being enumerated by censuses but certain reservations are necessary concerning the completeness and accuracy of the results recorded in many countries which lack experience in census work. The United Nations Demographic Yearbook states that population estimates in the majority of countries are still subject to error because of the lack of recent adequate censuses, especially in South-East Asia, the Eastern Mediterranean and Africa: "... it is shown that estimates for 78 per cent of the world's population in 1955 were based on census counts made since 1945, while 9 per cent originated in partial censuses, surveys, or older enumerations, and 12 per cent had conjectural estimates for a base...only 25 per cent of the countries of the world used the natural increase method in 1955. The situation varies, of course, from region to region and it changes also with time. With the taking of more censuses, estimates will have firmer bases." [3]

Vital statistics

Statistics on births and deaths are in general much less adequate than those on population. It is estimated by the United Nations that, while roughly 80% of the world's population has been enumerated in the last decade, only about 42% of births and some 33% of deaths are currently being registered.

---

[1] United Nations (1956) Demographic yearbook 1956. New York, p. 10.

[2] United Nations (1957) Demographic yearbook 1957, New York, p. 123.

[3] United Nations (1957) Demographic yearbook 1957, New York, p. 21.

The reason for this disparity is " that censuses are primarily dependent on the resources and efficiency of the statistical administrations, as well as on the collaboration of the population, while availability of vital statistics depends to a larger degree on the participation of the whole population, which is responsible for the registration of births, deaths, marriages and other vital events".[1] Africa and Asia are the continents most deficient in such statistics. In 1956, out of a total of 214 countries or territories, only 4 in Africa, 18 in the Americas, and 7 in Asia forwarded comprehensive birth and death statistics to the United Nations, though it is necessary to qualify this statement with the remark that comprehensiveness is not necessarily always allied to accuracy. Difficulties in obtaining adequate vital statistics are rarely due to any single direct cause. Even in a single country there may be much variety in the extent to which registration of vital events is carried out. In almost all countries the degree of efficiency in collecting such material varies from possibly very high in cities and towns to very low in rural areas.

This deficiency in knowledge of the occurrence of births and deaths in the world is a barrier to the full discussion, let alone the planning and execution, of programmes for improving health. Its nature is such that many international and national health programmes can be based only on guesswork about what is needed.

Health statistics

It is axiomatic that sound health statistical and epidemiological systems cannot be expected in a country lacking the usual fundamental administrative and social services. As a country improves its local government and provides its people with a gradually widening series of social services, it reaches a stage when it is possible for it to obtain the essential facts for a study of its social, economic and health problems. At the present time, there are serious gaps in the collection of data on such matters as causes of death and disease by age, sex and season, or even causes of death alone. This is confirmed by the fact that in 1958 only the following returns were available to WHO in this connexion:

Subject	Number of countries and territories
(i) causes of death	93 [2]
(ii) causes of death by age and sex	77
(iii) incidence of communicable diseases by season	176
(iv) incidence of other diseases	7

It is estimated that about a further 100 countries and territories would need to submit returns before even a simple picture of world mortality and morbidity can emerge.

In 1953 WHO sent a questionnaire to its Member States to elicit information on the types of health statistics and related vital statistics available in different countries, on how they were obtained, and to what extent they were being transmitted to international organizations.[3] A certain number of countries answered fully; others did not answer at all, or gave very incomplete answers, since comprehensive answers would have involved them in months of patient research. The replies received show that in advanced countries, even though health statistics are numerous, they are varied and scattered among many government departments other than the health department, for example, the social welfare administration (social insurance returns, hospital statistics), the defence department (statistics of the army, navy and air force), and the education department (school medical inspection returns, numbers of graduates in medicine and allied professions). In many countries the provincial or municipal authorities are responsible for health, and do not necessarily supply statistics to the central government; and where statistics are supplied, they are not necessarily uniform from province to province. In some countries there is decentralization of government, with consequent decentralization of health statistics; or the organization is federal, with a like result. Nor is the terminology used uniform: medical schools differ greatly in background and methods of training, and diagnoses are couched in terms that vary not only from country to country but also within the same country. Again, a " bed " in a remote jungle hospital can hardly be placed on a par with a " bed " in a large teaching hospital in an advanced country, although both are called " beds ". Similarly, the meaning of " doctor ", " nurse ", etc. will differ from country to country, or even within one and the same country.

---

[1] United Nations (1956) Demographic yearbook 1956, New York, p. 14.

[2] Data on causes of death from some 50 countries only are considered by WHO as sufficiently reliable for publication in its Annual Epidemiological and Vital Statistics.

[3] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1954, 11, 201.

Statistics on causes of death

The statistics available to WHO on causes of death suffer from further defects. In many countries, there are not enough physicians to attend every dying patient and certify the cause of death. If it is recorded at all, it will be by a lay registrar who may be merely guessing from crude information provided by relatives. Only a few countries have medical services with sufficient staff trained to give an accurate medical certificate of death. Indeed, the countries giving satisfactory information, both on the actual occurrence of death and on its causes, could be numbered on the fingers of one hand. The usefulness of material collected on a world-wide basis for regional or world analysis is therefore exceedingly limited. To its inherent defects of inaccuracy and incompleteness there must be added the serious difficulty of determining comparability between one country and another.

Quarantinable disease statistics

As soon as international health co-operation began to develop, the need for statistical and epidemiological data on the so-called quarantinable diseases became apparent. Hence such information is available in some detail right back to the beginnings of such predecessors of WHO as the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, the Office International d'Hygiène Publique, the League of Nations Health Organisation, and UNRRA. The information collected by all these organizations had a dual purpose.

Primarily it was collected with the intention of guiding countries in any administrative action they wished to take against the threat of invasion by quarantinable diseases from other countries. Indeed, this was the major purpose of the comprehensive network of stations established for the collection and diffusion of data on quarantinable diseases. The second purpose was the scientific determination of some of the circumstances governing the behaviour of these diseases, particularly when they took an epidemic or pandemic form. The statistics obtained had a certain value in showing the historical trends and geographical diffusion of each disease during a period of fifty years or more.

WHO inherited a complete system for the collection and reporting of quarantine information; this involved dealing annually with some 7000 routine reports from health and statistical authorities. In addition to ad hoc telegraphic notifications, the diffusion of the information was ensured by systematic broadcasting through a wide network of stations with occasional telegrams and routine airmailing of weekly periodicals from four focal points.

This system of collection and diffusion, valuable though it has been in dealing with the threat of the international spread of quarantinable diseases, could have only a restricted scientific value, owing to the probable incompleteness of many of the basic notifications from areas without physicians or health administrations.

Morbidity statistics

In proportion as the campaigns against the great killing scourges have met with success, interest has grown in causes of diseases which are widespread, but not in themselves immediately fatal. This type of morbidity has figured with increasing prominence in the discussions of international councils of statisticians and epidemiologists in the last two or three decades, and its statistical and epidemiological definition and analysis have proved particularly difficult. Whatever the causes of this morbidity—whether they were acute, communicable, chronic, neoplastic, or accidental—they raised basic questions of terminology, classification, and measurement by suitable indices. Until these were answered, epidemiologists and statisticians could scarcely employ any refinement of analysis in defining the significance of the various causative and correlative factors. In turn these raised other difficulties, as for example, that of bringing uniformity into the collection of morbidity data from different regions where methods of diagnosis and nomenclatures varied in efficiency, completeness and form.

One particularly troublesome statistical problem has been that of the hospital record. Even though case records have accumulated in hospitals for generations, no simple means has yet been evolved for the international use of what superficially appears to be an invaluable source of clinical and pathological material for epidemiological purposes. This general statement does not belittle the valuable contributions which have been made, not only to clinical medicine and pathology, but also to epidemiology and public health, by numbers of individual studies based on morbidity records from hospitals in many countries. It is only in the present decade that international studies have been undertaken to develop their comparability, an important facet of the more general problem of comparability in morbidity statistics.

Statistical methodology

By the end of the Second World War, considerable developments had taken place in the theory of probability, sampling methods, and techniques for field trials, surveys, and controlled laboratory experiments. These techniques were obviously urgently needed, and the fact that this methodology had first appeared in countries with well-organized social, medical, and statistical services was no argument for delaying the application of some of the newer techniques in countries lacking them. Indeed, many of these techniques were admirably suited to epidemiological and statistical enquiry in almost any community, however primitive its condition or however awkward its physical environment. Above all, the method of sampling had been so improved that it could be operated at relatively small cost, provide up-to-date data, and give a reasonably accurate picture of the health situation.

A technique of some value in epidemiological and statistical work is that of the survey. Early surveys of such matters as the incidence of disease, based on hospital populations, out-patient records, or general practitioners' returns, omitted many of the checks and adjustments required to remove distortions caused by such factors as differing age and sex composition. By the middle of the present century, however, the limits and fallacies, as well as the advantages and potentialities, of surveys had become much clearer. The technique of the survey had been so developed as to make it suitable for regions of the world from which no records of diseases had been previously available. The hazards of surveying such highly selected populations as hospital patients or industrial communities were known, and frequently could be overcome. It had therefore become possible for experienced people to use surveys profitably in the service of international health statistics.

At the same time a fuller appreciation was being gained of the application of statistical analysis to recorded results of clinical trials, field observations, and similar investigations. This showed the place that these techniques should have in the training of health workers destined for work in under-developed countries.

When WHO launched its programmes it was thus accepted that it had a duty to make health statistical techniques available to administrations, educational institutions, and research workers in countries co-operating in international health programmes. This was an urgent task, as failure to use such techniques in planning or executing large programmes in diverse communities could be wasteful of money and seriously delay achievement of aims, besides perpetuating wrong technical theories to the disadvantage of other plans or programmes.

International statistical classification of diseases

In the earlier revisions of the International Lists of Causes of Death, some doubt had been expressed as to their suitability for use in countries with few or poor health and social services. In 1938, the Conference for the Fifth Revision of the International Lists had particularly mentioned the need to prepare simpler lists, the application of which would be guided by suitable rules for use in countries not having a full vital statistical registration. Furthermore, statisticians in Africa and Asia had become aware of the unsuitability of the full detailed list even before the Second World War. Therefore, when preparations were launched, after the Second World War, for the sixth revision of the Lists, proposals had already been submitted for a study of this problem. An allied problem was the dependence of the International Lists of Causes of Death on medical certification. Earlier assumptions to the effect that only returns submitted by medical practitioners were of value had to be discarded, and the hard fact accepted that in most regions of the world full and accurate medical certification could not be achieved within the foreseeable future. This called for the study of methods of collecting records of causes of death in cases where the attendance of a fully qualified medical practitioner could not be taken for granted. Methods had to be simple, efficient, and economical.

Co-operation and co-ordination

It is thus clear that, at the time of WHO's foundation, there was a considerable lack of even the basic facts required for the elaboration of international health programmes. The situation was bad enough with respect to the fundamental matter of enumerating population, but was even worse as regards the collection of important items concerning the causes of death and disease. The resources for gathering such facts were almost non-existent in some areas. This was the challenge. It could be met, theoretically, with a certain degree of optimism, in that much experience had been gained in methods and techniques suitable for application in any type of country for which data were required for the conduct of health programmes.

To meet the needs and apply the newer measures meant collaboration with national administrations and with many other organizations and agencies. It was important that governments, and their technical departments and teaching institutions, should give their full support. Medical, nursing, and allied professions had to be persuaded to plan health programmes in such a way as to give due place to the study of health problems and the collection of essential health statistics. A large programme had therefore to be undertaken to gain the support and goodwill of these various agencies and individuals, and, as will be seen in due course, it included, inter alia, the creation of an important system of national committees on vital and health statistics.

Internationally, too, much preparation was necessary to secure adequate liaison with all inter-governmental and governmental bodies concerned in health programmes. Naturally, the first to be considered among these was the United Nations itself, which had the responsibility of collecting such basic data as the numbers of populations, their age and sex composition, and vital statistics. It was encouraging that WHO would have the powerful support of the United Nations in appeals to countries and institutions for improved statistical services.

In that many health problems have facets to be examined by such other agencies as FAO, ILO, and UNESCO, the need for liaison with these agencies was accepted by WHO. The co-operation of individuals and of the non-governmental agencies had also to be obtained; in fact, no agency had been more helpful in the earlier history of international statistics than the International Statistics Institute.

The importance attached by WHO at the outset to co-operation and co-ordination in its international programmes has undoubtedly been responsible for much of their success.

SECURING INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY

Efforts to secure international comparability in health statistics began as early as 1851 on the initiative of certain intergovernmental and voluntary organizations. Attention was then focused primarily on developing a uniform nomenclature and classification of diseases and causes of death. This in turn brought out the need for establishing uniform rules for the selection and certification of the cause to which a particular death was to be ascribed in case there were several contributory causes, occurring jointly or successively. It was soon found that a number of complex technical and administrative procedures, ranging from the certification of the cause of death to the final tabulation of the mass of data on mortality by age, sex, locality, cause, etc., required standardization. Many of the problems involved have been successfully resolved, thus greatly contributing to the value and international comparability of health statistics, and particularly mortality statistics.

During the last half-century, the widening in scope of public health activity from control of preventable diseases and improvement of environmental sanitation to the promotion of health has created an increasing demand for comparable data on factors and conditions affecting the public health, e.g., on such subjects as maternal and child health, school health services, mental health, etc. Scientific advances in medicine and statistical methodology have further emphasized the importance of detailed and comparable statistical information. While many old problems still remain unsolved, new ones are appearing—for example, in connexion with the recently developed practice of measuring and comparing general morbidity levels of populations by sample surveys, many of which are planned on a national scale.

The role of WHO

While the responsibility for operating national health statistical services rests with the country concerned, it has fallen to WHO to take steps to develop uniform terminology, definitions, recording procedures, classification schemes and, at the same time, to devise uniform programmes for the tabulation and interpretation of data by means of uniformly computed health statistics indices. Each of these tasks requires, in the first instance, a world-wide study of the nature and causes of variations in statistical procedure. Some of these variations are bound up with the special needs of the country concerned, some exist because of long-standing legal and administrative provisions, and some are related to the country's stage of development. But the keen desire of each country to compare its statistical indices on health with those of others has been fully demonstrated by the co-operation that WHO has received in its exploratory work and the willingness of the various countries to adopt international recommendations.

WHO has been particularly concerned to improve definitions of terms used in vital and health statistics and to make them comparable —tasks which are clearly inter-related. Through the expert committees set up by the Organization, steady advances have been and are being made towards greater uniformity in this field. These committees deal on the one hand with specific diseases, such as tuberculosis, malaria, treponematoses, cancer and heart disease, to name only a few, and on the other with general services, such as public health administration, environmental sanitation, maternal and child health, nutrition and mental health.

The recommendations of these committees appear in the various reports in the WHO Technical Report Series and cannot be described in this brief review, though mention should be made of the reports of the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics, which are of particular interest to those seeking guidance on special definitions and the classification of disease.

Some special definitions

Health authorities are becoming increasingly concerned with the prevention of avoidable deaths in the period of gestation and during infancy, especially where the major preventable diseases have already been brought under control. In the absence of proper definitions, work in this field is hampered on both the national and international levels. In respect of stillbirths or foetal deaths, for example, it is obviously essential that there should be uniform agreement among those responsible for the notification of deaths in each country on the criteria for deciding whether a baby is born dead or has died after birth. This distinction is important for the recording of vital statistics which will be affected according to whether entries are made under births and deaths in general, or in a special category for foetal deaths. Moreover, it is necessary in order that public health authorities may assess the nature and extent of the problem and take appropriate measures for dealing with it.

The importance of a universally accepted definition of stillbirth was recognized by the League of Nations Health Organisation, and its Committee of Expert Statisticians adopted the following definition in 1927: " A dead-birth is the birth of a foetus, after at least twenty-eight weeks' pregnancy, in which pulmonary respiration does not occur; such a foetus may die either (a) before, (b) during or (c) after birth, but before it has breathed." [1]

This definition does not provide uniform and definite criteria for differentiating between a stillbirth and a live birth. At the end of the Second World War, a wide variety of definitions were still in use throughout the world, and this created many difficulties in the analysis of statistics by public health offices.[2] In certain countries, e.g., Spain and some of its former South American colonies, a child had to survive 24 hours to be registered as a live birth. In others, including France, the case of a child born alive but dying before registration was counted as a stillbirth; and in yet others it was counted as a death, but not as a live birth. Such differences in classification might, in some cases, mean a reduction in the general death-rate of the order of 1.2%.

The Second World Health Assembly called for the establishment of a subcommittee to study the question of the definition of stillbirth and allied matters. It asked for:

" (a) special studies on live births and foetal deaths in relation to various factors (gestation period, birth weight, single or multiple birth, etc.) to obtain a statistical basis for a satisfactory definition of immaturity;

(b) classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated;

(c) magnitude of loss of foetal lives at various periods of pregnancy;

(d) better utilization of records of maternity and children's hospitals for medical-statistical research into the causes of foetal and infant death." [3]

A WHO Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion met in 1950. After due consideration, it proposed the definitions given below, which were approved by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics and subsequently adopted by the Third World Health Assembly. The universal use of these definitions would clearly go far to provide comparable data on perinatal mortality.

The definitions are:

" Live birth is the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles, whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached; each product of such a birth is considered live born."

---

[1] League of Nations (1927) Report of the Committee [of] Expert Statisticians on the definition of stillbirth, Geneva (Document C.H./Expert Stat./46).

[2] Pascua, M. (1948) Diversity of stillbirth definitions and some statistical repercussions. Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1, 210.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 25 5.

" Foetal death is death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy; the death is indicated by the fact that after such separation the foetus does not breathe or show any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles."

" All live-born infants should be registered and counted as such, irrespective of the period of gestation, and if they die at any time following birth, they should also be registered and counted as deaths." [1]

The International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death

The first part of this account carried the history of this significant international instrument as far as the fifth revision of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death, which took place in 1938.

The sixth decennial revision, for which WHO became responsible, was largely prepared before the Organization was created. Following the fifth revision, a United States Committee on Joint Causes of Death, commencing work in 1945, had prepared a Proposed Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death. This Committee included representatives of Canada, the United Kingdom and the Health Organisation of the League of Nations. Its proposed classification was indeed the first successful effort to bring both mortality and morbidity statistics into one list and had been evolved after trials in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics, set up by the WHO Interim Commission in 1947, submitted this classification to various national health and statistical authorities and presented it to the International Conference for the Sixth Revision convened by the French Government in April 1948 in Paris. Having been endorsed by the Conference, it was finally adopted by the First World Health Assembly in July 1948. This Assembly also adopted the WHO Nomenclature Regulations.[2]

These Regulations were significant, making use for the first time of the important provision in the WHO Constitution whereby regulations adopted by the Assembly would automatically come into force in all those Member States which had not formally rejected them or entered reservations against them. In the past, the revision conferences had merely made recommendations to countries to adopt the revised lists, frequently an ineffectual procedure. The Regulations were thus the first application of the principle of " contracting out " in international health.

The regulations cover a comprehensive programme of international co-operation in statistics, requiring Member States to publish statistics of causes of death for: (a) the territory as a whole; (b) principal towns; (c) national aggregates of urban areas (districts); and (d) national aggregates of rural areas (districts). There are additional responsibilities accepted by countries observing the Regulations such as undertakings to publish statistics of causes of death by prescribed age and sex groupings, and in accordance with the classification, nomenclature, and numbering of the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death.

Perhaps the most important feature of the Nomenclature Regulations is the requirement that each Member State must adopt a form of medical certificate that provides for the statement of the disease or condition directly leading to death, together with such antecedent morbid conditions as may exist, so that the underlying cause of death will be clearly indicated, together with any other significant conditions contributing to death which are not, however, related to the disease or condition causing death.

The action of the First World Health Assembly in adopting the WHO Nomenclature Regulations and the associated lists of the sixth revision was indeed a landmark in international health statistics. Among the features which make it outstanding are: the agreement on a single list of terms applicable to both mortality and morbidity statistics; the comprehensiveness of the Classification; the degree of uniformity achieved; the agreement on a form of medical certificate based on the selection of the main cause of death to be tabulated; and the guidance given in a set of rules to national compilers using the lists.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 25, 12.

[2] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1948, 13, Annex 1. The full title of these Regulations is: WHO Regulations regarding Nomenclature (including the Compilation and Publication of Statistics) with respect to Diseases and Causes of Death.

In 1948 WHO implemented one of the decisions of the First World Health Assembly by publishing in two volumes the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death, which was issued in English, French and Spanish. A shortened form in Latin[1] was produced in 1955 at the request of a number of countries, mainly of central and northern Europe, which still use medical terminology in this language. This Index Alphabeticus does not provide for a classification of violent causes of death or illness according to the external agent involved, since there is no generally accepted nomenclature in Latin for describing external causes of death and their action (vehicles, firearms, etc.).

The sixth revision, as adopted in 1948, also includes a detailed, an intermediate, and an abridged list, thus maintaining the tradition of the earlier revisions. The detailed list contains three-digit categories in seventeen main sections, covering, inter alia, the chief infectious diseases, neoplasms, allergies, and metabolic and nutritional diseases. Other diseases are grouped mainly according to their principal anatomical sites, but there are special sections for mental diseases, complications of pregnancy and childbirth, early infancy, senility, and ill-defined diseases. Injuries are placed in a dual classification, firstly according to the external cause, secondly according to the nature of the injury.

The introduction of the decimal classification in the detailed list has the advantage of making changes in the numbers given to items unnecessary when alterations from previous revisions are made. The first two digits of the three-digit number in many instances designate important groups of diseases, while the third divides each group into categories which represent a specific disease or its classification according to some significant feature, such as the anatomical site. Certain numbers have been omitted to provide for future additions. The intermediate list includes 150 causes for tabulation of morbidity and mortality; the abbreviated list 50 causes for tabulation of mortality. A special list contains 50 causes for tabulation of morbidity for social security purposes.

The Manual also contains certain supplementary classifications, a model medical certificate of the cause of death, and an alphabetical index of diagnostic terms coded to the appropriate categories. A part of the Manual includes sub-divisions of many of the three-digit categories into four-digit categories. These are intended for use by countries or services which wish to make more comprehensive studies of causes of illness, disability, or death.

Although no serious objection has been made to the general structure of the Classification, an important section of the introduction to the Manual deals with certain of its features which have been questioned. Some of the shortcomings of the Classification reflect the persistent division of opinion between those using the anatomical and those favouring the etiological approach. The position given to such diseases as rheumatic fever, pneumonia and influenza has also been criticized, since opinions differ as to the emphasis to be given to the conditions themselves or their complications and sequelae. Language is the source of serious problems. As the introduction puts it: " It is evident that versions of the Classification in languages other than English cannot be mere literal translations of the original text but must be adapted to the medical terminology in actual use. Efforts have already been made by the World Health Organization to compile French and Spanish versions from the basic English text, employing medical terms in actual use while at the same time preserving as much as possible the original meaning and intent. Further improvement can be brought about by the users of the Classification in communicating such differences in local usage to the World Health Organization and by the physicians themselves in stating the meaning and the prevalent usage of a medical term." [1]

---

[1] World Health Organization (1955) Index alphabeticus Classificationis Internationalis Statisticalis Morborum, Injuriarum et Causarum Mortis, Geneva.

Seventh decennial revision of the Classification

In accordance with the decision to revise the Classification every ten years, preparations were made for the seventh revision shortly after the publication of the Manual. A series of meetings of expert groups was arranged as for the sixth revision, the results of the experience gleaned from the use of the Manual throughout the world were collated, and governments were consulted for their views on how the Classification could best be improved. WHO's health statistical services had by now been established, and provided an international clearing-house for the co-ordination of statistics, as well as promoting their international comparability. The WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics furnished advice and assistance and special technical questions were considered by its subcommittees: as, for example, the Subcommittee on Definition of Stillbirth—which dealt with the problem of enlarging and improving the relevant categories in the Classification, which had proved in practice to be too few or insufficiently specific—and the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation. A Conference on Morbidity Statistics was held in 1951 to discuss the problems involved in the compilation, presentation and analysis of statistics of disease.

An important additional source of advice and experiment in the use of the Classification was the WHO Centre for Problems arising in the Application of the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death. This had been set up by the Third World Health Assembly [2] in 1951 on the recommendation of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, and had been established in the General Register Office of England and Wales; not inappropriately, for this was the office from which William Farr had issued the annual reports which did so much to set health and vital statistics on a firm foundation.

In the role of technical adviser and " laboratory " the Centre has dealt with a variety of practical problems encountered by countries in applying the Classification. It has helped in the interpretation of obscurities; advised on tabulation; listed ambiguities, defects and errors; studied the problems arising in practice from the utilization and coding of death certificates; advised on training in the use of the Classification; conducted research into national records on certification of causes of death, reporting of morbidity in hospitals and sickness surveys; and drawn up practical instructions on how to collect, record, code and classify data in accordance with the Classification.

The Centre was responsible for the compilation of booklets of instructions,[3] some of which will be considered later; and it assessed changes in comparability of statistics due to the passage of time,[4] basing itself on the constant flow of reports and queries from governments.

The mass of information accumulated from these various sources was considered by an advisory group which met in London in 1954 and proposed certain amendments to the Classification. These amendments were in turn considered by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics and later by the International Conference for the Seventh Decennial Revision, which met in 1955 in Paris.

This Conference made recommendations regarding the certification of death; suggested deferring the problem of the classification of stillbirth until more experience had been gained from the use of the existing classification; and advised less stringency in the application of certain of the WHO Nomenclature Regulations because the obligations they imposed upon countries sometimes exceeded national resources and even needs. It paid special attention to the major problem of obtaining information on health conditions in areas without doctors, where causes of death could not be based on a proper medical diagnosis so that there could be no question of applying the International Classification. There was general agreement in the Conference that information was obtainable from such areas, both on diseases and on causes of death, by means of simple lists of causes stated in terms of obvious symptoms or, broadly, in terms of anatomical sites or systems. The Conference accordingly recommended that WHO consider ways and means of obtaining information in these areas, and co-ordinate national or regional studies on the subject.

---

[1] World Health Organization (1937) Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death, 1955 revision, Geneva, vol. 1, p. xxxiii.

[2] World Health Organization (1957) Handbook of resolutions and decisions, 4th ed., p. 22.

[3] World Health Organization (1952) Medical certification of cause of death, Geneva: World Health Organization (1953) Supplementary interpretations and instructions for coding causes of death, Geneva.

[4] World Health Organization (1952) Comparability of statistics of causes of death according to the fifth and sixth revisions of the International List, Geneva.

The Ninth World Health Assembly adopted the seventh revision and the additional regulations giving effect to the various recommendations.[1] As experience had shown that the WHO Nomenclature Regulations were difficult to apply in many countries, they were amended so as to allow greater freedom and flexibility in the reporting and recording of deaths and provide more convenient lists and age-groupings for particular types of disease. There was no sacrifice of the fundamental principles of statistical uniformity and comparability.

The seventh revision, and the attendant regulations, came into force on 1 January 1958. It conformed to its predecessor in most respects, incorporating such advances in the diagnosis of disease and causes of death as had been made since the sixth revision.

Basically, the Classification as evolved by the sixth and seventh revisions is a compromise, as it must be if it is to be accepted internationally. It is designed to be used by doctors educated at different medical schools in different countries with different backgrounds over a period of more than fifty years of rapid progress in medicine, and to meet the varying requirements of hospitals, vital statistics offices, medical services of the armed forces, social insurance organizations, sickness surveys, and a host of other agencies, as well as of the relatively or absolutely unqualified person who will apply it (in simplified form) in areas where there are no doctors. Attempts to provide a statistical classification based on a strictly logical arrangement of morbid conditions have hitherto failed, and the Classification has accordingly had to effect a compromise between classifications based on etiology, anatomical site, age, and circumstances of onset. As Farr observed: "The medical practitioner may found his main divisions of diseases on their treatment as medical or surgical; the pathologist, on the nature of the morbid action or product; the anatomist or the physiologist on the tissues and organs involved; the medical jurist on the suddenness or the slowness of death; and all these points will deserve attention in a statistical classification."

The Classification has not only had to pay attention to these points, but also to take the quality of the information available in medical reports into consideration. It is therefore not surprising that there has been criticism of some categories, usually based upon disagreement regarding the etiology of some disease or its place in a certain group. With improved knowledge it is to be expected that in due course each disease or group of diseases will be classified in a way that commands international support.

Medical certificates of death: application of the Classification to causes of death

Early records of death usually mentioned only one cause but in the course of time it became recognized that two or more causes were often involved and that it was important to decide carefully which was the main one. Certain principles were laid down in the first revision of the International List of Causes of Death, and these were applied by the United States Bureau of the Census in a Manual of Joint Causes of Death, first published in 1914 and afterwards revised to conform with successive revisions of the List. This manual was used by other countries as well. Rather more flexible rules concerning the cause or causes of death were applied by the General Register Office of England and Wales. The Fifth Decennial Revision Conference requested the United States Government to continue its investigations into the problem of multiple causes of death, in co-operation with other governments and organizations, and these investigations and the suggestions made led in due course to the approval by the Sixth Revision Conference of an International Form of Medical Certificate of Cause of Death and Rules for Classification,[1] which included a definition of the underlying cause of death.

---

[1] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 71, 29.

The Rules for Classification observe that, for the purpose of introducing public health measures to prevent the precipitating cause of death from operating, " the most useful single statistic is that relating to the underlying cause of death, which may be defined as (a) the disease or injury which initiated the train of morbid events leading directly to death, or (b) the circumstances of the accident or violence which produced the fatal injury ". The recommended form provides for:

" I. (a) Direct Cause, (due to)
(b) Intervening antecedent cause, (due to)
(c) Underlying antecedent cause;

II. Other significant conditions contributing to the death but not related to the disease or conditions causing it."

These Rules for Classification give examples of how the certificate is completed, as well as of improbable sequences in the train of morbid events, and other errors; and provide notes for the interpretation of entries of causes of death. Member States of WHO pledge themselves under the WHO Nomenclature Regulations to adopt this death certificate, and to ensure as far as possible that it is completed by an attending physician.[2] The Regulations also stress the need for protecting the confidential nature of the certificate during any administrative procedures. This is an important point, and great stress was laid on it in papers read at the First International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics in 1954, by Aubenque [3] and Neurdenburg,[4] the latter remarking that if there is no guarantee that confidentiality will be respected, medical practitioners may be reluctant to make a precise and full report.

As already noted, the WHO Centre for Classification for Diseases, after consultation with several national statistical offices and after experimental trials, drew up additional rules—the Supplementary Interpretations and Instructions for Coding Causes of Death, and Medical Certification of Causes of Death—which were incorporated into the Rules for Classification in the 1955 revision of the Manual.

While specifying uniform and efficient methods of recording medical opinion, as given in certificates of causes of death, the 1955 Revision Conference formally recognized the difficulty that many national administrations would have in applying the relevant rules. One serious difficulty in many countries is the lack of medical practitioners to attend the sick and sign certificates. The Conference therefore recommended that WHO undertake a study of methods which could be used temporarily in specific areas as a substitute for the classical methods, but would still furnish health administrations with useful information on the frequency and severity of specific diseases or groups of diseases. A series of regional statistical seminars have since initiated the search for, and the experimental application of, such methods.

Another important step towards increasing international comparability was taken in April 1955 by the establishment in Caracas, in the Ministry of Health and Welfare, Venezuela, of the Latin American Centre for the Classification of Diseases. The specific tasks of this Centre are to promote completeness, accuracy and comparability of mortality statistics in Latin America, by means of training courses and by serving as the clearing-house for problems arising in the application of the Spanish edition of the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death. By a decision of the WHO Regional Committee for South-East Asia in 1958, another Centre with similar objectives is to be established in New Delhi.

---

[1] World Health Organization (1957) Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death, 1955 revision, Geneva, vol. 1, p. 355.

[2] World Health Organization (1957) Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death, 1955 revision, Geneva, vol. 1, p. 392.

[3] Aubenque, M. J. (1954) Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 11, 63.

[4] Neurdenburg, M. G. (1954) Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 11, 51.

Geographical limitations in international comparability

To ensure comparability of health statistics, it is necessary not only to have an efficient administrative machinery for recording vital events, and statistical services to compute and tabulate them, but also an adequate number of competent physicians to diagnose causes of illnesses and deaths. But estimates made by the United Nations Statistical Office[1] show that only 33% of the deaths occurring annually in the world are recorded and included in statistics, the proportion by continent ranging from 100% in Europe and North America to 39% in South America, 18.2% in Asia, and 13% in Africa. The proportion is as low as 8% in tropical and southern Africa, and 7% in eastern Asia. The number of physicians available for certifying causes of death is even less than the number of lay registrars. It is not surprising therefore that the population covered by adequate statistics of causes of death is smaller still than that covered by crude mortality data.

Statistics of causes of death deemed worthy of reproduction in the latest issue of WHO's Annual Epidemiological and Vital Statistics cover a population of 682 millions in 50 countries or territories, representing roughly 25% of the world's population.

The practical impossibility of applying standard statistical methods to most under-developed areas has been increasingly realized by WHO. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics has accordingly recommended that WHO concentrate its statistical activities in the coming years on the search for substitute methods capable of meeting the needs of territories in various stages of development. The possibility of securing comparable data has been explored at a series of international seminars and training centres in vital and health statistics organized in collaboration with the United Nations. Regional advisers in health statistics have further pursued this task by assisting national governments.

Co-operation with the United Nations

The definitions of live birth and foetal death adopted by the Third World Health Assembly, as well as the International Classification, have been included in the Principles for a Vital Statistics System, adopted by the United Nations.[2] The United Nations is concerned with problems of demography, and these Principles, after adoption by the Statistical Commission of the United Nations Economic and Social Council, were approved by the Council and forwarded to governments with the request that " they review and appraise their procedures for registering vital events and compiling vital statistics, taking into consideration the principles for a vital statistics system, and introduce such changes as are feasible to improve national statistics and their national comparability in this field... ". The Principles cover the registration of vital events, the recording, reporting and collecting of data for statistical purposes, and the compilation of vital statistics, and were based on a survey of procedures in 58 countries. In their preparation the comments of the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics were taken into consideration. As a result, the recommendations relating to the responsibility for medical certification of cause of death, the use of the International Form of Medical Certificate of Cause of Death, and the definition and classification of cause of death are in accordance with the WHO Nomenclature Regulations; and the definitions of live birth and foetal death are those given above. There is thus close co-operation between WHO and the United Nations in the effort to introduce uniformity of definition and international comparability into vital and health statistics.

---

[1] United Nations (1956) Demographic yearbook 1956, New York, p. 75.

[2] United Nations (1953) Principles for a vital statistics system (Statistical Papers, Series M, No. 19), New York.

IMPROVEMENT OF NATIONAL STATISTICS

It is one thing for a heterogeneous collection of countries, ranging from the highly to the poorly developed, to agree on international regulations or recommendations in vital and health statistics; it is quite another for these countries to set their statistical houses in order by improving their existing systems or by creating new statistical services. WHO has sought to help countries in developing their statistical services by a programme of advice, by co-operative action on a national, regional or international scale, and by promoting education and training. Advisers in statistics have been appointed to WHO's regional offices; the establishment of national committees on vital and health statistics has been encouraged; WHO centres for the classification of diseases have been created; fellowships in health statistics have been awarded; and seminars and training centres on vital and health statistics have been conducted, in conjunction with the United Nations and the governments of the countries concerned. WHO has also endeavoured to co-operate with other bodies, international, national, governmental or non-governmental, interested in furthering health statistics.

National committees on vital and health statistics

The idea of national committees was mooted at the International Conference for the Sixth Decennial Revision of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death in 1948. The Conference recommended that governments should set them up, in order to co-ordinate statistical activities within each country and to serve as a link between national statistical organizations and WHO. Such committees, it was considered, could also study statistical problems of public health importance and make the results of their investigations available to WHO, thus providing it with valuable information on national points of view. Where national co-ordinating bodies already existed, as they did in a few countries, they could take over these functions as an addition to those they already had.

By 1958, 35 national committees had been created, while others were in the process of being created. WHO Headquarters in Geneva keeps in close touch with them, both to facilitate the exchange of information between them and to bring a variety of material to their attention, and, through them, to the attention of other interested organizations. The WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics has referred specific problems to them—such as the development of a statistical classification of operations and anaesthetic procedures, the classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated on the death certificate, the terms and definitions used in connexion with morbidity statistics, and the study of the accuracy of diagnoses on death certificates, with special reference to cancer.

The idea behind these national committees was that they should bring together in each country representatives of the administrative services interested in vital and health statistics. Duplication of activities sometimes occurs among different government agencies, or there is uncertainty of responsibility, to the detriment of the country's statistics as a whole. It was felt that if representatives met periodically a spirit of co-operation would be generated and statistics would come to be seen, not as the exclusive preserve of one or other department, but as a subject in which all were interested and to which all could make a contribution. There were no hard and fast rules laid down about composition or meetings; some committees meet regularly, some not, and the numbers attending depend on conditions in the country. Some committees have been very active and have done a great deal of work both within the country and internationally. They provide a very convenient forum for the discussion of technical problems and for the exchange of information, and they transmit to WHO information and reports on their proceedings and studies. These reports often have a stimulating effect on national committees in other countries, which are naturally interested in seeing how the same statistical problems are dealt with elsewhere; and indeed they may be expected to help, to however small an extent, in standardizing statistical procedures internationally.

The international aspect of national committees on vital and health statistics was summarized as follows by one of the originators of the idea: " To be comparable from country to country, to be useful at the international level, part of the statistical product in each country should be the same in all countries . . . But this means international requirements—and there's the rub! For international requirements have a way of creating difficult procedural problems back in the countries, States, and localities where the data must be collected in the first place. In some instances the effort to collect data needed internationally may interfere with local ways of doing things, or entail effort that the locality or nation would rather spend on data more acutely needed at home. All this we know, and we also know the effect—that international recommendations are sometimes ignored, and the international data series represent not all but only some of the countries . . .

" As an essential part of the mechanics of reaching international agreement on statistical matters, direct participation of national technicians should be sought and obtained at the planning stage. This is a fundamental principle of the national committee concept... The creation of a national committee is in itself no guarantee that this national objective will be accomplished. But it is difficult to visualize how it can be accomplished at all in the absence of a national committee." [1]

In 1953 the First International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics was convened in London under the auspices of WHO and in close collaboration with the United Nations.[2] Delegates of 28 Member States were present, as well as representatives of the International Labour Office and the International Statistical Institute. The Conference laid down the objectives that national committees should aim at, and recommended that any government that had not done so should " review, having regard to the particular circumstances of its country, the practicability of setting up such a committee ". The functions of a national committee would, the Conference felt, normally be advisory and consultative, but it should be free also to consider any other matters within the general scope of its terms of reference and, in appropriate circumstances, stimulate the undertaking of analysis, research and special studies. Its membership should include administrative, professional and lay persons concerned with the collection and analysis of health and vital statistics both at the national and at the regional or local levels, and it should be able to invite competent persons in special subjects to participate in its work. Its reports should not only go to the government, but should also be forwarded periodically to WHO and, when appropriate, to the United Nations. WHO should circulate such reports, summarize information wherever possible and desirable, and point to significant developments in the field and to analogous activities in the different countries. Finally, WHO might consider the possibility of aiding the national committees to carry out their work more effectively, by providing assistance for particular purposes, or by fellowships enabling visits to be made to other committees carrying out joint investigations. WHO might also periodically consider, on the basis of the information received from the committees, whether any action was required on its part; and it might keep in mind the desirability of convening other similar conferences.

---

[1] Dunn, H. L. (1954) Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 11, 151.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1954, 85.

Fellowships

The need for better statistical and epidemiological information has led to a demand for more trained statisticians, of whom there is a serious shortage throughout the world. In 1951 the Expert Committee on Health Statistics recommended that special consideration be given in WHO training programmes to the training of statistical staff and the granting of fellowships for this purpose. The figures for fellowships awarded in health statistics are as follows:

Year	Number of WHO fellowships in health statistics
1947	4
1948	1
1949	—
1950	7
1951	59
1952	22
1953	21
1954	42
1955	49
1956	39
1957	61
1958	60

From 1952 to 1958 the figures for individual regions were as shown in the table below.

WHO FELLOWSHIPS IN HEALTH STATISTICS BY REGION, 1952-1958

Region of origin	Year of award
	1952	1953	1954	1955	1956	1957	1958	Total
Africa				1	1	1		3
America		10	27	25	28	47	35	172
Eastern Mediterranean	1	3	5	8	6	6	15	44
South-East Asia	1	4		2	1	4	1	13
Europe	6	2	9	2	1	3	8	31
Western Pacific	14	2	1	11	2		1	31
	22	21	42	49	39	61	60	294

Fellowships are given to selected individuals to spend a period of study at a university, or of observation and practical training in the statistical offices of a country more advanced than, or otherwise different from, their own. The award of these fellowships is a recognition that each country, whatever its development, must have at least a nucleus of health workers who have acquired the necessary statistical skills and knowledge to impart to their colleagues and students. As a method of promoting technical instruction, it is felt to be an investment which gives returns out of all proportion to the original outlay, and to be a valuable stimulus of national efforts to improve statistical services. To meet the training needs of a broader group, other training opportunies have been devised, such as seminars or training centres.

Seminars and training centres

The chief objective of seminars and training centres is to bring responsible statistical workers of various countries in one or more regions together to take part in a programme designed to improve national vital and health statistical services and, as a corollary, international statistics. There is training in organizational, methodological and analytical techniques of vital and health statistics; instruction in the aims and working programmes of international agencies in that field; dissemination of information on international standards and recommendations for the improvement of national statistics and for the attainment of international comparability; and development of close working relationships and co-ordination of effort among the national agencies concerned. Exchange of information and ideas is encouraged, and professional contacts are made. This type of training provides practical, but more summary and more specialized, instruction than is the rule in academic institutions. The seminar makes it available, however, to a larger number of persons than could take advantage of the fellowship programme; provides it as far as possible within a region, using the language, materials and problems of the region as the basis of the training; and does so at the minimum cost to the countries and sponsoring organizations.

In accordance with WHO's policy of co-operation, most of these seminars and training centres have been sponsored jointly with UN, the host government, and whatever other organizations are interested. For example, in the case of the twelve-week Inter-American Seminar for Biostatistics held in 1950 with 49 participants, the sponsors were the Government of Chile, the United Nations, the Pan American Sanitary Bureau (which acts as the WHO Regional Office for the Americas), the Inter-American Statistical Institute, and the National Office of Vital Statistics of the United States Public Health Service. Other training centres or seminars have been: a twelve-week International Training Centre on Vital Statistics and Health Statistics for South-East Asia in Ceylon in 1951, with 32 participants; a Training Centre on Vital Statistics and Health Statistics for the Eastern Mediterranean in Cairo in 1951 with 35 participants; one in Tokyo in 1952 with 33 participants; and one in Afghanistan in 1954 with 38 participants. Yet others have been held in Africa in 1956, with 20 participants, and in South-East Asia in 1958, with 18 participants. The participants in these seminars and training centres are heterogeneous: some medical, some not; some highly trained in statistical theory, others with only the basic training but engaged in the collection and publication of statistics and therefore with practical experience; and they represent a variety of statistical interests, official and non-official. The result is that the seminars provide a broad conspectus of statistical activities, and give sharper relief to the problems of co-ordination between these various interests. In some of them heads of services discuss their problems with experts; in others training is by group discussions following lectures; and much stress is laid on practical work. In some seminars teaching material is provided by lecture notes, reprints of professional articles, pamphlets, textbooks, reports and year-books of both national and international agencies, material which in itself forms the basis of a useful reference library for each participant. In others the participants take home their own notes and the various reports issued.

The discussions at these regional seminars brought out the need for holding similar reunions in the local languages in individual countries, and these have in fact taken place. In 1952 a significant advance in the training of statisticians was made by the establishment of an Inter-American Center of Biostatistics in Santiago, Chile, which was jointly sponsored by WHO, the United Nations, and the Chilean Government. This Center offers courses of some length, covering a variety of special fields in vital and health statistics, to statistical personnel in Central and South America; and it arranges practical training in the countries of that region. Its first class completed a nine-month course in 1953; six months of the course were devoted to academic studies, and three to practical training in various programmes in the field. It was attended by 31 students from 15 different countries. In 1956 responsibility for the course was accepted by the University of Chile. By 1958 about 200 students from 19 Spanish-speaking countries in South and Central America had been trained in the annual and supplementary courses given by the Center, with WHO assistance.

In 1951, WHO held a training course in Geneva for those engaged in coding in connexion with the application of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death, 1948 Revision. It was attended by 20 participants, from 16 different countries in the European region.

These activities have received full recognition from governments, and the publicity given to them, the participation in them of statistical staff from various countries, and the stress laid on the importance of international comparability and of national committees on vital and health statistics have created in the regions and in their constituent countries an awareness of the valuable part that improved statistical services can play in national development, as well as internationally. The emphasis is on the applied side of statistics, so that more efficient use is made of existing staff and resources; WHO does not attempt to duplicate the training to be obtained in academic institutions, where the necessary foundations in statistical training are, and should be, laid.

Consultants in statistics

Apart from fellowships and seminars, WHO has sent consultants to advise countries on their statistical services. A senior consultant in statistics has visited a large number of countries, and, in association with the respective regional offices, given advice on the institution of new, or improvement of existing, services. Most of the regional offices now have advisers to help in the development of adequate statistics throughout the region and in the co-ordination of work done in the various countries. Progress is especially noteworthy in the Americas, where PASB and its zone offices have their own statistical advisers.

A useful medium for imparting knowledge on epidemiology and statistics has been the medical teaching missions sent by WHO to a number of countries, especially in the Regions of the Eastern Mediterranean and South-East Asia. An example is to be found in the group which went to Israel in 1951.

In 1952 WHO established the principle of participation by statistical consultants in the work of project teams and field missions, so that epidemiology and statistics might receive due consideration in the planning and execution of programmes. There has been an inevitable increase in the desire for guidance in these aspects as a result of the gradual shift from emergency or ‘ ad hoc ’ programmes to longer-term programmes, which synchronizes with a growing interest internationally in co-ordinated research. This policy is doing much to extend knowledge of these sciences into many fields of medicine in most countries of the world.

The increase in the number of internationally co-ordinated research programmes has meant, too, that growing attention is being paid to such epidemiological and statistical techniques as surveys and controlled field experiments. Inevitably this has called for the application of modern knowledge to the design of such investigations.

Health statistical methods suitable for developing areas

The standard statistical methods for collecting data are not uniformly applicable throughout the world. Apart from purely local differences in methods, there are regional differences which embody cumulative experience and common traditions; these indeed are of major significance in explaining existing systems and in pointing the way to improvement. Thus, for instance, any improvement in the statistical system will require consideration of Islamic culture in countries of the Eastern Mediterranean, of Hispanic traditions in Central and South America, and of animist beliefs and tribal organization in tropical Africa.

Detailed knowledge of the local conditions in which diseases and deaths are recorded, of the availability of medical care, of local usage in registration, and of the degree of education of registrars in various types of communities, not to mention the social and educational level of the population itself, are all essential to the intelligent use of statistics and to plans for their improvement. A number of partial solutions may be needed.

Sampling methods have been used, and pilot registration areas established. In this connexion, semi-skilled medical personnel and even lay personnel have had to be employed to record vital events and their causation. Staff like this cannot provide accurate diagnoses, but they can record symptoms roughly, and their records, taken in conjunction with an approximate age grouping, may reveal to health authorities an abnormal frequency of maternal or infant deaths, for example, or of chest complaints, or diarrhoeal diseases.

Keeping apart data of various degrees of technical accuracy and completeness, instead of pooling them and arriving at meaningless " national aggregates ", in itself brings an improvement: not only because the grading of data is an incentive to raising the standard of inferior data, but because fairly reliable data relating to some urban areas are often available, and can be separated from less trustworthy material.

Teaching of statistics

With a view to improving the recording, analysis, interpretation, and presentation of statistics of health and disease, the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics[1] has emphasized the importance of teaching elementary statistical methodology to all medical students, preferably in the second and third years of their training. Emphasis has also been laid on teaching more advanced statistical methodology and vital statistics to medical and other graduates who are trained for public health posts, and the groundwork of medical statistics to non-medical personnel engaged in medical coding, keeping records and preparing statistics in public health offices, hospitals, social security institutions, and government departments.

The fifth report of the Committee recognized three main types of statistical workers:[2]

(1) statisticians with comprehensive university training, including special training in health statistics;

(2) " intermediate staff ", such as record keepers, local registrars, heads of small vital and health statistical units, hospital statisticians, etc.; and

(3) clerical staff.

A careful balance has to be sought between these three types, and the needs of particular areas ascertained by survey before appropriate plans for training are made. While the training of personnel of type 1 might be pursued by the granting of fellowships and of type 2 by the organization of international regional training courses, personnel of type 3 could be trained within the country. National administrations, sometimes under the technical guidance of national committees on vital and health statistics, normally provide the training of the last category of staff.

The teaching of health statistics in medical schools is of special value, not only because it contributes to the development of the scientific attitude, but also because it instructs the future physician on the collection and analysis of data, and makes him aware of his responsibility as the primary source of certain important information. The physician's role in issuing death and birth certificates, in notifying disease, and in preparing clinical reports on patients under his care is indeed of prime importance. Many of the defects in health statistics are essentially the result of deficient instruction on the physician's part in their production, as well as of his ignorance of their importance and uses.

There is, however, an increasing recognition of the value of statistics to the medical profession. An important step was taken in July 1958 by the Pan American Health Organization and the Faculty of Hygiene and Public Health of the University of São Paulo, in convening a conference on the teaching of medical statistics. It was attended by professors of medicine and public health from six South American countries. Suitable teaching courses were outlined, emphasis being placed on the careful selection of practical examples directly associated with the students' medical studies.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 5, 10.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 13.

INTERNATIONAL COLLECTION AND PUBLICATION OF DATA

The Fourth World Health Assembly decided that one of the main aims of the Organization should be gradually to build up a body of sound statistical information and advice, covering all parts of the world, by which the policy of the Organization could be guided and its operations and their results measured. Another aim was to encourage the various branches and regions of the Organization to make the fullest use of the statistical data and facilities available at WHO Headquarters.[1]

This was a formal confirmation of the function of collection, analysis and publication of statistical and epidemiological data which, as already noted, has been one of those undertaken by international health agencies since their inception. By Articles 63 and 64 of WHO's Constitution each Member State must communicate promptly to the Organization important laws, regulations, official reports, and statistics pertaining to health which have been published in the State concerned, and provide statistical and epidemiological reports in a manner to be determined by the World Health Assembly. Something has already been said about the action taken by WHO both to continue and extend systems of collecting and publishing medical and health statistical data and to undertake or report epidemiological studies. Certain further features of this basic work require noting, as in one sense there is no more important work, initially, in the field of epidemiology and statistics than that of persuading, encouraging, and assisting countries to make their own arrangements for recording morbidity and mortality, and for ensuring the widest use of the statistics for public health and research purposes.

General epidemiological and statistical data

WHO inherited the statutory rights and obligations of the OIHP and of the Health Division of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) (which had assumed responsibility for OIHP's duties in January 1945) in respect of international quarantine;[2] and the machinery of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations for the collection of general epidemiological and statistical information. Under the International Sanitary Regulations (WHO Regulations No. 2) the health administrations of a large number of countries throughout the world have the responsibility of reporting by cable and airmail the appearance of quarantinable diseases—cholera, plague, epidemic (louse-borne) typhus, relapsing fever, smallpox and yellow fever—to WHO. In its turn, WHO has the responsibility of sending this information to all health administrations and this it does by a daily broadcast over an international radio network and by publication in the Weekly Epidemiological Record, which is a legacy from the League of Nations and has been in existence for more than thirty years. The Record also contains notes, based on current statistical data, on incidence of certain non-quarantinable diseases, such as influenza and poliomyelitis, whenever their spread becomes of international importance.

A vast amount of statistical material is received by WHO in weekly, 10-day, fortnightly, monthly, quarterly and annual reports, which are furnished by the health and statistical departments of most countries in the world and by many local statistical offices. They include national and local statistical reports and tables from over 250 countries and territories. These reports form a heterogeneous mass, varying, despite WHO's efforts at standardization, in form, accuracy, completeness, definition and classification, and in the type of data supplied. While many countries and territories do not provide health statistics, mainly because of lack of physicians and of registration officials and machinery, in general it may be stated that such vital and health statistics as are available to governments of Member States are sent to WHO. Also under Article 61 of WHO's Constitution each Member State is required to " report annually to the Organization on the action taken and progress achieved in improving the health of its people ", and these annual reports contain a proportion of statistical information.

---

[1] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1952, 35, 18.

[2] Chron. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 10, 273.

The statistical data collected are classified and extracted at WHO headquarters in Geneva, and form the basis of the Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report, a compilation which has been published by WHO monthly since June 1947 and which contains statistics on disease, general mortality, infant mortality, and birth rates in certain countries, and statistical tables on epidemiological and demographic topics. It has, for example, included tables showing specific death rates for selected countries from cancer (of various types), certain communicable diseases, alcoholism, arteriosclerosis, accidents, etc. It is a lineal descendant of the Monthly Epidemiological Report issued by the League of Nations from 1922 on. A year-book is published, Annual Epidemiological and Vital Statistics, with a time lag of about two years as detailed figures are not as a rule supplied immediately by local administrations. This annual volume contains tables of population, general vital statistics and causes of death according to age and sex, and cases of, and deaths from, notifiable diseases. In addition, it provides tables of death rates from selected causes by age and by sex; the seasonal distribution of notifiable diseases; and numbers of health personnel, hospitals, and vaccinations in many countries. The tables on vital statistics owe much to the United Nations and its Statistical Office in New York.

Responsibility of UN and WHO

It is pertinent here to outline the relative responsibilities for the collection of statistical data of the United Nations and WHO. In order to avoid duplication of effort and overlapping in the collection of information, the various fields of vital and health statistics are covered as follows:

(a) Population data—aggregates, and by age and sex :
collected by the UN;
published by both agencies, WHO reproducing the UN figures exclusively.

(b) Births—numbers and rates :
data collected by the UN;
published by both agencies, WHO reproducing the UN figures exclusively.

(c) Stillbirths—numbers and rates :
data collected by the UN;
published by both agencies, WHO reproducing the UN figures exclusively.

(d) Fertility data :
collected and published by the UN;
material supplied by the UN to WHO as and when required for particular purposes or publications.

(e) Marriages :
data collected and published by the UN.

(f) Life table functions :
data collected and published by the UN;
material supplied by the UN to WHO as and when required for particular purposes or publications.

(g) Deaths by age and sex :
data collected by the UN and published by both agencies;
data on infant deaths collected by the UN with the sub-classifications requested by WHO.

(h) Deaths by cause, subdivided by age and sex :
data according to the Abridged International List collected by the UN, and supplied by the UN to WHO;[1] additional data according to the Detailed International List collected by WHO, when desired, the UN being informed of each such collection;

---

[1] In view of the special interest and competence of WHO in the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death, and the methods of implementing this Classification, WHO, when necessary, corresponds with national authorities with a view to the adaptation of their statistical material to the Classification, particularly if the classification in use in their countries does not conform with the Abridged International List used in the UN questionnaires. Copies of such requests are sent systematically to the Statistical Office of the UN.

publication by the UN of aggregates by each cause of the Abridged List; publication by WHO of such aggregates and of details by age and sex for each cause of the Abridged List and for such additional detailed causes as may be deemed desirable.

(i) Communicable diseases :
data collected and published by WHO.

(j) Morbidity :
data collected and published by WHO.

(k) Medical institutions and public health measures :
data collected and published by WHO, and communicated to the UN in the form of final tables for publication purposes, together with technical notes on qualifications attaching to the data.

(l) Medical and sanitary personnel and institutions :
data collected and published by WHO and communicated to the UN in the form of final tables for publication purposes, together with technical notes on qualifications attaching to the data.

(m) Population, vital and health statistics of cities :
in the case of cities adjacent to ports and airports, and also of aggregates of cities, WHO collects data on population, births, deaths and diseases, as required for such cities to meet their special epidemiological requirements; the UN collects and publishes population and vital statistics on cities as part of its programme coverage of communities according to size.

Special health data

Continuing a practice begun by the League of Nations, WHO has maintained records of the numbers of physicians, dentists, midwives, nurses, pharmacists, and veterinarians as notified by countries. These records now cover a period of 25 years, and since 1950 details have been published for about 180 countries and territories. The data are difficult to report in a uniform way because of the differences in professional qualifications, and because reports vary in completeness and accuracy.

Data on national hospital establishments are also recorded, with the numbers of hospitals and hospital beds by categories, i.e., general, maternity, sanatoria, leprosaria, etc.

In 1955, a supplement to the WHO Library News[1] was published giving a list of public health reports (annual and occasional) and of official reports containing health statistics that were available in Geneva at the libraries of WHO, the United Nations and the International Labour Office. In some countries, e.g., Canada and the United States of America, where important health functions are decentralized, available provincial or state reports are included; but reports from smaller administrative units, such as local authorities or cities are not. From this list it appears that certain countries do not publish annual reports on public health, and that some others publish such reports only at irregular intervals. An effort is therefore being made, especially by the statistical advisers of the regional offices, to assist countries in improving them, since they are of immediate value administratively to the national health services, as well as being helpful to workers both at the local and the international level.

Through such official and other collections the WHO library and reference system is coming to play a more direct role in the collation of published statistical and epidemiological material. It is helping, in combination with the other statistical services, both headquarters and regional, to make WHO a major, if not the chief, repository of essential world and regional data, statistical and epidemiological.

Other publications

Apart from its periodical statistical publications, WHO publishes the Bulletin of the World Health Organization, its principal scientific organ, which prints articles of international significance falling within the scope of WHO's interest and activities. Statistical and epidemiological articles appear in it periodically. One whole issue of the Bulletin in 1954[1] was devoted to health statistics, and one in 1956[2] to epidemiology, each covering a wide range of subjects. In the case of the statistical number these included the use of sampling for vital registration and statistics, the securing of appreciation of health statistics, needs in vital and health statistics in the less developed countries, and future objectives of national committees on vital and health statistics. The epidemiological number included such subjects as cancer of the breast, poliomyelitis, accident mortality amongst children, protein malnutrition, and endemic goitre. Numbers of the Bulletin on such subjects as bilharziasis,[3] endemic goitre,[4] virus diseases,[5] the treponematoses,[6] and malaria,[7] have dealt with various epidemiological and statistical aspects of these subjects.

---

[1] WHO Library News, 1955, 8, Supp. 2.

In its earlier years the WHO Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report contained statistical studies on such subjects as the evolution of mortality in Europe during the twentieth century, recent birth-rate trends, the present state of population growth, and the influence of the decline in mortality on growth of population.[8]

The reports of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics are of great value in the study of international statistics. They appear in the WHO Technical Report Series,[9] and cover a wide range of international statistics.

All these publications reflect the increasing application of statistical and epidemiological methods to WHO programmes. But while the quality of the statistics published by WHO continues to be dependent upon the reliability, completeness, and comprehensiveness of the information collected at the source, which fall far short of what they might be, it cannot be said that there is any ground for complacency about them.

---

[1] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1954, 11, 1.

[2] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 15, 1.

[3] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1958, 18, 658.

[4] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1958, 18, 1.

[5] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1957, 17, 865.

[6] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 15, 863.

[7] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 15, 361.

[8] Epid. vital Statist. Rep. 1949, 2, 64, 192; 1950, 3, 30; 1951, 4, 36; 1947, 1, 38; 1948, 1, 332; 1952, 5, 191.

[9] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 5; 1950, 25; 1952, 53; 1957, 133; 1959, 164.

INTERNATIONAL MORTALITY STATISTICS

General mortality

A general survey of the vast quantity of material stored in the annual and monthly statistical publications of WHO is certainly beyond the scope of the present review. It is also doubtful whether it would be fruitful, as the data clearly vary widely in completeness, accuracy and comparability. Nevertheless, there is a use for such data in studies with a specific purpose, e.g., on variations of and trends in mortality in selected countries or regions, or on mortality by cause.

Mortality statistics from various countries and territories are received by WHO directly or through the United Nations Statistical Office. This material is regularly tabulated and published in the Annual Epidemiological and Vital Statistics and the monthly Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report.

The annual volumes have generally contained some 60 tables, but there were 74 tables in the 1958 volume, which gave data for 1955. The tables in these volumes are grouped as follows: general vital statistics of selected countries and certain large cities; causes of death according to age and sex for 30 to 40 countries; deaths and death rates from selected causes by age and sex; cases of, and deaths from, notifiable diseases for countries and territories, with seasonal distribution.

Though limited in scope, these annual volumes are growing in importance as sources of basic data extending over many years. They provide demographers, statisticians, epidemiologists, sociologists and public health workers with reference material for enquiries into world or regional mortality phenomena. They also serve as a stimulus to many administrations to remedy lacunae, irregularities and inaccuracies in their own statistics.

The monthly Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report contains current data on general mortality, infant mortality, notifiable diseases, and also special tables on the occurrence of diseases in certain selected countries and large cities.

The contents of these reports may be illustrated by a tabulation of general mortality in the Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report.[1] It gives available death rates per 1000 population for countries throughout the world for which statistics are available, noting where the data are incomplete or approximate; and provides figures for the years 1936-38, 1947-49, 1950-52, 1953-55, 1956, 1957, and the quarters of 1956, 1957 and 1958. Other tables show the total number of deaths and death rates per 1 000 000 population, by sex, since 1950; the number of deaths by sex and age-group since 1950; the 1954-1956 average of specific death rates per 1 000 000 population, by sex and age-group; the number of deaths, by sex and by age, in 1954-1956; and the distribution of deaths from various causes in 1954-1956, using the International Classification.

The mortality statistics available in the most complete form for the largest population and longest time are those for Europe. In Europe, the period since 1900 has, however, been characterized by two world wars which in addition to causing a loss of population, and migrations, brought about important changes in territorial boundaries and under-registration of deaths. Moreover, the national censuses have also differed in value. The administration of statistics services has varied in efficiency from country to country; in some, the basic accuracy of population data may even have changed between one census and the next. For all these reasons an analytical study of the mortality data has sometimes been extremely difficult. Certain general trends in mortality have been evident, however.[2]

There were periods when the number of registered deaths increased to an abnormal extent: such were the years 1904-1908, and again 1924-1927. Except for these periods the death rate declined during the century, being almost halved in some countries. This trend was masked in places by the aging of the population; for the greatest improvement was in infant and child mortality, though there was a marked decline also in the death rates for some middle-aged groups. The result was a higher proportion of people of 60 years of age and over. It became evident that unless new and effective therapeutic agents were discovered and new methods of treatment evolved to combat or retard diseases of old age, there was no possibility of a substantial permanent decrease in the general death rates for the countries which already had a large proportion of old people in their populations.

The expectation of life was increased, the gains made being chiefly concentrated in childhood and early adulthood, and being smaller in countries such as England, France and Sweden where the expectation of life was already high. The maximum gains were at birth, reflecting the great strides made in reducing infant mortality in all the countries of Europe.

The fall in the mortality of pre-school children was also spectacular, the rates in 1950 being less than 30% of the corresponding rates at the beginning of the century. The specific death rates for the other age-groups up to 45 or 50 years were reduced in most countries by roughly half or more. But only small gains were registered for older age-groups. The minimum specific death rates recorded in all countries were for the age-group 10-14 years. The ratio of male to female mortality almost universally exceeded unity for all ages combined (Sweden being the one exception), male babies being more liable to die than female babies. By about 1947, in 13 Western European countries with a total population of about 203 million, there were more than 1 750 000 fewer deaths per year among persons of all ages than would have been expected if the 1900 level of the death rate had remained unchanged.

---

[1] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1958, 11, 225.

[2] Pascua, M. (1949, 1950, 1951) Evolution of mortality in Europe during the twentieth century, Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 2, 64; 3, 32; 4, 36.

Mortality could be viewed during the half-century in terms of a selected group of infectious diseases: the typhoid and paratyphoid fevers, scarlet fever, whooping cough, diphtheria, measles, malaria, smallpox and typhus. Mortality from typhoid and paratyphoid fevers declined in practically all European countries; on the whole in a pronounced and steady fashion in one group, which included Belgium, England and Wales, the Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland; far less markedly in a second group, which included Italy and Spain. The decline was generally attributed to improvements in sanitary conditions through better water supplies, the installation of sewerage systems, greater attention to the hygiene of milk and other foods, and better plumbing and housing. Other factors were better medical care, more hospital facilities, earlier notification of suspected cases, prompter measures by public health authorities on receiving notifications, improvement in the education of the public, greater awareness of the dangers of infection, and, perhaps, antityphoid inoculations (though the part played by inoculation is difficult to assess).

With scarlet fever there was no definite decline in mortality until about 1920. Thereafter it became appreciable, although there were marked fluctuations in some countries; and at the end of the half-century mortality was of the order of between 0.1 and 0.2 per 100 000 inhabitants, having been more than 5 per 100 000 for most European countries at the beginning of the period. The two explanations most frequently advanced for the uniform decline were a change in the virulence of the causative organism and a shift in the incidence of the disease, which now tended to attack older children and adults rather than the younger children among whom it had previously been most frequent.

Whooping cough mortality also declined with remarkable uniformity throughout the period. Except for better medical and nursing care generally, and the use of modern therapeutic agents in combating respiratory complications, nothing specific had been done from a public health point of view to account significantly for this considerable decrease.

Mortality from diphtheria decreased substantially during the half-century. While the introduction of antitoxin could be held to be partially responsible for the decrease in the earlier part of the period, it was difficult to ascribe full responsibility to it. Preventive immunization had reduced mortality to practically nil wherever it was practised on a sufficiently high proportion of children of pre-school and school age.

There was a conspicuous reduction in the mortality from measles. There does not seem to have been any great change in morbidity, but the pattern of distribution may have shifted so that more older children and fewer babies and younger children were affected. Less overcrowding, through improved housing, may have helped. Administration of convalescent or adult serum and the use of gamma globulin were not carried out on a sufficient scale to have had any considerable effect; but this did not apply to the use of sulfa drugs and antibiotics which controlled mortality from the more fatal complications.

Malaria declined also, as the result of improved malaria prophylaxis and of progress in the treatment of patients. DDT and other residual insecticides helped bring about a striking decrease in mortality from this disease towards the end of the period.

Widespread and sustained vaccination stimulated by the two world wars was probably responsible for the great decline in smallpox mortality.

Typhus is a disease closely associated with war, famine, overcrowding and insanitary conditions in general. Not surprisingly, therefore, there were major epidemics during and immediately after the First World War in Poland, Romania, Russia and Serbia; the number of cases in the European part of the USSR from 1918 to 1921 was estimated at no less than 25 million.[1] Typhus mortality went up again, during the Second World War, in central and eastern Europe: but not on any comparable scale. The advent of DDT obviously affected its incidence during the closing months and the aftermath of the conflict.

---

[1] Biraud, Y. (1943) Bull. Hlth Org. (L.o.N.), 10, 1.

Mortality from all the diseases considered has thus greatly decreased, in some cases very substantially. It is interesting to observe that the rate of decrease in the mortality from several of these diseases has been remarkably similar in various western European countries which differ, and have differed, a great deal in some of the public health and medical practices usually considered as influencing the behaviour of infectious diseases.

Special studies

Many tables and studies have been based in recent years on the mortality data collected internationally. However, we shall deal here with only two subjects which exemplify the development of international statistics and their utilization, i.e., infant mortality and accident mortality.

Infant mortality

Tables of infant and neonatal deaths per 1000 live births are published periodically in the Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report,[1] and in Annual Epidemiological and Vital Statistics. They cover the whole world and, in one Report,[2] are given for the years 1936-38, 1947-49, 1950-52, 1953-55, 1956, 1957 and the quarters of 1956, 1957 and 1958. Separate sections are devoted to infant and neonatal deaths.

Infant mortality had started to decline in Europe by about the turn of the century, and in most other countries of the world a little later:[3] in 1876-1880, except in the British Isles and Scandinavia, infant mortality rates in European countries were over 150 per 1000 live births, being 250 or more per 1000 in Austria-Hungary, southern Germany and Russia. In 1912, when there were rates below 100 per 1000 in the British Isles, the Netherlands, Scandinavia and Switzerland, they were still over 180 in Austria-Hungary, Romania and Russia. In 1932 the area of excessive infant mortality in Europe was confined to Hungary and Romania. In 1946, on the other hand, among countries throughout the world which published statistics on the subject, only four had rates of 160 or over, while none had rates over 185.

Just before the Second World War infant mortality rates of under 50 per 1000 live births were to be found in Australia, Scandinavia, Switzerland, the Netherlands and New Zealand. This group of countries with a very low infant mortality rate was joined immediately after the war by Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States, while in Australia, New Zealand and Sweden the rate had by then fallen to below 30 per 1000.

The immediate effect of the Second World War on infant mortality varied from country to country. In Scandinavia and the United Kingdom it was practically nil; indeed, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States experienced their most spectacular fall in infant mortality after 1941. In spite of the hardships it suffered, Finland had a rate above its pre-war level only in 1940, while Iceland and Norway remained below 40 per 1000 except for one year. In France, on the other hand, the rate rose from 65 per 1000 live births in 1937-1939 to 91 in 1940 and 108 in 1945. In Germany, where the rate had fallen from 145 per 1000 in 1919 to 60 in 1938-1939, it rose slowly throughout the war, and in the British Zone of Occupation it was 105 per 1000 in 1946. In Austria, where it had been 70 per 1000 in 1941, it was 162 per 1000 in 1945; but it was back to 81 in 1946.

A general downward trend in infant mortality, in some cases momentarily interrupted by the war, was also observable elsewhere. In Egypt, the rate, which had been 224 per 1000 in 1921-1925, fell to 198 in 1939, rose to 215 in 1943, but fell again to 185 per 1000 in 1946. In Ceylon, the 1931-1935 rate of 182 per 1000 fell to 140 per 1000 in 1945. In India, the rate was 182 per 1000 in 1921-1925, 156 in 1939, 169 in 1944. In Venezuela, it had been over 150 in most years up to 1934, but it fell to 99 in 1945; and in Argentina, where it had been 99 in 1935-1939, it was 81 in 1943-1945.

In most countries immediately after the war, therefore, the infant mortality rate in spite of the ravages of the war became as low as it had ever been, representing constantly increasing control over the hazards surrounding infant life.

---

[1] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1950, 3, 126; 1951, 4, 276; 1952, 5, 283; 1957, 10, 370; 1958, 11, 228.

[2] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1958, 11, 228.

[3] Stouman, K. (1948) Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1, 188.

Studies appearing in the Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report in 1950,[1] 1951,[2] and 1952 [3] showed that in most European countries the limits to which the more easily preventable infant deaths could be reduced were being reached with rates falling to 30 deaths and less per 1000 live births. This was also the position in certain other countries, particularly Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the United States. Other countries which made returns also generally showed descending rates.

For reasons of brevity, reference has been made only to total infant mortality. Data on the age distribution of infant deaths, however, provide a valuable field of study, and have shown that the reduction of neonatal mortality depends mainly on prenatal care and good obstetrics, and goes hand in hand with reduction of maternal mortality. The reduction of later infant mortality (over one month) depends largely on the control of environmental factors and correct feeding. The institution of health centres and improvement in general public health work have contributed to a more rapid decrease in later infant mortality than in mortality in the first month of life.

Accident mortality

Article 2 of WHO's Constitution stipulates that, in order to achieve WHO's objectives, one of the functions of the Organization shall be " to promote, in co-operation with other specialized agencies where necessary, the prevention of accidental injuries ".

The importance of accident mortality has increased in recent years. Whereas general mortality has steadily decreased in many parts of the world, the death rate due to accidents remains high, and for many types of accident has gone up. In some countries, accidents among certain groups have become the chief cause of death in childhood and adolescence, killing greater numbers than all other causes combined. The first WHO International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics in 1953 accordingly recommended that WHO continue or initiate statistical studies on the problem.

International interest in the subject, in fact, dates back to 1934, when the League of Nations asked governments whether they kept statistics on road accidents and their causes and, if so, on what basis they did so. A Committee for the Unification of Statistics Relating to Road Traffic Accidents was established in 1935, and met in 1936 and 1937; it recommended compilation of statistics in a uniform manner, and the adoption of the International List of Causes of Death for the purpose. After the war, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, through its Subcommittee on Road Transport, revived interest in the subject by setting up a Working Party on the Prevention of Road Accidents. The Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East also set up a working party in 1950 to consider, inter alia, the problem of accident statistics. WHO's interest has been in accidental deaths of all kinds, the most important of which include those due to motor-vehicle accidents, drowning, poisoning and falls.

The International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death gives a dual classification of accidents: according to the external cause, and according to the nature of the resulting injury. In the former classification, which comprises 124 categories, the main division lies between transport accidents and accidents from other causes. The WHO Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report has included statistics of both these kinds of injury [4] for 18 countries throughout the world, using figures based on the Intermediate List of the 1948 International Classification, and adopting the classification by external cause only. These statistics cover deaths from all accidents and—published in separate tables—from transport accidents, with their relationship numerically and proportionately to general mortality; on deaths from accidents, both generally and by categories, according to sex and age; as well as detailed data concerning, for example, deaths from the various kinds of accidental fall and from poisoning, and infant mortality from certain accidental causes.

---

[1] Pascua, M. (1950) Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 3, 132.

[2] Pascua, M. (1951) Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 4, 282.

[3] Pascua, M. (1952) Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 5, 292.

[4] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1956, 9, 1; 1953, 6, 259.

Accidents are the leading cause of death between the ages of 1 and 19 [1] in most of a group of selected countries throughout the world. In the Netherlands in 1954 they were responsible for 30-40% of all deaths. In childhood, mortality from accidents is highest at the pre-school age; it then falls for schoolchildren, but increases again somewhat in adolescence. Since the beginning of the century, it has decreased in Europe for the pre-school group, in spite of a growing traffic-accident toll, because deaths from drowning and burns and scalds have diminished. It has remained almost level for school-age and adolescent groups, where increasing deaths from traffic accidents have cancelled out the decrease in deaths from other accidental causes.

For countries outside Europe, accidents also constitute an important problem. The highest accident rate of all for girls, in the years 1951-53, was in Ceylon. The rate for both sexes was high in Australia, Canada, Ceylon and the United States. In Canada and the United States about a quarter of all deaths every year among pre-school children, and a third of those among elementary schoolchildren result from accidents of one kind or another. Accidents kill more than twice as many pre-school children as do measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, diphtheria, dysentery, tuberculosis and poliomyelitis together. Statistical studies of " total life " or " working life " lost through death from various causes show the great economic effect of accident mortality on a nation's productivity: in 1945 in the United States, for example, accidents replaced heart diseases as the cause of death responsible for the greatest number of working years lost.[2]

In all of 12 selected countries throughout the world, except Ceylon, the accident death rate between the ages of 1 and 19 in 1951-53 was at least twice as much for males as for females, and in Australia, Germany and Sweden it was about three times as much. In the majority of these countries, motor-vehicle accidents were responsible for the largest share of the deaths; but in France and Japan accidental drowning occupied the first position. Deaths from fire and explosion and deaths caused by hot substances occurred much more frequently among females, particularly in Ceylon.

In 8 of the 12 countries, a study of trends in mortality revealed that the specific death rate between the ages of 1 and 19, while remaining practically unchanged in Australia between 1931 and 1951, decreased during the same period in other countries—by about 15% in Switzerland and by between 25% and 30% in Italy, the Netherlands and the United States. If the relative importance of accidental deaths in relation to total deaths is studied, however, there is a noticeable increase, which can be ascribed largely to the more rapid reduction in deaths from other causes. A clear trend towards an increase in deaths from motor-vehicle accidents is discernible, especially in Australia, Canada and Sweden. The decline in the death rate from all accidents is due to the fact that the increasing death rate from motor-vehicle accidents is more than compensated for by the decline in the death rate from other accidental causes.

A WHO Advisory Group on Prevention of Accidents in Childhood met in 1956, and devoted much of its agenda to the statistical aspects of accidents for, as its report said : " Fact-finding is basic to the development of accident-prevention programmes." [3]

The Group held the view that data on accidents should contain more information regarding age, cause and sex, and should be made available quickly, as they lost much of their value for the preparation of programmes for prevention and for community education when out of date. In other words, routine production of current figures, inaccurate as they might be in detail, helped greatly in prevention. " As in the case of diseases affecting a community, the occurrence of accidents in a given population involves important, but at present ill-understood, relationships between the host, the agent and the environment. In the opinion of the Advisory Group, the epidemiological method offers a scientific approach to the study of accidents and accident prevention. An explanation of causes can be sought in each case through the interaction of the host—the child at risk, the agent—the effective cause of the event, and the environment—the chain of external circumstances culminating in the event. Whereas from the strictly medical point of view the injured child is the primary concern, the epidemiological standpoint requires careful determination not only of the number of events of a certain character which occur in a given category or group of the population, but of the time, the manner, and the place of occurrence, and the relation of these events to the population at risk." [1] Hence the importance of careful statistical data on accidents. The Advisory Group considered, however, that the international use of mortality figures was limited and that the figures were of greater value locally.

---

[1] Swaroop, S., Albrecht, R. M & Grab, B. (1956) Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 15, 123.

[2] Dickinson, F. G. & Welker, E. L. (1948) What is the leading cause of death? Chicago (Bureau of Medical and Economic Research, American Medical Association, Bulletin No. 64).

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 118, 39.

The work of the Group was pursued in a more representative seminar convened by the WHO Regional Office for Europe at Spa, Belgium, in July 1958. Before the seminar a consultant visited a number of countries in Europe, securing further information by means of a questionnaire on the status and extent of accident prevention work. Although the main topics discussed were education and publicity, administrative and legal aspects and medical considerations, fact-finding was an important feature.

Other studies

WHO has taken part in many other mortality studies in connexion with epidemiological investigations of cancer, tuberculosis, quarantinable diseases, etc.

The material on mortality collected and disseminated by WHO constitutes an important world service over and above any particular analyses undertaken by the Organization itself. It ensures continuity in mortality records going back to the early days of the League of Nations. In conjunction with the demographic series published by the United Nations, it also provides an increasingly more complete survey of data essential both for administrators and investigators.

In the annual and monthly reports on epidemiology and health statistics, WHO has managed to issue a number of tables over and above those on general mortality and those forming the subject of special study described in this paper. These tables have presented available world mortality data on such subjects as syphilis, diabetes, gastric and duodenal ulcers, alcoholism, cirrhosis of the liver, congenital malformations, arteriosclerosis, infective and parasitic conditions, pneumonia and bronchitis, suicide, trachoma, leukaemia, leprosy, epilepsy, and malignant tumours of various sites.

INTERNATIONAL MORBIDITY STATISTICS

Death is a clear-cut event, and the number of such events can be counted. Disease, on the other hand, is infinitely varied, including everything from a minor departure from normal health which does not interfere with a person's activities to a chronic condition condemning a person to bed for a prolonged period. The person afflicted with a disease may experience only one period of illness during a selected period of observation, or he may have repeated illnesses from the same disease. Moreover, during the same period of illness he may suffer from two or more distinct diseases. The basic problem of what is to be counted is thus an exceedingly complex one, and morbidity statistics therefore require a broader approach than that required for mortality statistics. Important consideration has been given by WHO to developing the field of morbidity statistics. In 1950, the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics suggested that, in view of the magnitude and complexity of statistical procedures in morbidity, a conference of experts in morbidity statistics be convened with the object of obtaining an orientation, evaluation, and selection of the projects requiring international action in this field.[1] WHO was also asked to request national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate national and international agencies, for reports on their activities in, and plans for, statistics of disease, and for their views on what could be done by WHO to improve them.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 118, 8.

The Conference on Morbidity Statistics [2] held in November 1951 pointed out that morbidity statistics were required to amplify the information given by mortality statistics, and were useful, not only to public health and hospital administrators, but also to those concerned with social security programmes, to industrial undertakings, and to workers engaged in medical and social research. Morbidity statistics, it felt, should not be defined in any narrow way, but should cover all statistics relating to departure from health. Such statistics would be of value for the control of communicable diseases; for planning the development of therapeutic and preventive services; for an assessment of the economic importance of disease, and its relationship to social factors; for research into the etiology and pathogenesis of diseases, as well as into the efficacy of preventive and therapeutic measures; and for the national and international study of distribution of diseases.

The Conference felt that it would be useful to classify morbidity statistics in such a way that countries, whatever their stage of development, could make some use of the list; and it drew up a list (see p. 41), which it did not regard as exhaustive, but as illustrative of the wide range and uses of morbidity data. Many of the types of statistics listed were by-products of organizations set up for other purposes, not primarily in order to ascertain morbidity.

The Morbidity Conference also discussed the various types and sources of morbidity statistics. The sickness or population survey was widely applicable, both in the less and in the more developed countries. In the former, the possibility of obtaining morbidity data from the existing registration or record services was extremely limited, but the organization which was responsible for the planning of the health services could carry out a sample survey, which was relatively inexpensive and could be utilized to answer a variety of questions. However, experts in sampling theory were required to plan and supervise the surveys and analyse the data collected. The WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics accordingly recommended in 1951 that national health administrations establish groups of such experts, and that national committees on vital and health statistics explore the possibilities of the survey, particularly its applicability in the less-developed countries, and study the statistical methodology involved. It asked certain countries which had experience of surveys to report to WHO on their use, so that information could be conveyed to national committees on vital and health statistics or their equivalents elsewhere.

Other sources of morbidity statistics of importance were records of hospital in-patients and out-patients, and those kept by general practitioners, health welfare centres, educational institutions, the armed forces, and industrial, civil service and other occupational groups (in respect of absence on account of sickness). Many of those records manifestly suffered from defects—those from hospitals, for example, were of a highly selective character and contained an unknown amount and direction of bias—but clearly their use as a source of statistics on disease could be greatly developed with the collaboration of national committees on vital and health statistics.

Two fundamental problems faced by WHO were those of definitions of terms

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 25, 7.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1952, 53, 5.

	Coverage		Uses	Applicability
	population	morbidity
Sickness surveys by home visitation of: all persons in selected area	X	1-4	b,c,d,e	ABC representative sample of selected area	X	1-4	b,c,d,e	(A)BC
representative sample of whole population	W	1-4	b,c,d,e,h	C
Mass diagnostic and screening surveys (tuberculosis, etc.)	XY	3	a,d	ABC
Census enumeration of sick persons	W	3	d,h	BC
Census enumeration of certain defects	W	3	h	BC
Records of notifiable communicable diseases	WX	4	a,b,d,e,f	BC
Registration of certain diseases (cancer, rheumatism, etc.) with or without follow-up survey	WX	4	c,d,f,g,h	C
Certification of certain conditions for special benefits (including special food allowances)	W	4	b,d	C
Records of road accidents	WX	4	b	C
Records of industrial and occupational accidents and diseases	Y	4	b	C
General hospital in-patient records	Z	2-4	c,d,f,g	ABC
General hospital or clinic out-patient records	Z	4	c,d	ABC
General home-visiting and nursing services	Z	4	d	BC
Records of special clinics, hospitals and agencies (tuberculosis, mental diseases, venereal diseases, dentistry, etc.)	Z	4	b,c,d,f,g	ABC
Continuous records of doctors' practices	Z	2,4	d	BC
Social security schemes, compulsory and voluntary	Y	1-4	c,d,e	BC
Voluntary health plans and funds	Y	1-4	c,d,e	BC
Pensions and veterans' records	Y	3,4	d,g	C
Life-insurance and sickness-insurance records	Y	3,4	e,f	BC
Records of health welfare centres (maternity, infant, and pre-school child)	(Y)Z	3,4	b,c,d,f	BC
Medical records in educational institutions (routine inspections, sickness, absenteeism	Y	1-4	a,b,d	BC
Records of physical examinations and sickness absenteeism in industrial, civil service, and other occupational groups	Y	2-4	b,c,e	ABC
Sickness and recruitment records of the Armed Forces	Y	1-4	a,b,g,h	(A)BC

Explanation of figures and letters

W. Whole population of country (or representative sample of it)
X. Population of selected locality (or sample of it)
Y. Selected types of persons in whole population (or samples of them)
Z. Persons applying to selected health services
1. All sicknesses at a point of time
2. All sicknesses during a period of time
3. Selected diseases or impairments at a point of time
4. Selected diseases or impairments during a period of time
a. Control of communicable diseases
b. Planning for development of preventive services
c. Ascertainment of relationship to social factors
d. Planning for provision of adequate treatment services
e. Estimation of economic importance of sickness
f. Research into etiology and pathogenesis
g. Research on efficacy of preventive and therapeutic measures
h. National and international study of distribution of diseases and impairments
A. Countries with no complete enumeration of population and lacking, or with only slightly developed, public health and vital registration systems
B. Countries with an over-all or partial census and with a well-developed public health and vital registration system for parts of the population (e.g., for large towns) but not for all
C. Countries with an over-all census and well-developed facilities for obtaining morbidity statistics used in morbidity statistics, and measurement of morbidity. There were terms descriptive of ill health, of a particular episode of ill health, of severity, of duration of an episode or of its location in time; as well as special terms used in hospital statistics, and terms referring to medical consultation. Furthermore, diseases could be classified according to type, severity, duration or the kind of medical care involved, or the usual prognosis, or the degree or likelihood of (permanent) incapacity or invalidity; or according to the probable period of invalidity, or the prospects of effective therapy or cure, or a rough scale of health ranging from the state of complete health to extreme ill health. On none of these points was there any standardization of definition; nor was there any on methods of measuring morbidity and the terms by which they should be described. The measurements appeared to be concerned primarily with the frequency of illness in the population, and with the results of treatment carried out on all or a part of it. They therefore depended on information about the illness in a given period of time (which might be expressed in days, weeks, or years), or at a single point in time. Discussing the comparability of the statistical units involved in the compilation of morbidity statistics, the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics[1] agreed that these units would generally be " persons ", " illnesses " or " spells (' episodes ', ' periods ') of illness ". In any given period, say a year, a patient might suffer from illness A twice and from illness B three times, at different periods. He would then have contributed one unit of statistics to " persons ", two to " illness ", and five to " spells of illness ". The Committee regarded it as essential that it should be made clear to which of these three concepts of morbidity the statistics actually related. Furthermore, whatever the class of unit, the illness would either begin within the period of observation, end within it, be current at any time within it, or be current at some particular point within it. Alternatively, the statistics might relate to the duration of sickness current or ending during the period.

In its sixth report[2] the Expert Committee considered that for many purposes morbidity could best be measured in terms of: (1) periods (spells) of illness, or alternatively, persons with illness, commencing during a defined period; (2) illness current, or persons ill, during a defined period; (3) illness current, or persons ill, at a particular point of time within the period, or at an average point of time within the period; and (4) the duration of these illnesses. The term " incidence " was recommended for use in describing the measurement of frequency of illnesses commencing during a defined period, the term " period prevalence " in connexion with illnesses in existence at any time during a defined period, and the term " point prevalence " for illness in existence at any particular point of time.

The WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics has also reviewed morbidity studies carried out by national committees on vital and health statistics, and the progress made in a number of subjects relating to morbidity statistics.[3] Realizing that many problems in health statistics could best be dealt with on a regional basis, the Committee recommended that regional and inter-regional conferences of specialists from countries presenting comparable conditions should be held periodically, with WHO co-operation and the participation of national committees on vital and health statistics, to discuss such problems in the light of local conditions.

Noting the stress laid by the Seventh Revision Conference on the desirability of exploring methods of vital and health statistics registration suited to the needs of countries at various stages of development, the Expert Committee expressed its satisfaction at what was being done in that respect. The African seminar on vital and health statistics, held at Brazzaville in November 1956, under the joint auspices of the WHO Regional Office for Africa and the Commission for Technical Co-operation in Africa South of the Sahara (CCTA), had gone into the problem at great length, discussing existing statistical organizations and procedures, methods of obtaining statistics, training of staff and the interpretation of the data collected. The Latin American Centre for the Classification of Diseases, established in Caracas in 1955 under the joint auspices of the Government of Venezuela and the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, had published booklets of instructions, pamphlets, and special studies, and established a training programme for coders. The Expert Committee, after listening to reports by the statistical advisers attached to the Regional Offices for the Eastern Mediterranean and the Americas, noted their usefulness, but observed that in many countries statistical information of varying degrees of accuracy was being mixed, with the result that the value of the data as a whole was diminished. It recommended, therefore, that the data in those countries be sorted into homogeneous groups, and that, if published, each set of data be accompanied by a formal statement of their degree of reliability and a clear indication of the population groups to which they referred.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 5.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1959, 164, 5.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 3.

Hospital statistics

The WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics has from the outset paid attention to hospital statistics, as an obvious, if frequently untrustworthy, source of information on disease, even in the least developed countries. A Sub-Committee on Hospital Statistics met in Geneva in 1950.[1] It discussed, among other topics, the limitations placed upon the utilization of hospital experience by the fact that the selective character of hospital admissions generally precluded the drawing of conclusions regarding the prevalence and distribution of disease in the community as a whole. It considered that the International Statistical Classification of Diseases would generally serve the needs of hospitals better than any other classification for the compilation of statistics of illness, and recommended its use, both for the benefit of hospitals themselves and as a step towards international comparability.

The Sub-Committee felt that certain selected countries and areas with a definable population at risk, as well as selected hospitals, should be encouraged to compile hospital morbidity statistics as a matter of routine. For such statistics, individual reports should be prepared, the part on diagnosis to be completed by the physician himself or under his direction in accordance with the grouping given below:

I. Principal disease, injury or other condition which led to the admission.
II. Principal complication(s) of I (stating the most important one first and whether present at admission).
III. Principal accessory acute condition (stating whether present at admission).
IV. Principal accessory chronic condition.

The Sub-Committee made several other recommendations regarding the form of the report and what it should contain, and emphasized that the preparation of reports of that kind did not mean that there should be no numbering of individuals in terms of admissions or discharges, or of principal diagnoses. Certain special problems relating to statistics in mental, maternity and tuberculosis hospitals, to a diagnostic cross-index (using the International Classification), to the preparation of a code for anaesthetics and operations, and to multiple admissions were suggested for further study either by national committees on vital and health statistics, or by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics.

Noting the Sub-Committee's reference to the selective character of hospitalized illness, the Expert Committee afterwards stressed the need for investigating ways and means of bridging the gap between hospital statistics and statistics of the community from which the hospital patients were drawn. This might be done by the family type of survey, or by the complete coverage of medical care services.

The Expert Committee in its fifth report[2] considered that it was still not in a position to make recommendations on the type of form needed to ensure international comparability of hospital statistics of morbidity. It accordingly recommended that WHO study the systems at present in use throughout the world, as a preliminary step to a future and thorough examination of the subject. In the collection of hospital statistics a distinction should be made between residents and non-residents of an area, so as to link the data more closely with the population at risk. The Committee also expressed the view that the one-day census of hospital patients that was used in Japan was an economic way of getting useful information on the medical and other characteristics of the population receiving medical care.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 25, 31.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 15.

In its sixth report[1] the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics reviewed a series of terms commonly used in connexion with hospital statistics—for example: admission, first admission, re-admission, discharge, in-patient, patient-day, duration of stay—and noted that there seemed to be a high measure of agreement on the definitions of these terms. It considered that the general definitions of measurements of morbidity were applicable to hospital in-patient morbidity statistics, but with a number of changes in terminology, e.g., " admission rate " would correspond to " incidence rate ", and " daily bed occupancy " to " prevalence rate ".

Another step towards international standardization of hospital statistics was taken by WHO with the convening in November 1958 of a European Conference on Hospital Statistics and their Application in Health Administration. The Conference considered that the International Classification of Diseases (Detailed List of three digits, or the extended list with four-digit sub-categories) was suitable for the diagnostic coding of hospital records. For special types of hospitals or for special groups of diseases, a local ad hoc extension of the classification by means of five- or six-digit sub-categories might sometimes be necessary. For the presentation of hospital statistics, a much shorter list was required and WHO was urged to prepare such a standard list. Mention was made of certain short-cut methods such as hospital censuses, sampling, periodic surveys and ad hoc enquiries to collect the necessary data. The need for ensuring medical secrecy was emphasized. The Conference also considered the value of hospital records for hospital planning, study of disease, and in particular research. It concluded that if additional data could be secured by means of special enquiries, the material could well be used in studies on human genetics, birth weight in relation to the duration of gestation, maternal age and parity, etc.

Notifiable communicable diseases

Notifiable communicable diseases represent only a small part of the total morbidity but, owing to their preventible nature, they are of considerable importance in public health. The problems involved in securing prompt and reliable information on these diseases were studied by the WHO Conference on Morbidity Statistics in 1951.

The Conference recommended that the fullest co-operation be sought from the medical profession and health institutions to improve completeness of notification, that uniform procedures for ensuring correction of diagnosis be adopted, and that it be made clear for each disease whether it was intended that notification be based on clinical findings alone, or laboratory and other evidence, or both. The national committees on vital and health statistics were asked to study special problems, and WHO was requested to undertake a critical appraisal of the uses of statistics on epidemic diseases and of their value to the epidemiologist, the quarantine official, and the health statistician.

A seminar on reporting of communicable diseases held in Chile in 1955 developed basic procedures for reporting and recommended legal, educational and administrative measures for this purpose.[2] Procedures for the international exchange of data were developed. The recommendations made have been used in the revision of the Guide for the Reporting of Communicable Diseases in the Americas.[1]

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1959, 164, 9.

[2] Pan American Sanitary Bureau (1955) Basic procedures for the reporting of communicable diseases (Scientific Publications, No. 9), Washington, D.C.

The problem of notification of disease was considered by the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics in its sixth report.[2] The Committee emphasized the desirability of distinguishing in tabulations between " provisional notifications " and " corrected notifications " and asked that indication be given of the estimated degree of error to which these statistics are subject as a result of incompleteness of notification. In respect of certain notifiable diseases, such as tuberculosis, distinction was to be made, if possible, between " new cases " and " newly detected pre-existing cases ".

Accuracy and completeness of notifiable disease statistics are linked with legal provisions and their implementation. WHO has published a survey of the existing legislation on the notification of communicable diseases.[3]

Sickness surveys

The sickness survey is a good statistical tool if properly handled by trained persons. Its advantages have been succinctly expressed in the third report of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics:

> " (a) it provides the possibility of linking morbidity data to a variety of social and economic conditions;
>
> (b) the population covered is automatically defined;
>
> (c) it offers a means of linking the data in existing medical records to that obtained from the general population;
>
> (d) if probability sampling methods are employed, the desired information can be obtained with specified precision at the smallest possible expense;
>
> (e) the method is flexible and can be utilized to provide answers to a wide variety of specific questions of practical administrative as well as scientific importance; and
>
> (f) if the objectives of the investigation are not continuous, once the specific objective has been accomplished the survey can be easily stopped and the personnel utilized for investigations of other problems." [4]

The survey raises all the problems common to all medical statistical inquiries, such as the standardization of nomenclatures, definitions and classifications; and one peculiar to itself, the problem of sampling. Here are involved the questions of whom to include in the survey, how to train the field teams, and what methods to use; and the answer to these questions in turn depends on the statistical theory of sampling adopted. It is rarely practicable or even desirable to survey a whole community. The First International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics in London in 1953 drew attention to the value of modern sampling methods in all statistical practice, and recommended the use of such methods for the study of morbidity.[5]

Special problems of under-developed areas

In various proposals for remedying the lack of vital and medical statistics in the world, account has been taken of the special needs of under-developed areas. In the United Nations Principles for a Vital Statistics System,[6] for example, the importance of special arrangements for the counting of the population (census) and the registration of vital events is indicated, and methods suitable for various types of country are recommended. Health and medical authorities are concerned in these matters, especially as the evaluation of mortality and morbidity is difficult in the absence of such denominators as size of population and general birth and death rates. The same general problems which face the vital statistician also frustrate the medical and health investigator. These include: absence of a comprehensive national health administration with local officers; lack of communications; the existence of social and economic barriers to the acceptance of such essential matters as censuses, and notification of diseases; lack of medical and nursing services; illiteracy of the population; difficulties, both social and economic, in the introduction of special techniques such as demonstration areas and mobile teams to collect essential data. Inevitably, the lack of essential data from large parts of the world and the recognized difficulties in obtaining early comprehensive information from such areas have presented the various international statistical groups with serious problems.

---

[1] Pan American Sanitary Bureau (1955) Guide for the reporting of communicable diseases in the Americas (Miscellaneous Publications, No. 6 (Rev.)), Washington, D.C.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1959, 164, 9.

[3] Int. Dig. Hlth Legis., 1958, 9, 606.

[4] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1952, 53, 9.

[5] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1954, 85, 14.

[6] United Nations (1953) Principles for a vital statistics system (Statistical Papers, Series M, No. 19), New York.

As early as 1949, the Expert Committee on Health Statistics [1] recommended that special studies be carried out in underdeveloped areas on methods suitable for measuring the state of health and the prevalence of disease. It called for an early report on these methods so as to make such knowledge available to similar areas.

Similarly, the Conference on Morbidity Statistics,[2] held in Geneva in November 1951, noted that the International Statistical Classification is difficult to apply in countries with few qualified physicians and where morbidity statistics are based largely on imperfect diagnoses or symptomatic descriptions. It therefore suggested that the World Health Organization ask such countries to design lists of selected diseases based on the Intermediate Lists of the International Statistical Classification.

The first International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics,[3] held in London in October 1953, examined the question of areas with underdeveloped health and statistical services. It agreed that every effort should be made in such areas to maintain full records and to produce summarized figures of the diseases treated in medical institutions, even though such summaries sometimes gave a misleading picture. It proposed that, in areas where full information could not be readily obtained by the usual administrative means, medical surveys should be organized, possibly by using mobile teams. It urged that when any health programme was introduced into such areas statistics should be made an integral part of the programme. It also drew attention to the value of sampling methods, either in the form of sample registration districts or of special inquiries, as an important device for determining the essential facts.

Aware of the importance of providing a simple list, the Conference for the Seventh Revision of the International Classification, recommended an amendment to the WHO Nomenclature Regulations.[4] This amendment gives greater flexibility by providing for the use of special lists of diseases easily recognizable by subordinate medical personnel yet following the general structure of the International Classification.

In keeping with the need for continuing study of local difficulties in this field, the seminar on vital and health statistics held in Africa in November 1956 gave consideration to: hospital statistics, returns from outpatient dispensaries, records from mobile medical units, data on notifiable diseases, and crude causes of death in certain countries as collected by non-medical personnel.[5]

The report of this seminar,[6] together with other material on the subject, was studied by the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics and commented on in its fifth report.[7]

Morbidity statistics published by WHO

The WHO Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report, since the beginning of 1957, has produced morbidity statistics [8] for diphtheria, meningococcal infections, tuberculosis in certain non-European countries, acute poliomyelitis, smallpox in Europe, acute infectious encephalitis, tuberculosis in Europe since 1950, brucellosis, endemic typhus and other rickettsial diseases, typhoid and paratyphoid fevers, dysentery, influenza, venereal diseases in Europe, and whooping cough. The statistics on diphtheria,[1] to take an example, cover cases of the disease from 1950 to 1955 in 15 African, 21 American, 17 Asian, and 24 European countries and in Australia and New Zealand. Data are given on the seasonal distribution of cases, their sex and age distribution, and the number of vaccinations carried out in various countries.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 5, 9.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1952, 53, 22.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1954, 85, 11.

[4] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 71, 28 (WHA9.29).

[5] Biraud, Y. (1956) Méthode pour l'enregistrement par des non-médecins des causes élémentaires de décès dans les zones sous-développées (Unpublished working document WHO/HS/60).

[6] Unpublished document CCTA/WHO/STATS.SEM./35 (Rev. 1).

[7] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 9.

[8] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1957, 10, 319, 288, 205, 116, 147, 26, 46, 8; 1958, 11, 78, 116, 162, 258, 307, 262.

---

[1] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1957, 10, 319.

STATISTICAL STUDIES ON CANCER

Cancer research is taking place on an impressive scale in a number of countries. Many institutions and organizations, especially in North America and Europe, are investigating the causation, prevention and therapy of the disease, and all possibly relevant factors. Research has been stimulated in turn into the very fabric of life and its processes, as revealed in the physiology, chemistry and physics of cell growth.

The conduct of cancer research is generally costly and complex, and so limited to well-endowed and highly organized institutions. Realizing that WHO could not materially add to the volume of laboratory and clinical research being carried out in this field, even if it devoted a large share of its budget to such work, the Interim Commission, and later the First World Health Assembly, decided to concentrate on cancer statistics, where WHO's position as an international organization could be made use of in the standardization of the nomenclature and classification of tumours and in the development of ways of assessing incidence and prevalence.

Following a suggestion made by the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics in 1949,[1] the Second World Health Assembly established a Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation. Meeting in March 1950,[2] this Subcommittee discussed the difficulties of defining cancer in terms of the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death; of tabulating multiple causes of death where cancer was one; and of obtaining an accurate diagnosis of the disease. National committees on vital and health statistics should, the Subcommittee felt, be encouraged to sponsor the study of these problems, and also geographical variations in mortality from cancer of specific anatomical sites, as well as to determine the total incidence of cancer in populations of sample areas over selected periods, and where feasible to institute a follow-up system so as to arrive at a true survival rate. In the absence of any agreed method of calculating survival and apparent recovery (" cure ") rates, the Subcommittee made certain recommendations and proposed certain definitions and rules that were designed to produce standard returns.

Another Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer met in September 1951,[3] and, after discussion of the general principles that should govern the statistical classification of neoplasms, agreed that such a classification should distinguish between the anatomical site, the histological type, and the degree of malignancy. To provide adequate flexibility and ease in coding, a separate classification in respect of each of these three aspects was required. The Subcommittee accordingly drew up a classification of neoplasms according to anatomical location, for general use in cancer registration and morbidity statistics. This classification was based upon the International Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death, but contained modifications to provide for a strictly anatomical classification where grouping on a histological basis was found in the International Classification.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 5.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1950, 25, 17.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1952, 53, 43.

The Subcommittee did not embark upon any classification of cancer according to histological type or degree of malignancy. In the former case there was lack of uniformity in histological terminology, and in the latter there was considerable disagreement concerning the concept of pre-malignancy. Nevertheless, the American Cancer Society's Manual of Tumor Nomenclature and Coding,[1] which the Subcommittee regarded as the first serious attempt to prepare a histological code for statistical studies, was recognized as an important advance towards the development of a standard histological classification of neoplasms. The Subcommittee therefore recommended that it be distributed to national organizations for study, and, if possible, for trial, with or without modifications. Their experience in its use and their views on its applicability would materially assist WHO in its preparation of a standard classification according to histological type and to degree of malignancy.

Various international and national organizations had made attempts to classify cancer according to stage. The Subcommittee reviewed their work, and briefly outlined the principles that should govern any such classification. While recommending the system for staging of cervical cancer adopted at the International and Fourth American Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology, it expressed the view that any future revision of that system should bring it into conformity with those principles.

In 1956, the Expert Committee on Health Statistics returned to the subject of classification of neoplasms by site, histological type, and stage.[2] It recommended that WHO expand the publication of statistical studies on the various types of cancer, increase the distribution of information on the statistical methodology applicable in the field, and continue its efforts to improve the classification of cancer, in co-operation with the appropriate professional organizations. In order to assess the results of treatment, the maintenance of cancer registers was essential; WHO should therefore keep the different systems and methods of cancer registration constantly under review, so as to ascertain how that could best be done. Since a Subcommittee on Cancer Statistics had last met a number of cancer registers had been set up throughout the world. International co-operation, under the auspices of the International Union against Cancer, had been achieved in the compilation of a statistical code of neoplasms, classified histologically. Progress had been made in the classification of cancer according to degree of malignancy. Various techniques had been developed for the assessment of the incidence and prevalence of cancer. And more statistical studies on the etiology of cancer were being carried out.

A Sub-Committee on Cancer Statistics met in December 1957.[3] It had before it a resolution [4] of the Tenth World Health Assembly on the epidemiology of cancer, which requested the Director-General of WHO to pursue the collection and publication of the relevant mortality and morbidity statistics; to continue to seek acceptable international definitions and an agreed statistical classification; to provide a centre to give advice on the objectives and methods of cancer registration; and to consider the desirability and urgency of co-ordinating and expanding work on cancer epidemiology and statistics, in order to contribute more effectively to national needs through improved international liaison.

The Sub-Committee agreed to define " incidence " as the number of new cases occurring during a stated period of time in a given population, and " prevalence " as the number of cases current in a given population, either at a given point of time—e.g., on a given day (" point prevalence ")—or during a stated period (" period prevalence "). The statistical unit should be indicated: either " persons " diagnosed as having cancer, regardless of whether they have more than one primary cancer; or " cases ", in which each primary site is counted separately. The proportionate distribution of cancer, i.e., the relation of different forms to the total number of cancer cases, is occasionally useful, particularly when no population denominator is available, and often too as a supplement to rates based on populations.

---

[1] American Cancer Society (1951) Manual of tumor nomenclature and coding, New York.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133, 14.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1959, 164, 27.

[4] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1957, 79, 26 (WHA10.18).

The Sub-Committee discussed the value of statistics of incidence and prevalence in the organization of medical care, in cancer control and in epidemiological research. Mortality statistics cannot provide differential survival rates for the various kinds of cancer, but are nevertheless a useful source of information. Compulsory notification, on the pattern of that for communicable diseases, has the disadvantage that the minimum amount of useful information required about each cancer case is considerably more than that normally obtained about a communicable disease; but it does provide information which, because of its confidential nature, might not otherwise be obtainable. National cancer registration could only be effective in small countries; in large ones it is doubtful whether the amount of work needed to keep track of all cases is justifiable merely to obtain incidence and prevalence statistics. Surveys of the ad hoc type carried out in the United States and in France, or as a by-product of general morbidity surveys, are a distinct possibility. Other sources, such as social security statistics, records of absenteeism, and general practitioners' records, are usually inadequate. On the whole, the Sub-Committee concluded, any investigation not specifically adapted to cancer does not supply the information required.

Linked with the difficulty of obtaining reliable statistics is the question of when cancer actually starts. In most morbidity studies a case of cancer dates from its first diagnosis, but this is not wholly satisfactory from the standpoint of statistics of incidence. The Sub-Committee accordingly recommended that countries recording the date of onset of the first symptoms in their registrations should carry out experimental studies to determine whether the adoption of the onset of symptoms as the starting point of the disease would offer any advantage in such statistics.

Unusual incidence, taken with dietary and other habits and environmental conditions in under-developed communities, might shed light on the etiology of malignant neoplasms. In such regions, therefore, joint schemes of cancer diagnosis and of registration of population and vital statistics might be established in selected areas.

The Sub-Committee then discussed cancer registration as a system of maintaining a centralized register covering patients from a whole country, state or other well-defined large area. This system has begun to be instituted widely throughout the world as a means of providing valuable statistical information on cancer. A cancer register affords a means of assessing the results of treatment, comparing the effectiveness of various forms of treatment, computing rates of survival, studying the etiological and pathogenetic aspects of cancer, and indicating methods of control and medical care. There are several ways of starting a register, depending on the purpose it is meant to fulfil. Points that deserve note either in starting or in maintaining such a register are its scope, the anatomical sites to be covered, the sources of the data, the items of information to be collected, who should be in charge of the register, how the data should be utilized, the register's role in general cancer research, and the use of the register in under-developed countries.

Next, the Sub-Committee discussed the epidemiology of cancer, laying stress upon the value of statistical methods in the study of cancer etiology. It ended its session with a group of recommendations: that WHO continue publication of reports on cancer mortality, publishing rates by sex and age and examining the question whether some form of standardization could be applied as regards rates for all ages; that it investigate as far as possible the major apparent differences in mortality between countries; that it publish a study on the epidemiology of cancer and cancer registration systems; that it co-operate with interested organizations on field studies of cancer; that it again draw the attention of countries to the definitions and rates the Sub-Committee had earlier recommended; that a preliminary study be undertaken of problems of classification of neoplasms, which would take into account current developments in their histological classification; and that studies continue on the extent to which diagnoses of malignant tumours upon death certificates can be accepted as reliable.

Special studies

A number of special statistical studies of cancer have been made by WHO. In 1952 the evolution of cancer mortality in Europe during the twentieth century was described in the Epidemiological and Vital Statistics Report.[1] Stress was laid on the degree of caution needed in examining international statistics of cancer mortality, and a strong appeal was made for fuller statistics, especially through extension of the cancer registration system, to help in the elucidation of many obscure points in the epidemiology of cancer.

This study revealed inexplicable differences in the mortality from malignant tumours in various countries: differences which inevitably suggest that more accurate recording and more careful inquiry into the relevant factors are required. It showed, however, a distinct rise in cancer mortality among the older age-groups in all countries, particularly from neoplasms of the respiratory system. It also showed that, although mortality from cancer of the uterus had on the whole been stationary, there was a definite increase in deaths registered as due to cancer of the breast in females.

The interest in the marked increase of respiratory neoplasms and in the possible causative or correlative relationship of such factors as smoking led in 1955 to the publication by WHO of available international data in tabular form,[2] and to a further mortality study in the Bulletin of the World Health Organization.[3]

In view of the heterogeneous character of the data, the study was guarded in its conclusions, but it found an increase in mortality from lung disease in all the countries reviewed, attributable mainly to the increased number of tumours of the trachea, bronchi and lungs. Although it is not entirely clear what proportion of the recorded increase should be attributed to improved diagnosis, there is nevertheless no doubt that in a significant number of countries of the world today cancer of the lung has become an important medical problem requiring intensive epidemiological research.

In response to current interest in mortality from Hodgkin's disease and leukaemia, WHO, also in 1955, compiled tables from the available records.[4]

Another statistical cancer study in the Bulletin of the World Health Organization in 1956[5] reviewed the trends of female mortality from cancer of the breast and genital organs, as shown by the data available to WHO. Here again, marked differences in the rate of mortality were found to occur in the countries included in the survey. These uncertainties confirm the need for fuller statistical research into the exact prevalence of the different neoplasms country by country and area by area, and into possible correlative and causative circumstances.

Pathological reference centres

The question of the classification of neoplasms was raised again by a WHO consultant group in 1955.[6] It suggested that WHO convene groups of specialists on the various types of cancer in which the histological picture and nomenclature were still in dispute. These specialists would seek to define the types of cancer in terms of actual pathological specimens, which would be kept in special pathological reference centres and placed at the disposal of interested workers throughout the world. The first centre of this kind was opened in 1958.

Non-governmental contributions

It is particularly in the field of the statistics and epidemiology of cancer that some of the most active international co-operation of non-governmental organizations is taking place. The chief of these organizations is the well-known International Union Against Cancer, with which WHO has established official relationship, and which has lent its full authority to the recommendations on nomenclature, definition and classification. In many of the registration systems outlined above, much support has been given by the national branches of this organization.

---

[1] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1952, 5, 1.

[2] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1955, 8, 211.

[3] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1955, 12, 687.

[4] Epidem. vital Statist. Rep., 1955, 8, 81.

[5] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 15, 5.

[6] Off. Rec. Wld Hlth Org., 1956, 67, 45.

One feature of the international study of these conditions which has been specially developed by the International Union Against Cancer in recent years is the examination of geographical variation in the occurrence of different types of cancer. For this purpose, the Union has a Committee on Geographical Pathology which met in 1956 in Kampala and in Leopoldville to discuss the problems of primary cancer of the liver in countries south of the Sahara and the general problems involved in the study of the epidemiology of cancer in this region. A further meeting of the Committee in Leopoldville in October 1959 showed that remarkable progress had been made and was continuing in the ascertainment of the frequency of cancer in several areas of Africa. WHO participated in these meetings with a view to providing assistance in statistical methodology.

There are a variety of other international medical and related bodies which are involved in the international study of cancer. There is, for example, the International Committee on Stage-Grouping in Cancer for the Presentation of the Results of Treatment of Cancer, appointed by the International Congress of Radiology. The work of this Committee was reviewed by a WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics [1] which considered " that cases of cancer of accessible sites might profitably be grouped under four stages to be more precisely defined for each site:

Stage 1—Tumour strictly confined to the organ and of relatively small size

Stage 2—Tumour limited to the organ of origin but of relatively large size or with limited extension beyond the original organ

Stage 3—Tumour with wide infiltration reaching neighbouring organs

Stage 4—Tumour with considerable involvement of adjacent tissues or having spread to neighbouring organs."

An important contribution was made by the Council for the Co-ordination of International Congresses of Medical Sciences, a special body set up under the joint sponsorship of UNESCO and WHO, in its Symposium on the Geographical Pathology and Demography of Cancer held in Oxford in 1950.[2] This meeting recommended, inter alia, that facilities be made available for the exchange of knowledge by workers on similar programmes. Among problems offering useful opportunities for international collaboration were those concerning primary cancer of the liver and cancer of the cervix uteri. The Symposium came out strongly in favour of securing the comparability of published results by the provision in all studies on the frequency of malignant diseases of information concerning the total number of new cases, the population in the area, the percentage of cases, the proportion diagnosed in hospital and the percentage verified by histological or autopsy examination.

The importance of the various non-governmental international organizations to statistical work in the field of cancer cannot be over-emphasized. The ultimate value of international statistical and epidemiological studies of cancer is dependent upon the use by practising physicians, surgeons, radiologists and pathologists of an accepted nomenclature, accepted definitions and an accepted classification in diagnosis, staging and therapy.

---

[1] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1952, 53, 47.

[2] Council for the Co-ordination of International Congresses of Medical Sciences (1951) Symposium on Geographical Pathology and Demography of Cancer [Paris].

LEVELS OF LIVING

In 1952 the United Nations General Assembly requested its Economic and Social Council to " provide for the working out of adequate statistical methods and techniques so as best to facilitate the gathering and use of pertinent data in order to enable the Secretary-General to publish regular annual reports showing changes in absolute levels of living conditions in all countries ". The Secretary-General convened a committee of experts to report on the definition and measurement of standards of living. This committee, which preferred the use of the term " levels of living " for actual living conditions, leaving the term " standards of living " to cover " future aspirations ", was unable to formulate a single index of the level of living, but concluded that " the most satisfactory approach to international measurement of levels of living would be through the measurement of clearly delineated aspects or parts of the total life situation that are amenable to quantification and reflect international aims ".[1] Statistical measurements were to be sought, therefore, for twelve components of levels of living which, the committee considered, would form a satisfactory international catalogue of such aspects. Of these twelve components, " health, including demographic conditions " was placed first.

The United Nations Statistical Commission discussed the committee's report, and recommended that the specialized agencies, each in its own field, examine the adequacy of the indicators proposed by the committee, as well as the availability and accuracy of the statistics relating to such indicators. In pursuance of this recommendation a WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics [2] examined the indicators proposed by the United Nations committee for the component " health, including demographic conditions ". These indicators are: (a) expectation of life at birth, (b) infant mortality rate, (c) crude annual death rate, (d) number of hospital beds in relation to the population, and (e) number of physicians in relation to the population. Each of these indicators, in the Expert Committee's opinion, has its disadvantages. The expectation of life at birth is affected significantly by the infant mortality rate, the accuracy and reliability of which are questionable in many territories of the world because of incomplete registration. Moreover, indices of expectation of life are themselves not available in many countries, especially in under-developed ones. The crude death rate is of limited value because of the influence of the sex and age structure of the population. There is no international comparability of quality of medical care facilities, so that the number of hospital beds and of physicians would not show how well equipped the hospitals are, nor how competent the physicians. In any case, hospitals and physicians tend to be concentrated in urban areas in some countries so that urban levels of medical care are higher, rural levels correspondingly lower. The Expert Committee reviewed other possible indicators, such as the number of deaths from infectious diseases in relation to all deaths, the number of deaths under five years of age in relation to deaths at all ages, and the use of morbidity statistics. However, it felt that, in view of the complex nature of the issues involved, further studies of these were required.

In October 1955 WHO convened a Study Group on the Measurement of Levels of Health,[3] which included among its members statisticians, public health experts, a social scientist, and an anthropologist.

The Group was confronted with two questions: what can be done with available health statistics as indicators (perhaps suitably refined); and can any new indicators be suggested?

---

[1] United Nations (1954) Report on international definition and measurement of standards and levels of living, New York (E/CN.3/179-E/CN.5/299).

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 137.

In the opinion of the Group health indicators might be classified in three categories: (a) those associated with the health status of persons and populations in a given area (vital statistics, nutrition, etc.); (b) those related to physical environmental conditions having a more or less direct bearing on the health status of the area under review; and (c) those concerned with health services and activities directed to the improvement of health conditions (availability and use of hospitals, physicians and other health personnel).

The Group reviewed the sources available to the health administrator for measuring levels of health, such as vital and health statistics, epidemiological information, and data from surveys. None contains satisfactory specific indicators of health from the threefold aspect of physical, mental and social well-being. Nor are the techniques for measuring the level of morbidity sufficiently advanced to provide a satisfactory indicator. Mortality statistics, however, for all their limitations, have the merit of availability both from one period to another and from one country to another.

The Study Group discussed the concept of health and possible indicators of health. These might be roughly divided into those based on available statistics and such new ones as might be devised. Among the former, there are comprehensive indicators, such as the expectation of life and the crude death rate, and specific indicators, such as infant mortality, deaths from communicable diseases per 100 000 population, and indicators of health services and activities. Among the latter might be considered the percentage of population receiving a protected water supply, or the percentage having facilities for proper disposal of excreta, or indicators measuring the status of mental health, nutrition and housing (as seen from its health aspect). The group weighed up the merits and demerits of each of these indicators, and concluded that further information was required. It accordingly recommended that special sampling surveys be undertaken of morbidity, nutrition, mental health, environmental factors, health services, and social and economic conditions.

In its discussions the Study Group considered the proportional mortality ratio (the number of deaths at ages 50 years and over as a percentage of total deaths) as a possible comprehensive indicator of health. In the view of the Study Group, this indicator—which was devised by WHO [1]—was a promising one, because the primary data are comparatively easy to collect and the method of construction is straightforward. It felt, however, as did the authors themselves, that further critical studies would be necessary before it could be definitely accepted. The proportional mortality ratio has now been further tested by its authors, who have produced statistical evidence to show that it satisfies certain essential conditions. These are: records should be available from as large a number of countries and territories as possible; the indicator should be related as far as possible to the country as a whole, not just to a selected area or population group; the records needed for its estimation should not be unduly affected by such defects as under-registration or differences in terminology; and the indicator should be of a comprehensive character, simple enough to command acceptance internationally, and sufficiently discriminating to distinguish between countries at various levels of health. In spite of some weaknesses, they therefore concluded that it is the most suitable indicator of " health, including demographic conditions ".

The fifth [2] and sixth [3] reports of the WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics briefly reviewed contributions to the development of indicators of health levels. They reiterated the opinion that theoretically the expectation of life at birth, at 1 year, or at any other age is the best indicator of all; but admitted that it is available for only a small number of countries, and even then at infrequent intervals. The best practical comprehensive health indicator suggested hitherto is the proportional mortality ratio, and the Expert Committee accordingly recommended that it be explored on an experimental basis until its usefulness can be judged in the light of experience. Referring to specific indicators, the Committee emphasized the value of the infant mortality rate, and in particular the late infant mortality rate (from 1 to 11 months), because the latter is less influenced by pre-natal and intrapartum causes of death. The total death rate in the 1-4 age group was also suggested for trial as a specific indicator where accuracy of age-recording justifies its use. A choice has to be made between a series of indicators which fulfil to different degrees the criteria of statistical significance, and of availability. It is to be hoped that the work initiated by ILO and WHO on family living studies and family health surveys will provide valuable data which in future can be used for the measurement of levels and trends in health.

---

[1] Bull. Wld Hlth Org., 1957, 17, 439.

[2] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1957, 133.

[3] Wld Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser., 1959, 164.

SOME GENERAL TRENDS

A brief mention has already been made of the statistical work initiated by the Health Organisation of the League of Nations, which greatly encouraged countries to introduce or to expand systems for the collection and publication of health statistics. It published a series of handbooks on the statistics of a number of countries, and sponsored much statistical work on such matters as nomenclature, classification, field studies, and the collection and publication of the results of surveys, all of which are dominant features of present-day health programmes.

When WHO took the place of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations, governments and a number of non-governmental organizations pressed for previous international work to be continued and expanded. It was recognized that sound international health policies and programmes were dependent upon countries providing adequate statistical and other data, and upon the application of sound statistical methodology. It has been the purpose of the present review to show how WHO has attempted to meet the demand made on it for services in these technical fields.

At first, quite understandably, the emergency conditions immediately following the Second World War gave considerable prominence to communicable diseases, malnutrition and dislocation of local health services. Even these emergencies could not be met without the guidance given by health statistics. When this phase passed, the role of health statistics became even more important. In most WHO activities during the past ten years planning has come to be seen as dependent upon adequate statistical data and upon a better understanding of the epidemiological factors operating in each country and region. Conversely, the marked gaps in the completeness and accuracy of health statistics in many regions and the incomplete understanding of the epidemiological circumstances of many causes of ill health and disease resulting from this situation have been seen to be a serious obstacle to the efficiency of the health services provided by individual countries.

In the early days of WHO the study of the communicable diseases (such as cholera, malaria, and tuberculosis) was predominant. Latterly, although epidemiological problems in communicable disease have continued to be exceedingly important, greater attention has begun to be paid to the study of non-communicable conditions, such as cancer. The work of the League in achieving greater comparability of statistics of incidence and prevalence of cancer from country to country has been continued and expanded by WHO, with the help of the national committees on vital and health statistics. Other non-communicable conditions of interest have been circulatory conditions, malnutrition and accidents.

Any proposal made to WHO for an international health programme has usually followed the same pattern. It has been recognized that any assistance to governments is administratively and technically faulty unless its full extent and implications are known. Invariably, therefore, the technical groups called together by WHO to advise on programmes have requested improved statistical information from countries, and asked WHO to arrange for this to be collected and analysed.

Again and again in the period described in the present review the priority to be given to the improvement of national statistical systems has been emphasized. WHO has played a large part in encouraging countries to recognize their responsibility for collecting adequate data on their health conditions, and to use the procedures and technical methods recommended by the various WHO expert groups. Statistical services in countries are being improved through seminars (conducted usually in co-operation with the United Nations), the visits of consultants, and the training of local staff through WHO fellowships. This basic work has been furthered by the appointment of statistical officers to the staffs of four of the WHO regional offices. These experts have helped local administrations to understand the role of epidemiology and statistics in the development of their own national health services.

Much of the work in statistics undertaken by countries individually or in combination would be haphazard or self-defeating but for the procedures, nomenclatures and classifications devised by the WHO Expert Committees on Health Statistics and the International Conference of National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics. Under the auspices of WHO the exceedingly important seventh revision of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death has been prepared and made available to countries through a manual published in several languages.

Another noticeable trend has been the increased willingness of countries to use statistical methods for the more accurate determination of the causes of mortality and morbidity. The detailed lists of the earlier decennial revisions of the International Lists had been recognized as suitable for countries with well-organized statistical systems. In recent years, however, it has been accepted that these detailed lists are of less use to countries lacking proper statistical services. Valuable contributions to the solution of the statistical problems of such countries have been made by the WHO expert committees; they have devised, for example, short lists and sampling procedures, and shown how the analysis of hospital statistics and other morbidity returns could be put to use in obtaining data of value.

This more intensive study of morbidity data is another tendency now noticeable. In the last decade health administrations have found it increasingly necessary to base their policies on indices of morbidity as well as of mortality, if not more so on the former. The difficulties of morbidity statistics have consequently become the subject of study. Recent Expert Committees on Health Statistics have attempted to give some guidance, but have recognized that the nature of the subject makes international study of morbidity returns inevitably more complex than the study of mortality returns. Nevertheless, several principles have been defined. Some of the conditions have been laid down which must precede the use of morbidity data, whether taken from hospital returns or general practitioner records, or collected in pilot schemes or experimental areas. Much research work, however, especially under field conditions, is required. Here again, the national committees are giving much assistance. Modern statistical methodology is of great value in dealing with the problems arising in the use of morbidity statistics, and is being made more widely available through training courses (developed by WHO) in the use and limits of small samples, in the control of clinical and field experimental studies, and in the general techniques of analysing numerical data.

WHO has inherited from the League the obligation to publish the data it receives on mortality and morbidity from a number of important conditions. During the decade, these returns have been under constant review, and every occasion has been seized to persuade countries to send in more complete and accurate returns, based wherever possible on one of the lists given in the latest decennial revision of the International Classification. A further obligation has been to make these data available to all those who may be interested in it. WHO has maintained the regular publication of these reports, incomplete and inaccurate though many returns from countries have been. The very publication of obviously incomplete returns is arguably a stimulus to better returns being prepared. World data, available through WHO publications or, in the case of vital statistics, in the companion publications of the United Nations, are essential for international organizations assisting countries to organize their health services, as well as for institutions and individuals undertaking research into epidemiological and statistical matters of world or regional concern.

Numerical data are not the only contributions WHO has been able to make in this field. Equally important is the information collected in specific epidemiological studies or surveys. Epidemiological inquiry, it will be recalled from the examples given elsewhere in the present study, has increased in prominence in WHO programmes. Many projects launched by WHO in response to requests by governments for assistance now have an epidemiological component: for example, those dealing with malaria, brucellosis, rabies, trachoma, tuberculosis, and such conditions as diarrhoeal diseases, malnutrition and mental diseases.

Data from such projects, apart from their use in guiding local programmes, are increasingly being added to medical knowledge by publication in WHO technical journals or, on occasion, in national journals. As the phase of direct assistance to countries in establishing their own basic health services decreases in relative importance, this tendency is likely to become more marked. International scientific data will be gathered and published increasingly continuously and regularly for use by technical and administrative groups everywhere.

The modern world depends more and more on a complexity of organization which sets a premium on statistics, and there is little likelihood of any decrease in the demand made on WHO for its services in epidemiology and health statistics. The growing complication of modern industrial and urban life must also make health programmes increasingly dependent upon epidemiological guidance. It is perhaps not going too far to see in many present-day circumstances an indication of the future importance of epidemiology and statistics. Populations, whether of humans, insects, parasites or micro-organisms, are living, changing groups which are continually interacting with each other and, in turn, being influenced by any variation in their general environment. This being so, no description or analysis of disease in a human population serves for all time: there are too many variable factors existing in the circumstances of any particular disease in a human community ever to justify complacency. Man's conquest of so many of the diseases that mystified and appalled his ancestors has, paradoxically, presented him with new problems. The reduction in the plagues of the past has unleashed forces the extent of which has still to be revealed. A world contracted in space and made one by technology, industrialization and urbanization is bound to produce new and unpredictable disease patterns. Even if the traditional hazards of such diseases as cholera, plague and smallpox are avoided, there is a distinct possibility of new infections and new hazards, radiation and other, emerging. The future role of virus infections is also difficult to predict. Whatever form, therefore, human communities of the future may take, it is unlikely that they will be able to dispense with international health statistics if they desire efficient health services.

WHO LIBRARY
HISTORICAL COLLECTION
00058294

1983-1

WHO publications may be obtained by payment in local currency, directly or through a bookseller, from the following agents:

ARGENTINA: Editorial Sudamericana, S.A., Calle Alsina 500, Buenos Aires

AUSTRALIA: Melbourne University Press, 369 Lonsdale Street, Melbourne C. 1; 321 Pitt Street, 4th Floor, Sydney

AUSTRIA: B. Wüllerstorff, Markus Sittikusstrasse 10, Salzburg — Gerold & Co., I. Graben 31, Vienna 1

BELGIUM: Office international de Librairie, 30, av. Marnix, Brussels

BRAZIL: Livraria Agir, Caixa Postal 3291, Rio de Janeiro D.F.

CAMEROUN: Librairie du Peuple africain, Boîte postale 1197, Yaoundé

CANADA: The Queen's Printer, Ottawa

CEYLON: Orient Longmans, Ltd. through : M. D. Gunasena & Co., Ltd, 217 Norris Road, Colombo 11; 33 Yatinuwara Vidiya, Kandy; 2 Montara Road, Galle

CHINA: The World Book Co., Ltd, 99, Chungking South Road, Section 1, Taipeh, Taiwan

COLOMBIA: Pío Alfonso García, Calle Cano 21 A-11, Cartagena

CONGO: Librairie Congolaise, 12, av. des Aviateurs, Léopoldville

COSTA RICA: Imprenta y Librería Trejos S.A., Apartado 1313, San José

CUBA: La Casa Belga, René de Smedt, O'Reilly 455, Havana

DENMARK: Ejnar Munksgaard, Ltd, Nørregade 6, Copenhagen

ECUADOR: Librería Científica Bruno Moritz, Luque 233, Guayaquil

FEDERATION OF MALAYA: Jubilee (Book) Store Ltd, 97 Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur

FINLAND: Akateeminen Kirjakauppa, Keskuskatu 2, Helsinki

FRANCE: Masson & Cie, Editeurs, 120, bd Saint-Germain, Paris 6^{e}

GERMANY: Govi-Verlag, Platz der Republik 42, Frankfurt a.M. — W. E. Saarbach, Gertrudenstrasse 30, Cologne 1 — Alex. Horn, Spiegelgasse 9, Wiesbaden

GREECE: Librairie internationale "Eleftheroudakis", place de la Constitution, Athens

HAITI: Max Bouchereau, Librairie "A la Caravelle", Boîte postale 111-B, Port-au-Prince

INDIA: Orient Longmans, Ltd, 17 Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta 13; 14/1 Asaf Ali Road, New Delhi 1; Nicol Road, Ballard Estate, Bombay 1; 36*a* Mount Road, Madras 2; B-A-324 Main Gunfoundry Road, Hyderabad-DN — Oxford Book & Stationery Co., Scindia House, New Delhi (Sub-Agent)

INDONESIA: Messrs P. T. Indira Inc., 37 Dj. Dr Sam Ratulangi & 81 Dj. HOS Tjokroaminoto, Jakarta; 104*a* Dj. Dago, Bandung; 76 Dj. Pakem, Jogjakarta; 28 Dj. Residen Sudirman, Surabaja

IRELAND: The Stationery Office, Dublin

ISRAEL: Heiliger & Co., 3 Nathan Strauss Street, Jerusalem

ITALY: Edizioni Minerva Medica, Corso Bramante 83-85, Turin; Via Lamarmora 3, Milan

JAPAN: Maruzen Company, Ltd, 6 Tori-Nichome Nihonbashi, Tokyo

LEBANON: Librairie Universelle, Beirut

LUXEMBOURG: Librairie Trausch-Schummer, Place du Théâtre, Luxembourg

MEXICO: La Prensa Médica Mexicana, Paseo de las Facultades 26, México 20, D.F.

MOROCCO: Centre de Diffusion Documentaire du B.E.P.I. 8, rue Michaux-Bellaire, Rabat

NETHERLANDS: N.V. Martinus Nijhoff's Boekhandel en Uitgevers Maatschappij, Lange Voorhout 9, The Hague

NEW ZEALAND: R. Hill & Son, Ltd, Cnr. Crowhurst & Kent Sts., Newmarket, Auckland S.E. 1

NORWAY: Johan Grundt Tanum Forlag, Karl Johansgt. 41, Oslo

PAKISTAN: Mirza Book Agency, 9-A, Shah Alam Market, Lahore-7 — Ferozons' Publishers, McLeod Road, Karachi; 365 Circular Road, Lahore; 35 The Mall, Peshawar

PARAGUAY: Agencia de Librerías S. Nizza, Pte. Franco No. 47, Asunción

PERU: ESEDAL, 5° piso, 359 Avenida Tacna, Lima

PHILIPPINES: Alemar's, 749 Rizal Avenue, Manila

PORTUGAL: Livraria Rodrigues, 186 Rua Aurea, Lisbon

SINGAPORE: City Book Store, Ltd, Winchester House Collyer Quay

SPAIN: Comercial Atheneum S.A., Apartado 1148, San Eusebio 25 y Vía Augusta 103, Barcelona; Vergara 9, Madrid

SWEDEN: Aktiebolaget C. E. Fritzes, Kungl. Hovbokhandel, Fredsgatan 2, Stockholm 16

SWITZERLAND: Medizinischer Verlag, Hans Huber, Marktgasse 9, Bern

THAILAND: Pramuan Mit Ltd, 55-59 Chakrawat Road, Wat tuk, Bangkok

TURKEY: Librairie Hachette, 469 av. de l'Indépendance, Istanbul

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA: Van Schaik's Bookstore, (Pty), Ltd, P.O. Box 724, Pretoria

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC: Province of Egypt: Librairie " La Renaissance d'Egypte ", 9 Sharia Adly Pasha, Cairo— Province of Syria: Librairie Universelle, Damascus

UNITED KINGDOM: H.M. Stationery Office, P.O. Box 569, London S.E.1 Branches at : 13*a* Castle Street, Edinburgh 2; 2 Edmund Street, Birmingham 3; Tower Lane, Bristol 1; 39 King Street, Manchester 2; 109 St. Mary Street, Cardiff; 80 Chichester Street, Belfast

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA: Columbia University Press, International Documents Service, 2960 Broadway, New York 27, N.Y.

URUGUAY: Oficina de Representación de Editoriales, Sr. Héctor d'Elia, Plaza Cagancha 1342, 1er piso, Montevideo

VENEZUELA: The University Society Venezolana C.A., Apartado Postal 1267, Caracas

YUGOSLAVIA: Državno Preduzeće, Jugoslovenska Knjiga Terazije 27/II, Belgrade

Orders may also be addressed to

WHO Distribution and Sales Unit, Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland but must be paid for in one of the currencies in which prices are quoted below.

Price: 3/6 $0.60 Sw.fr. 2.—

1961:1
1963:1
1964:1

LOAN.

22° Geo. V., No. XLIV.

No. 44 of 1931.

AN ACT to authorise the raising of a sum of Two million four hundred and fifty thousand pounds by Loan for the construction of certain Public Works and for Other Purposes.

[Assented to 24th December, 1931.]

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to authorise the raising, by way of Loan, of certain sums of money amounting in all to Two million four hundred and fifty thousand pounds for the several purposes hereinafter mentioned: Be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly of Western Australia, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as the Loan Act, 1931.

Power to raise money for certain purposes.

2. It shall be lawful for the Governor, from time to time, to raise by way of loan such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of Two million four hundred and fifty thousand pounds, as may be required for the several works and purposes mentioned in the Schedule to this Act

Sums raised, how to be applied.

3. All sums by this Act authorised to be raised shall be paid to the Treasurer, and shall be by him placed to the credit of an account to be called the General Loan Fund, and as to moneys raised under items one to thirteen inclusive of the said schedule shall be applied by the Treasurer to the purposes set forth in those respective items, in such amounts and manner as the Governor by any warrants under his hand may from time to time authorise and direct, in conformity with the annual estimates of the expenditure of loan moneys sanctioned by Parliament, and as to moneys raised under item number fourteen of the said schedule, shall be applied by the Treasurer to the purpose specified in that item, in such amounts and manner as the Governor may by any such warrant or warrants from time to time authorise and direct.

Principal and interest charged on revenue.

4. The principal moneys, and interest thereon, raised under the authority of this Act shall rank pari passu with the principal moneys and interest raised and secured by the Stock created and sold under the Loan Act, 1891, and all subsequent Loan Acts, and are hereby charged upon and shall be payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and Assets of the Government of Western Australia.

Advances on account.

5. The Governor may, from time to time, by warrant under his hand, authorise the Treasurer to advance and apply to the purposes set forth in the Schedule to this Act any sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum hereby authorised to be raised; and any sums of money so advanced and paid shall be retained by the Treasurer out of any moneys coming to his hands under the authority of this Act.

THE SCHEDULE.

Item No.	Work or Purpose.	Provision.
		Amount.	Total of Group.
		£	£
	Railways, Tramways, etc.
1	Bridgetown-Jarnadup Extension	20,000
2	Meekatharra-Wiluna	50,000
			70,000
	Harbours and Rivers.
3	Fremantle Harbour Works	50,000
4	Geraldton Harbour Works	50,000
			100,000
	Water Supply and Sewerage.
5	Water Supply for Towns generally	20,000
6	Water Supply in Agricultural Districts (including Drainage and Irrigation)	200,000
7	Sewerage and Drainage—Perth and Fremantle	100,000
8	Goldfields Water Supply	50,000
			370,000
	Development of Goldfields and Mineral Resources.
9	Erection of State Batteries	...	10,000
	Development of Agriculture.
10	Development of Agriculture	100,000
11	Agricultural Bank—Capital	250,000
12	Assistance to Settlers, Industries, etc.	250,000
13	Pine Planting—Purchase of Land, Forests Regeneration	50,000
			650,000
			1,200,000
14	Short Term Advances to meet Expenditure pending the receipt of Revenue	...	1,250,000
			£2,450,000

This page is intentionally left blank.

THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS A "LEGAL NAME"

Austin A. Baker*

J. Remy Green

ABSTRACT

The phrase "legal name" appears everywhere. And wherever it appears, it seems to come with an assumption that it picks out one, clear such name for each person. So, do "legal" names as the phrase is commonly understood really exist? As far as federal and most state law is concerned, it turns out the answer is a clear no.

This article seeks to highlight the legal, moral, and philosophical wrongness of the notion that people have one uniquely identifying legal name. To do that, we survey the status of names in various legal domains, highlighting that legal consensus tends to be that there is no one "correct legal name" for individuals (if anything, people often have many "legal" names). We argue this common notion that every person has a single,

---

* Austin A. Baker is a Postdoctoral Assistant Professor at the Rutgers Center for Cognitive Science (RuCCS) and holds a Ph.D. in Philosophy from Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

 J. Remy Green teaches at Boston University School of Law and Baruch College at the City University of New York. They are a founding partner at Cohen & Green P.L.L.C. They hold a J.D. from the University of Chicago Law School.

Together, we would like to thank Ezra Young, Florence Ashley, Laura A. Heymann, Cori Alonso-Yoder, Carolina Flores, Verónica Gómez-Sánchez and Mo Meltzer-Cohen for comments, thoughts, support, and all manners of assistance. We are also extraordinarily grateful to William D. Lopez and G. Kagan-Trenchard for their help on how to approach immigration issues; Daniel Muñoz for his help on how to approach ethics issues; Lucky225 (yes, their "legal" name!) for their comments and prior work on common law name changes; and Brian L. Frye for insightful comments and discussion of an early draft of this paper on his podcast, Ipse Dixit. Finally, we would like to thank all the students in Remy's Critical Perspectives on Transgender Law class at BU Law for conducting a remote mini-workshop with us on this paper. Without all of your help, we would not have been able to pull together a paper with this breadth.

And, of course, the views expressed in this paper are wholly our own, and are not intended to express the views of any other persons or institutions.

Both authors have been listed alphabetically and both contributed equally.

clearly defined "legal" name is a kind of collective delusion we all seem to share (emerging somewhere in the late twentieth century), but is not grounded in legal or social reality. To address this harmful delusion, we present a series of ready-to-cite conclusions about the current state of the law and introduce a normative framework for how institutions and individuals ought to choose between people's various legal names. Engaging with legal theory, feminist philosophy, and philosophy of language, we discuss the social function of names and argue that names enable people to communicate important social information about themselves—which can include their gender, religion, and familial relations. Thus, we conclude by arguing that individuals and legal institutions have a normative responsibility to respect peoples' preferred legal names, thereby allowing them to authentically represent these facets of their social identities.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction..132

I. Law of the Name: "Legal" Treatment of Names Across Practice Areas..136

A. Common Law..139

B. Uniform Commercial Code, Article 9..143

C. Immigration Law..148

II. On Shared Delusions, the "Mandela Effect," and Magical Legal Thinking..153

A. How Did This Delusion Come to Be?..154

B. Why the Delusion Is, Well . . . Delusional..158

III. How Do We Wake Up From This Delusion?..161

A. Introducing the Preference Norm..163

1. Dignitary Harm..169

2. Hermeneutical Harm..171

3. Procedural Harm..174

B. Legal Proposals..175

Conclusion..178

Appendix I: States that Have Specifically Abrogated Common Law Name Changes..180

Appendix II: States Where Common Law Name Changes Are Still Effective..181

INTRODUCTION

> "[C]ontrary to the apparent thought suggested in argument in this case, there is no such thing as a 'legal name' . . . ."
>
> Loser v. Plainfield Sav. Bank,
>
> 149 Iowa 672, 677 (1910)

If you have recently interacted in any way with any major institution—a university, a corporation, a law firm, a government office, a hospital, and so on—you have almost certainly filled out a form that demanded your "Legal Name." Remy's alma maters, for example, label names that appear in their systems as either a "Legal/Primary Name" and "Preferred Name" (NYU)[1], or a "Legal First Name" and a "Preferred First Name" (University of Chicago).[2] Some schools attempt to define legal name for their own purposes—theoretically dodging the need for a settled definition from some legal authority. But in many if not all such cases, that definition is ultimately an exercise in tautology—just look at how one school handles the issue:

> Legal Name–"A Legal Name is the name that appears on your passport, driver's license, birth certificate, or U.S. Social Security Card."[3]

---

[1] Legal/Primary Name, N.Y.U., https://www.nyu.edu/students/studentinformation-and-resources/registration-records-and-graduation/forms-policiesprocedures/change-of-student-information-policies.html [https://perma.cc/Y4H5-WCHR].

[2] Preferred First Name, UNIV. OF CHI., https://web.archive.org/web/20190822012305/https://registrar.uchicago.edu/records/student-profile-information/preferred-name/ [https://perma.cc/NG7X-DU9S] (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review).

[3] FAQ for Columbia's Preferred Name Policy, COLUM. UNIV., https://www.registrar.columbia.edu/content/faq-preferred-name-policy [https://perma.cc/KG8W-M7X3]; see also, e.g., Preferred Names, PIERCE COLL., https://www.pierce.ctc.edu/preferred-name [https://perma.cc/P5A3-JUZ6] (same definitions); Frequently Asked Questions Preferred Name Policy, E. MICH. UNIV., https://www.emich.edu/preferredname/documents/preferred-name-faq.pdf [https://perma.cc/V5KJ-8BTZ] (same definitions). Similar to Columbia's, the relevant definitions at Connecticut State are:

> A preferred first name or used name is not a legal first name, but is generally used to change the manner in which others refer to the individual . . . .
>
> A legal name is the person's official name in accordance with the law. Legal names can only be changed on official documents when a student acquires a court order. Such a court order may arise in a number of different contexts, including a name change proceeding, an adoption, a divorce decree, individual choice, witness protection program.

Preferred Name–"A Preferred Name is a name a student wishes to be known by in the University community that is different from a student's Legal Name."[4]

And to the extent that this definition is not an exercise in tautology, it hinges on a particular subset of potential legal names (assigned at birth, by court order, or upon naturalization). But, as it happens, sometimes the name on a person's driver's license or passport (often itself called a "Legal Name") is none of these three.

Dictionaries fare no better. Merriam-Webster's legal dictionary (un)helpfully offers this gem: a "Legal Name" is "a person's name that is usually the name given at birth and recorded on the birth certificate but that may be a different name that is used by a person consistently and independently or that has been declared the person's name by a court."[5] In other words, according to Merriam-Webster, a legal name is usually one of these three completely different things—including the thing everyone seems to refer to as a "preferred name" and define as not a Legal Name.[6]

And, of course, there is a deep irony to this near-universal insistence on using legal names: legally speaking, there is no agreement about what a "Legal Name" is.[7] Many people have several legal names—e.g.,

---

Use of Preferred First Name & Execution of Change to Legal Name by Students, CONN. STATE COLL. & UNIV., https://www.ct.edu/files/policies/2.4%20Use%20of%20a%20Preferred%20First%20Name%20and%20Execution%20of%20Change%20to%20Legal%20Name.pdf [https://perma.cc/UH5V-9RKV]. And that is when schools bother to define the concept—which many, if not most, do not. See, e.g., Student Education Records and Directory Information, UNIV. OF CHI., https://studentmanual.uchicago.edu/administrative-policies/student-education-records-and-directory-information/ [https://perma.cc/FVB9-ULTV] (noting "preferred name" is defined as the name "the student wishes to be commonly known as" while "legal name" is referenced but undefined).

[4] FAQ for Columbia's Preferred Name Policy, supra note 1 (emphasis added).

[5] Legal Name, MERRIAM-WEBSTER (last visted Aug. 25, 2021), https://www.merriam-webster.com/legal/legal%20name [https://perma.cc/8C5S-76TD].

[6] Though, to be fair to Merriam-Webster, as we explore in this paper, this definition is probably about as close to correct as you could be in positively defining "Legal Name."

[7] See, e.g., 1 SANDRA SCHNITZER STERN, STRUCTURING & DRAFTING COMMERCIAL LOAN AGREEMENTS § 25.02 (2019) ("[I]t is apparent that there is no 'correct legal name' of an individual."); N.Y.C. BAR, REPORT ON LEGISLATION COMMERCIAL LAW AND UNIFORM STATE LAWS COMMITTEE 2 (2014), https://www2.nycbar.org/pdf/report/uploads/20072753-ModernizingUCCArticles17and9t.pdf [https://perma.cc/B3LA-SV6G] ("Presently, there is no law that establishes the 'legal name' of an individual. Many official documents issued to the same person—birth certificate, passport, and driver's license—frequently appear with different names, or variations of names.").

the name on their birth certificate, the name on their driver's license, the name on their Social Security card, the name on their green card, the name they are referred to by in their community, etc.—depending on the definitions used, all of which might be different.[8] Others may not even have one:[9] e.g., while extraordinary, a child might be born out of status (meaning without conventional immigration status) outside of a hospital and might also lose their parents, ending up with no piece of paper stating their name. Thus, demanding someone's "Legal Name" is about as helpful as demanding their "correct name," their "real name," or their "super-official-we-strenuously-mean-it name."[10]

Yet, as far as we can tell, no one has written anything directly addressing this issue, much less proposing any solutions or useful advice for the trans people (along with anyone else who changes their name) against whom the fiction of a legal name is often used.[11] Because the harms are clear and easy to understand,[12] this Article focuses on how the legal name fiction harms trans people in particular. That said, as we discuss, there are many other contexts in which the fiction causes harm. Thus, this Article has two goals: first, to articulate and describe the current legal landscape for legal names; and second, to map out theoretical and practical solutions for practitioners and individuals who confront naming issues—

---

[8] Indeed, even mundane disparities—a different spelling on a birth certificate and Social Security card, use of Jr. versus III, a missing middle name—lead to people having more than one legal name.

[9] See Patrick McKenzie, Falsehoods Programmers Believe About Names, KALZUMEUS (June 17, 2010), https://www.kalzumeus.com/2010/06/17/falsehoods-programmers-believe-about-names/ [https://perma.cc/YC9W-QMF3] ("[Falsehood number] 40. People have names.").

[10] Cf. A FEW GOOD MEN (Castle Rock Entertainment 1992) ("'I strenuously object?' Is that how it works? . . . . 'Objection.' 'Overruled.' 'Oh, no, no, no. I strenuously object.' 'Oh. Well, if you strenuously object then I should take some time to reconsider.'").

[11] Professor Cori Alonso-Yoder has a forthcoming piece focused on common law name changes that focuses—like this piece—on the importance of names and discusses common law name changes. Cori Alonso-Yoder, Making a Name for Themselves, 74 RUTGERS L. REV. (forthcoming Spring 2022), https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=3823295 [https://perma.cc/Y5VR-NPE7]. But while Professor Alonso-Yoder does important work in problematizing some of the legal name framework—as well as identifying how the concept of a legal name is often weaponized against marginalized groups—her project focuses much more on the question of what constitutes (and normatively, what should constitute) an effective legal name change.

[12] For example, a significant amount of literature discusses the importance of referring to trans people by the right name—and the serious psychic harm that comes with refusing to do so. For a full discussion, see infra notes 150, 162, 163 and accompanying text.

specifically, confronting the seemingly omnipresent insistence that the term "Legal Name" has a clear, useful, and unambiguous referent.

We proceed in three parts. Part I identifies and describes the varied and inconsistent legal treatment of names in different areas of law. Part II dives deeper into what we will call the "shared delusion" that such a thing as a legal name exists, and discusses how the legal treatment of names as described in Part I causes individuals and institutions to perpetuate this harmful delusion. Finally, Part III discusses policy, legal, and theoretical solutions designed to help those who are harmed by the legal name myth. Specifically, we propose and defend a (moral and philosophical) "Preference Norm" according to which individuals and institutions ought to be permitted to select which of their various legal names should be used to refer to them. Violation of this norm can create three distinct types of harms: dignitary harms, hermeneutical harms, and procedural harms. We provide concrete legal proposals which take potential Preference Norm violations seriously and seek to avoid the concomitant harms.

It is worth noting early on that we are not claiming that there are no contexts in which people have a legal name. There obviously are. For example, when filling their taxes, the relevant legal name will be the one that is attached to a Social Security number. However, we are arguing that there is no single and coherent concept of a legal name across legal domains. Rather, in different contexts people will have different—equally "legally" valid—legal names. In this sense, for the concept of a legal name to be meaningful, it must be indexed to some particular legal domain, but no unifying concept of a legal name exists across domains. Therefore, this Article might just as easily—though we think it is not quite as punchy—be titled "There are About Seven and a Half Such Things as a Legal Name."[13] The point would remain the same: the insistence that any specific object in the world gets identified by a talismanic utterance of its "legal" name is wrongheaded and ultimately very harmful.[14] [13] See N.Y.C. BAR, supra note 7, at 3 ("Many official documents issued to the same person—birth certificate, passport, and driver's license—frequently appear with different names, or variations of names.").

---

[14] Cf. Kendra Albert, Their Law, HARV. L. REV. BLOG, (June 26, 2019), https://blog.harvardlawreview.org/their-law/ [https://perma.cc/RKT8-ZJ6F] (critiquing an approach to misgendering-as-discrimination in the workplace that focuses on the severity of harm and observing, among other workplace issues, that "dead names (old names that people no longer use) show up without warning.").

I. Law of the Name: "Legal" Treatment of Names Across Practice Areas

> "It is apparent that there is no 'correct legal name' of an individual."
>
> 1 Sandra Schnitzer Stern, Structuring & Drafting Commercial Loan Agreements § 25.02 (2019)

There is no coherent "Law of the Name," as much as there is no coherent "Law of the Horse."[15] That is, as Judge Easterbrook mused, if you tried to teach a course on the "Law of the Horse," you could certainly put together a reading list. But there would be no ultimate takeaways, themes, or unifying doctrines. In other words, you could read horse cases: contract cases that covered agreements to buy and sell, race, or breed horses; collection cases where gamblers failed to pay their horse track debts; tort cases where people were harmed by ill-trained horses and where contributorily negligent riders fell off well-trained horses; and you could even give an exam about whether there is some protectable "trademark" in jokes about horses, ghosts, and haunted dolls gained by just shouting, "TM!"[16] But all of that would ultimately amount to a poor approach to the law: there is no coherent thread that cinches together Horse Law. Put otherwise, there is no "Horse Principle" that can be applied uniformly to horse torts and horse contracts alike—or derived from careful analysis of all the Horse Cases.

Yet, while the "Law of the Horse" is generally regarded as facially absurd,[17] there is a shared delusion that there exists a coherent "Law of the

---

[15] According to Easterbrook:

> [F]ar better for most students—better, even, for those who plan to go into the horse trade—to take courses in property, torts, commercial transactions, and the like, adding to the diet of horse cases a smattering of transactions in cucumbers, cats, coal, and cribs. Only by putting the law of the horse in the context of broader rules about commercial endeavors could one really understand the law about horses.

Frank H. Easterbrook, Cyberspace and the Law of the Horse, 1996 U. CHI. LEGAL. F. 207, 208 (1996).

[16] See generally My Brother, My Brother, and Me, MAXIMUM FUN, at 38:04 (June 15, 2020), https://maximumfun.org/transcripts/my-brother-my-brother-andme/transcript-mbmbam-514-kickeo/ [https://perma.cc/8S5A-8VNN] (quoting "TM TM TM" from the podcast).

[17] Easterbrook, supra note 15, at 208 ("My immediate reaction was, '[i]sn't this just the law of the horse?'").

Name"[18] that is widely applied, used, and that even obligates individuals to identify themselves in ways that cause deep harm.[19] Thus, despite it arguably being "Law of the Horse," this Part will attempt to essentially teach a brief "Law of the Name" course, surveying what the actual legal status of names is in various domains. The purpose here will be to highlight how the "legal" status of names varies wildly and is not quite so coherent as people seem to assume. So, we show that there is no generally applicable "Law of the Name"—and to the (limited) extent there is, that it is very much not what people assume it to be.

So, why do institutions seem to insist that they know exactly what a person's legal name is? Part of the answer, of course, is convenience and technological incompetence. A few years ago, Remy taught a course at NYU. While being brought on board, Remy discovered that because they were previously an undergraduate student (under their deadname) at the university, their Social Security number was apparently irrevocably associated with the legal name they used then—and the university refused to change it without a court order and new ID.[20] After much back and forth (and Remy providing the court order), NYU next asserted that certain data fields simply could not be changed. But later, those data fields did end up showing changes (because of unrelated updates in the payroll field, Remy's deadname started appearing with a middle name and in all caps), and then NYU asserted that they planned to engage in a process to address these issues.[21] That process is, as far as we know, still ongoing. But while they taught at NYU, Remy was never fully able to address how their name appeared to students, all because NYU had policies that insisted on using a particular legal name for Remy.[22] Many other professors and students still face similar dilemmas at NYU—and any number of other institutions.

---

[18] We should also note, of course, that there is a section in American Jurisprudence on names. 57 AM. JUR. 2D Name §§ 1–8, Westlaw (database updated Aug. 2021).

[19] See Brittney McNamara, Why Incorrectly Identifying Transgender People Who Have Died Is a Lack of Respect, TEEN VOGUE (June 28, 2017), https://www.teenvogue.com/story/why-incorrectly-identifying-transgender-people-who-have-died-is-a-lack-of-respect [https://perma.cc/G62H-5B52] (showing an example of the harm trans people face because of naming policies).

[20] But see N.Y.C. COMM'N ON HUM. RTS., LEGAL ENFORCEMENT GUIDANCE ON DISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF GENDER IDENTITY OR EXPRESSION: LOCAL LAW NO. 3 (2002); N.Y.C. ADMIN. CODE § 8-102, at 5 (Feb. 15, 2019), https://www1.nyc.gov/assets/cchr/downloads/pdf/publications/2019.2.15%20Gender%20Guidance-February%202019%20FINAL.pdf [https://perma.cc/9K6F-URVE] (interpreting N.Y.C. ADMIN. CODE § 8-102(23), as amended in 2002 Local Law No. 3, and providing as an example of a violation, "[c]onditioning a person's use of their name on obtaining a court-ordered name change or providing identification in that name").

[21] A somewhat similar story played out for Florence Ashley at McGill University. For additional examples of ongoing issues regarding deadnames, see Florence Ashley, Enforcing the Deadname, MCGILL DAILY (Oct. 17, 2016), http://mcgilldaily.com/2016/10/enforcing-the-deadname/ [https://perma.cc/QWH7-MC3Y].

So, we are left with this: real people often face this assertion that there is a coherent Law of the Name. And (people seem to assert) that this "Law of the Name" produces a coherent concept (Legal Name) with a clear, unambiguous referent. And, as it turns out, the assertion that there is a "Law of the Name" that produces a legal name (that is not, for example, the name a trans person adopts for herself) is not only absurd—it is wrong on the law.

Before we begin, however, a brief historical note. From all appearances, this delusion has not always existed. As Professor Alonso-Yoder explains in tracing the origins of common law name changes, names were much more fluid in the pre-modern era—before the "proliferation of identity documents and legal processes" related to names.[23] So, early in the twentieth century, more than one court was able to simply declare that "there is no such thing as a 'legal name'"—at least "in the sense that he may not lawfully adopt or acquire another" by use—and mean it.[24] It has only been in the identity document-centric era (read, in part: post-September 11[25]) that the "delusion" we discuss really took hold. So, it has only been in this era that "the lay concept of a person's 'real' name"[26] began to be mistaken for something with an unambiguous, single, legal referent.

---

[22] And all of this (as discussed below infra Part I.A) took place in a common law name change state. See N.Y. CIV. RTS. LAW § 65(4) (Consol. 2020) ("Nothing in this article shall be construed to abrogate or alter the common law right of every person, whether married or single, to retain his or her name or to assume a new one so long as the new name is used consistently and without intent to defraud."). So, Remy's name—which had been "used consistently and without intent to defraud"—was their legal name. Id.

[23] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 10). For a history of common law name changes in the United States, see id. (manuscript at 9–12).

[24] State v. Ford, 89 Or. 121, 125 (1918) (quoting Loser v. Plainfield Sav. Bank, 149 Iowa 672, 677 (1910)).

[25] See Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 44–45); State v. Hayes, 119 Ohio Misc. 2d 124, 128 (Warren Mun. Ct. 2002) (noting that a criminal defendant had obtained an ID in the name of "Santa Claus" more than 20 years before, but "[i]n light of the tragedies of September 11," the state's BMV shifted to "requir[ing] stringent forms of identification before it issues any form of its own official identification.").

[26] United States v. Dunn, 564 F.2d 348, 354 n.12 (9th Cir. 1977).

A. Common Law

As a starting point, the fiction of a legal name often presumes that names change only when courts say they do. Not so much. It turns out, > in the absence of a statute to the contrary, a person may ordinarily change [their] name at will, without any legal proceedings, merely by adopting another name . . . . In most jurisdictions, a change of one's name is regulated by statutes which prescribe the proceedings by which such change is to be accomplished. These statutes merely affirm, and are in aid of, the common-law rule. They do not repeal the common law by implication or otherwise, but afford an additional method of effecting a change of name.[27]

This stands in contrast to what code law jurisdictions do. For example, the Civil Code of Quebec simply states, "Every person exercises his civil rights under the name assigned to him and stated in his act of birth."[28] But in common law jurisdictions, like forty-nine of the United States,[29] your legal name changes as soon as you say it changes (at least, if you mean it).

For example, seven years ago, Austin decided to change their name and started referring to themselves personally and professionally as "Austin A. Baker." They publish under this name; they are listed under this name on both the Rutgers philosophy and cognitive science department websites; and they refer to themselves by this name in all personal and professional correspondence. No one in their life knows them by any other name than "Austin A. Baker." But because the process is long and expensive, they never had their name changed on their driver's license, passport, or Social Security card.

---

[27] Clinton v. Morrow, 220 Ark 377, 381–82 (1952) (quoting 38 AM. JUR. Names, § 28). As explained below, infra note 30, it appears either four or five of the fifty states have superseded this rule by statute (and, of course, Louisiana never had common law to begin with). See, e.g., In re Reben, 342 A.2d 688, 693 (Me. 1975) (noting that a specified statutory name change procedure preempts and replaces common law name changes in Maine). Otherwise, forty-four or forty-five states still recognize common law name changes. See Appendix II; see also Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 10–11) (describing the modern common law name change); USA Common Law Name Change Info, COMMON L. NAME, https://commonlaw.name [https://perma.cc/N4U8-9E4D] (collecting some state-by-state authority for common law name changes); Julia Shear Kushner, The Right to Control One's Name, 57 UCLA L. REV. 313, 326–27 (2009) (discussing the modern state of common law name change law).

[28] Civil Code of Québec, S.Q. 1991, c 64, art 5 (Can.).

[29] See supra text accompanying note 27.

Most states, it turns out, allow common law name changes.[30] And some jurisdictions even (theoretically[31]) impose penalties for institutions that refuse to respect those common law names.[32] So, in most states, the assertion that a form must be filled out using one's "Legal Name" and not "[t]he name a student wishes to be known by in the University community that is different from a student's Legal Name"[33] is a non-statement: the name one uses (even if different from the name on a particular document) is one's legal name. Thus, for example, the Southern District of New York has made clear that a case caption can bear a person's "true name," no matter what that name may be.[34] The clear division between "legal" and "preferred" names posited by policies like those at most universities simply does not exist in most states.

Common law name changes "[a]t first blush . . . may appear [to be] vestiges of a bygone era."[35] As Professor Alonso-Yoder explains, "[i]n a time where documentation of one's identity was more limited, it may be tempting to discard the common law as impracticable for modern purposes.

---

[30] It appears that only four states—Hawaii, Illinois, Maine, and Oklahoma—have abrogated the common law rule (whether in an express statute or otherwise). See Appendix I for a description of these state rules; see also Kushner, supra note 27, at 328 (asserting that only a few states have abrogated the common law name change right). Additionally, Louisiana—having not inherited the common law as a code-law jurisdiction—does not recognize common law name changes. See Appendix I; Kushner, supra note 27, at 328 (including Louisiana in the list of states without common law name changes). Additionally, beyond generic statements that the inherited common law remains in force (WYO. STAT. § 8-1-101; VT. STAT. ANN. 1, § 271), we have been unable to confirm whether Wyoming or Vermont allow common law name changes. For the forty-three other states where we have been able to confirm in some way that common law name changes remain effective, see Appendix II.

[31] See Kushner, supra note 27, at 328 ("According to their case law, both New York and California retain the common law name-change right. Yet, it seems unlikely that either state would issue identification materials with a name changed at common law, given their application requirements.") (footnote omitted); see also Lark Mulligan, Dismantling Collateral Consequences: The Case for Abolishing Illinois' Criminal Name-Change Restrictions, 66 DEPAUL L. REV. 647, 656 (2017) ("Today, every state has adopted statutes governing name changes, and while most have not explicitly abrogated the common law avenue for changing one's name, in practice the only way to change one's name on government documents is to petition the court through the established statutory scheme.") (footnote omitted).

[32] See, e.g., N.Y.C. COMM'N ON HUM. RTS., supra note 20 (providing civil liability for any institution that refuses to use the name a person self-identifies with).

[33] FAQ for Columbia's Preferred Name Policy, supra note 3 (providing definitions from Columbia University).

[34] See Rosasa v. Hudson River Club Rest., No. 96 Civ. 0993, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8115, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. June 10, 1997).

[35] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 10).

Today's proliferation of identity documents and legal processes would have made the average inhabitant of the 18th century dizzy."[36]

But—again, as Professor Alonso-Yoder explains—that omits possibly the most common form of common law name change: marriage.[37] In fact, our system allows heterosexual women who adopt their husband's name in marriage to change their name "with little opposition."[38] And this ultimately "suggest[s] a policy preference for certain kinds of name changes over others."[39]

One curiosity of the history of common law name changes is that the cases are overwhelmingly litigated by unusual or quirky litigants on one hand and marginalized litigants on the other.[40] We see more than one Santa Claus,[41] serial name changers,[42] people who want to add punctuation to their names,[43] a notary named "Ssnake" who "signs his name with a series of symbols, including that of a snake,"[44] people who want their names to be a number[45] or a letter,[46] and marginalized people like queer families[47] and trans people,[48] as well as women who try to keep their maiden names after marriage[49]—or simply do not want a particular last name.[50] And the nature of those cases ultimately often leads to messy precedent, both because of the silliness and the seriousness of the issues. Which, in turn, is before we even begin to look at the decisions that are "plainly informed by sexism, racism, or other personal biases"—which "run contrary . . . to the underlying spirit of the common law's accessible name change standard, [and] also contravene the efforts of many name change petitioners to exercise some measure of power in their lives over their very identity and existence."[51]

---

[36] Id.

[37] Id. (manuscript at 11–12).

[38] Id. (manuscript at 12).

[39] Id.

[40] It is worth asking whether this is because more traditional common law name changes—changes of married last names, for example—simply do not encounter enough resistance to lead to reported litigation. In other words, it may be that on-the-ground use of common law name changes might be far more common than cases suggest.

[41] See In re Handley, 736 N.E.2d 125, 126 (Ohio Prob. Ct. 2000) (denying petition to change name to "Santa Claus"); cf. In re Porter, 31 P.3d 519, 522 (Utah 2001) ("[The] case is remanded for entry of the necessary order changing petitioner's legal name to Santa Claus forthwith."); State v. Hayes, 774 N.E.2d 807, 810 (Warren Mun. Ct., Ohio 2002) (reversing conviction for using false identification where defendant had an ID issued by the BMV stating his name was "Santa Claus" and his birth date was Christmas, 1900).

[42] For one particularly name-change-happy litigant, see In re Mokiligon, 106 P.3d 584, 585–86 (N.M. Ct. App. 2004) (changing from "'Snaphappy Fishsuit Mokiligon' to 'Variable,'" and also noting that "the State informs us that since September 2003, Petitioner has filed seven petitions requesting a name change"); In re Variable v. Nash, 190 P.3d 354, 367 (N.M. Ct. App. 2008) (affirming the denial of Petitioner's request to change his name to "Fuck Censorship!"). And, notably, in one of Fuck Censorship!'s petitions, the New Mexico Court of Appeals cautioned him, "We clarify, however, that Petitioner is restricted to using the word 'variable' as his legal name. The court is not granting him the power to actually vary his legal name at will and he is limited to using 'variable.'" In re Mokiligon, 106 P.3d at 587.

[43] Bean v. Superior Ct. of San Diego Cnty., No. D048645, 2006 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 10761, at *3 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 28, 2006) ("Darren QX Bean!," and discussing other name changes like "Karin Robertson . . . to GoVeg.com"; and other animal rights activists changing to "'Kentucky fried cruelty.com' and 'Ringling beats animals.com'").

[44] See MICHAEL L. SHEA, NOTARY LAW 6 (n.d.), https://web.archive.org/web/20110628080155/https://www.sos.state.co.us/pubs/notary/files/notary_law_monogra ph.pdf [https://perma.cc/R5QW-2UR4]. Shea explains the Colorado Secretary of State's understanding of a "Legal Name" requirement thus:

---

> The name used by a notary applicant is the name that the applicant wants to appear on the seal. The statute requires the "applicant's typed legal name." The Secretary of State doesn't really care what name you use. It must be the same name throughout the application, however. There is one notary in Colorado who goes by the name Ssnake. That's it, just Ssnake.

Id.

[45] In re Dengler, 246 N.W.2d 758, 762 (N.D. 1976) ("1069").

[46] In re Change of Name of Mary Ravitch, 754 A.2d 1287, 1288 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2000) (divorced petitioner seeking to make the "'nice and simple' letter 'R' as her surname.").

[47] In re Bicknell, 2001-Ohio-4200 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001), rev'd, 771 N.E.2d 846, 849 (Ohio 2002) (finding it "is not 'reasonable and proper' to change the surnames of cohabiting couples, because to do so would be to give an 'aura of propriety and official sanction' to their cohabitation" for a lesbian couple before the right to marry).

[48] In re Anonymous, 293 N.Y.S.2d 834, 835 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968) (discussing, with graphic description of the petitioner's genitals, a trans woman's common law name change). But see In re Anonymous, 314 N.Y.S.2d 668, 669 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1970) (similar); In re Dowdrick, 4 Pa. D. & C.3d 681, 684 (Pa. C.P. Ct. Cumberland Cnty. 1978) (declining to "exercise" the Court's authority to change a trans petitioner's name "[u]ntil the sex reassignment surgery is completed"); see also Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 33–34) (discussing both Anonymous and Dowdrick).

[49] See Forbush v. Wallace, 405 U.S. 970, 970 (1972); see also Omi Morgenstern Leissner, The Name of the Maiden, 12 WIS. WOMEN'S L.J. 253, 258–59 (1997) (discussing Forbush and its historical significance in the history of equal rights litigation).

[50] That is, Ellen Cooperperson sought to change her name from "Cooperman"—and was told by a judge that granting her request would "have serious repercussions perhaps throughout the country." A Judge Rules '-person' Is Non Grata, N.Y. TIMES (Oct. 19, 1976), https://www.nytimes.com/1976/10/19/archives/a-judge-rules-person-is-non-grata.html (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review); Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 28) (noting that Ms. Cooperperson eventually prevailed on appeal and runs a successful consulting firm now).

[51] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 13).

So, at the end of the day, the common law name change is alive and kicking—and might be more common (pun perhaps intended) than one might think. Passport applicants, for example, can fill out a form DS-60 and obtain a passport as long as they provide certain public records establishing that they use their common law name.[52] It is the common law that changes the names of most married women who chose to do so (70% of married, heterosexual women).[53] The Federal Communications Commission will issue licenses in common law names. And, as explained above, virtually every state—at least as a matter of law, if not practice[54]—recognizes common law name changes.

B. Uniform Commercial Code, Article 9

Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC") governs secured transactions—contracts where a promise to perform is secured by a right against some valuable property usually otherwise unrelated to the contract.[55] In Article 9 cases—unlike, say, the immigration law context discussed below—the normative goal is pure economic efficiency and efficacy in identifying the referent of a name.[56] Article 9 of the UCC is the model statute governing transactions secured by interests in property, where it is vital for the good economic functioning of the system that people can determine the referent of any name used—and far more vital than there being a certain name that gets identified as the "real" one. Put differently, the ultimate goal of the system here is simply the correct and unambiguous matching of a name used and the person or entity it refers to, so that future creditors can figure out what assets are already serving as security for existing contracts. And the system has few, if any, normative ends beyond that.

---

[52] Id. (manuscript at 12) (citing U.S. DEP'T OF STATE, DS-60 Form, Affidavit Regarding a Change of Name (Oct. 2020), https://eforms.state.gov/Forms/ds60.pdf [https://perma.cc/KM6R-JDA4]).

[53] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 32) (citing Claire Cain Miller & Derek Willis, Maiden Names, on the Rise Again, N.Y. TIMES (June 27, 2015), https://www.nytimes.com/2015/06/28/upshot/maiden-names-on-the-riseagain.html (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review).

[54] Professor Alonso-Yoder's point that judges have "relied on the authority of the common law to justify their misconstruction of the law" otherwise to harm "some of the most vulnerable petitioners" for name changes is worth keeping in mind here. Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 55).

[55] U.C.C. § 9 (AM. L. INST. & UNIF. L. COMM'N 2010).

[56] In other words, in this area of law, all interested parties benefit from there being any answer, as long as it's predictable and clear. While there are certainly vested interests in any individual case (for example, one bank would obviously be displeased that the application of the rule resulted in their not having the highest priority as to a particular asset), over time, those interests do not consistently appear on a particular side of a controversy. So, in the long run, all parties prefer a clear rule in that it allows them to predict outcomes and allocate resources accordingly.

Our point here is also not to suggest that the law of commercial paper does not have consistent, negative effects on marginalized or indigent groups of people—it does. Louie Dickerson, discussed below, obviously did not come away from his scrape with Article 9 in good shape. But the litigants are, over time, on both sides of the "v." So—perhaps in the Alien vs. Predator sense (a film with the tagline "whoever wins . . . we lose")—the system does not distort to match social inequity and power in quite the same way. ALIEN VS. PREDATOR (20th Century Fox 2004).

So, what might the system's interactions with names look like? One (in)famous case concerns Louie Dickerson, a cattle farmer born Brooks L. Dickerson.[57] Dickerson had the name "Brooks L. Dickerson" on his driver's license, but "Dickerson held himself out to the community as Louie Dickerson, and he used this name in bank accounts, bills of sale, and with others with whom he did business."[58] Thus, under the traditional common law rule, Louie Dickerson, legally speaking, was named Louie Dickerson.[59] However, much if not all of his personal "legal" documentation (e.g., his driver's license, Social Security card) called him "Brooks L. Dickerson."

Dickerson took out several loans, secured by an interest in his cattle. Memorializing this arrangement, "Cornerstone [Bank] filed a financing statement with the Mississippi Secretary of State . . . and named 'Louie Dickerson' as the debtor."[60] Several years later, Dickerson "borrowed money from Peoples [Bank] in exchange for a security interest in the cattle he owned or later acquired. Peoples filed one financing statement in November 2002 and two others in September 2003. The financing statements listed 'Brooks L. Dickerson' . . . as the debtor."[61] Then, Dickerson sold his cattle to Bryan Brothers Cattle Company, who claimed (for reasons irrelevant here) the sale was "free and clear" of the security interests possessed by the two banks.[62] The case was first brought in state court, then removed and ultimately appealed on summary judgment to the Fifth Circuit.

---

[57] Peoples Bank v. Bryan Bros. Cattle Co., 504 F.3d 549, 551 (5th Cir. 2007). The facts above are somewhat simplified for the sake of discussion. The court (notably, given the topic of this Article) refers to "Brooks L. Dickerson" as "Dickerson's legal name," apparently cribbing the term from one of the bank's briefings, but the usage actually cuts against the result reached. Id. at 552, 558.

As an aside, Dickerson does not appear to have any issues with people using his birth name. So, unlike, say, a transgender person and their deadname, it appears to be appropriate to discuss Dickerson actually using both names. See, e.g., Style Guide, TRANS JOURNALISTS ASS'N, https://transjournalists.org/style-guide/ [https://perma.cc/7G4W-WJWZ] ("A friend, family member, or the police may misgender or deadname your source. Do not use that quote in your story without a correction. Use brackets to replace the incorrect information with the correct information for text stories.").

[58] Peoples Bank, 504 F.3d at 559.

[59] Of course, modern convention would be to label this Dickerson's "Preferred Name," and as noted in supra note 57, the Fifth Circuit refers to "Brooks" as Dickerson's "Legal Name."

[60] Peoples Bank, 504 F.3d at 551.

The task for the Fifth Circuit was to sort out three claims of ownership, two of which are interesting for our purposes here because they turn on Dickerson's name—and (happily for our analytic purposes) the court rejected the third (non-name-based) option out of hand:

1. Cornerstone Bank's 1999 loan, secured against "Louie Dickerson['s cattle]";[63]
2. Peoples Bank's 2002 and 2003 loans, secured against all "cattle . . . owned or later acquired" by "Brooks L. Dickerson";[64] and
3. Bryan Brothers' Cattle Company's claim to have bought the cattle "free and clear" (rejected).[65]

In sorting between (1) and (2), Cornerstone's claim would be superior if a search of the filing system[66] under the "debtor's correct name" would produce Cornerstone's registration.[67] On the other hand, Peoples would have a superior interest if Cornerstone "d[id] not have a security interest in the cattle because its financing statement did not use Dickerson's legal name."[68] Ultimately, the Fifth Circuit held that:

> Peoples was put on inquiry notice that a security interest in the property of "Brooks L. Dickerson" could be listed under the name "Louie Dickerson" [because] Dickerson

---

[61] Id. at 552.

[62] Id. at 553.

[63] Id. at 551.

[64] Id. at 552.

[65] Id. at 553.

[66] Article 9 systems, state by state, have a filing system in which a prospective creditor (if they are smart) can look up whether a particular asset, belonging to a prospective debtor, is already serving as security for a different loan. Thus, it is key for the good functioning of the system for the name a creditor types in to produce records of all security interests held against a particular debtor.

[67] See MISS. CODE ANN. § 75-9-506 (2007) ("If a search of the records of the filing office under the debtor's correct name . . . would disclose a financing statement that fails sufficiently to provide the name of the debtor in accordance with Section 75-9-503(a), the name provided does not make the financing statement seriously misleading."); see also MISS. CODE ANN. § 75-9-503 (2007) (indicating circumstances under which a financing statement sufficiently provides the name of the debtor).

[68] Peoples Bank, 504 F.3d at 558.

> held himself out to the community as Louie Dickerson, and he used this name in bank accounts, bills of sale, and with others with whom he did business.[69]

Thus, the Fifth Circuit adopted the traditional common law approach to legal names for UCC Article 9 purposes. Dickerson's legal name was "Louie" because he used Louie in the community. Period.

In the years that followed, the question of what constitutes a legal name has been one of the "most contentious and perhaps the most difficult issues addressed by the Joint Review Committee" tasked with maintaining and revising Article 9.[70] Scholars discussing this area of law have—even before the Dickerson case—long made observations to the effect that "assuring accuracy in the debtor's name is sometimes more easily said than done, particularly where a debtor has more than one name and even more than one 'legal' name."[71] Thus, one treatise concludes that "Ordinarily, the secured lender is on safer ground when dealing with a registered organization than with an individual because it is relatively easy to determine the exact legal name of the entity," while it is not quite so easy to determine the "Legal Name" of a natural person.[72] As Richard Nowka, a scholar in the area, put it:

> An individual debtor in a security interest transaction could be known by various names: birth certificate name, driver's license name, passport name, or nickname. Revised Article 9 provides no guidance on what name is the correct name of the debtor for entry on the financing statement, and a financing statement that does not provide the correct name of the debtor does not perfect the security interest.[73]

Notice that none of the options considered here are a debtor's legal name, which, if it existed, would obviously provide a clean solution to the question. And of course, another way to frame the problem is that, as a matter of well-settled law, a person's "birth certificate name," "driver's license name," "passport name," and "nickname" are all legal names (and can differ from one another).

---

[69] Id. at 559.

[70] Richard H. Nowka, Twenty Questions About an Individual Debtor's Name Under Amended Article 9 Section 9-503(A)(4) Alternative A, 3 WM. & MARY BUS. L. REV. 139, 144 (2012).

[71] Margit Livingston, A Rose by Any Other Name Would Smell as Sweet (or Would It?): Filing and Searching in Article 9's Public Records, 2007 BYU L. REV. 111, 114 (2007).

[72] STERN, supra note 7, § 25.03.

[73] Nowka, supra note 70, at 139.

So, after "two years of study," this chiefly efficiency-oriented group of scholars was "unable to agree on a single approach," and instead "recommended two alternatives for amending the requirements for sufficiency of the name of an individual debtor on a financing statement":[74]

> A. Alternative A (the "only if" approach) provides "[a] financing statement sufficiently provides the name of the debtor . . . if the debtor is an individual to whom this State has issued a [driver's license] that has not expired, only if the financing statement provides the name of the individual which is indicated on the [driver's license]."[75]
>
> B. Alternative B (the "safe harbor" approach) provides that "[a] financing statement sufficiently provides the name of the debtor . . . if the debtor is an individual only if the financing statement: (A) . . . provides the individual . . . name of the debtor; (B) provides the surname and first personal name of the debtor; or (C) . . . provides the name of the individual which is indicated on a [driver's license] that this State has issued to the individual and which has not expired."[76]

In other words, the Joint Review Committee gave up on figuring out what someone's "correct legal name" is and punted. In the "only if" approach, the proposal basically picks one of several possible legal names (the name on a driver's license, "if . . . this state has issued [one] . . . that has not expired"[77]) and says, "use this one!"[78] And in the "safe harbor" approach, the proposal basically says, "we'll tell you a driver's license that isn't expired is sufficient, but we won't set any necessary conditions." Neither proposal ultimately tries to settle what is a "correct legal name," because, of course, "[i]t is apparent that there is no 'correct legal name' of an individual."[79]

---

[74] Id. at 143.

[75] Id. (quoting U.C.C. § 9-503(a)(4) (Alt. A) (Approved Amendments 2010)) (emphasis added).

[76] Id. (quoting U.C.C. § 9-503(a)(4) (Alt. B)).

[77] Id.

[78] Of course, the shortcomings of this approach should be obvious: not everyone—particularly people who live in cities and do not drive—has a driver's license.

[79] STERN, supra note 7, §25.02.

C. Immigration Law

Immigration law, we think, is the exception that proves the rule. The immigration system has a long history of being used to serve racist, xenophobic, or just malicious policy ends[80]—and in many ways, its dysfunction is deliberate.[81] It is filled with endless, deliberate traps for the unwary (or perhaps better put, traps for the extraordinarily wary and unwary alike) that have little basis in any legitimate legal or policy rationale.[82]

---

[80] See generally ADAM GOODMAN, THE DEPORTATION MACHINE: AMERICA'S LONG HISTORY OF EXPELLING IMMIGRANTS (2020) (tracing 140 years of history in the immigration system and arguing it reflects systemic efforts to terrorize and expel immigrants); Stephen Lee, Family Separation as Slow Death, 119 COLUM. L. REV. 2319 (2019) (discussing how the immigration system has largely "encouraged the disruption of family life among communities of color throughout much of country's past"); K-Sue Park, Self-Deportation Nation, 132 HARV. L. REV. 1878, 1878 n.3 (2019) (arguing that the immigration system is a collection of "indirect laws"—laws designed "to achieve one effect that in turn produces a second effect, which is the ultimate purpose of the law"—set up to make the system and its processes so unbearable that participants will elect to "self-deport"); Lindsay M. Harris, The One-Year Bar to Asylum in the Age of the Immigration Court Backlog 3 (Oct. 4, 2016) (unpublished manuscript), https://ssrn.com/abstract=2833404 [https://perma.cc/8ESA-5EZJ] (discussing the "disastrous interplay" between the time for filing asylum applications and the reality of immigration court backlogs); ANGELA S. GARCÍA, LEGAL PASSING (2019) (discussing the confusing and sometimes contradictory web of state and local immigration laws).

[81] See, generally, AVIVA CHOMSKY, HOW IMMIGRATION BECAME ILLEGAL (2014) (arguing that the dysfunction of the immigration system actually serves certain ends and constituencies, such as the agriculture industry); see also BILL ONG HING, DEPORTING OUR SOULS: VALUES, MORALITY, AND IMMIGRATION POLICY (2006) (arguing that the design of the immigration system is, in essence, anti-immigration).

[82] See, e.g., Catherine Rampell, The Trump Administration's No-Blanks Policy Is the Latest Kafkaesque Plan Designed to Curb Immigration, WASH. POST (Aug. 6, 2020), https://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/the-trump-administration-imposes-yet-another-arbitrary-absurd-modification-to-the-immigration-system/2020/08/06/42de75ca-d811-11ea-930e-d88518c57dcc_story.html (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review) (detailing the shift in policy at USCIS, under the Trump administration, to reject applications that left any field unfilled, even obviously inapplicable ones: middle names that do not exist, apartment numbers because someone lived in a house, sibling names because the applicant was an only child, work dates because the applicant was an eight-year-old child, and addresses for now-dead parents). In fact, the digitally programmed fillable pdf affirmatively rejected "N/A" in certain fields. The policy was instituted without even the legally required rulemaking process—and then once applicants began complying, USCIS started applying the same policy to required paperwork from third parties, like local law enforcement. Id. This policy is discussed extensively by Lindsay M. Harris in a recently revised piece. See generally Lindsay M. Harris, Asylum Under Attack: Restoring Asylum Protection in the United States, 67 LOY. L. REV. 1 (2021).

So, fittingly, the immigration code is, by and large,[83] the only place where the fiction of a legal name has any meaningful legal content. Regulations require that "[a]ny USCIS document is to be issued to the individual in his or her full legal name."[84] And United States Citizenship and Immigration Services ("USCIS") forms all demand a person's—and their family members'—"Legal Name[s]."[85] For example, Form N-400 (the application for naturalization) demands a person's "Current Legal Name (do not provide a nickname)."[86] The form then requests "Your Name Exactly As It Appears on Your Permanent Resident Card (if applicable)" and "Other Names You Have Used Since Birth."[87]

But nothing in USCIS's own regulations bothers to define "Legal Name."[88] USCIS's Policy Manual declares, "The legal name is one of the following: [1] The requestor's name at birth as it appears on the birth certificate (or other qualifying identity documentation when a birth certificate is unavailable); or [2] The requestor's name following a legal name change."[89] One can imagine[90] that, even if an applicant came from a country that fully recognized common law name changes, USCIS would not accept that explanation or name.[91] And throughout the immigration process—particularly for applicants with Spanish names[92]—a panoply of variations of a person's name often emerge.

---

[83] The REAL ID Act also uses "legal name." Because the administrative powers in the REAL ID Act arguably live in the immigration system (since the Act gives those powers to the Secretary of Homeland Security), many of the same critiques discussed in this section apply to the REAL ID Act. More to the point, because the Act operates in a decentralized way—that is, it essentially defers to an individual state's understanding of legal name—it is not something we discuss here, beyond noting that at this point, all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and four territories have all been certified as REAL ID compliant. REAL ID, DEP'T OF HOMELAND SEC., https://www.dhs.gov/real-id [https://perma.cc/QJH3-QXAL].

[84] 15 GORDON, MAILMAN, YALE-LOEHR & WADA, IMMIGRATION LAW AND PROCEDURE, ch. 51.4 (2019).

[85] See, e.g., U.S. CITIZENSHIP AND IMMIGR. SERVS., FORM N-400 (APPLICATION FOR NATURALIZATION), https://www.uscis.gov/sites/default/files/document/forms/n-400.pdf [https://perma.cc/B4G9-L5Y9] [hereinafter Form N-400] (containing field for "Legal Name[s]"); see also United States v. Carriles, 541 F.3d 344, 349 (5th Cir. 2008) ("The Form N-400 . . . is a form of the type familiar to anybody who has ever applied for a government job or sought a government benefit. The form first requires the applicant to provide basic biographical information, e.g., full legal name as well any other names used . . . ."). Also interesting for our purposes, Form N-400—in Part 2, question 4—offers a chance to "legally change your name" as part of naturalization.

[86] Form N-400, supra note 85, at 1.

[87] Id. at 1–2.

[88] As an aside, if the USCIS regulations did define "Legal Name," there would still be a difficult choice of law issue lurking here: whose definition of "legal name" should someone applying to become a citizen use? If the person is from a country that unequivocally recognizes common law name changes, should they fill out Form N-400 using the name they use in the community? What if they are applying in a state that recognizes common law name changes, even if their home country does not? Does that depend on whether they adopted the common law change while in the United States? In short, whose law is a name subject to?

A comparison between the approach taken in Article 9 and by the immigration system is telling.[93] Article 9's drafters recognized that errors would produce poor outcomes (for example, a creditor not being secure in their loan) and worked around the issue with clarity. By contrast, the immigration system simply demands a legal name without clarity—where simple, predictable mismatches might cause untold consequences. But, as Adam Goodman, K-Sue Park, and others explained, those consequences are, quite likely, the point.[94]

---

[89] U.S. CITIZENSHIP AND IMMIGR. SERVS., USCIS POL'Y MANUAL, Ch. 5–Verification of Identifying Information (2021), https://www.uscis.gov/policy-manual/volume-1-part-e-chapter-5 [https://perma.cc/94KD-54B6].

[90] Cf. Kushner, supra note 27, at 328 ("[I]t seems unlikely that either state would issue identification materials with a name changed at common law, given their application requirements.").

[91] But see In re Lipschutz, 32 N.Y.S.2d 264, 265 (Sup. Ct. Queens Cnty. 1941). The court noted, "While applications of this nature, to wit, to change the name, have heretofore met with occasional judicial refusal where the applicant was not a citizen, on the ground that an alien is not entitled to the benefit of such judicial decree, I find no statutory authority that supports such a view. The applicants or anybody may change their names without asking the approval of the court at any time." Id. And, at the risk of stating the obvious, 1941 was a very different time in terms of immigration law.

[92] Many people with Spanish names have multiple "last" names (one from each parent) and more than one other name. Immigration officials, faced with the need to place these names into a "First," "Middle," and "Last" box do so inconsistently, leading to various documents—I-Cards, green cards, immigration court paperwork—being issued in differing variations of the same name.

[93] Compare MARC R. ROSENBLUM, MIGRATION POL. INST., E-VERIFY: STRENGTHS, WEAKNESSES, AND PROPOSALS FOR REFORM 6 (2011), https://www.migrationpolicy.org/research/e-verify-strengths-weaknesses-and-proposals-reform [https://perma.cc/W292-9FLJ] (discussing how the immigration system's "E-Verify" system produces "erroneous nonconfirmations," which in turn, "produce discriminatory outcomes" because "errors related to misspelled names and name-order mistakes" are "more common among foreign names," and even then, the numbers "understate the actual degree of discriminatory outcomes . . . because they do not account for prescreening and other biased implementation"), with Nowka, supra note 70, at 139–40 (describing the Article 9 drafters' choice to avoid erroneous outcomes by avoiding a "Legal Name" approach).

[94] See generally GOODMAN, supra note 80 (following the history of expulsion via the U.S. immigration system and arguing that the U.S. immigration system has functioned as a means of social control); RUTH GOMBERG-MUÑOZ, BECOMING LEGAL: IMMIGRATION LAW AND MIXED-STATUS FAMILIES (2016) (detailing the human experiences created by the

Perhaps most curiously, USCIS is not even consistent on this. Consider the pop star born Björk Guðmundsdóttir.[95] For Björk, her legal name includes many characters not typically available on an English keyboard—and that would likely cause problems on USCIS systems (or that USCIS's computers might simply just not accept—assuming an employee input the form correctly in the first place). So, when Björk is asked for her legal name with legal penalties for using another name, how should she render it? Does it matter that "Bjork Gudmundsdottir" is not her legal name in any of the senses we have discussed?[96]

That is, it is not the name she uses in the community; it is not the name on her birth certificate; it is not the name on her driver's license; and it is not a name any court has declared. The same issues arise—since USCIS dehumanizing and disturbing processes involved in the American immigration system); WILLIAM D. LOPEZ, SEPARATED: FAMILY AND COMMUNITY IN THE AFTERMATH OF AN IMMIGRATION RAID (2019, updated version forthcoming 2021) (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review) (collecting the stories of individuals impacted by a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement raid in Washtenaw County, Michigan in November 2013 and arguing that the U.S. immigration system functions as a means to control the families and communities of undocumented immigrants).

---

[95] This is also the example used by Richard Ishida. Personal Names Across the World, W3C (Aug. 17, 2011), https://www.w3.org/International/questions/qa-personal-names [https://perma.cc/5EDL-7CTK]. Ishida's piece is well-known in the technology community and is likely required reading for any developer attempting to do anything that requires users to input their names.

[96] A parallel issue was explored at length in the oral arguments in Zzyym v. Pompeo. 958 F.3d 1014, 1024 (10th Cir. 2020). Dana Zzyym was born intersex, and they do not identify as male or female. Their driver's license has an "X" gender marker, but the State Department refused to issue a passport with an "X" marker. At oral argument, Tenth Circuit Judge Seymour noted repeatedly that people like Dana Zzyym would "have to lie" (under penalty of perjury) to obtain a passport at all. Transcript of Oral Argument at 7:30–8:45, Zzyym v. Pompeo, 958 F.3d 1014 (10th Cir. 2020) (No. 18-1453), https://www.courtlistener.com/mp3/2020/01/22/zzyym_v._pompeo_cl.mp3 [https://perma.cc/M6YS-LEQZ]. Judge Bacharach built on the same line of questioning, pressing that "clearly Zzyym needs to lie" to fill out the State Department form. Id. at 9:30–9:50. And Judge Seymour ultimately suggested it is "no more appropriate to ask [someone like Zzyym] to mark male or female than it is to ask me [to mark] either African-American or Asian. I can't answer the question truthfully. Why isn't that arbitrary and capricious?" Id. at 11:00–11:25.

Judge Seymour's suggestion that it would be arbitrary and capricious to require Dana Zzyym to falsely check that they were male or female on a form (by failing to provide an appropriate option) seems to apply here too: if a system does not accept accented characters, but someone has a legal name that, in every possible sense, has accented characters, it would require them to make a false statement to fill out the form at all (or at least, it would be the "best" course of action for the person to make an incorrect statement of their name on the form).

demands a "first" and "last" name on forms—for each of the issues discussed by Richard Ishida in Personal Names Across the World.[97]

On this point, USCIS's forms even suggest that they view any non-English name, regardless of where it appears (e.g., even if it is the only name on a birth certificate or passport) or the name's legal status, as not necessarily being a legal name at all.[98] Form I-589 (the asylum application) separately calls for an applicant's "Complete Last Name" and "First Name" or "complete name" on one hand, and "name in your native alphabet" on the other.[99] So, despite the admonishments that appear all over the form that information must all be true (under penalty of perjury) and "[y]ou may not avoid a frivolous finding simply because someone advised you to provide false information in your asylum application,"[100] it appears that USCIS often demands something that no jurisdiction would recognize as a "Legal Name": a person's name in a language other than the person's native language, rendered without special characters. And insists on calling that the person's legal name. With perjury penalties for getting the answer "wrong."

So, to recap, the immigration system does demand a person provide a legal name, using just that terminology.[101] But that demand is at least somewhat incoherent—to the extent it is not downright wrong. And, to that point, it is far from surprising that the immigration system does not necessarily trade in legal reality.

---

[97] See Ishida, supra note 95.

[98] Cf. Paisley Currah & Lisa Jean Moore, "We Won't Know Who You Are": Contesting Sex Designations in New York City Birth Certificates, 24 HYPATIA 113, 113–14 (2009) (noting "identification of citizens or subjects is as vital a function of modern statehood as establishing and policing territorial borders" and examining the "recurring tropes of sex/gender [that] get invoked to re-anchor these troublesomely sexed subjects").

[99] U.S. CITIZENSHIP AND IMMIGR. SERVS., FORM I-589 (APPLICATION FOR ASYLUM AND WITHHOLDING OF REMOVAL), https://www.uscis.gov/sites/default/files/document/forms/i-589.pdf [https://perma.cc/U89P-FD5K] [hereinafter Form 1-589]. But in fairness, we should note that, unlike the instructions USCIS provides for naturalization forms, the Form I-589 instructions do not specify that an applicant must use a legal name. See supra note 85, at 1–2 and accompanying text.

[100] Form I-589, supra note 99, at 9.

[101] As noted above, the Real ID Act uses the phrase, but the use is directed at states, rather than individual people—and it is far from clear that the use of "Legal Name" there does anything but defer to whatever state law allows a person to use as their name.

II. On Shared Delusions, the “Mandela Effect,” and Magical Legal Thinking

> “As for individuals, they may legally call themselves anything they wish, despite the lay concept of a person’s ‘real’ name, provided of course the name is not used for an illegal purpose.”
>
> United States v. Dunn,
>
> 564 F.2d 348, 354 n.12 (9th Cir. 1977)

Human memory is surprisingly malleable. “[A] particular false memory—that South African human rights activist and president Nelson Mandela died in prison during the 1980s (he actually died in 2013)” is apparently one shared by many people.[102] Based on this, “[i]n simplest terms, the Mandela Effect [is used to refer to an] instance of collective misremembering.”[103] There are many examples, many that you may even share (we ourselves certainly have our fair share of these): “a painted portrait of Henry VIII holding a turkey leg in one hand,”[104] remembering the children’s book series and television show The Berenstain Bears being titled “Berenst*ein*”;[105] or things like remembering Humphrey Bogart saying, “Play it again, Sam”[106] in Casablanca; William Shatner saying, “Beam me up,

---

[102] See David Emery, The Mandela Effect, SNOPES (July 24, 2016), https://www.snopes.com/news/2016/07/24/the-mandela-effect/ [https://perma.cc/4DNE-Z94S].

[103] Id.

[104] Id. This false memory seems to be shared, at the least, by the creators of Sesame Street. TOM BRANNON, MUSEUM OF MONSTER ART (1990), https://muppet.fandom.com/wiki/Museum_of_Monster_Art [https://perma.cc/RVA9-7YT6] (depicting Cookie Monster in the style of Hans Holbein the Younger, as Henry VIII with a turkey leg in hand).

[105] Mack Lamoureux, The Berenst(E)ain Bears Conspiracy Theory That Has Convinced the Internet There Are Parallel Universes, VICE (Aug. 10, 2015), https://www.vice.com/en/article/mvx7v8/the-berensteain-bears-conspiracy-theory-that-has-convinced-the-internet-there-are-parallel-universes [https://perma.cc/4QVF-GB4X].

[106] Ingrid Bergman comes the closest to saying this line when she says, “Play it once, Sam. For old time’s sake.” She also says, “Play it, Sam. Play ‘As Time Goes By.’” CASABLANCA (Warner Bros. Pictures 1942). Bogart’s closest line is “If she can stand it, I can! Play it!” Id.

Scotty," on Star Trek: The Original Series;[107] or James Earl Jones saying "Luke, I am your father"[108] (none of these lines were ever uttered).

The point, for our purposes, is that it is a common enough human tendency to form collective confidence around mistaken notions. Our confidence in the notion of a legal name constitutes a similar sort of collective delusion. The delusion consists in the widely held belief—seemingly supported by the use of the term "Legal Name" in various legal domains—that each person has one (and only one) legal name that uniquely and officially refers to them. It is also now common to see private institutions (banks, universities, real estate companies, and so forth) asking for peoples' legal names, which further perpetuates this shared delusion. Of course, there is something attractively parsimonious about the legal name delusion. If it were true, there would exist a perfect one-to-one mapping between individuals and legal names, which we might imagine could be useful. But, as we argued in Part I, the legal name delusion is not grounded in the law and, as we will argue in Part III, it is actually very harmful.

A. How Did This Delusion Come to Be?

As we demonstrated in the previous section, there is no shortage of evidence of this collective delusion.[109] For example, the entire immigration system simply asserts legal names exist and that everyone has one and only one. Virtually every major university and college draws distinctions between "preferred" and "Legal" names. And institutions seem to adopt this approach even in common law name change jurisdictions, thus defining

---

[107] See Beam Me Up, Scotty, WIKIPEDIA, https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Beam_me_up,_Scotty [https://perma.cc/GT2C-Y4AL] ("Though it has become irrevocably associated with the series and films, the exact phrase was never actually spoken in any Star Trek television episode or film.").

[108] The actual line is, "No! I am your father." THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK (Lucasfilm Ltd. 1980).

[109] Ezra Young makes a similar point in his piece discussing what the Supreme Court could have heard in (the case decided as) Bostock v. Clayton Cnty., 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020) noting that, contrary to what many assert and believe, "There is not now nor has there ever been a state or federal law that defines legal sex exclusively as sex assigned at birth as recorded on one's original birth certificate." Ezra Young, What the Supreme Court Could Have Heard in R.G. & G.R. Harris Funeral Homes v. EEOC & Aimee Stephens, 11 CAL. L. REV. 9, 26 (2020). Notice that both of these confidently asserted category mistakes (e.g., something like "you must use your real legal name" or "you must use your original birth certificate sex") ultimately serve to fix an immutable status on trans people that has never existed, by asserting (with no support) that the status has always existed.

"preferred" names with all but the literal (common law) definition of a "Legal Name".[110]

But, of course, we naturally might wonder where the shared delusion originates. Where did we get the idea that everyone has one and only one name which is real, highly official, and uniquely identifying? The widespread acceptance of the legal name delusion is especially peculiar since, as we noted in the previous section, there was a general legal consensus in the early twentieth century that people did in fact have multiple legal names, one of which was their common law name. So, why do we see such a widespread convergence sometime around the mid/late twentieth century on a radically different notion of a legal name that is so legally and conceptually misguided it can be accurately characterized as delusional?

While it is not possible to fully delve into this complicated psychological and historical question here, it is useful to speak a bit about the origin of the delusion. We hypothesize that the delusion is rooted in the (inconsistent) invocation of the "Legal Name" descriptor in these various legal domains. Specifically, legal forms asking for one's legal name naturally causes us—the people filling out those forms—to trust the authority of the institutions doing the asking (e.g., you trust that the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") must know what they are talking about if they are asking for your legal name) and thus assume that each person indeed has one and only one legal name. Hence, while you might not know which of your names is your one true legal name, if the IRS says you have a legal name, you assume you must have one. And once we accept the legal name delusion, we unknowingly become agents of its spread in the private sphere as we make reference to our and other people's legal names. In this way, our buy-in causes the delusion to gain cultural legitimacy and acceptance outside the strictly legal realm.

And because the concept of a legal name has achieved cultural legitimacy through widespread use, we (legal scholars, philosophers, and members of the public) have all the more reason to assume the delusion must be grounded in some truth.[111] When USCIS and your bank and your nosy friend all ask for your legal name you have all the more reason to assume you indeed have a legal name. Believing that legal names exist then shapes your behavior (e.g., if you believe each person has one uniquely identifying legal name and you start a moving company, perhaps on your client intake form you start asking for their legal name, thus unknowingly proliferating the delusion). We have now reached this point where everyone—legal institutions, private institutions, and individuals—has bought in to the chimera of legal names. So, while the notion of a legal name might have originated from a legal misunderstanding, it has come to exist as a robust cultural artifact, which is sustained both within and outside legal institutions.

---

[110] FAQ for Columbia's Preferred Name Policy, supra note 3.

[111] To that end, see J. Remy Green, Technically, My Legal Name Is Jeremy Jeremy Maxwell Green: A Personal Micro-Odyssey, MEDIUM (Sept. 24, 2017), https://medium.com/@j.remy.green/technically-my-legal-name-is-jeremy-jeremy-maxwell-green-a-personal-micro-odyssey-bfff05cc7f45 (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review).

We arrive here: the legal name delusion is one many of us on some level unknowingly participate in. But what does it mean then when someone asks for your legal name? How do we very literally understand the content of that utterance? Another way to ask a version of this question is whether we ought to do away with the notion of a legal name altogether or whether we can conceptually engineer a non-delusional and non-harmful definition of a legal name. While we are not convinced it is tenable to dispose of the notion of a legal name altogether, we do think that for the concept to have any meaning it needs to be significantly changed.

There are two different notions of a legal name that we refer to in this paper. The first is the delusional notion that "legal name" singularly and unambiguously picks out one and only one name. This we have rejected. However, the second notion of a legal name is the revisionary picture we herein propose and endorse. According to this definition, people can actually have multiple, equally "legal" legal names. So, while we are not yet convinced that the legal and social concept of a legal name can be done away with altogether (at least not yet), we maintain that the concept ought to be amended to accommodate certain legal (see Part I) and social (see Part III) realities.

What is the difference between using "Legal Name" in the delusional way versus the revisionary way? The most obvious difference is the way the term "Legal Name" is referring (meaning, what the phrase is picking out in the world). We can think of the delusional sense of the term "Legal Name" as involving a sort of reference failure—as we demonstrated in the previous section, people in fact do not have only one legal name so using the "Legal Name" descriptor in this way (as picking out the one name) simply fails to refer to anything at all. Philosopher Bertrand Russell gives the example of "the present King of France" as a name without a referent—we may talk about "the King of France," but the name "the King of France" does not pick out any entity in the world.[112] Likewise, we may share in the collective delusion and talk about someone's legal name in the delusional sense when filling out immigration forms or applying for loans—but, like "King of France," "Legal Name" does not singularly pick out anything in the world. Thus, commanding someone under threat of perjury to write their legal name—a term without reference if we are thinking about it in the delusional sense—is simply not meaningful.

However, we can meaningfully talk about someone's legal name in the second sense. According to the revisionist definition we endorse, "legal name" can actually refer to multiple names. And indeed, on many philosophical accounts of reference, descriptors can unproblematically refer in this way. Take the example of jade. In 1863, Alexis Damour discovered that the stone known as "jade," which has been used to make objects for over 5,000 years, actually referred to two different minerals.[113] Philosopher Hilary Putnam writes: [114]

> [T]he term "jade" refers to two minerals: jadeite and nephrite. Chemically, there is a marked difference. Jadeite is a combination of sodium and aluminum. Nephrite is made of calcium, magnesium, and iron. These two quite different microstructures produce the same unique textural qualities!

This example illustrates how one term can pick out multiple distinct entities in the world.[115] This means that a descriptor like "Legal Name" can, at the same time and without contradiction, refer to one's common law name, and the name on one's Social Security card, and the name on one's birth certificate, and so on.

We can also come to learn that descriptors refer in ways we had not appreciated. For example, perhaps you did not know that peanuts are not nuts at all and are actually legumes. Before you learned this, it would have been true to say that you did not know "legume" also referred to peanuts in addition to peas, lentils, and soybeans. However, in coming to learn that peanuts are legumes it seems natural to think that the reference of "legume" has not changed. Rather, you are just coming to learn that the term has always referred more widely than you were aware of. We think the same thing can be said about the definition of "Legal Name." Whether or not we knew it, the term has always referred widely (for example, your common law name, driver's license name, married name, etc.). Thus, ridding ourselves of the legal name delusion (which we can now understand is really a delusion about how the term "legal name" refers) requires a shift in our shared conceptual resource in both legal and non-legal domains, acknowledging that "legal name" has never had a singular referent.

---

[112] Bertrand Russell, On Denoting, 14 MIND 479, 479 (1905).

[113] Alexander Arnold, Knowledge First and Ockhamism, in JONATHAN L. KVANVIG, 6 OXFORD STUD. PHIL. RELIGION 10 (2015).

[114] 2 HILARY PUTNAM, MIND, LANGUAGE AND REALITY: PHILOSOPHICAL PAPERS 241 (1979).

[115] This is more difficult to accommodate on certain theories of reference. But see generally SAUL KRIPKE, NAMING AND NECESSITY (1980) (arguing that a name always designates the same object or person in every possible world).

B. Why the Delusion Is, Well . . . Delusional[116]

To state what we hope is clear here: the view of concept of legal names as having meaningful, informative content—to say nothing of it having binding legal content—is wrong.

That delusional view has a sort of similarity with the law-as-magic-words thinking that is common to the sovereign citizen movement.[117] The view assumes that reciting the right words in the right, spell-like order will invoke and summon The Law and compel a certain real-world effect.[118] Yet, there is buy-in here: virtually every major institution demands a legal name as if that name were the same kind of totemic invocation sovereign citizens use—with the same kind of sovereign citizen-like fear that failure to recite a person's totemic-name might "immunize th[at person] from entering into a contract," for example.[119] And those same institutions might refuse to refer to someone's common law name as a legal name, just like those involved in law-as-magic thinking might "use ZIP codes but change them in some way, by putting brackets or parentheses around them or using the word 'near' . . . [or] refer to it as a 'postal zone' or a 'postal code' rather than a ZIP Code."[120] Well: Rumplestiltskin!

---

[116] To be clear, this is not to say we think it is stupid to fall for this delusion. As noted above, we have previously bought in to the delusion. See Green, supra note 111. Nor are we saying that because there are, for example, transphobic patterns to the application of the delusion that anyone who has ever bought in is a transphobe. Rather, we think that highlighting the misguided legal aspect of this thinking will lead to people and institutions feeling freer to reject the delusion, in favor of the dignitary benefits we identify, because they are not legally bound to do the opposite.

[117] See, e.g., Allie Conti, Learn to Spot the Secret Signals of Far-Right 'Sovereign Citizens', VICE (May 1, 2018), https://www.vice.com/en/article/8xkp74/learn-to-spot-the-secret-signals-of-far-right-sovereign-citizens [https://perma.cc/W79K-RV3Z] (describing various language tics of sovereign citizens as "sort-of like totems in written form" and a kind of "magical thinking"). For a thorough judicial treatment of these kinds of arguments, see Meads v. Meads, 2012 ABQB 571 (Can.).

[118] Given our reliance on common law name changes, one might object here—after all, is not a common law name change effecting legal change by reciting just the right words?

We do not think so. Instead, a common law name change does not happen all at once by invocation of the right words. Instead, it is the continued use—and perhaps most importantly, use by a person's community—of the name that creates the change. In other words, though it involves words, it is an act.

It turns out that names—like other words—do not function as magical totems in law. As a New York court explained long ago:

> Can one contract with another under a name she represents to be her name, and then avoid liability on the contract when her identity is unquestioned, by claiming that the name she held out to be her own was not the name by which she was best known to the world? . . . There is nothing so sacred in a name that right and justice should be sacrificed to its sanctity.
>
> . . . [A] person can obligate himself under any name he may assume, and the identity of the individual with the contracting name chiefly concerns the court.[121]

In other words, the notion that speaking the wrong incantatory name will somehow create a legal nullity is just wrong. A person—unlike djinni or imps—is bound to any name they use.[122]

---

[119] Conti, supra note 117 (describing various language tics of sovereign citizens as "sort-of like totems in written form" and a kind of "magical thinking").

[120] Id.

[121] Preiss v. Le Poidevin, 19 Abb. N. Cas. 123, 127–28 (N.Y. City Ct. 1887); see also Gotthelf v. Shapiro, 120 N.Y.S. 210, 213 (2nd Dept. 1909) ("Hyman . . . could assume the name of Max J.; and, if he did, he cannot escape his obligation by a later disavowal"); Bessa v. Anflo Indus., Inc., 10 N.Y.S.3d 835, 838 (Queens Cnty. Sup. Ct. 2015) aff'd, 51 N.Y.S.3d 102, 106 (App. Div. 2d Dept. 2017) ("'[A] party may contract and sue in a fictitious name, it being the identity of the individual that is regarded.'") (quoting Sheppard v. Ridgewood Grove, Inc., 126 N.Y.S.2d 761, 762 (Sup. Ct. 1953)). Note that in affirming, the Second Department opined that the lower court should have changed the caption, contra Rosasa v. Hudson River, discussed in supra note 34. And these cases are sometimes cited as developing an "imposter defense," a "'rule applicable to contracts generally' that where a person pretends to be someone else and induces another to make a contract, the resulting contract is with the person actually seen and dealt with." N. Am. Co. for Life & Health Ins. v. Rypins, 29 F. Supp. 2d 619, 621 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (citing Amex Life Assurance Co. v. Superior Court, 14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1239–41 (1997)).

[122] See, e.g., Adam Candeub, Privacy and Common Law Names: Sand in the Gears of Identification, 68 FLA. L. REV. 467, 484 (2016) (noting that use of a common law name in a contract has always been binding).

Much of that wrong view draws on a sense that, somehow, changing one's name (particularly when a trans person does it) is deceptive.[123] That is, as a New Jersey appellate court put it, "we perceive that [people are ostensibly] concerned about a male assuming a female identity in mannerism and dress."[124] Or, as Professor Alonso-Yoder puts it, historical denials of trans peoples' name change petitions are actually > inconsistent to the underlying rationale for regulating name changes through a judicial process. Historically, name changes through the court have been justified as a way for the state to simply maintain an administrative record of the change. By denying name changes with which courts disagree while suggesting that petitioners carrying [sic] on using their chosen name under the common law, courts are promoting a result inconsistent to both the common law and statutory schemes.[125]

But, beyond that being "a matter which is of no concern to the judiciary, and which has no bearing upon the outcome of a simple name change application,"[126] it is also simply wrong.

Instead, the real risk of deception here comes from not identifying people by the names they use within their communities.[127] The notion that trans people's very existence is somehow deceptive is well-trodden turf[128]—and their use of their own names is no exception. But, as the Fifth Circuit recognized in Peoples Bank, where a person whose ID said, "Brooks L. Dickerson" "held himself out to the community as Louie Dickerson," using the name "Louie Dickerson" in official documents could not be "seriously misle[ading]."[129] By contrast, using a name that is not in regular use by someone is misleading. For example, when schools have accidentally pushed Remy's previous name to students, Remy has had students legitimately confused about who was teaching their class.

---

[123] See, e.g., Matter of Eck, 584 A.2d 859, 860–61 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1991). The lower court judge was not at all ambiguous in his "concern" in Eck, opining: "it is inherently fraudulent for a person who is physically a male to assume an obviously 'female' name for the sole purpose of representing himself to future employers and society as a female." Id. at 860 (noting that misgendering is preserved for clarity in evaluating the lower court's mistake); see also Aren Z. Aizura, Trans Feminine Value, Racialized Others and the Limits of Necropolitics, in QUEER NECROPOLITICS 129, 135 (2014) (discussing how ordinary discourse often "cast[s] trans feminine individuals as not only sexually available, but deceptive and criminal."); Talia Mae Bettcher, Evil Deceivers and Make-Believers: On Transphobic Violence and the Politics of Illusion, 22 HYPATIA 43 (2007) (examining the stereotype that trans people are "deceivers"); Thomas Page McBee, Amateur: Finding Joy and Power in Being a Trans Person, THEM. (Oct. 18, 2018), https://www.them.us/story/amateur-finding-trans-joy [https://perma.cc/DK5F-ZFN7] ("We are taking back the narrative that has defined us in the collective imagination for decades now: Sad, tragic, deceptive, and (often in the case of trans men) invisible.").

[124] Eck, 584 A.2d at 861.

[125] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 55).

[126] Eck, 584 A.2d at 861.

[127] We want to thank Professor Brian L. Frye for helping us crystalize this point in our discussion on his podcast, Ipse Dixit. Brian L. Frye, Episode 698: J. Remy Green & Austin A. Baker on Names, ACAST: IPSE DIXIT (Mar. 27, 2021), https://shows.acast.com/ipse-dixit/episodes/j-remy-green-austin-a-baker-on-names [https://perma.cc/HVM2-PTHG] (discussing an early draft of this Article).

* * *

So, a form demands a legal name. As we have explained, the form's author is laboring under a widely shared delusion: that the phrase "Legal Name" denotes an incorrectly presumed to be uniform subset of what legal names actually are. And the assumption that there is some legal (read: totemic and magical) reason that an institution needs to have the name on a person's driver's license, for example, in their computers is wrong. But ultimately, few individuals have the power—let alone the means and legal knowledge—to correct this mistaken notion and advocate for themselves according to the revisionary definition of a legal name. So, what is next? How do we wake up from our delusion?

III. How Do We Wake Up from This Delusion?

> "There is no such thing as a 'legal name' of an individual."
>
> State v. Ford,
>
> 89 Or. 121, 125 (1918).

We hope we have succeeded in showing that the notion that there is a clearly defined, agreed upon definition of a legal name is—put simply—wrong. So, what do we do about it? We think a lot of the solution starts with providing a citable source for the proposition.[130] Thus, we begin by offering a clear, citable set of conclusions:

---

[128] Pun (with "TERF") somewhat intended. See Bettcher, supra note 124 (examining the stereotype that trans people are "deceivers"); Florence Ashley, Don't Be So Hateful: The Insufficiency of Anti-Discrimination and Hate Crime Laws in Improving Trans Wellbeing, 68 UNI. TORONTO L.J. 1, 14–18 (2018) (discussing the "putative deceptiveness of trans bodies" and how the perception of trans people as inherently deceptive leads to violence justified on that basis); Florence Ashley, Genderfucking Non-Disclosure: Sexual Fraud, Transgender Bodies, and Messy Identities, 41 DALHOUSIE L.J. 339 (2019) (discussing and rejecting the argument that non-disclosure of one's being transgender is a kind of sexual assault by fraud).

[129] Peoples Bank v. Bryan Bros. Cattle Co., 504 F.3d 549, 559 (5th Cir. 2007) (noting that in analyzing this question, "the focus should be 'on whether potential creditors would have been misled as a result of the name the debtor was listed by' in the financing statement" (quoting In re Glasco, Inc., 642 F.2d 793, 795–96 (5th Cir. 1981))).

1. There is no clear, uniform definition of a legal name.[131]
2. The name a person uses in their community, generally speaking and in the absence of a specific statute providing otherwise (which most states do not have), is their legal name.[132]
3. Even where there is a statute providing otherwise, the name a person uses for themself is best described, not as a "preferred name" or a "chosen name," but as their "common law name"—that is, it should be described unambiguously as a kind of "legal name," even if they are in a jurisdiction that does not necessarily give force to that kind of legal name.[133]
4. When anyone—whether they changed their name because they are transgender, through marriage, post marriage, for religious reasons, or anything else—tells you the name they use, that is (at least in between 43 and 45 states) their legal name.[134]
5. A contract is enforceable, no matter what name you use, and in most interactions, there is no value or gain in forcing someone to use anything other than the name they use in their community.[135]

With those conclusions in hand, we want to take two approaches: a discussion of why names are important and what they do (Part III.A), and then a set of proscriptive proposals (Part III.B).

---

[130] Cf. Orin S. Kerr, A Theory of Law, 16 GREEN BAG 2D 111, 111 (2012) (tongue in cheek, noting "[l]egal scholars need a source they can cite when confronted with" a "demand that authors support every claim with a citation," even when "[s]ome claims are so obvious or obscure that they have not been made before").

[131] See supra notes 7, 24, 26–79 and accompanying text.

[132] See Appendix II.

[133] This follows from conclusions (1) and (2), since all we are saying is that "common law name" is probably a better way to describe the referent people are pointing to when they say "chosen name" in contrast to the mistaken notion of "legal name." See supra note 1 and accompanying text (citing policies perpetuating the concept of a "legal name").

[134] See Appendix II; see also supra notes 35–39 and accompanying text (discussing the modern status of common law name changes).

[135] See supra note 122 and accompanying text.

A. Introducing the Preference Norm

Up until this point, we have argued that people have multiple legal names, one of which is their common law name. Consider, for example, a law professor who uses her married name when talking to her children's teachers, her maiden name in her legal career, and a pen name for writing fiction and to sign contracts related to her fiction writing. As we argued in the previous section, each of these—used simultaneously—is a kind of legal name.

Put differently, each of these names is, as a question of law, equally valid—and more importantly, equally appropriately called a legal name (except in the very few states that define the phrase). However, in this section we want to propose a norm about how these multiple legal names ought to be applied by individuals or institutions. Call this the "Preference Norm"—and consider it a sixth conclusion to go with those above:

> 6. Institutions and individuals should defer to the legal name a person prefers when addressing that person in personal or professional contexts absent a binding legal requirement.

Note that conclusions (1) through (5) do not necessarily entail the stronger normative claim that we should defer to the legal name a person prefers. For example, it would be consistent for one to acknowledge that people can have multiple legal names yet also dogmatically assert that institutions and individuals should have choice in what legal names they use to address someone. However, if someone prefers to be referred to by their common law name "Hamish Baker," but their driver's license lists them as "Harriet Baker," we contend that institutions and individuals have a normative responsibility to refer to them as "Hamish" rather than "Harriet." Specifically, in this section we will argue that failing to defer to the individual's preferred legal name potentially does them three distinct types of harm: (1) dignitary harm, (2) hermeneutical harm, and (3) procedural harm. We will take each of these harms in turn in a moment.

Why would referring to someone by a different legal name harm them in these ways? Much of the answer has to do with what names are actually doing. While Juliet famously posed the question, "what's in a name?" and answered that names do not matter very much ("a rose by any other name would smell as sweet"),[136] we disagree. Names, especially legal names, actually do a great deal. While Juliet atop a balcony may have thought names did not matter, Sojourner Truth's explanation of her new name casts that in stark relief: "My name was Isabella; but when I left the house of bondage, I left everything behind. I wa'n't goin' to keep nothin' of Egypt on me, an' so I went to the Lord an' asked Him to give me a new name."[137]

---

[136] WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, ROMEO & JULIET, act 2, sc. 2.

Much of the philosophical literature of names has centered on reference—how names refer to persons and objects in the world. For example, descriptivists like Bertrand Russell and Gottlob Frege claim that names are associated with a list of descriptive sentences in one's head and that those descriptions determine what object in the world is picked out by the name.[138] For example, the name "Joe Biden" is mentally associated with the descriptions "46th president," "husband of Jill Biden," and "Vice President under Barack Obama," which all collectively pick out the person Joseph Robinette Biden Jr. On the other hand, causal theorists like Saul Kripke argue that names refer because the "right" sort of causal relationship exists between the name and the referent, such that some sort of naming event occurred, which all subsequent uses of the name are causally connected to—e.g., the name "Joe Biden" picks out some specific person in the world because there was some "initial baptism" attaching him to that name and all subsequent uses of the name are causally related to his naming.[139]

However, names do not just function to pick our particular referents. Names also communicate and represent important social information about a person, which shapes the way people engage with them in their community. Consider three examples. First, it is very common to choose names that are meaningful to one's ethnic, social, or religious community. This practice is often perceived to be especially important for members of oppressed racial, religious, or ethnic minorities as a way to forge strong identity bonds. For example, historians have been able to trace African American-specific naming practices to before the Civil War.[140] Notably, however, popular Black names of the 1800s do not have African origins.[141] This suggests that the practice of choosing Black-specific names developed in the United States during slavery. Beyond that, "many Black Americans adopted new names following landmark struggles for liberation."[142] And throughout American history, Black leaders and thinkers of all kinds have adopted new names for just as varied a collection of reasons: consider Sojourner Truth,[143] Malcolm X,[144] or bell hooks.[145] Then, there is the common practice of people who convert to a new religion adopting a religiously significant name (this is especially common in Islam, Sikhism, and Buddhism). The Pope famously takes a regnal name upon election to the papacy.

---

[137] Harriet Beecher Stowe, Sojourner Truth, The Libyan Sibyl, THE ATLANTIC (Apr. 1863), https://www.theatlantic.com/magazine/archive/1863/04/sojourner-truth-the-libyan-sibyl/308775/ [https://perma.cc/35WE-RQDE].

[138] Russell, supra note 112. See generally Gottlob Frege, Sense and Reference, 57 PHIL. REV. 209 (1948) (discussing his theory of reference).

[139] See generally Kripke, supra note 115 and accompanying text.

[140] See generally Lisa D. Cook et al., The Antebellum Roots of Distinctively Black Names, in HISTORICAL METHODS: A JOURNAL OF QUANTITATIVE & INTERDISC. HISTORY (2021).

However, despite its cultural ubiquity, having culturally, ethnically, and religiously significant names often makes members of oppressed groups the targets of discrimination. For example, it has been demonstrated that people with Black or Latinx sounding names face greater degrees of institutional discrimination—e.g., from potential employers looking at resumes[146] and lenders assessing loan applications.[147] Relatedly, applicants who expressed a religious affiliation (which can be inferred from the applicant's name) were 26% less likely to receive callbacks for jobs.[148] All the same, we see the practice of selecting culturally significant names persist even in the face of considerable discrimination, suggesting that people place great value on giving their children names that celebrate their ethnic and religious identity.

---

[141] Jeff Grabmeier, Distinctively Black Names Found Long Before Civil War, OHIO STATE NEWS (Mar. 25, 2021), https://news.osu.edu/distinctively-black-names-found-long-before-civil-war/ [https://perma.cc/VU88-MM97].

[142] Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 20) (quoting Jesse Washington, Washington: The 'Blackest Name' in America, SEATTLE TIMES (Feb. 20, 2011), https://www.seattletimes.com/nation-world/washington-theblackest-name-in-america [https://perma.cc/VSX6-RFDY]).

[143] Stowe, supra note 138. Stowe wrote,

> My name was Isabella; but when I left the house of bondage, I left everything behind. I wa'n't goin' to keep nothin' of Egypt on me, an' so I went to the Lord an' asked Him to give me a new name. And the Lord gave me Sojourner, because I was to travel up an' down the land, showin' the people their sins, an' bein' a sign unto them. Afterwards I told the Lord I wanted another name, 'cause everybody else had two names; and the Lord gave me Truth, because I was to declare the truth to the people.

Id.

[144] MALCOLM X, AUTOBIOGRAPHY 229 (1965) ("For me, my 'X' replaced the white slavemaster name of 'Little' which some blue-eyed devil named Little had imposed upon my paternal forebears.").

[145] Min Jin Lee, In Praise of bell hooks, N.Y. TIMES (Feb. 28, 2019), https://www.nytimes.com/2019/02/28/books/bell-hooks-min-jin-lee-aint-i-a-woman.html (on file with the Columbia Human Rights Law Review) ("[hooks] published her first book, 'Ain't I A Woman: Black Women and Feminism,' under her pen name, bell hooks, in honor of her maternal great-grandmother, Bell Blair Hooks. [hooks] wanted her pen name to be spelled in lowercase to shift the attention from her identity to her ideas.")

Second, names can communicate information about gender. For example, parents typically pick a name for their child which communicates the child's presumed gender (typically corresponding to the binary sex the child was assigned at birth). It is also common for transgender people to change their name early on in transition. The selection of a new name (with a different set of gendered associations) communicates the gender they want to be seen. Dr. Arjee Restar and her co-authors found that "legal gender affirmation (i.e., having changed gender marker/name on neither, one, or both a passport and state ID) . . . was significantly associated with lower reports of depression, anxiety, somatization, global psychiatric distress, and upsetting responses to gender-based mistreatment."[149] Their study surveyed trans and gender diverse Massachusetts and Rhode Island residents, states that have recently passed laws that make it easier to change gender and name markers on legal documents.[150] These improved health outcomes for people who have been able to change their legal names to reflect their gender identities underscore the important social dimension of names. Our social identities communicate how we understand ourselves and engage with other people. Thus, when a transgender person changes their name, they are changing the way they are conceptualized within their community—saying, "this is who I am and how I wanted to be seen."[151]

---

[146] Marianne Bertrand & Sendhil Mullainathan, Are Emily and Greg More Employable than Lakisha and Jamal? A Field Experiment on Labor Market Discrimination, 94 AM. ECON. R. 991, 991 (2004).

[147] See generally URB. INST., MORTGAGE LENDING DISCRIMINATION: A REVIEW OF EXISTING EVIDENCE (Margery Austin Turner & Felicity Skidmore eds., 1999).

[148] Michael Wallace et al., Religious Affiliation and Hiring Discrimination in the American South: A Field Experiment, 1 SOC. CURRENTS 189, 189 (2014).

[149] Arjee Restar et al., Legal Gender Marker and Name Change Is Associated with Lower Negative Emotional Response to Gender-Based Mistreatment and Improve Mental Health Outcomes Among Trans Populations, 11 SSM-POPULATION HEALTH 1, 1 (2020); see also Stephen T. Russel et al., Chosen Name Use Is Linked to Reduced Depressive Symptoms, Suicidal Ideation, and Suicidal Behavior Among Transgender Youth, 63 J. ADOLESCENT HEALTH 503 (2018) (demonstrating the connection between choosing a name consistent with one's gender identity and reduced depression and suicidality); Stephanie Julia Kapusta, Misgendering and Its Moral Contestability, 31 HYPATIA 502 (2016) (discussing the normative harms of misgendering).

[150] See generally Restar, supra note 150.

Finally, and perhaps most obviously, names often communicate family ties: the family you were born into, the family you married into, and so on.[152] Though the practice is less popular than it once was, in 2013, 70% of U.S. women in heterosexual marriages adopted their husband's last name when they got married (compared to 83% in the 1970s).[153] A further 10% of the heterosexual women that did not adopt their husband's last name choose to change their name to signify their marriage in some other way—for example, hyphenating their last name, choosing an entirely new last name with their husband, and the like. Thus, the practice of changing last names to reflect marital status is alive and well and serves to communicate that a couple is now a family and wants to be viewed as such.[154]

---

[151] See also Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 32–35) (highlighting the challenges transgender people face in court while trying to change their names and their perception in the community).

[152] In this regard, Icelandic names are particularly interesting as traditionally, surnames are unique to an individual: they communicate directly a person's parent's identity, with gendered content. Katharina Hauptmann, The Peculiarities of Icelandic Naming, Wall St. Int'l (Feb. 24, 2013), https://wsimag.com/culture/2248-the-peculiarities-of-icelandic-naming [https://perma.cc/B7N4-3R6X]. So, just from popstar Björk Guðmundsdóttir's name (discussed in passing above), you can discern she is a woman (both because of her first name and because of the use of "dóttir"), and is the daughter ("dóttir") of a woman named Guðmundur. And yet, in places abroad—unfamiliar with the custom—there are often issues in immigration and customs for Icelandic families because they do not share a surname. See id.; see also Maricar Santos, New Rule Makes Flying Harder for Parents with Different Last Names than Their Kids, Working Mother (Aug. 9, 2018), https://www.workingmother.com/new-rule-makes-flying-harder-for-parents-with-different-last-names-than-their-kids [https://perma.cc/5ZW8-4SSW] (discussing a policy that "parents who don't have the same last name as their children may be subjected to additional questioning by Border Force officers, aka the U.K.'s immigration and customs officers").

[153] Miller, supra note 53.

[154] Of course, there is a gendered dimension to traditional "marital naming" practices (i.e., women taking their husbands' last names). For example, Suzanne Kim argues that "[t]he nearly universal practice of women adopting their husbands' names upon marriage attracts little attention as a measure of gender hierarchy within marriage [however, these] traditional naming practices . . . define marriage as gender hierarchical." Suzanne A. Kim, Marital Naming/Naming Marriage: Language and Status in Family Law, 85 Ind. L.J. 893, 895 (2010). But setting aside the gender equity implications, all marital name changes (e.g., women changing their names, men changing their names, both partners picking a new name, etc.) are still communicating the same thing: that a couple is—and wants to be viewed as—a family unit.

Thus, names are not merely in the business of reference; they are also communicating important social information—including information about one's ethnic heritage, gender, and familial relations. And we posit that it is this social dimension of names that explains why violating the Preference Norm can be so harmful. Since names do not merely function to refer to people and objects but also carry important social information, in refusing to refer to someone by the legal name they prefer (i.e., violating the Preference Norm), one fails to show them what Professor Steven Darwall calls "recognition respect."[155] According to Darwall, recognition respect involves giving "appropriate consideration or recognition to some feature" of an object.[156] Recognition respect can be contrasted with what he calls "appraisal respect," which is the respect we owe in virtue of skillful or virtuous performance (e.g., the respect we might have for a figure skater's well-executed triple axel or a chef's perfectly caramelized crème brûlée).[157] The thought is that certain things are just owed respect in themselves, separate from any sort of appraisal—for instance, Darwall gives the example of the respect we owe to someone's personhood being one of recognition.[158] We therefore might imagine that aspects of peoples' social identities are also going to be deserving of this sort of recognition respect: the respect we owe to basic aspects of people's social identities, like race and gender, does not reflect some sort of appraisal of them.[159] And we show recognition respect to peoples' social identities by allowing people to freely express their identities and engaging with them in accordance with their identities (e.g., allowing a trans person to change their name and treating them in accordance with their post-transition gender identity).

This generates something like a prima facie duty to show appropriate recognition respect for—and not grossly misrepresent—basic social factors about a person that they want to communicate like their gender, race, and familial background. Here is where violations of the Preference Norm come in. Violating the Preference Norm is problematic precisely because names can carry the type of social information that we have a prima facie duty to show basic (recognition) respect for. As such, when individuals or institutions opt to refer to a person by one of their non-preferred legal names, they are failing to respect the social information that a person's name conveys, preventing them from fully inhabiting and expressing their social identities. And this can cause (we think) at least three different types of harm.

---

[155] Stephen L. Darwall, Two Kinds of Respect, 88 ETHICS 36, 38 (1977).

[156] Id.

[157] Id. at 39.

[158] Id.

[159] Of course, perhaps not every aspect of someone's social identity will be deserving of recognition respect. For example, it seems reasonable to think a social identity like someone's race is owed recognition respect but not, say, their near-sightedness. Race constitutes a very important and fundamental aspect of a person's identity, affecting how they perceive themselves and how others behave towards them. However, whether or not they are near or far sighted seems more incidental. And while the question of which social identities are deserving of recognition respect is important and philosophically rich, we will not be offering any account of this here. However, even we take it as plausible (and fairly uncontroversial) that race and gender are especially good candidates for social features which are owed our unconditional recognition respect.

1. Dignitary Harm

First, violating the Preference Norm infringes someone's dignity in a way that causes a dignitary harm. Professor Rosa Ehrenreich defines dignitary harms:

> [A] "dignitary harm" [is] a harm that injures "personality interests" rather than one's physical well being. While the common-law notion of harm to one's dignity or personality interests may not bear intense philosophical scrutiny, its core assumptions are clear enough: all individuals share in "personhood," are autonomous and unique, and are entitled to be treated with respect. Actions that would humiliate, torment, threaten, intimidate, pressure, demean, frighten, outrage, or injure a reasonable person are actions which can be said to injure an individual's dignitary interests and, if sufficiently severe, can give rise to causes of action in tort.[160]

Restricting the way someone expresses their social identities is a very clear infringement on their dignity and personhood. For example, being misgendered by an individual or institution because they refer to you by a non-preferred legal name can be very humiliating and dehumanizing (e.g., an institution having you on record as being named "Anna," not allowing you to change the record, and then using female pronouns to address you because you have a feminine-sounding name).

Further, there is evidence that this type of dignitary harm can cause acute physical and psychological harm.[161] The experience of being constantly misgendered (e.g., referred to by a name that does not cohere with one's gender identity) can be traumatizing, embarrassing, humiliating, and shameful. However, when children and adults who experience gender dysphoria are able to transition and live in accordance with their gender identity, their mental and physical health outcomes are significantly improved.[162] And while adopting a new name is not necessary for transitioning, for many transgender people, changing their name is a significant step in communicating who they are and how they want to be seen by others. Thus, referring to them by another name infringes upon their dignity in that it denies them the agency to authentically represent their social identity to others, which can harm their physical and mental health.

---

[160] Rosa Ehrenreich Brooks, Dignity and Discrimination: Toward a Pluralistic Understanding of Workplace Harassment, 88 GEO. L.J. 1, 22 (1999).

[161] See Russel et al., supra note 150; see also Florence Ashley, Qui est-ille? Le respect langagier des élèves non-binaires, aux limites du droit, 63 SERVICE SOC. 35, 38–41

The same is, of course, true of refusals to call someone by their name, whatever that name is. This common-sense intuition is captured well in (of all things) a Saturday Night Live sketch: "What's That Name?"[163] The (2018) [hereinafter Qui est-ille?] (discussing misgendering as a deliberate form of disrespect); cf. Florence Ashley, 'X' Why? Gender Markers and Non-Binary Transgender People, in TRANS RIGHTS AND WRONGS: A COMPARATIVE STUDY OF LEGAL REFORM CONCERNING TRANS PERSONS (Isabel C. Jaramillo Sierra & Laura Carlson eds., forthcoming 2021) (discussing the challenges in adding non-binary people to a binary system in the context of adoption of an "X" gender marker on IDs).

---

[162] WORLD PRO. ASS'N FOR TRANSGENDER HEALTH, STANDARDS OF CARE FOR THE HEALTH OF TRANSSEXUAL, TRANSGENDER, AND GENDER NONCONFORMING PEOPLE 4–5, 9–10 (7th ed. 2012) (also called the "WPATH Standards") (recognizing that living consistently with one's gender identity significantly improves health outcomes among people who experience gender dysphoria, and noting that anxiety and depression "are socially induced and are not inherent" to transgender status); Lily Durwood et al., Mental Health and Self-Worth in Socially Transitioned Transgender Youth, 56(2) J. AM. ACAD. CHILD & ADOLESCENT PSYCHIATRY 116, 120 (2017) (finding normal levels of depression in transgender children who had already socially transitioned as compared to a control group of non-transgender children, in contrast to previous studies' findings of "markedly higher rates of anxiety and depression and lower self-worth" among "gender-nonconforming children who had not socially transitioned"); Ashley, Qui est-ille?, supra note 162, at 37–40 (setting out data on stigmatization, violence, and harm stemming from the basic lack of respect in misgendering). Accord Stanley v. City of N.Y., 71 Misc. 3d 171, 184 n.5 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020) (noting "Courts addressing the issue [of deadnaming] have almost uniformly found the practice hostile, objectively offensive, and degrading" and collecting authority).

[163] NBC, Saturday Night Live: What's That Name, YOUTUBE (Mar. 2, 2019), https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rImxuuD_kwM [https://perma.cc/DDW9-NUGD]; NBC, Saturday Night Live: What's That Name (May 21, 2011), https://www.nbc.com/saturday-night-live/video/whats-that-name/2751679 [https://perma.cc/7J9T-7T88]; NBC, Saturday Night Live: What's That Name (Dec. 11, 2010), https://www.nbc.com/saturday-night-live/video/whats-that-name-norman-the-doorman/2751498 [https://perma.cc/3QUV-7XKA]; see also Josh premise is simple:[164] Bill Hader's host character asks contestants to identify celebrities. They succeed ("Okay, I actually know this. It's Lil Xan."), and win some token amount of money—"five dollars for you!" Then, the stakes escalate enormously: Bill Hader informs the contestant that, "this next question is for $250,000.00" (or a similar, absurd amount) and someone—a best friend's girlfriend of four years, a doorman, etc.—comes on stage and asks, "What's my name?"[165] The person adds all kinds of details: how many times they have had dinner together, all the details of the contestant's life they know, and so on. But, of course, the contestant cannot answer the question. "What kind of horrible game show is this?" the contestant asks, and Bill Hader mugs, "iiiiiiiit's What's That Name?"[166]

What the sketch captures is important: it is a blow to basic dignity when someone cannot correctly say your name. And this is true whatever the reason. While we focus on trans people in our discussion above, the same is obviously true of people who change their name for religious reasons, or those who maintain a pre-marriage name, or change their name for any other reason. And as "What's That Name" illustrates, it is also harmful when someone refuses to learn a name in the first place. Refusal to use (or learn) someone's name denies them the same agency we discuss above—and the dignity cleverly played on in "What's That Name?" To paraphrase: it's funny because it is true.

2. Hermeneutical Harm

Second, violations of Preference Norm constitute what can be called a hermeneutical harm. "Hermeneutical" here is referring to Miranda Fricker's notion of hermeneutical injustice, which she defines as "having some significant area of one's social experience obscured from collective

---

Sorokach, 'Saturday Night Live's' "What's That Name?" Is the Perfect Sketch, DECIDER (Mar. 5, 2019), https://decider.com/2019/03/05/john-mulaney-saturday-night-live-whats-that-name/ [https://perma.cc/3PA8-6JEG] (showing an example of SNL's view on names).

[164] See, e.g., NBC, Saturday Night Live (Mar. 2, 2019), supra note 164. We, of course, recognize that "comedy gets exponentially less funny the more you try to explain it," but we will try not to spoil the joke in extracting what is doctrinally valuable in it. Florence Ashley, Humorous Styles of Cause in In Rem Actions, 24 GREEN BAG 2D 15, 21 (2020).

[165] NBC, Saturday Night Live (Mar. 2, 2019), supra note 164.

[166] Id.

understanding owing to a structural identity prejudice in the collective hermeneutical resource."[167]

To illustrate hermeneutical injustice, Fricker gives the example of Carmita Wood, an office employee in Cornell's nuclear physics department in the 1960s.[168] Ms. Wood repeatedly suffered awkward and unwanted sexual advances by one of the senior professors in the department. She applied to be transferred to another department, but Cornell denied her request. Eventually, the stress of avoiding his advances while maintaining friendly relations with his wife became too much for Ms. Wood, who started experiencing chronic physical pain in response to the psychological distress. She reported the professor's inappropriate behavior to her direct supervisor but was told that "any mature woman should be able to handle it."[169] She ended up quitting her job and applying for unemployment. However, in filling out her unemployment form, she had difficulty expressing why she had left her job—she lacked the conceptual resources necessary to understand her experience and describe it on her unemployment application. Because of this, her claim was denied.

But this story has a happy hermeneutical ending. Ms. Wood went to the office of the Human Affairs program at Cornell and with Lin Farley, Susan Meyer, and Karen Sevigne, coined a term for the pattern of behavior she—and so many women—had experienced: sexual harassment.[170] Together they ended up forming an organization called Working Women United, which educated people about sexual harassment. In an op-ed to the Ithaca Journal, Ms. Wood wrote: "[w]omen must be judged on their ability to perform their jobs—not on whether we maintain a sexual rapport with our bosses . . ." repeatedly enduring unwanted sexual advances "constitutes a pattern of sexual harassment that is degrading, demeaning, and causes a steady erosion of our self respect and personal dignity."[171] Hence, in response to a perceived deficit, she crafted a hermeneutical resource (by coining and popularizing the term "sexual harassment") so other women could make sense of, and speak out against, similar kinds of injustice.

---

[167] MIRANDA FRICKER, EPISTEMIC INJUSTICE: POWER AND THE ETHICS OF KNOWING 155 (2007).

[168] Id. at 149–51.

[169] Jessica Campbell, The First Brave Woman Who Alleged 'Sexual Harassment', LEGACY (Dec. 7, 2017), https://www.legacy.com/news/culture-and-history/the-first-brave-woman-who-alleged-sexual-harassment/ [https://perma.cc/Z6DW-BNKZ].

[170] Id.; see also CATHERINE A. MACKINNON, SEXUAL HARASSMENT OF WORKING WOMEN 150 n.166 (1979) (introducing this legal theory).

[171] Campbell, supra note 170.

Ms. Wood experienced two different harms. First, she was being sexually harassed. That is obviously a significant dignitary harm. But she was also being harmed because, at the time, she did not have a concept to attach to her experience of sexual harassment. This meant that she could not make sense of the harm she was experiencing (or even conceptualize her experience as harm rather than merely a collection of uncomfortable experiences). In turn, that prevented her from complaining about her boss' behavior, finding solidarity in the experiences of other women who had been sexually harassed, or articulating why she had been forced to leave her job on her unemployment insurance claim. This second harm is hermeneutical.

We can thus think of hermeneutical harm as occurring when (1) a person is being harmed and (2) there is a deficit in their hermeneutical resources such that they lack a coherent concept or idea to attach to that experience of harm, typically because of an existing structural inequality. We contend that violations of Preference Norm very often involve a hermeneutical harm. Consider the structure of harm involved in Preference Norm violations. First, (in many instances) people experience a dignitary harm in being referred to by a non-preferred legal name. Second, because the legal name delusion is so pervasive, they typically lack the conceptual resources to understand that the dignitary harm being inflicted upon them is a harm.

We can now appreciate how the legal name delusion creates a hermeneutical deficit, causing Preference Norm violations to be experienced as hermeneutical harms. Recall from Part II that the legal name notion that people are familiar with (i.e., the concept we can think of as existing within the shared hermeneutical resource) is the delusional one. Therefore, people who are referred to by non-preferred legal names experience the psychological and physical effects of the dignitary harm (i.e., feeling alienated and humiliated when they are referred to by a name they do not identify with, which erases key aspects of their social identity), but are unable to understand that experience as a kind of injustice because they assume that the delusional notion of a legal name being weaponized against them has legitimacy.[172] Thus, the legal name delusion creates a hermeneutical deficiency, which causes people to wrongfully blame themselves for the dignitary harm they experience when the Preference Norm is violated; they assume that the dignitary harm is their fault (rather than the fault of the individual or institution violating the Preference Norm), and that the onus of responsibility is on them to change their name everywhere it appears (which sometimes is not even possible) before their preferred name can really be considered their legal name. The legal name delusion is thus preventing people—by way of this hermeneutical harm—from situating Preference Norm violations (and the accompanying dignitary harms) as injustices.

---

[172] See Alonso-Yoder, supra note 11 (manuscript at 55) (describing how judges have rationalized their denials of name changes by arguing that petitioners can still use their preferred name under common law while keeping their legal name).

3. Procedural Harm

Lastly, violations of the Preference Norm—at least as they exist in the world right now—also cause a type of procedural harm. As procedural justice scholar Tom Tyler puts it:

> People want to have the opportunity to tell their side of the story in their own words before decisions are made about how to handle the dispute or problem. Having an opportunity to voice their perspective has a positive effect upon people's experience with the legal system irrespective of their outcome, as long as they feel that the authority sincerely considered their arguments before making their decisions.[173]

Thus, procedural justice studies consistently show that when people perceive a process is somehow unfair—whether that unfairness is helpful or unhelpful to them—their emotional responses will be meaningfully different.[174] Even positive and desired outcomes, without a chance to be heard, might cause perceptions of an unfair process.[175] The upshot of this is simple: human beings, it turns out, are not as results-oriented as we might think. Instead, procedural justice research shows that the perception of being heard at all is of immense value in any legal system.

---

[173] Tom R. Tyler, Procedural Justice and the Courts, 44 CT. REV. 26, 30 (2007).

[174] See, e.g., Stanislaw Burdziej et al., Fairness at Trial: The Impact of Procedural Justice and Other Experiential Factors on Criminal Defendants' Perceptions of Court Legitimacy in Poland, 44 LAW & SOC. INQ. 359 (2019) (studying how people's perception of the legitimacy of their courts are influenced more by how fair they believe them to be rather than the punishment they receive); Patricia J. Krehbiel & Russell Cropanzano, Procedural Justice, Outcome Favorability and Emotion, 13 SOC. JUST. RSCH. 339 (2000) (same). See generally M. SOMJEN FRAZER, THE IMPACT OF THE COMMUNITY COURT MODEL ON DEFENDANT PERCEPTIONS OF FAIRNESS: A CASE STUDY AT THE RED HOOK COMMUNITY JUSTICE CENTER (2006), https://www.courtinnovation.org/sites/default/files/Procedural_Fairness.pdf [https://perma.cc/9DGR-XYB6] (showing how perceptions of fairness are important to establishing the legitimacy of courts). But see Tom R. Tyler & David B. Rottman, Thinking About Judges and Judicial Performance: Perspective of the Public and Court User, 4 OÑATI SOCIO-LEGAL SERIES 1046, 1054 (2014) (showing a much smaller procedural justice effect on perception for civil cases as opposed to criminal and family cases).

But in many organizations that insist there is such a thing as a legal name, there is simply no forum in which a person can object to the classification of their real name—even when it is legally their name in a common law jurisdiction—as somehow not a legal name. Instead, an objection to the legal name classification is often met with a bureaucratic shrug: "I don't make the rules." And the lack of a forum to even hear the objection fails people as a matter of procedural justice.[176] So, even if someone has access to the hermeneutical resource we have discussed (e.g., they know that legal name can mean the name they use in their community), their experience of the system will be even worse; their knowledge will only lead to them knowing there is an unfair system generating an incorrect result.[177]

B. Legal Proposals

We also feel we can do better than just describing a problem so we propose some legislative and doctrinal solutions.

There is an obvious solution we want to take off the table immediately: federal legislation defining a legal name. For much of the same reason that the Article 9 drafters did not take this approach[178]—or even fully commit to a local, statutory definition (e.g., all of Article 9 refers back to a "name on the driver's license")—we also decline to endorse this option. It causes all kinds of problems (to name a few, not everyone has a driver's license and some people just do not update their driver's licenses because it does not actually serve a name-identifying function for real people), and does not really cash out with a corresponding increase in clarity. While it solves a lot of questions, it just raises more for people without a driver's license.

---

[175] Cf., e.g., Prague's Kafka International Named Most Alienating Airport, ONION NEWS NETWORK (Mar. 23, 2009) https://www.theonion.com/pragues-franz-kafka-international-named-worlds-most-ali-1819594798 [https://perma.cc/7AMM-54T6] ("A security guard asked me for like 80 minutes, 'Are you who you say you are? Are you who you say you are?' And finally, he writes 'LIAR' on the back of my hand and lets me pass.").

[176] See, e.g., Tracey L. Meares & Tom R. Tyler, Justice Sotomayor and the Jurisprudence of Procedural Justice, 123 YALE L.J. F., 525, 527–28 (2014) (stating that the opportunity to be heard is a key element of procedural fairness).

[177] See, e.g., Krehbiel, supra note 175, at 348 (finding "significant difference[s]" between anger and frustration measurements for all other experimental subjects and for subjects who faced both an "unfavorably biased" experiment and had an "unfavorable outcome").

[178] See supra Part I.B.

Beyond the pragmatic concerns, as we discussed above, there are many social functions served by a name. And fixing a person's name by federal fiat would only undermine those functions. In the first instance, suddenly, many (if not most) states would need to revise any number of existing databases and record keeping systems (unless, of course, the law did nothing meaningful at all). And many states have robust name-based law that would be deeply disrupted by the sudden imposition of a federal definition of a legal name. Local, well-settled use of names would suddenly need to grapple with a federal, preempting statute—and inevitably, that would lead to needless litigation. So, this change would cause lots of harm. In short: not a good idea.

By contrast, we think there are a few legislative approaches that work on a more local level. New York City's approach to names—at least in the official guidance the Commission on Human Rights has issued—is a useful model. The Commission on Human Rights Legal Enforcement has issued some of the most robust guidance in the nation on what discrimination on the basis of gender identity can include, particularly for names.[179] That guidance provides that people have a right to be referred to by their name of choice, unless otherwise provided by law:

> All people . . . have the right to use and have others use their name and pronouns regardless of whether they have identification in that name or have obtained a court-ordered name change, except in very limited circumstances where certain federal, state, or local laws require otherwise . . . .[180]

The guidance also clarifies that it violates anti-discrimination law to "[c]ondition[] a person's use of their name on obtaining a court-ordered name change or providing identification," noting as an example that entities "may not refuse to call a transgender man who introduces himself as Manuel by that name because his identification lists his name as Maribel."[181]

Call this the "unless otherwise provided by law" approach. Unless required to use something other than the name a person uses for themself, entities must use that person's correct, common law name.[182] We think this approach starts from a good place, consistent with the common law understanding of names above.[183] And one important consequence of this approach is that businesses need to take more care with their electronic data systems—at least to avoid liability under laws like the ones we have described.

---

[179] N.Y.C. COMM'N ON HUM. RTS., supra note 20.

[180] Id.; see supra Part III.1.

[181] N.Y.C. COMM'N ON HUM. RTS., supra note 20.

We also think this approach need not be—and would be weaker for being—tethered to anti-discrimination law. That is, while the model we are using is anti-discrimination law, the "because of ____" approach most anti-discrimination statutes use is unnecessary here. And most importantly, might not capture all the cases beyond the obvious ones where, nonetheless, various harms are occurring. Put differently, while there might be reasons to cabin a broad workplace discrimination statute with "because of ____" causation, those reasons are not as strong here: the common law has always provided that people's legal names include the name they actually use. Letting people choose for themselves which names they should be addressed by has little downside, and lots of benefit.

In short: this approach provides a robust right for people to be referred to by their real names and strong protections against the kinds of harms discussed above. But it also limits any administrative issues by allowing an "otherwise provided by law" escape hatch: if there is a real legal reason an organization needs to use a particular name, they may do so.[184] Thus, if a professor identifies with a name other than the name on their Social Security card, a university can use the name on a professor's Social [182] Contra Rutgers University, Name Change, https://scarlethub.rutgers.edu/registrar/personal-information-updates/name-change/ [https://perma.cc/8LJJ-PMHA], ("The student's chosen/preferred name will be used in all university communications except where the use of the legal name is required by university business or legal need.") (emphasis added).

---

[183] Indeed, another benefit of this approach is that it avoids very thorny choice of law questions that might apply, for example, to a person passing through New York City from a jurisdiction that has an applicable definition of "legal name." Cf. supra text accompanying note 88.

[184] Florence Ashley also acknowledges this exception, while also emphasizing that such legal justifications are routinely overemphasized or, more often, raised without any basis in law (as we also suggest). See Florence Ashley, Recommendations for Institutional and Governmental Management of Gender Information, 44 N.Y.U. REV. L. & SOC. CHANGE 489, 491 (2021). While Ashley's focus is largely on gender markers, the same reasoning applies. Thus, Ashley's discussion of what they call "shadow files" and modular data storage applies here too: institutions are perfectly capable of segregating certain information for special uses, while using other information on a day-to-day basis. Id. at 516–18.

Security card in issuing tax forms (since law requires that), but cannot push that name to the professor's students (since no law exists requiring a university to publish the professor's Social Security card name to students).

We also think that guidance on—and judicial interpretation of—anti-discrimination law could directly address the delusion we have discussed here.[185] In jurisdictions where there is a common law right to change one's name, an (incorrect) insistence that the "name . . . with which a person self-identifies"[186] is not also their legal name has obvious, disparate effects along sex-based lines (specifically, with regard to trans status[187]), religion-based lines, and race-based lines. Thus, it would be entirely appropriate for agencies tasked with enforcing anti-discrimination laws to provide guidance on whether demanding a legal name, but refusing to accept what is unquestionably a legal name, consists of discrimination—particularly when that insistence causes all the harms we have outlined above.

Thus, we think local law adopting the "unless otherwise provided by law" model can and should be adopted—and will help in dispelling the delusion that there is one, clear object in the world picked out by the phrase "Legal Name." Similarly, while it does not require any legislative change, we think enforcement and administrative agencies could issue guidance clarifying that demanding a legal name when that concept conflicts with the actual state of the law itself amounts to discrimination on the basis of sex (or, for reasons discussed in the immigration section above, race or national origin). And while these changes alone might not wake us from this delusion, combined with an increased awareness that a legal name does mean the name a person uses from day to day, they might move us closer to the end of the dream.

CONCLUSION

So, we have moved from a widespread mistake of law and a broad philosophical assertion to a few wonky little legal proposals. One might accuse us of ending on a rather quiet note, but those proposals are just a starting point. They are not the end of the story here. Similarly, we do not think we have solved every issue that the legal name delusion creates. And if you are reading this article cover to cover (and thus reading this modest conclusion), you are very likely already on board with our project. Thus, concluding here, we do not imagine we are telling you anything you do not know.

---

[185] See, e.g., N.Y.C. COMM'N ON HUM. RTS., supra note 20.

[186] Id.

[187] Or, perhaps better put, with regard to gender modality. See Florence Ashley, 'Trans' Is My Gender Modality: A Modest Terminological Proposal, in TRANS BODIES, TRANS SELVES (Laura Erickson-Schroth ed., forthcoming 2021). See generally Bostock v. Clayton Cnty., 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020).

But, let us say one last time, as we have quoted others at the start of every section saying: there is no (one) such thing as a legal name. And maybe if we keep saying so, more people will awaken from this strange, shared delusion.

APPENDIX I: STATES THAT HAVE SPECIFICALLY ABROGATED COMMON LAW NAME CHANGES

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 574-5(a) ("It shall be unlawful to change any name adopted or conferred under this chapter, except . . . .") (emphasis added).

Illinois: 735 ILCS 5/21-105 ("Common law name changes adopted in this State on or after July 1, 2010 are invalid."). For prior rule, see Parmelee v. Raymond, 43 Ill. App. 609, 610 (1892) (finding "that a party is known by one name as well as another is a good replication to a plea of misnomer"); Graham v. Eiszner, 28 Ill. App. 269, 273 (1888) (finding "any person may adopt any name, style or signature over which he may transact business and issue negotiable paper and execute contracts, wholly different from his own name, and may sue and be sued by such name, style or signature"); see also Azeez v. Fairman, 795 F.2d 1296, 1301 (7th Cir. 1986) (acknowledging the broader common law right, but granting qualified immunity to prison officials who violated that right, and questioning the availability of that right in prisons).

Louisiana: See Names, La. Op. Att'y Gen. 963, 964–65 (1942) (noting that Louisiana law's heritage is from code law, not common law).

Maine: In re Reben, 342 A.2d 688, 694–95 (Me. 1975) ("Our own original statute was intended to bring the ancient principles into consonance with modern needs . . . . The common law method which would serve no further purpose was superseded.").

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 12, § 1637 (1993) ("[N]o natural person in this state may change his or her name except as provided . . . .") (emphasis added).

APPENDIX II: STATES WHERE COMMON LAW NAME CHANGES ARE STILL EFFECTIVE

Alabama: State v. Taylor, 415 So. 2d 1043, 1046 (Ala. 1982) (finding that women's married names legally became their names under the common law rule by use, and requiring the state to register them to vote under those names); see also Ala. Clay Prods. Co. v. Mathews, 220 Ala. 549, 552 (1930) ("Where it is not done for a fraudulent purpose and in the absence of statutory restriction, one may lawfully change his name without resort to legal proceedings, and for all purposes [the] name thus assumed will constitute his legal name just as much as if he had borne it from birth"). But see Comer v. Jackson, 50 Ala. 384, 387 (1874) ("[A] party may not change his name without a proper proceeding in court") (noting that Kushner categorizes Alabama as not applying a common law rule, while observing that she could not find a case verifying Comer was still good law).

Arizona: Malone v. Sullivan, 124 Ariz. 469, 470 (1980) (Arizona's name change "statute is in aid of the common law rule that absent fraud or improper motive, a person may adopt any name he or she wishes."); see also Laks v. Laks, 25 Ariz. App. 58, 60 (1975) ("One may lawfully change his name without resort to any legal proceedings"); In re Cortez, 247 Ariz. 534, 536 (Ct. App. 2019) (applying Malone, and further noting "the statute does not permit the superior court to deny a person's name-change request only because the person wants the new name to reflect a gender transition.")

Arkansas: Clinton v. Morrow, 247 S.W.2d 1015, 1018 (Ark. 1952) ("[The Arkansas name change] statute does not destroy or modify the common law right to change one's name and should be considered as in aid of, and supplementary to, such right."); Walker v. Jackson, 391 F. Supp. 1395, 1402 (E.D. Ark. 1975) ("Arkansas recognizes another common law rule that in the absence of fraud a person can change his name at will."); cf. McCullough v. Henderson, 804 S.W.3d 368, 369 (Ark. 1991) (holding that the last name of a child's father must be entered on the birth certificate but that the chancellor had common law discretion to determine the child's surname).

California: Cal. Code Civ. P. § 1279.5 ("[T]his title does not abrogate the common law right of a person to change his or her name"); In re Ross, 67 P.2d 94, 95 (Cal. 1937) ("The common law recognizes the right to change one's personal name without the necessity of legal proceedings, and the purpose of the statutory procedure is simply to have, wherever possible, a record of the change."); see also In re Forchion, 130 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 706 (Cal. Ct. App. 2011) (same); In re Arnett, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 3 n.3 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007) (same).

Colorado: In re Marriage of Nguyen, 684 P.2d 258, 260 (Colo. App. 1983) ("The procedure for change of name set forth under §§ 13-15-101, et seq., C.R.S. 1973, is in addition to, not in exclusion of, the common law method for change of name."); see also Hamman v. Cnty. Ct. in & for Cnty. of Jefferson, 753 P.2d 743, 746 (Colo. 1988) (citing Nguyen with approval).

Connecticut: Custer v. Bonadies, 318 A.2d 639, 640 (Conn. Super. Ct. 1974) ("Connecticut has adopted [the common law] rule, which operates independently of any court order and even though there is a statutory procedure for effecting a change of name.") (citing Don v. Don, 142 Conn. 309, 312, 114 A.2d 203, 204 (Conn. 1955) ("[I]ndependently of any court order, a person is free to adopt and use any name he sees fit")); see also Pease v. Pease, 35 Conn. 131, 155 (1868) (holding that a Shaker community had entered into a contract using the name of one of its trustees).

Delaware: Degerberg v. McCormick, 184 A.2d 468, 469 (Del. Ct. 1962) ("[S]tatutes [that authorize judicial proceedings to change a name] are universally held not to affect the common law right."); Masjid Muhammad-D.C.C. v. Keve, 479 F. Supp. 1311, 1322 n.13 (D. Del. 1979) ("The Delaware courts have held that even without pursuing the statutory procedure for a change of name, there exists a common law right to change one's name without court process."); see also In re Marley, 1996 Del. Super. LEXIS 192, at *6 (Del. Super. Ct. May 16, 1996) ("The Court has found that the Delaware statute merely provides a means for memorializing a common law right.").

Florida: Jordan v. Robinson, 39 So. 3d 416, 418 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2010) (noting name change statute is a "codification of this common law right intended primarily to aid the individual's right to a name change at will, giving the advantage of a public record to document the change") (quoting Isom v. Cir. Ct. of the Tenth Jud. Cir., 437 So. 2d 732, 733 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1983)) (alterations adopted); see also Reddick v. State, 5 So. 704, 706 (Fla. 1889) (allowing the jury in a murder trial to resolve the question of the victim's name).

Georgia: In re Feldhaus, 796 S.E.2d 316, 318 (Ga. Ct. App. 2017) ("The Supreme Court of Georgia . . . held . . . that 'in the absence of a statute or judicial adjudication to the contrary . . . nothing in the law prohibit[s] a person from taking or assuming another name, so long as he does not assume a name for the purpose of defrauding other persons through a mistake of identity.'") (quoting Fulghum v. Paul, 192 S.E.2d 376, 377 (Ga. 1972)); see also 1975 Ga. AG LEXIS 50, at *1 (1975) ("[I]t is [the Georgia Attorney General's] official opinion that a married woman's surname is that of her husband but that she may change her name for all legal purposes . . . by judicial decree or by consistent usage of another name without resort to judicial proceedings.”).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 73-116 (“The common law of England, so far as it is not repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the constitution or laws of the United States, in all cases not provided for in these compiled laws, is the rule of decision in all courts of this state”); Idaho Code § 7-802 (specifying the procedure for changing names, but only applying to “applications for change of names”).

Indiana: Leone v. Comm’r, Ind. Bureau of Motor Vehicles, 933 N.E.2d 1244, 1253 (Ind. 2010) (“All states have enacted similar statutes [providing a name change procedure], and all but two have concluded that they do not abrogate but instead supplement the common law.”); see also In re Name Change of Jane Doe, 148 N.E.3d 1147, 1151 (Ind. Ct. App. 2020) (“At common law, a natural person has long been permitted to change his or her name without resort to any legal proceedings, as long as the name change does not interfere with the rights of others and is not done for a fraudulent purpose.”); In re Name Change of Resnover, 979 N.E.2d 668, 672 (Ind. Ct. App. 2012) (“[T]he very nature of the name change means that it can be effected without court approval”).

Iowa: Loser v. Plainfield Sav. Bank, 149 Iowa 672, 677 (1910) (“[T]here is no such thing as a ‘legal name’ . . . in the sense that he may not lawfully adopt or acquire another, and lawfully do business under the substituted appellation. In the absence of any restrictive statute, it is the common law right of a person to change his name, or he may by general usage or habit acquire a name . . . .”); see also In re Staros, 280 N.W.2d 409, 411 (Iowa 1979) (making an exception for minors).

Kansas: In re Clark, 450 P.3d 830, 834 (Kan. Ct. App. 2019) (“The statutory name change provisions are intended as aids and affirmations of the common law rule and not as an abrogation or substitution for the informal procedure.”) (quotation marks omitted); In re Morehead, 706 P.2d 480, 482 (Kan. Ct. App. 1985) (“A minor may file a petition, through a next friend, to obtain a name change and there is no legal impediment to a grant of the requested change.”); see also Clark v. Clark, 19 Kan. 522, 524–25 (1878) (affirming that a married woman referred to by her community under her assumed name could bring an action under said assumed name).

Kentucky: Leadingham v. Smith, 56 S.W.3d 420, 425 (Ky. Ct. App. 2001) (“The flexibility in naming practices . . . goes a long way in explaining why this jurisdiction recognizes the common law right of any person to informally change their name by public declaration. Kentucky Revised Statutes Chapter 401 is not intended to abrogate the common law, but merely to insure [sic] that a permanent record is made . . . .”) (alteration adopted); see also Burke v. Hammonds, 586 S.W.2d 307, 308–09 (Ky. Ct. App. 1979) (allowing a court to enjoin a divorced mother from changing the names of her children if "the court finds that it is in the 'best interest' of the child").

Maryland: Schroeder v. Broadfoot, 790 A.2d 773, 778 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2002) ("Maryland follows the common law of names, that in the absence of a statute to the contrary, a person may take and use any name he wants."); Stuart v. Bd. of Supervisors, 295 A.2d 223, 226–27 (Md. 1972) (reiterating the same principle).

Massachusetts: Commonwealth v. Clark, 846 N.E.2d 765, 620, 626 (Mass. 2006) ("At common law a person may change his name at will, without resort to legal proceedings, by merely adopting another name, provided that this is done for an honest purpose.") (alteration adopted) (quoting In re Merolevitz, 70 N.E.2d 249, 250 (Mass. 1946)); see also Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 151B, § 4(15) (2018) (making it unlawful for an employer to require an employee to use any surname other than the one by which the employee is generally known).

Michigan: In re Warshefski, 951 N.W.2d 90, 94 (Mich. Ct. App. 2020) ("Under the common law, an individual may adopt any name he or she wishes, without resort to any court or legal proceeding, provided it is not done for fraudulent purposes."); see also Hommel v. Devinney, 39 Mich. 522, 524 (1878) (accepted the use of a nickname for the purposes of the transfer of land); Piotrowski v. Piotrowski, 247 N.W.2d 354, 355 (Mich. Ct. App. 1976) (supporting a divorced individual's ability to revert to their unmarried surname without interference from the court).

Minnesota: In re Dengler, 287 N.W.2d 637, 639 n.1 (Minn. 1979) ("It is well settled that at common law a person may change his name at will . . . by merely adopting another name . . . . In jurisdictions where this subject has been regulated by statute it has generally been held that such legislation is merely in aid of the common law and does not abrogate it.") (alterations adopted) (quoting In re Merolevitz, 70 N.E.2d 249, 250 (Mass. 1946)).

Mississippi: Coplin v. Woodmen of the World, 62 So. 7, 9 (Miss. 1913) ("At common law a man could change his name, in good faith, and for an honest purpose, and adopt a new one, by which he could be generally recognized."); see also Marshall v. Marshall, 93 So. 2d 822, 827 (Miss. 1957) ("We fully realize . . . that at common law any person of mature years can voluntarily change his name without the necessity of a statute such as we have in Mississippi, provided the change is not for a fraudulent purpose and does not interfere with the rights of others.").

Missouri: Hosmer v. Hosmer, 611 S.W.2d 32, 37–38 (Mo. Ct. App. 1980) ("[Section] 527.270, dealing with the procedure for change of name, does not abrogate and merely supplements the common law method of change of name . . . . The proudest patronymic in the land is available to the lowliest individual, and this without anyone's permission. A person may adopt what name he pleases.") (citations omitted).

Montana: Workman v. Olszewski (In re J.C.O.), 993 P.2d. 667, 668 (Mont. 1999) ("[A]t common law, a person could adopt any surname he might choose so long as the change was not made for fraudulent purposes.") (quoting Firman v. Firman, 610 P.2d 178, 181 (Mont. 1980)); see also MONT. CODE ANN. § 1-1-109 (adopting the common law of England).

Nebraska: Simmons v. O'Brien, 272 N.W.2d 273, 274 (Neb. 1978) ("Change of name statutes do not abrogate or supersede the common law but affirm the common law right and afford an additional method by which name change may be effected as a matter of public record."); NEB. REV. STAT. ANN. § 60a-4, 120(2) (LexisNexis 2021) (anticipating explicitly that a person might change their name with a "common law name change").

Nevada: United States v. McKay, 2 F.2d 257, 259 (D. Nev. 1924) ("Under the common law a man can change his name at will . . . he may sue and be sued by such adopted name, and will be bound by any contract into which he enters in his adopted name. This is true in the absence of a restrictive statute . . . . "). Note that a 2011 federal appellate decision did not fully reach the question but did identify a limit on the common law right in Nevada. Fayer v. Vaughn, 649 F.3d 1061, 1064 n.3 (9th Cir. 2011).

New Hampshire: Moskowitz v. Moskowitz, 385 A.2d 120, 122 (N.H. 1978) ("In the absence of statutory restrictions, one may lawfully change his name at will without resort to any legal proceedings if the change is not made for a fraudulent, criminal, or wrongful purpose.").

New Jersey: Matter of Eck, 584 A.2d 859, 860 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1991) ("At common law, any adult or emancipated person is free to adopt any name, except for a fraudulent, criminal or other illegitimate purpose. [The name change statute] is remedial legislation establishing a method of judicial recordation of name changes. It is to be construed consistently with and not in derogation of the common law.") (cleaned up); see also In re Zhan, 424 N.J. Super. 231, 235 (App. Div. 2012) (same).

New Mexico: In re Mokiligon, 106 P.3d 584, 587 (N.M. Ct. App. 2004) (allowing a name change to "Variable"); Variable for Change of Name v. Nash, 190 P.3d 354, 356 (N.M. Ct. App. 2008) (denying another name change for the same person from the previous case who sought to change name to "Fuck Censorship!" and acknowledging that "Petitioner has a right under the common law to assume any name that he wants so long as no fraud or misrepresentation is involved”).

New York: Smith v. U.S. Cas. Co., 90 N.E. 947, 948 (N.Y. 1910) (“At common law a man can change his name in good faith and for an honest purpose, by adopting a new one and for many years transacting his business and holding himself out to his friends and acquaintances thereunder, with their acquiescence and recognition”); see also Matter of Jones, 49 N.Y.S.3d 300, 300–01 (N.Y. App. Div. 2017) (stating that under the common law, an individual may change their name, although the common law “assumes a freedom of action not necessarily available to a prison inmate”); Matter of Golden, 867 N.Y.S.2d 767, 768 (N.Y. App. Div. 2008) (“Both the common law and statutory procedures exist side by side supplementing each other”) (cleaned up); In re Halligan, 361 N.Y.S.2d 458, 459 (N.Y. App. Div. 1974) (“Under the common law a person may change his or her name at will so long as there is no fraud, misrepresentation or interference with the rights of others.”).

North Carolina: Hunt v. Collinsworth, 2019 N.C. App. LEXIS 110, at *2, *n.1 (N.C. Ct. App. 2019) (finding that the trial court’s application of res judicata to a prior denial of a name change petition “would obstruct a minor child’s and parents’ common law rights to file a subsequent unanimous application to change the name of a minor child” and noting that “[a]t common law, a person could change one’s name at will without court documents”); see also Santronics, Inc. v. Core Indus., 1:93CV00237, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4137, at *34 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 24, 1995) (“[I]n North Carolina, a name can be changed through a statutory procedure or according to the common law.”).

North Dakota: In re Mees, 465 N.W.2d 172, 174 (N.D. 1991) (Levine, J., concurring) (“Our name-change statute is not exclusive but instead supplements the common law. At common law, one has a general right to change one’s name, absent a fraudulent purpose . . . .”) (citations omitted); see also In re Dengler, 246 N.W.2d 758, 763 (N.D. 1976) (same).

Ohio: Bobo v. Jewell, 528 N.E.2d 180, 184 (Ohio 1988) (“In Ohio, names may be changed either by resorting to a judicial proceeding or by the common law method of simply adopting a new name, so long as the change is not made for fraudulent purposes.”); Pierce v. Brushart, 92 N.E.2d 4, 8 (Ohio 1950) (“It is universally recognized that a person may adopt any name he may choose so long as such change is not made for fraudulent purposes.”); see also In re H.C.W., 123 N.E.3d 1048, 1051 (Ohio Ct. App. 2019) (citing Bobo and Pierce for the propositions above, and reversing denial of a trans child’s name change petition).

Oregon: Aylsworth v. Adams, 736 P.2d 225, 226 n.2 (Or. Ct. App. 1987); see also State v. Ford, 172 P. 802, 803 (Or. 1918) ("There is no such thing as a 'legal name' of an individual . . . . In the absence of any restrictive statute, it is the common law right of a person to change his name, or he may by general usage or habit acquire a name notwithstanding it differs from the one given him in infancy. A man's name for all practical and legal purposes is the name by which he is known and called in the community where he lives and is best known."); 37 Op. Att'y Gen. Ore. 1049, 1052 (1976) (citing Ford as the "general rule"); cf. Ouellette v. Ouellette, 420 P.2d 631, 633 (Or. 1966) (agreeing that according to common law, one may change their name at will, but stipulates that this does not necessarily apply for children).

Pennsylvania: In re Harris, 707 A.2d 225, 229 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1997) (Popovich, J., concurring) (joining majority decision to reverse lower court's denial of a trans woman's name change petition, observing that "[a] change of name statute is to be construed consistently with and not in derogation of the common law").

Rhode Island: Traugott v. Petit, 404 A.2d 77, 80 (R.I. 1979) ("We therefore hold that § 8-9-9 is an optional method that may be employed to change one's name" in addition to the common law method).

South Carolina: Stevenson v. Ellisor, 243 S.E.2d 445, 446 (S.C. 1978) ("Generally, a person's name is the designation by which he is known and called in the community in which he lives and is best known.") (citation omitted); Miller v. George, 9 S.E. 659, 661 (S.C. 1889) (discussing the proper name under which to sue a defendant).

South Dakota: Ogle v. Circuit Court, 227 N.W.2d 621, 624 (S.D. 1975) ("The great weight of authority recognizes that at common law one was free to change his name without legal proceedings and that statutory name change procedures do not supplant this right but aid it by the official recordation of those changes. This right is generally conditioned only on the absence of fraudulent purpose."); see also In re Larson, 295 N.W.2d 733, 735 (S.D. 1980) (denying an ex-husband's objection to his ex-wife's name change following the couple's divorce).

Tennessee: Dunn v. Palermo, 522 S.W.2d 679, 686–89 (Tenn. 1975) (recognizing the "common law right of any person, absent a statute to the contrary, to adopt any name by which he may become known, and by which he may transact business and execute contracts and sue or be sued") (quoting Stuart v. Bd. of Supervisors of Elections, 295 A.2d 223, 226 (Md. 1972); see also In re Joseph, 87 S.W.3d 513, 515 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2002) ("With two exceptions, [Tennessee's name change] statutes are not intended to diminish an individual's right to change his or her name but rather to provide an expeditious procedure for doing so.").

Texas: Appeal of Evetts, 392 S.W.2d 781, 783 (Tex. Civ. App. 1965) ("[I]t is generally held that these statutes do not abrogate the common law rule which allows a person to change his name without resort to legal procedure. They merely provide a method for recording the change.").

Utah: In re Porter, 31 P.3d 519, 521 (Utah 2001) (observing that statutes like Utah's name change statute "merely provide a codified process to aid an individual's common law right to adopt another name at will," and remanding a denial of a name change petition); In re Cruchelow, 926 P.2d 833, 834 (Utah 1996) (allowing common law name change to "Santa Claus").

Virginia: In re Miller, 243 S.E.2d 464, 467 (Va. 1978) ("Under the common law, a person may adopt any name he or she wishes, provided it is not done for a fraudulent purpose or does not infringe upon the rights of others."); see also In re Elliott, 100 Va. Cir. 288, 291 (Va. Cir. Ct. 2018) (reasoning that a name change was granted because it was not sought for a fraudulent purpose and would not infringe upon the rights of others).

Washington: State v. Lutes, 230 P.2d 786, 789 (Wash. 1951) ("[A] person can change his name or adopt any name he may desire, provided the same is done for an honest purpose."); see also WASH. REV. CODE § 4.04.010 (mandating that the common law was controlling in all circumstances except where it conflicted with the laws of the United States or of the state of Washington).

West Virginia: In re Harris, 236 S.E.2d 426, 430 (W. Va. 1977) (Harshbarger, J., concurring).

Wisconsin: State v. Hansford, 580 N.W.2d 171, 173 (Wis. 1998) ("[F]or purposes of clarifying Wisconsin's common law, we further conclude that Wisconsin does recognize a common law right to change one's name through consistent and continuous use, as long as the change is not effected for a fraudulent purpose."); Kruzel v. Podell, 226 N.W.2d 458, 464 (Wis. 1975); see also State v. Smith, 770 N.W.2d 779, 782 (Wis. Ct. App. 2009) (recognizing the common law right to change one's name through consistent and continuous use); Frank v. Walker, 196 F. Supp. 3d 893, 908 (E.D. Wis. 2016) ("Under Wisconsin common law, if the person has consistently and continuously used the name, then the name is considered to have been legally changed even though no formal procedure was used."), rev'd on other grounds, 768 F.3d 744 (7th Cir. 2014).

book

4:29:09 PM * Relay Officer

GA

4:29:32 PM * Relay Officer

Please note that i intend on saving this chat history and getting it certified by a Justice of the peace so kindly invite you to reply hoestly and truthfully. ga

4:29:41PM

Interesting, just hold for a tick i have to ask my supervisor something, sorry about this...

4:31:36 PM * Relay Officer

(RO here, It appears the line has been disconnected, I didn't hear them hang up, but the line is disconnected regardless) SKSK

4:33:48 PM * Relay Officer

(RO here, would you like to make another call?) ga

4:33:50 PM * Relay Officer

yes please ga

4:33:57PM

will the history come through automatically on the other side? ga

4:34:23PM

(RO here, to the same number or a different one?) GA

4:34:46 PM * Relay Officer

same number please ga

4:34:50PM

(RO here. Do you mean this calls chat history? They are recorded for quality and training purposes but I'm not sure as to their level of accessibility for users)

4:36:02 PM * Relay Officer

yes just so i dont ahve to type the qustions again

4:36:52PM

(RO here, and just to confirm would you like me to make the same selections in the recorded menus I did earlier?) GA

221 of 698

4:36:54 PM * Relay Officer is it possible to upload an image to the chat (eg screenshot of chat) ga

4:37:10PM

yes same selections thank you kindly ga

4:37:16PM

(RO here, would you like me to ask my supervisor about the call recording? I can't relay anything but your most recent message to the caller for privacy reasons but I'm not sure as to the level of access that you have to them) GA

4:39:30 PM * Relay Officer

if you wouldnt mind it would be helpful

4:40:07PM

but i can re-type it if needed so its not the end of the world if i hav eto do htat

4:40:18PM

ga

4:40:21PM

(RO here, Ok so, insofar as the recordings of the previous call if you contact the helpdesk during their operating hours on 1800 555 660 (voice) or 0416 001 350 (text) then they should be able to help you in regards to getting a recording of the chat history but i can't help you with it currently) GA

4:44:31 PM * Relay Officer

(Dialling)

4:44:55 PM * Relay Officer

thats ok ai apprecaite it - if we could make teh call back top them now before they shut at 5pm would be reartl;y apprecaited

4:45:00PM

ga

4:45:02PM

(Recorded Message)welcome to the compilot voice portal the mailbox of the party you called cannot be found please enter the mailboxid now followed by the hash key...

4:46:52 PM * Relay Officer

GA

4:47:09 PM * Relay Officer

haha so they have blocked your service from being able to contact them? ga

4:47:13PM

(RO here, I can't be sure, but it isn't letting me through)

4:48:00 PM * Relay Officer

(Recorded Message)this operation cannot be completed at this time. please hang up and try again later SKSK

4:48:25 PM * Relay Officer

i can assure you they have, thought that woudl be unlawful. we can try again tomorrow, thank you for your assistance today. ga

4:48:23PM

(RO here, would you like to make another call?) ga

4:48:32 PM * Relay Officer

This page is intentionally left blank.

Three Types of Death

By

Kenneth Fortier

There are three types of "death" spoken of in the Bible. The first is Physical death. The second is called "spiritual" death. The third is "eternal" death. We, in this fairly short little article, will attempt to define each of these three types of death in order.

#1 — PHYSICAL DEATH.

This is the death that is the best-known among mankind. It affects each and every person in various ways. It is emotional. It is final. It is the loss of life for the deceased person. The death of a person affects the body/flesh, breath/spirit and being/soul.

We are informed in Genesis 2:7 that our "body/flesh" is composed of the elements of this earth — "the dust of the ground." We are also informed in this same verse that God breathed into the body/flesh the "breath/spirit" of life and that this caused the body/flesh to become a living "being/soul." (Read the articles, The Breath of Life, and A Preliminary Study on the Biblical meaning of Soul, to see what God revealed to us about the "breath/spirit" of life.)

The point of Genesis 2:7 is that an animated physical body is a living body. And with the addition of the "breath/spirit of life" to the physical body it BECOMES a LIVING creature — a LIVING BEING, i.e., a LIVING SOUL! A living soul is what a person IS, not something that was added to body. The LOSS of the breath/spirit of life is the physical death of a person, and results in the person being turned back into the "dust of the ground." Genesis 3:19 tells us that "By the sweat of your face you shall eat bread, till you return to the ground, because from it you were taken; for you are dust, and to dust you shall return." King Solomon speaks of the loss of the "breath/spirit" of life this way: "Then the dust will return to the earth as it was, and the breath/spirit will return to God who gave it" (Ecclesiastes 12:7).

This death also happens to fish, fowl, animals and all creepy-crawly things on this earth of ours. For example, Ecclesiastes 3:19 which speaks of the death of man and all living creatures, tells us "For that which happens to the sons of man happens to animals; even one thing happens to them: as one dies, so dies the other; yes, they all have one spirit [breath]; so that a man has no preeminence above an animal: for all is vanity." King David writing in Psalm 104:29, speaking of animals, tells us God shall "take away their breath/spirit, they expire, and return to dust."

Physical death is the condition of the "breath/spirit" being separated from the body of both man and living creatures. When separation takes place the loss of life, i.e., death, is the result. Life is extinct. What once was is no longer. And this loss of life is due unto each person: "It is appointed unto men once to die and after this the judgment" (Hebrews 9:27) — with one exception, being alive when Jesus returns to resurrect the dead! The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Volume 1, page 989, says: "Although variously interpreted throughout the Old and New Testament, death is basically understood as the termination of life on earth. Most frequently it indicates the end of an individual's existence."

An interesting scripture passage is found in the Septuagint (LXX) version of the Old Testament book of Job that speaks of physical death.

> "For if a man should die, shall he live again > having completed the days of his existence?
> I shall wait until I exist again." (Job 14:14)

Most versions of the Bible interject the question mark after the word "again", disregarding the rest of the sentence. But that puts a whole different perspective on the topic Job was talking about. Job knew he would die at the end of his allotted days – the days that he existed as a living being/soul. He also had faith that he would exist at some time in the future – when he looked forward to being re-created by God. One should think on what Job had to say.

"The wages of sin is death" (Romans 6:23). When dead, one ceases to be. Unless God intervenes in some miraculous manner, that extinction is forever! When Jesus, on the cross, gave up his life he would have been forever extinct (I Cor. 15:18 in context) if God had not made the promise to him that he would not be abandoned to the grave forever (Acts 2:27). By the power of God Jesus was raised up from the dead after three days (to fulfill prophecy). This same promise is given to all men (and women) before their physical deaths through the Gospel message if they believe and obey the Son, Jesus. Believers, in Christ Jesus, will be raised up from the dead and will be given immortality to live forever. Those who do not accept God's offer will also be raised from the dead, but then face judgment for that refusal, and will face death again — the second death in the Lake of Fire (See Rev. 20:14–15).

#2 — SPIRITUAL DEATH.

While the expression "spiritual death" never appears in the whole of the Bible, the concept is easily understood — it is a very figurative expression, and is to be understood just as one understands "physical death", i.e., the loss of life or one's death to something — in this case, spiritual life! One will find that many times in the Bible "spiritual death" refers to a condition of being separated from God as a type of "death". It is this "type" of death from which we get the expression "spiritual death." The term "spiritual" is used to distinguish it from physical loss of life, i.e., death.

A person may ask, "What causes 'spiritual death'?" The answer from the Bible is stated in a simple word that is easy to understand: SIN. Sin separates one from the grace, or "friendly disposition" of God — which is the basic meaning of the term "grace". We find Isaiah saying, "Your iniquities have made a separation between you and your God, and your sins have hidden His face from you, so that He does not hear" (Isa. 59:2). It is this "separation" that is viewed as a type of death, even though the person is still alive physically. It is "death" in the sense that it is a loss of life, the abundant life that comes from being in spiritual contact with the grace of God. When one is cut off from the source of life, God, one is counted or characterized as being "dead in sin".

Good examples of this can be found in the New Testament. One example comes from Jesus Himself and is found in John 15:1–6. Jesus refers to himself as a "vine" and tells us that we who are IN HIM are all branches. But, if we should get "separated" from this vine (cut off from Christ), the result is "death" — we wither away and die! This is a separation that results in "spiritual death" while we are living, and if found in this condition at our "physical death" leads to "eternal death" — the complete extinction of both body and being (soul): see Matthew 10:28 and Luke 12:4–5.

First Timothy 5:6, alluding to "spiritual death", says: "But she who gives herself to wanton pleasure is dead even while she lives." Even though this woman is still a living, breathing being/soul, none-the-less her relationship to God has been separated and that is spiritually a true "loss of life" — a "death." Living in wanton pleasure, SIN, is a repudiation of the life God wants us to lead. To be separated from God in this physical existence of ours will result in our being unfit for an everlasting existence with God in the new Heaven and Earth promised to those found IN Christ. To be spiritually separated from God HERE will result in being eternally separated from God after having completed the days of our existence in this age — That would be both spiritual and physical death from which there is no reprieve.

Everyone, at one time or another in physical life is found to be "dead in our sins" and, that is what the concept of "spiritual death" is. "He who has the Son has THE life; he who does not have the Son of God does not have THE life" (I John 5:12). Those who do not have the spirit of Christ IN them do not belong to Christ (Rom. 8:9–13), and therefore, are spiritually dead in sin. Being without Christ IN one's self, and dying, makes one fit only for ultimate destruction in the lake of fire, which is the "second death."

As the Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible states: "All men are by nature spiritually dead, that is, alienated from God the source of life by sin, insensible to divine things, unresponsive to His laws…and therefore, although they still live in this world, their attitude to sin, the law and the world is to be that of dead men." (Vol. 2, Pgs. 71, 72.)

Speaking to the Ephesians who had converted to Christianity, the apostle Paul reminded them "you were dead in your trespasses and sins, in which you formerly walked according to the course of this world" (Eph. 2:1–2). And to the Colossian Christians he reminded them of the same thing in different words which meant the same thing: "And when you were dead in your transgressions…He made you alive together with Him, having forgiven us all our transgressions" (Col. 2:13). Again, you see the concept of "spiritual death" being spoken of.

When Jesus told the Parable of the Prodigal Son, He put the following words into the fathers mouth: "For this son of mine was dead, and has come to life again; he was lost, and has been found" (Luke 15:24). This son was not physically dead, but his father considered him to be "spiritually dead" until he came to his senses and returned back home.

When one of Jesus' disciples said that he had to leave to bury his father, Jesus told him to "Follow me, and let the dead bury their own dead" (Mt. 8:21–22). Notice that Jesus in these two verses made reference to both the physical and spiritual use of the concept of death. The dead burying the dead shows one being spiritually dead and the other one being physically dead — an excellent example of the concept we are talking about.

In the book of Revelation Jesus told John to write to the church in Sardis and say, "I know your deeds; you have a reputation of being alive, but you are dead" (3:1). If one reads the rest of the passage one can understand that being spiritually dead is the one who will be erased out of God's Book of Life. The result of being stricken from the Book of Life means that one will face eternal death in the Lake of Fire (See Rev. 20:15).

#3 — ETERNAL DEATH.

"Those who remain in spiritual death throughout their lives and do not believe on the Son of God, die in their sins (John 8:21, 24) — and in the Day of Judgment will be consigned to a state of eternal separation from God, called in Scripture the second death (Revelation 21:8)" (The Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible, Vol. 2, page 71).

The above comment states the case in a single sentence. Eternal death is the second death of a person. There is no reprieve promised from this death, thusly it will last forever, i.e., eternally. This is the ultimate destiny of all those who are not found to be IN Christ Jesus! As the physical death of a person would be forever if not raised from the dead (See I Cor. 15:13–19), the second death is the extinction of body and being/soul forever because for it there is no promise attached that would raise one from this death. Being "separated" from the source of life one has no life of any kind. One can not exist without God supplying that life, i.e., the breath/spirit of life within a person. This is where "spiritual death" and "eternal death" result in the same condition — a separation from the Life-Giver. Thusly, spiritual death merges into "eternal death."

We can sum up all three "deaths" just spoken about by saying that "death is a separation from life" whether it is physical, spiritual or eternal! The Bible portrays death as a separation from life, not a preservation or continuation of life in some other form. Death is the loss of life, period, regardless if it is physical, spiritual or eternal.

Job asked, "If a man should die having completed the days of his existence, will he live again?" And then he tells us his expectation: "I shall wait until I exist again." The question Job asked is the ultimate question about man's destiny. Will he remain dead or will he be re-created in the future? As we see when we read the Book of Job, he had faith that he would be recreated by God — someday, somehow. We too, should have this faith!

Jesus came and challenged mankind by setting forth the ultimate goal of living forever, and warned all of losing that opportunity. Jesus openly proclaimed that God had sent him into the world with divine power to give life, and that it was his intention to give this life to certain ones while others would be rejected and be subject to the second death after judgment.

We find that Jesus did many marvelous works in the sight of the Jewish people and their leaders, the Pharisees and Sadducees. Because Jesus was doing these things on the Sabbath, the leaders persecuted him. Jesus told them that "My Father is always at his work to this very day, and I, too, am working." For this reason the Jews tried all the harder to kill him; not only was he breaking the Sabbath, but he was even calling God his own Father, making himself equal with God. (John 5:16–18) Jesus then gave them this answer:

"I tell you the truth, the Son can do nothing by himself; he can do only what he sees his Father doing, because whatever the Father does the Son also does. For the Father loves the Son and shows him all he does. Yes, to your amazement he will show him even greater things than these. For just as the Father raises the dead and gives them life, even so the Son gives life to whom he is pleased to give it. Moreover, the Father judges no one, but has entrusted all judgment to the Son, that all may honor the Son just as they honor the Father. He who does not honor the Son does not honor the Father who sent him.

"I tell you the truth, whoever hears my word and believes him who sent me has eternal life and will not be condemned; he has crossed over from death to life. I tell you the truth, a time is coming and has now come when the dead will hear the voice of the Son of God and those who hear will live. For as the Father has life in himself, so he has granted the Son to have life in himself. And he has given him authority to judge because he is the Son of man.

"Do not be amazed at this, for a time is coming when all who are in their graves will hear his voice and come out — those who have done good will rise to live, and those who have done evil will rise to be condemned." (John 5:19–29)

We have Jesus saying: "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). The destiny of man can be summed up in one little, but important word — LIFE! The Greek word for "perish" is "apolumi" which means to be utterly destroyed.

This little article is written about three deaths; physical, spiritual and eternal, which concerns the destiny of man. It is appointed for all men to die once, then comes judgment; and with it LIFE or DEATH. The LIFE or DEATH mentioned are eternal, i.e., they both last the same time.

We of the Conditionalist viewpoint believe the biblical view is that the second death spoken of in Revelation 20:15 is a termination of life itself. It is not just an everlasting separation from the source of life, God; it is also an everlasting separation from the "breath/spirit of life" itself. If one is separated from God, how would or could one remain living? In the Lake of Fire, the "Second Death," the unbelievers will be ultimately destroyed, deprived of life, and will cease to be. It will not be pleasant for those thrown in. But the process of dying will result in death, and that death, which is a separation from life and the life-Giver, will last forever.

There is no room in such as short article like this to respond to all the questions that it raises. This is where study of the Scriptures comes in. A study of the words used by the writers of Scripture concerning this topic is very revealing, and by all the rules of hermeneutics and using etymology, exegesis and the helps of lexicons, etc., one can come to a reasoned conclusion. There are many articles on this Web Site that add to what is said in this article — please read them. May God be with you and you seek to grow in the knowledge of Christ.

Copyright © 2010 by Kenneth Fortier. Permission is granted to reproduce and distribute copies of this article provided that acknowledgement is given to the author. All other rights reserved. This notice must remain with this article.

This page is intentionally left blank.

INVITED REVIEW aFP

“Was the Infant Born Alive?” A Review of Postmortem Techniques Used to Determine Live Birth In Cases of Suspected Neonaticide

Bianca Phillips, Beng Beng Ong

ABSTRACT

The question of whether an infant was born alive has received much attention in the forensic literature. The volume of literature reflects the degree of controversy surrounding the techniques employed and their varied interpretation and utility. The majority of the investigation has been focused on the question “Has the infant breathed?” to determine if an infant was born alive by utilizing techniques that assess aeration of the lungs. However, caution must be employed when interpreting these techniques due to the well-recognized limitations in their interpretation, particularly in the presence of gaseous decomposition and/or resuscitation efforts. Although in some instances there may be irrefutable evidence that the infant was born alive, there is no single finding that can reliably be utilized to answer the question “Was the infant born alive?” in every case. Hence, the approach to postmortem investigation continues to include a wide range of observations, dissections, special techniques, and ancillary tests to assist the pathologist to form a considered opinion. There are a number of more recently described techniques which show great promise in assisting to answer this question including advanced imaging and immunohistochemical studies of the umbilical cord. It remains, though, that in many cases it is not possible to definitively answer this question and stillbirth should be assumed due to the potential legal implications of determining that an infant was born alive.

Acad Forensic Pathol. 2018 8(4): 874-893

AUTHORS

Bianca Phillips MBBS BSc FRCPA, Forensic and Scientific Services - Health Support Queensland, Queensland Department of Health

Roles: Project conception and/or design, manuscript creation and/or revision, approved final version for publication, accountable for all aspects of the work, writing assistance and/or technical editing.

Beng Beng Ong MBBS MPath FRCPA DMJ FFFLM, Forensic and Scientific Services - Health Support Queensland, Queensland Department of Health, University of Queensland - School of Medicine

Roles: Data acquisition, analysis and/or interpretation, manuscript creation and/or revision, approved final version for publication, accountable for all aspects of the work, general administrative support.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bianca Phillips MBBS BSc, 39 Kessels Rd Coopers Plains, Queensland 4108, Australia, Bianca.Phillips@health.qld.gov.au

ETHICAL APPROVAL

As per Journal Policies, ethical approval was not required for this manuscript

STATEMENT OF HUMAN AND ANIMAL RIGHTS

This article does not contain any studies conducted with animals or on living human subjects

STATEMENT OF INFORMED CONSENT

No identifiable personal data were presented in this manuscript

DISCLOSURES & DECLARATION OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

The authors, reviewers, editors, and publication staff do not report any relevant conflicts of interest

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE

The authors have indicated that they do not have financial relationships to disclose that are relevant to this manuscript

KEYWORDS

Forensic pathology, Live birth, Stillbirth, Neonaticide, Infanticide

INFORMATION

ACADEMIC FORENSIC PATHOLOGY: THE OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MEDICAL EXAMINERS
©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International • (ISSN: 1925-3621) • https://doi.org/10.1177/1925362118821476
Submitted for consideration on 31 Aug 2018. Accepted for publication on 20 Oct 2018

INTRODUCTION

Neonaticide is defined as the deliberate killing of a newborn infant in the first 24 hours of life (1). The perpetrator is typically the mother (2). In many jurisdictions, the offense has reduced culpability due to the widely held belief that the psychological effects of birth and lactation can have an impact on the mother's state of mind. Although cases of neonaticide are rare, they are invariably high profile, being associated with intense media scrutiny and public attention.

Medicolegal death investigation in Australia operates under the Coronial system. The Coroner is legislated to investigate deaths that fall within their jurisdiction. As part of their investigation, the Coroner is required to determine who the deceased person is, how the person died, when the person died, where the person died, and what caused the person to die (3). The forensic pathologist is ordered by the Coroner to perform postmortem examinations on deceased individuals to assist them in this investigation. Neonatal deaths are a special circumstance where the Coroner may or may not have jurisdiction depending on a number of factors, firstly and perhaps most importantly, whether the infant was born alive. In Australia, the Coroner does not have jurisdiction to investigate deaths of stillborn infants. Where there is uncertainty around this, however, they are able to order a postmortem examination to determine if the infant was live born. The Coroner's investigation must cease if there is a determination of stillbirth.

Due to legislative differences, there is variation in how neonatal deaths are managed and prosecuted from one jurisdiction to the next. There are also subtle variations in the definition of live birth and separate existence. According to Knight, "separate existence" refers to signs of life in an infant completely expelled from the maternal passages (independent of the placenta), whilst "live birth" refers to signs of life in an infant regardless of whether they have been completely expelled from the maternal passages (1). It is not possible to distinguish separate existence from live birth in the absence of a witness. The World Health Organisation (WHO) defines live birth as:

> The complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of the pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life – e.g. beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord or definite movement of voluntarily muscles – whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached (4).

In practice, this definition is often simplified and live birth is taken to be the attainment of breathing air. In order to prosecute a case of neonaticide, it must first be shown that an infant was born alive.

The incidence of neonaticide varies from one jurisdiction to another due to differences in social, economic, cultural, and religious factors. Herman–Giddens et al. reported a rate of 2.1 neonaticides per 100 000 live births in North Carolina between 1985 and 2000, accounting for 0.002% of live born infants in the region (5). However, the true incidence of neonaticide in any given population is considered to be underestimated. This is due to the nature of the cases that do come to the attention of authorities, usually involving bodies that are discarded, concealed, or buried in rubbish bins, rubbish dumps, public toilets, lakes, sewage plants, or woodlands (1, 5-7). In some cases, the body is discovered many years later. Hence, it can be inferred that there are many cases where the body is never discovered and the death does not come to the attention of authorities. For this reason, it is near impossible to give an estimate of the true incidence of neonaticide.

The cause of death in neonaticides can broadly be divided into deliberate acts and omissions of care. They generally occur immediately after birth and the most common causes are reported to be neglect, inattention/exposure, asphyxia, drowning, stabbing, and blunt head trauma (5-7). The usual scenario is of an abandoned infant, where the identity of the mother is unknown. In the majority of cases, the infant is found in a concealed location, wrapped in varying materials, and partially decomposed. In some instances, a case may come to the attention of the authorities earlier

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion due to postpartum complications in the mother (8). The mother, if identified, is usually young, unmarried, and primiparous, with a concealed pregnancy and an unassisted birth (1, 2, 5, 6). The task of the forensic pathologist in these cases is to assist to identify the mother, determine if the infant was born alive, and determine the cause (and in some jurisdictions, the manner) of death (1, 7, 9, 10). For the purposes of this review the focus will be on determining "Was the infant was born alive?"

This topic has received much attention in the forensic literature as our knowledge and understanding of the reliability and limitations of various findings and techniques has evolved. At present, it is widely accepted that there is no single finding or combination of findings, short of a reliable (preferably medical) witness, that indicates an infant was definitely born alive. The assessment is approached with meticulous care and great caution with the postmortem findings generally considered in combination when forming an opinion as to live birth or stillbirth. It is now well recognized that changes of decomposition can hinder the assessment by producing gaseous artifact and that this is present in a large proportion of suspected neonaticide cases. In Germany, severe decomposition was described in 27% of (suspected) neonaticides (11).

Plain film imaging has assisted our understanding of the limitations of postmortem assessment due to the demonstration of air as a postmortem artifact. In 1969, Hiroven et al. used plain film to demonstrate the predictable movement of air through the gastrointestinal tract of newborn infants. He further demonstrated that stillborn infants had no gas in the lungs or gastrointestinal tract on plain film immediately after birth; however, after artificial respiration with a mask some infants showed air in the lungs and or gastrointestinal tract. These results showed that artificial respiration can introduce air into the lungs and gastrointestinal tract leading to potential error in the interpretation of autopsy findings including imaging and the lung flotation test (12). It is now widely accepted that resuscitation efforts can complicate the assessment of live birth in neonatal deaths.

DISCUSSION

In cases of suspected neonaticide, the circumstances and scene investigation are integral to understanding the scenario and determining if an infant was born alive. These findings may assist the forensic pathologist in interpreting the postmortem findings.

The postmortem examination follows the usual protocol of dissection and ancillary testing undertaken in all sudden unexpected deaths in infancy (SUDI), including examination of the placenta when available. In addition to this, there are a range of specific observations, dissections, special techniques, and ancillary tests specifically aimed at answering the unique question "Was the infant born alive?" The findings are considered to be of variable accuracy and can be classified into four groups according to their utility: findings that preclude live birth, findings that indicate potential birth complications, findings that indicate possible live birth, and findings that prove live birth.

These findings can be considered in combination when forming an opinion as to whether an infant was born alive.

Findings that Preclude Live Birth

A logical place to commence is with identification of findings that are incompatible with life and thus preclude live birth. In Queensland, stillbirth is defined as the birth of a baby who shows no signs of life after a pregnancy of at least 20 weeks gestation or weighing 400 g or more. Miscarriage refers to the loss of a pregnancy prior to 20 weeks gestation. If the forensic pathologist determines miscarriage or stillbirth, the Coroner's investigation is concluded (3, 13).

Findings that fall into this category include: the presence of maceration indicating intrauterine fetal demise, low gestational age that is incompatible with extrauterine life, or a lethal malformation that is incompatible with extrauterine life.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

Maceration

Maceration is the process of sterile tissue breakdown that occurs if an infant is dead for a period of time in the uterus. It differs from decomposition, which is the process of autolysis and putrefaction that occurs after death due to the actions of enzymes and microorganisms in the body. The finding of maceration is indicative of intrauterine fetal demise and indicates that the infant was not born alive.

Changes of maceration are initially seen as brown–pink discoloration of the skin, followed by skin blistering, hyperextensible joints, and eventually collapse of the skull (2, 6). Maceration is a common finding in cases of stillbirth and is a familiar site to pathologists who perform regular perinatal postmortem examinations.

Gestational Age Incompatible With Extrauterine Life

With advances in science and modern medicine, infants of diminishing gestational age can be supported and managed under specialist neonatal intensivists in tertiary hospitals. Hence, the definition of nonviable gestation, inconsistent with extrauterine life, is considered in the context of contemporary scientific and medical knowledge. Currently, extreme prematurity of less than 23 weeks gestation is generally considered inconsistent with extrauterine life (14). This is mainly due to immaturity of the lungs. However, without intensive medical intervention, fetuses of more advanced gestation are not capable of sustaining life.

There are a number of tools that can be utilized to determine gestational age. These include the following:

Haase's rule:

> The length of the foetus in centimetres is approximately the square of the age in months up to the 20th week. Beyond the 20th week, the length in centimetres divided by five represents the age in months (1).

Obstetric records: access to obstetric records is considered the exception rather than the rule. In many cases, the mother will not be identified and even when identified, the mother will usually have had little or no antenatal care. When available, however, antenatal scans and blood tests may assist with approximating gestational age.

External measurements: the assessment of morphological measurements including body weight, body length, and foot length to estimate gestational age can be performed fairly rapidly and compared with standardized population-based tables to estimate gestational age (15). This is only a guide, however, due to known variations attributable to sex, race, and nutritional status as well as variation due to postmortem change (16).

Fetal ossification centers: fetal ossification centers can be used as predictors of gestational age. Whilst traditionally assessment of ossification centers was undertaken at postmortem examination by dissection and direct visualization, they are now more easily assessed by a pediatric forensic radiologist on skeletal survey and/or using advanced postmortem imaging techniques. Where available, postmortem computed tomography (PMCT) is a rapid and accurate way of estimating gestational age and creates a permanent digital record of findings. Sieswerda-Hoogendoorn et al. looked at 12 neonaticide cases with an estimated postmortem interval of one week and compared the ability to determine gestational age by PMCT with that of autopsy. They found that PMCT was able to determine gestational age in 100% of cases compared with 58% at autopsy (9).

Placental examination: assessment of chorionic villous maturity can be used as an indicator of gestational age; however, this is not specific and is not considered a reliable finding.

Internal examination: examination of the internal organs can assist in estimation of gestational age using weights, macroscopic appearances, and histological features. Organ weights can be compared with standardized population-based tables to estimate gesta-

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

tional age (15); however, organ maturation is considered to be a more reliable indicator of gestational age. The macroscopic convolutions of the fetal brain have been shown to correlate well with gestational age with accuracy within one week gestation (17). Histological appearances of the glomeruli in the kidneys can also be useful in assessment of fetal maturation (18).

Lethal Malformations

The finding at postmortem examination of a lethal malformation or a condition that precludes independent existence can assist in determining if an infant was born alive. Such conditions include anencephaly, pulmonary hypoplasia, skeletal dysplasias, and chromosomal malformation syndromes. There are also a number of other conditions such as diaphragmatic hernia, severe neural tube defects, and congenital cardiac defects that, whilst not immediately life threatening, would certainly result in rapid demise in the absence of immediate medical intervention at birth.

Findings that Indicate Potential Birth Complications

Identification and documentation of risk factors for prematurity, perinatal asphyxia, intrapartum death, and/or stillbirth may assist the pathologist in forming an opinion as to live birth. There are also findings in the infant, umbilical cord, and/or placenta that are known to predispose to or indicate potential peripartum complications such as obstructed labor or birth trauma.

Findings that fall into this category include signs of intrauterine fetal pathology, signs of birth trauma, and risk factors for stillbirth.

Signs of Intrauterine Fetal Pathology

There may be signs in the placenta and/or neonate that indicate intrauterine fetal distress or intrauterine fetal demise.

It is well recognized that examination of the placenta forms an integral part of the postmortem examination in all neonatal deaths. Possible abnormalities of the placenta include evidence of placental abruption, chorioamnionitis, meconium staining, placental insufficiency, and/or maternal pathology (16, 19). Apart from the usual sampling and examination that is undertaken in hospital perinatal deaths, there are also some additional forensic observations to be considered in the context of potential birth trauma (see below). Examination of the placenta by the forensic pathologist in consultation with a specialist pediatric surgical pathologist may be indicated.

Meconium is the dark green, sticky, tar-like first stool passed by an infant. The presence of dark green staining of an infant's skin or beneath the nails is considered an indication of meconium stained liquor, a marker of intrauterine fetal distress. There may also be evidence of meconium aspiration in the lungs (See Images 1A-1C).

Signs of Birth Trauma

There are typical injury patterns that are associated with traumatic births such as precipitate delivery, shoulder dystocia, and breech presentation. The recognition of these may be helpful to assist in understanding the circumstances of birth and determining whether an infant was born alive.

Precipitate labor refers to an unusually rapid labor with expulsion of the fetus, usually within two hours of onset. The delivery can result in the infant having impact with the ground (or other surface) causing blunt force trauma, usually to the head. This has been described in scenarios when the mother is standing during delivery and when there is a long umbilical cord (6, 20). Fractures of the skull or clavicle may also be attributed to birth trauma due to instrumentation, cephalopelvic disproportion, shoulder dystocia, or fetal macrosomia (16). Birth trauma-related skull fractures are usually linear fractures of the parietal bone and can be associated with extradural hematoma.

Other head injuries associated with birth trauma include occipital osteodiastasis and neural tears. Occipital osteodiastasis is a rare complication where there

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion is separation of the occipital bone at the back of the skull with tearing of the venous sinuses and associated subdural hemorrhage that can occur during difficult breech delivery (16). Neural tears can occur as a result of birth-related head trauma associated with excessive or rapid molding of the fetal head during delivery. It is also important to note that retinal hemorrhages are commonly described in otherwise normal live newborns (16). Breech delivery can result in damage to the internal organs including the liver, spleen, and kidneys due to pressure on the infant's abdomen during attempts at delivering the head.

Peripartum umbilical cord accidents can be related to the length or integrity of the umbilical cord. Short umbilical cords are associated with birth asphyxia, whilst long umbilical cords are associated with nuchal cord and prolapse of the umbilical cord with subsequent obstruction of the fetal-placental circulation. Poor integrity or damage of the umbilical cord can lead to rupture of the umbilical vessels and exsanguination (6).

The appearance of the umbilical cord ends can also give information about the circumstances of birth and delivery. The presence of a clamp may be indicative of medical intervention, whilst the presence of tearing at the cord ends, in conjunction with other findings, may be consistent with a precipitate delivery. Knight suggests submersing the cord in water to assist in determining if it is torn (1). Tearing of the umbilical cord before or during labor can result in massive hemorrhage and subsequent fetal death (16).

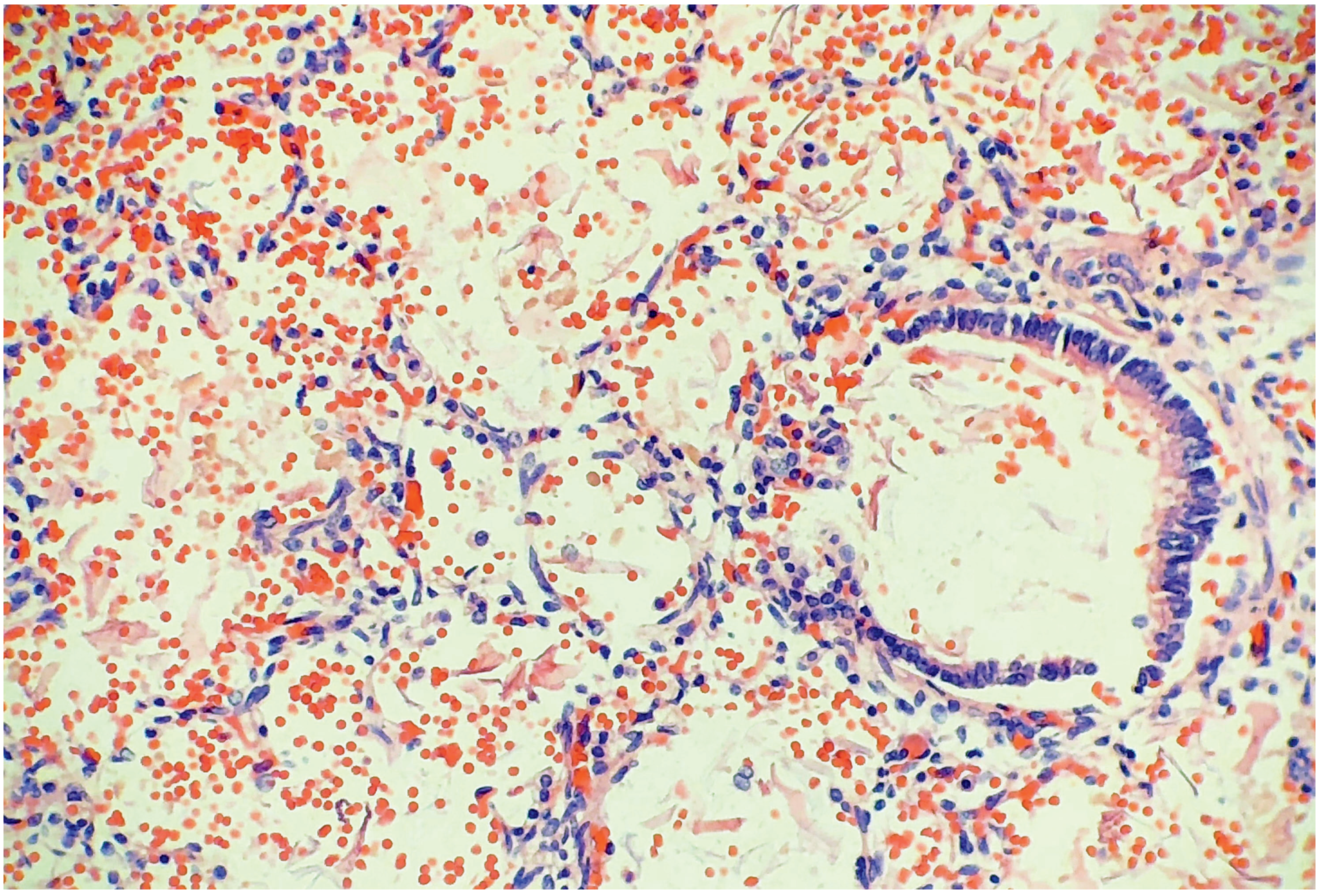

Image 1A: Meconium aspiration (H&E, x200).

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

Marks around an infant's neck may raise concern regarding strangulation; however, marks under the chin and on the sides of the neck have reportedly been seen in association with attempts by the mother to extract the infant from the birth canal during self-delivery (1, 6, 7, 20).

Other birth-related findings include cephalohematoma and caput succedaneum. Cephalohematoma is a lump on the scalp that can occur due to traumatic subperiosteal hemorrhage that occurs when there is pressure on the fetal head during delivery, whilst caput succedaneum is edema of the scalp that can occur during difficult prolonged labor (6).

The timing of various injuries, whether antepartum, peripartum, antemortem, or postmortem, may be difficult to ascertain, but evidence of a vital reaction on histological assessment may be supportive of a period of survival after sustaining the injury and, hence, live birth. That being said, the absence of a vital reaction cannot be used to negate live birth. This assessment may be complicated by postmortem change such as decomposition, as it is well recognized that histological assessment is limited in the presence of autolysis and putrefaction.

Risk Factors for Stillbirth

There is a high rate of stillbirth worldwide with the WHO reporting 2.6 million babies were stillborn in 2015, equating to 18.4 stillbirths for every 1000 live born infants. Although rates are markedly lower in countries like the United States and Australia, with Image 1B: Meconium aspiration (Atwood stain, x200).

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion rates of 3.0 and 2.7 stillbirths per 1000 total births respectively, stillbirth is not an uncommon outcome of pregnancy (21).

Identification and documentation of risk factors for stillbirth is a pertinent part of the examination. These are generally divided into fetal conditions, maternal conditions, and problems with the placenta. Conditions in the fetus include lethal malformations, chromosomal or genetic disease, structural abnormalities, and infections. In the placenta, significant findings include infarction, hemorrhage, and placental villous dysmatruity.

If the mother is identified, the medical and obstetric history can be scrutinized for maternal risk factors of stillbirth. These include a past obstetric history of perinatal death, primiparity, lack of antenatal care, a multiple pregnancy, diabetes mellitus, smoking, obesity, maternal age (<15 years or >35years), substance abuse, socioeconomic disadvantage, and some maternal infections (e.g., Zika virus) (22).

Findings that Indicate Possible Live Birth

The signs of live birth that have received most attention in the literature include evidence that the infant has breathed, healing of the umbilical stump, and food in the stomach. The first two of these signs are considered to be indicators of potential live birth and will be discussed in this section. Food in the stomach is widely considered to be an irrefutable sign that the infant has been born alive and will be considered in the section “Signs that prove live birth.”

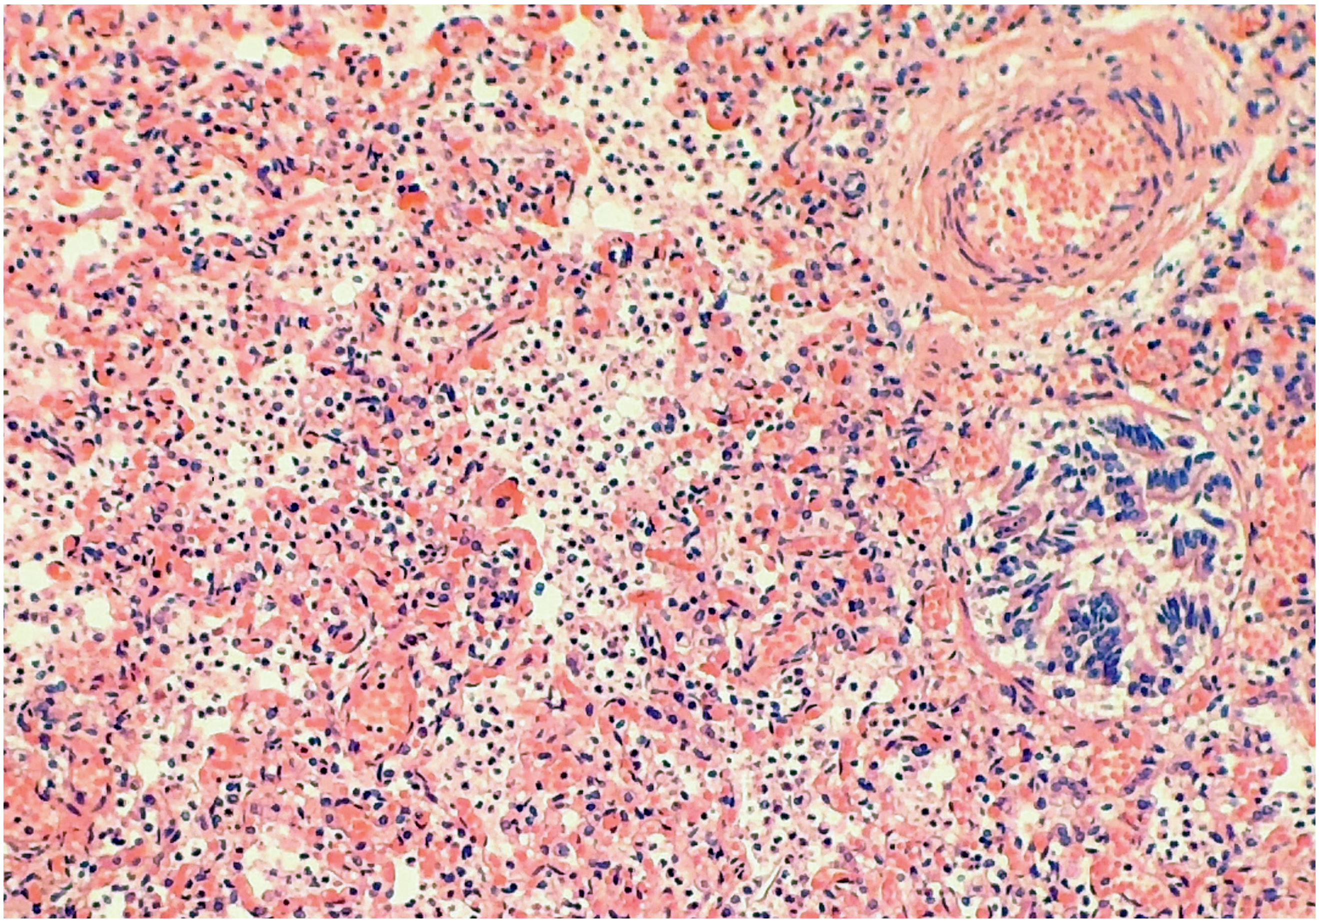

Image 1C: Congenital pneumonia (H&E, x200).

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

Surrogate Markers of Breathing

Throughout history, the majority of literature on the assessment for live birth has focused on examination of the infant's lungs. There are numerous documented approaches to assessing the lungs for signs that an infant has taken a breath. These include techniques involving gross morphology, the lung flotation test, histological examination, and imaging.

As previously mentioned, it is now well recognized that there are limitations when using the anatomical assessment of the lungs to indicate whether the physiological process of breathing has occurred. There are other notable reasons for aeration of the lungs in an infant including the introduction of air during resuscitation attempts and gas formation due to changes of decomposition. The presence of either of these should be noted and acknowledged when assessing for surrogate signs of breathing.

It is important to be aware that lungs of stillborn neonates can appear aerated at postmortem and lungs of live born infants can be devoid of air (19). Hence, short of medical observation of breathing after birth, all other signs are considered surrogate anatomical markers of breathing and interpreted with caution in the context of other findings. According to Neri et al., "Ventilation of the lungs alone cannot be taken as a certain marker of live birth" (see Table 1) (23).

Lung Morphology

At postmortem examination, the gross appearances of the lungs of stillborn and live born infants differ. Upon opening the chest plate, stillborn infant lungs are usually contracted against the mediastinum. They are often described as dark and small with a "liver-like" appearance. The lung margins have a sharp, angled appearance and the parenchyma has a uniform rubbery consistency with absence of crepitance on palpation. If the infant has breathed, the medial edges of the lungs are said to overlap at the mediastinum on opening the chest plate. They are described as having a salmon-pink, mottled appearance. The lung margins have blunt angles and the lung parenchyma has a spongy consistency with crepitance on palpation (1). Although these descriptions are quite distinct from one another, in practice, the morphology of lungs from stillborn and live born infants are probably best represented by a continuum with the classical findings at each end. It seems feasible that an infant would require several substantial breaths before the lungs expand completely and show the full spectrum of findings expected for a live born infant lung (7).

Table 1: Surrogate Markers of Breathing
Lung morphology
Lung flotation test
Lung histology
Postmortem imaging *Plain film *Postmortem computed tomography *Postmortem magnetic resonance imaging

Tabata et al. considered the finding of froth in the airways of a newborn infant found in a freezer and thawed to represent respiratory distress, and hence indicate live birth (24). Although the combination of pulmonary edema and froth in the airways may represent mixing of pulmonary edema with inspired air, caution should be observed when drawing this conclusion due to the potential for froth in the airways being attributable to putrefactive artefact (6).

Lung Flotation Test

Historically, determination of live birth was considered to be largely dependent on the result of the lung flotation test, also known as the "lung test," "flotation test," and "hydrostatic test." It is believed that the test was initially formalized in the 1600s, though there is variation in the literature as to who it is ascribed (25). Whilst some papers identify the first to use the test as German doctor Johannes Schreyer in 1681 (10, 26), others recognize Dutch scientist Jan Swammerdam in 1667 (25).

The test is based on the premise that if an infant has breathed then the lungs will be inflated. Hence, if the lungs float when placed in water, this indicates that they are inflated and the infant had breathed and was

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion born alive. If the lungs sink when placed in water, the lungs are not inflated and the infant had not breathed and was stillborn.

Over time there have been innumerable variations to the procedure for performing the lung flotation test (25) including: variations in the temperature of the water used for flotation; flotation of the entire thoracic block, individual lungs, individual lung lobes, and/or pieces of lung; flotation of a piece of liver to assess for gaseous decomposition, where if the liver floats, the lung flotation test is considered inconclusive (27); flotation of the stomach and intestines to demonstrate air in the gastrointestinal tract attributed to swallowing, though it has since been recognized that air in the gastrointestinal tract can also be artefactual due to resuscitation or gaseous decomposition (6, 7, 28); and ligation of airways and/or pulmonary vessels prior to flotation (19, 20, 25, 26).

The test has received much attention in the literature with many papers proffering an opinion as to its validity. Whilst initially there was a great emphasis on the lung flotation test in determining live birth, the test received much scrutiny in Germany and France at the turn of 20th century after a finding that the lungs of an infant known to be live born sank (10). Around the same time, it became evident that a false positive flotation test could occur in the context of gas production due to postmortem decomposition. This potential for false positive results in the context of gaseous decomposition is now well recognized and pathologists are cautioned to interpret the result in the context of the history and postmortem change (1, 2, 7, 20). The potential for false negative results was highlighted in a prospective study of hospital births where Große Ostendorf et al. found the lung flotation test to be negative in four of 14 live born infants. This was postulated to be due to prematurity and/or significant illness in these cases (26).

Knight concludes that:

> The test is of limited value, whatever modifications are made and it can at best be a suggestive pointer, but never a definitive test in itself (1).

When performed, the limitations of the test should be acknowledged.

Lung Histology

The implementation of microscopic examination of the lungs to assist in determining live birth came into popularity in the mid 1900s. It was purported that aeration of the alveoli was indicative of live birth, whilst uniformly unaerated alveoli was indicative of stillbirth. However, this notion has since received criticism due to the finding of atelectasis in the lungs of infants known to have been born alive and apparently aerated alveoli in infants known the have been stillborn. According to some studies, the histological appearance of the alveoli is more indicative of fetal maturity than the presence of respiration (15, 29).

There is also the potential for artefactual appearances within the lungs at histological examination. Not only are there the usual complicating factors of decomposition and resuscitation that have potential to alter the histological appearances, changes may also be attributed to handling at postmortem examination. It has been postulated that the process of evisceration can potentially introduce air into the lungs and that handling of the tissue during morphological examination of the parenchyma and/or during the implementation of special techniques has the potential to cause artefactual collapse of alveoli.

There is disagreement surrounding the utility of assessment of the histological expansion of the lungs within the literature, with differing opinions as to the merit of this finding. Some maintain that evidence of lung aeration under the microscope, in the absence of resuscitation or decomposition, is indicative of live birth and that uniformly unaerated lungs equate to stillbirth. Others attest to uniformly expanded lungs being indicative of respiration or resuscitation, whilst the finding of partially expanded lungs is equivocal (6). There is a further opinion that whilst the assessment may be helpful, it should not be used as definitive evidence of live birth (16, 19, 29, 30). Di Maio states that "Microscopic sections of the lung are of no help in determining if a child breathed", citing cases

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion of diffuse atelectasis in infants known to be born alive and open alveoli in infants known to be stillborn (2).

Another finding in lung histology that has been utilized in assessing for signs of live birth is that of pulmonary interstitial emphysema (PIE). Pulmonary interstitial emphysema is a condition where there is accumulation of gas forming pleural blebs and pneumothoraces secondary to alveolar wall rupture and tracking of air in interlobular pulmonary vascular sheaths. It can be seen in premature infants receiving mechanical ventilation and has also been associated with congenital cystic lesions, severe pulmonary infections, and resuscitation (19). It has been postulated by Lavezzi et al. that PIE may be indicative of live birth. In a study of 87 infants (66 live born and 21 stillborn), they were able to demonstrate florid PIE in 16 live born infants, however 12 of these received cardiopulmonary resuscitation and/or mechanical ventilation. None of the stillborn infants showed florid PIE, but "equivocal" PIE was demonstrated in infants from both groups (28, 31). Although this study outlines a promising finding, the utility of PIE in determining live birth is not yet established. There are also likely to be similar caveats to its interpretation in the context of gaseous decomposition and resuscitation.

Postmortem Imaging

The utility of postmortem imaging in pediatric forensic death investigation is widely acknowledged, with the major advantage being that it can occur prior to commencing conventional autopsy without disruption to the body. Radiographic images are usually reported by a pediatric radiologist and the report made available to the pathologist prior to the commencement of invasive autopsy (16). With the widespread utilization of advanced imaging techniques, including computed tomography (CT) and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), some centers now offer "virtual autopsy" services for investigation of hospital perinatal deaths. In light of this, many hospital pediatric radiologists have increasing experience in reporting postmortem imaging of stillborn infants. With this expansion of postmortem imaging knowledge, the applicability of advanced imaging techniques to the forensic setting is beginning to be realized. Many forensic centers now have access to a CT scanner, whilst some have access to an MRI scanner. In these jurisdictions, the implementation of advanced imaging in forensic cases, in particular pediatric and neonatal cases, has shown promising results.

Plain Film

In many forensic mortuaries, plain film remains the only imaging modality available and skeletal surveys are performed in these cases. Radiographs can show aeration of the lungs and the presence of gas in the stomach prior to autopsy and, when used in conjunction with postmortem examination, have been shown to correlate with the pathologist's findings at postmortem. These findings can be used in combination to favor live birth (6, 12).

Postmortem Computed Tomography (PMCT)

More recently, the implementation of PMCT imaging has been used to detect the presence of gas in the infant. It is superior to plain radiographs in determining the distribution pattern of air in the lungs, gastrointestinal tract, and liver and has been shown to have good agreement with the lung flotation test (20, 27, 32). Gas in the stomach and upper gastrointestinal tract along with uniform gas distribution within the lungs on three-dimensional reconstruction of PMCT provides convincing evidence that a neonate has breathed naturally prior to demise and was, therefore, live born (20). The extent of aeration of peripheral alveoli is easily observable on PMCT, making this a useful tool for the possible differentiation between artificially and naturally aerated lungs.

Guddat et al. demonstrated visualization of completely aerated lungs on PMCT in a one-day-old infant and in two cases of suspected neonaticide where live birth was confirmed (independently of the medicolegal investigation), showing that PMCT can be used as an adjunct to determine live birth in neonates (20).

In a study of seven infants (three live births, one stillbirth with unsuccessful cardiopulmonary resuscita-

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

tion, one spontaneous abortion, two intrauterine fetuses), Michiue et al. found that live born infants who died in the early neonatal period had poor aeration of the lungs (32). In one case, this was attributed to congestion/edema due to a congenital heart anomaly and in another to diffuse atelectasis due to respiratory distress. The stillborn infant that received artificial ventilation showed uneven lung gas distribution with markedly different lung volumes, uneven alveolar expansions, and a large amount of gastrointestinal gas (See Images 2A-2D) (32).

The limitations of PMCT imaging are similar to those of other techniques with the presence of decomposition gas potentially obscuring findings. With increased experience in interpreting PMCT images, the progression of decomposition gas is now understood to have an unpredictable time course dependent on characteristics in the body and the environment. It usually commences in the intestines and portal vasculature of the liver, before progressing to involve all vasculature, structures, and anatomic spaces (33). Hence, PMCT findings can be interpreted in the context of these changes. Assessment of the extent of decomposition on PMCT can also be used to assist in determining the validity of other results that are known to be affected by gaseous decomposition, for example the lung flotation test.

Postmortem Magnetic Resonance Imaging (PMMRI)

The majority of the literature on PMMRI of the fetus is focused on its use as a technique for the replacement of invasive autopsy in the face of declining perinatal autopsy numbers. In these studies, its utility in detecting major pathological abnormalities and determining cause of death in hospital perinatal deaths has been demonstrated. It has shown particular use in evaluating abnormalities of the central nervous system but is of limited use in complex cardiac malformation (34-36).

To date, there is sparse literature on the use of PMMRI for the determination of live birth. In 2015, Barber et al. published a retrospective case series using PMMRI to look at the aeration of lungs in 42 infant deaths (19 live births and 23 stillbirths) and found 17 true positive and 22 true negative results. The single false positive result was in an infant where it was unclear whether resuscitation had been administered, highlighting a widely recognized limitation when assessing aeration of the lungs. There were two false negative results in which there was documented spontaneous breathing in the neonate but no gas in the lung parenchyma on PMMRI (37). Although further studies are required to validate these findings, the paper suggests promise for the future of PMMRI in assisting to determine whether an infant was born alive.

Postmortem Imaging Summary

There are inherent advantages of imaging in that it is rapid, noninvasive, and forms a permanent record which can be reviewed long after the body has been buried or cremated. In light of the sensitivity of this forensic question and the promising results of both PMCT and PMMRI in determining aeration of the lungs, accessing advanced imaging techniques whenever possible can augment the investigation and assist the pathologist in forming an opinion as to live birth.

Healing of the Umbilical Cord Stump

Morphological examination of the umbilical cord stump is undertaken to assess for signs of a vital reaction, which are considered to indicate a period of survival. The umbilical cord stump undergoes a series of changes in the first days of life with formation of a reddened ring at the base of the cord, followed by drying, shrivelling, and eventually detachment of the stump after several days. The earliest macroscopic signs of a vital reaction are generally visible at 24-48 hours of life with early changes of separation, reddening, and desiccation.

Histological sections of the umbilical stump can be taken to assess for microscopic evidence of a vital reaction. The presence of inflammatory infiltrates has been described as early as three hours postpartum in infants that were live born (38). Janssen reported that two to three polymorphonuclear leucocytes per intermediate magnification represent evidence of a vital

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

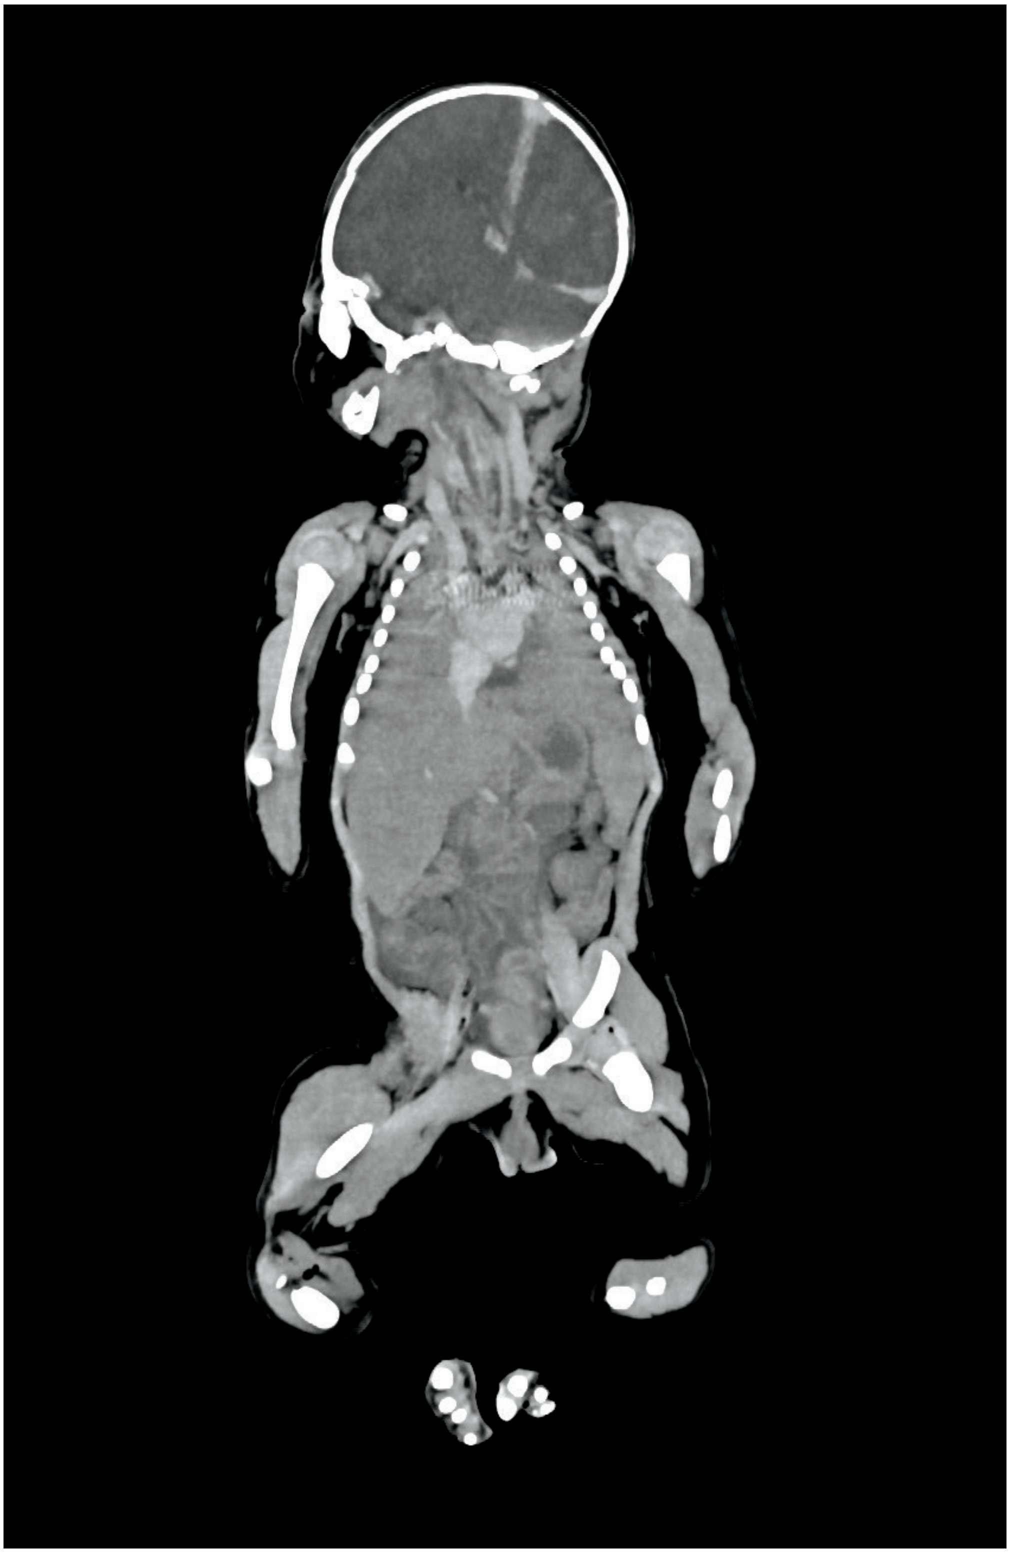

Image 2A: Postmortem computed tomography image of unaerated/radioopaque lungs from an infant with no signs of life after delivery.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

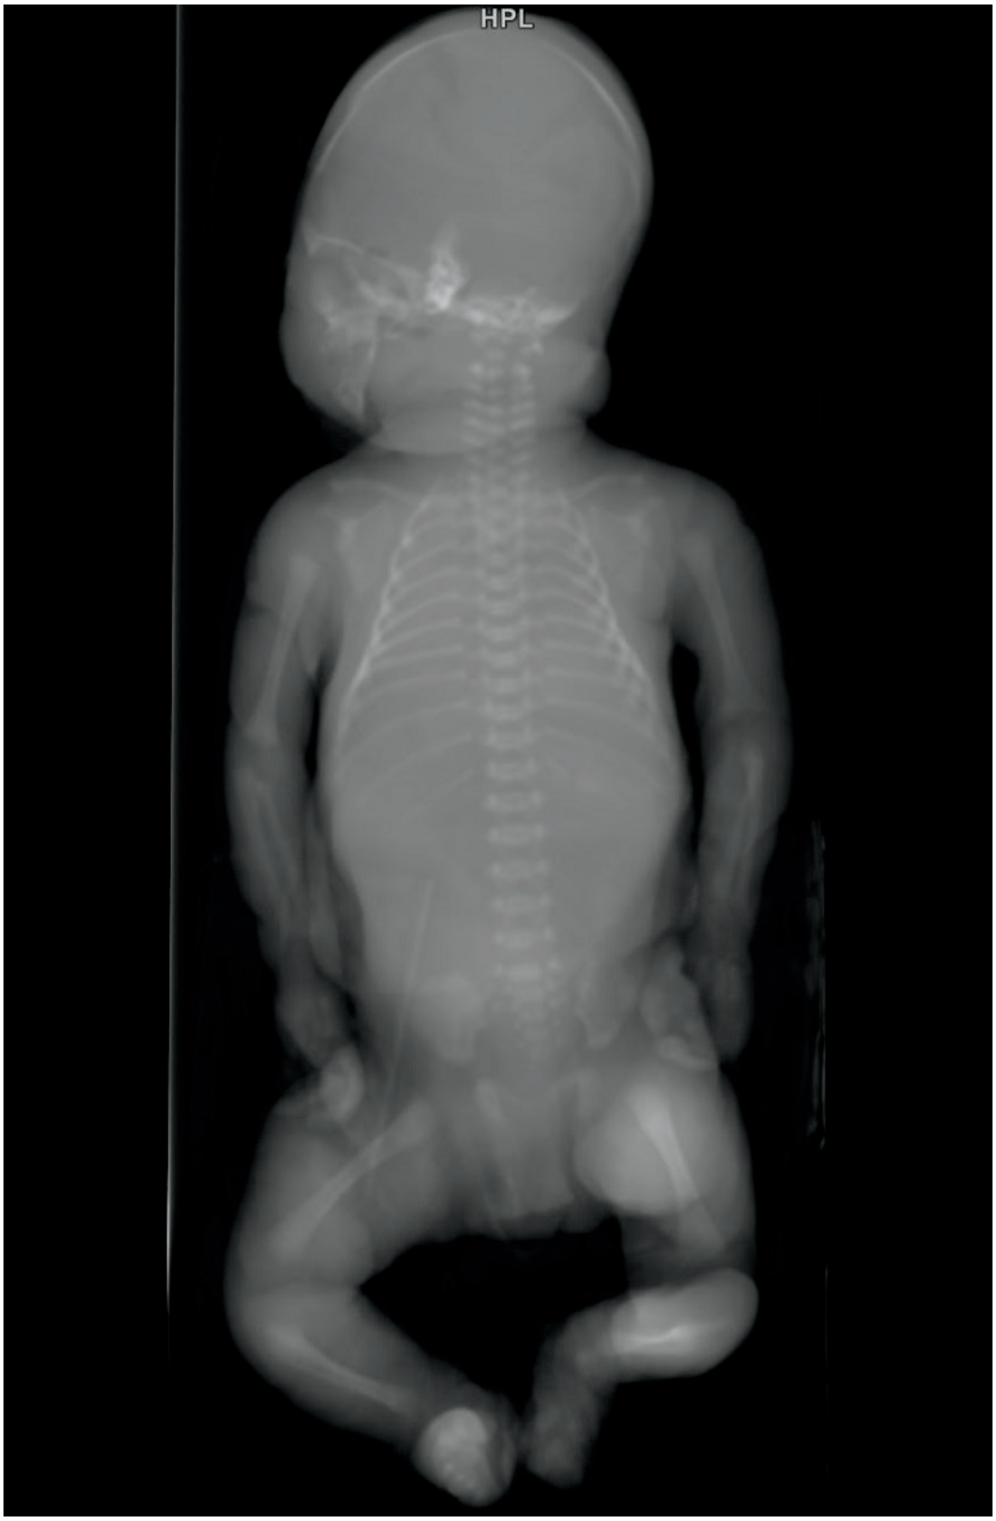

Image 2B: Coronal average intensity projection postmortem computed tomography image of unaerated/radioopaque lungs from an infant with no signs of life after delivery.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

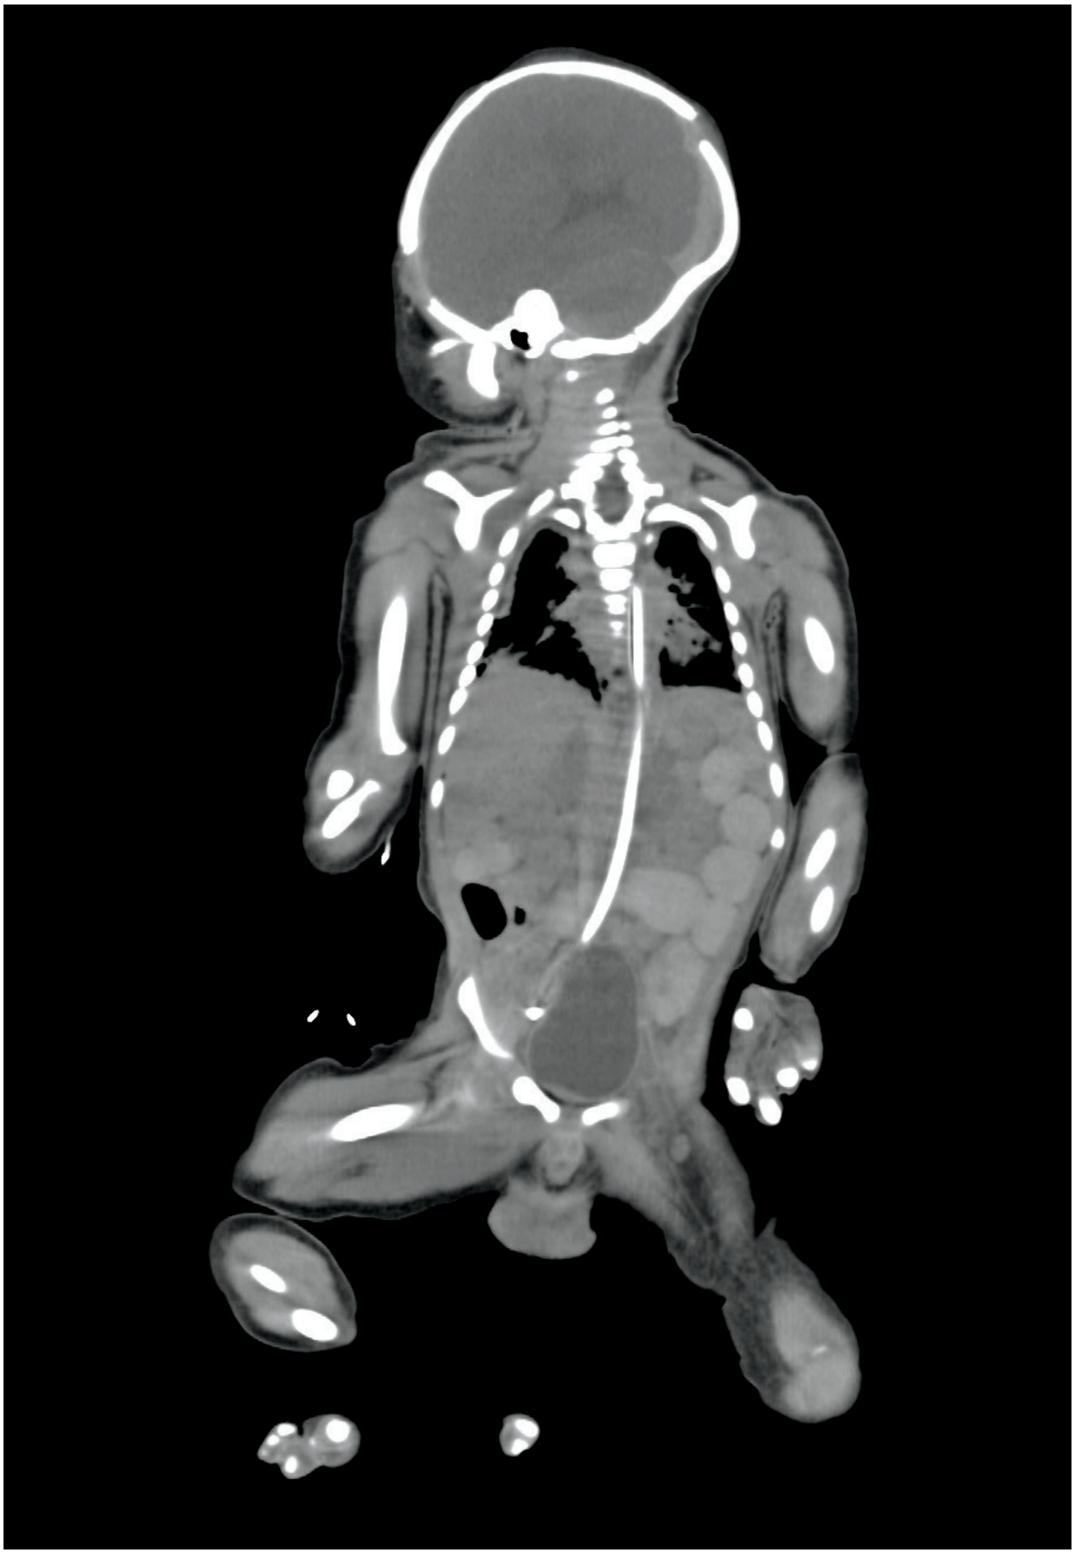

Image 2C: Postmortem computed tomography image of aerated lungs from a 1-day-old infant.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

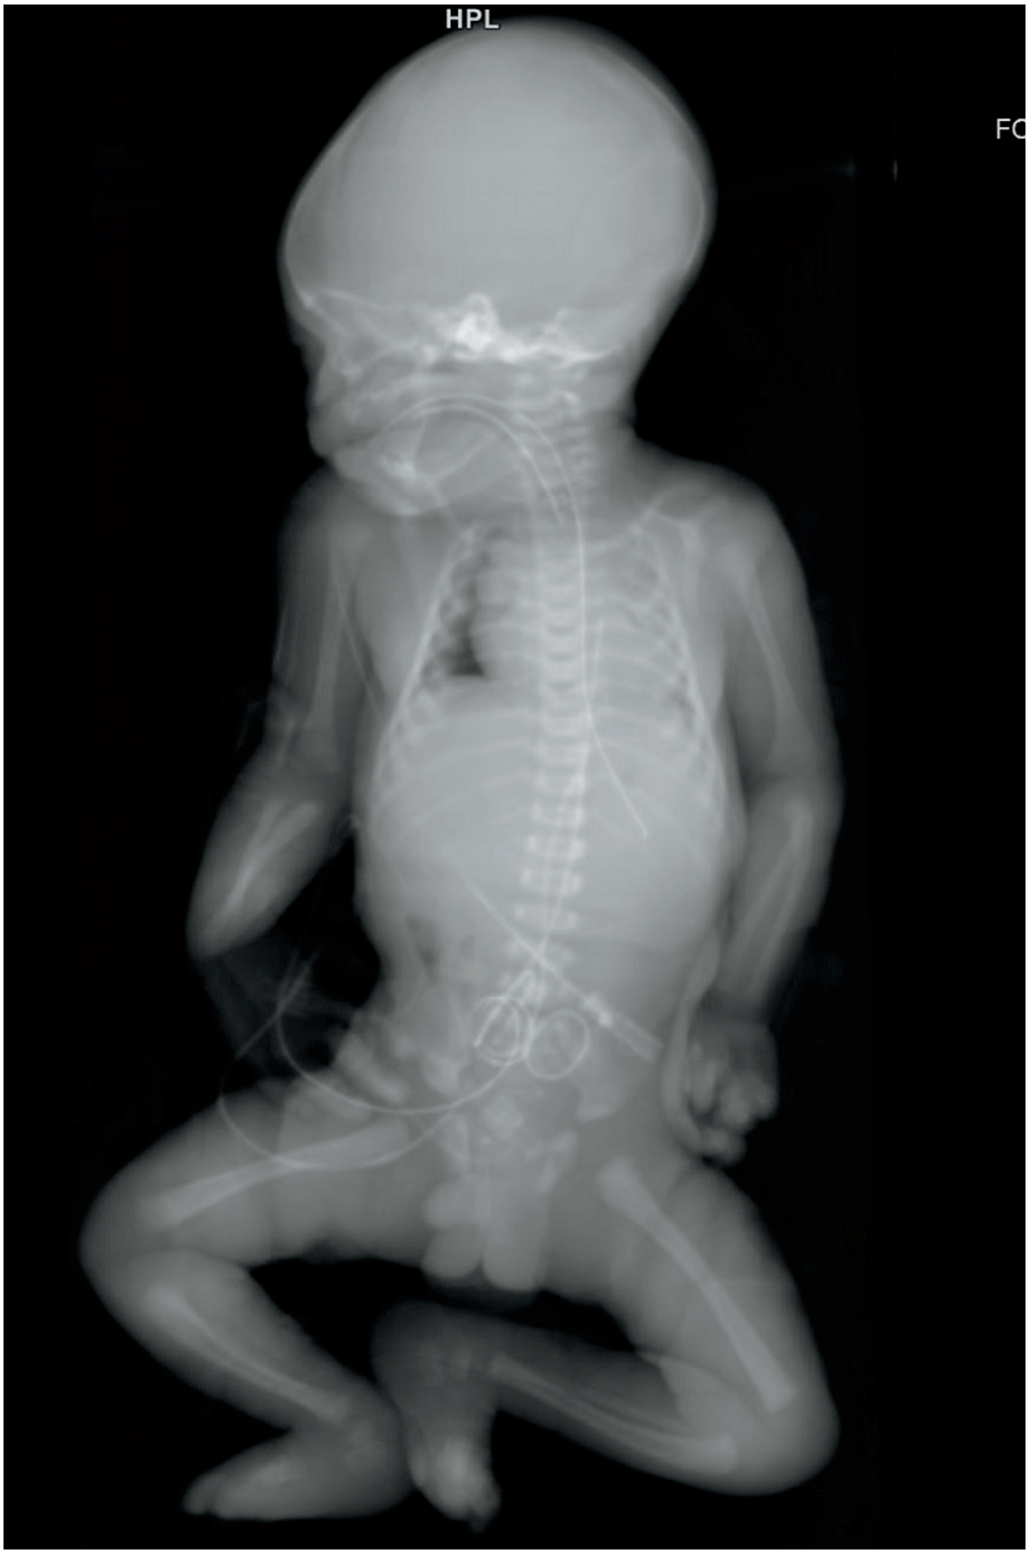

Image 2D: Coronal average intensity projection postmortem computed tomography image of aerated lungs from a 1-day-old infant.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion reaction, however cautions that this finding should not be taken in isolation, citing reports of post-mature stillborn infants showing umbilical inflammatory reactions (19). Adelson considers the presence of a vital reaction in the umbilical cord stump to be one of the irrefutable criteria of postnatal survival (39), but in light of Janssen's findings, a more conservative approach is advised, particularly in the context of postmortem artifact such as decomposition, where assessment for the signs of maceration is hindered.

A finding more definitive for live birth is the presence of thrombosis within the umbilical cord vasculature, particularly when there are features of organization. The absence of thrombosis, though, cannot be inferred to indicate stillbirth (19).

More recently, studies looking at immunohistochemical (IHC) staining patterns of the umbilical cord have shown promising results in differentiating live born from stillborn infants (1, 6). In a study of 45 umbilical cords comprising 24 stillborn (14 died in utero, ten during labor) and 21 live born infant umbilical cords sampled during delivery, Neri et al. showed statistically significant IHC staining for tryptase, CD68, and α_1-antichymotrypsin with widespread expression in the cords of live born infants (23). This technique shows great promise in identifying live born infants, however additional studies are required to validate these results in umbilical cord stumps at the interface between the cord and the fetal skin. Whilst most forensic pathology histology laboratories are unlikely to have these IHC stains, gaining limited access to them from other laboratories may prove useful in these contentious cases.

Findings that Prove Live Birth

Although it is arguably not possible to "prove" live birth without witnessing signs of life, there are a few postmortem findings that leave little doubt that an infant was born alive.

Food in the Stomach

Food in the stomach is widely considered unequivocal evidence that an infant was born alive and survived for a period of time. The consumption of food is an active process requiring the infant to suck, hence the finding of food in the stomach or anywhere along the gastrointestinal tract is considered a definitive finding.

Unfortunately, in most cases of neonaticide, the death is thought to occur within hours of birth and the finding of food in the stomach is rarely present. However, these cases present little problem for the pathologist.

Pathological Conditions That Indicate a Period of Survival

The presence of pathological conditions in the neonate that only occur after birth indicate a definite period of survival. For example, starch particles or other food material in the lungs is indicative of vital perimortem aspiration and is considered evidence that an infant was born alive (19). Also, hyaline membrane disease has only been observed in the lungs of infants born alive. Pulmonary hyaline membranes are membranous linings of the alveolar spaces which cause respiratory distress. They require respiration to form and are considered evidence that the infant has lived (See Table 2) (6, 19).

Table 2: Classification of Postmortem Findings Used to Determine Live Birth

Findings That Preclude Live Birth	Findings That Indicate Potential Birth Complications	Findings That Indicate Possible Live Birth	Findings That Prove Live Birth
Maceration	Signs of intrauterine fetal pathology	Surrogate markers of breathing	Food in the stomach
Gestational age incompatible with extrauterine life	Signs of birth trauma	Healing of the umbilical cord stump	Pathological conditions that indicate a period of survival
Lethal malformations	Risk factors for stillbirth

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

CONCLUSION

The postmortem examination in suspected cases of neonaticide is complicated by the unique question "Was the infant born alive?" that must be answered to successfully prosecute these cases. There are a plethora of observations, dissections, special techniques, and ancillary tests that have been implemented in attempts to definitively answer this question. The classification of these findings into the broad groupings: findings that preclude live birth, findings that indicate potential birth complications, findings that indicate possible live birth, and findings that prove live birth, can be used to highlight the differing underlying rationale used when applying these findings and their potential utility. Findings that "preclude" or "prove" live birth are of greatest utility in forming an opinion as to live birth in cases where they are present. Whereas, findings indicating "potential birth complications" or "possible live birth" are considered less definitive and should be considered in conjunction with other findings in the context of the case when forming an opinion.

In a large proportion of cases, the neonate is discovered in a concealed location in unclear circumstances with varying degrees of postmortem change that hinder the assessment. Changes of decomposition are a major stumbling block when attempting to assess a neonate for evidence of being born alive. Throughout the literature, much emphasis is placed on answering the question "Has the child breathed?" using aeration of the lungs as a surrogate marker for being born alive. It is now widely accepted that resuscitation efforts and decomposition effect aeration of the lungs and, hence, the interpretation and validity of tests that utilize this as a surrogate marker of live birth. In light of these limitations, arguably too much emphasis is placed on the aeration of the lungs in forming an opinion as to live birth.

This review highlights the promising utility of advanced imaging techniques in the assessment of live birth using the distribution of air in the lungs in conjunction with assessment of gaseous decomposition. Additional studies will increase our understanding of the validity of these images in a range of circumstances. The lung flotation test, despite its controversies, has been repeatedly shown to be of use if the limitations are observed. When used in conjunction with postmortem imaging, these results give a complimentary understanding.

The other promising area of assessment is histology of the umbilical cord, with the use of IHC staining to differentiate live born from stillborn infants. Further work in this area will assist in establishing the utility of tryptase, CD68, and α_1-antichymotrypsin IHC in determining live birth.

The low incidence and small number of these cases in any given jurisdiction is a barrier to the pathologist's exposure to and experience in assessing these cases. Many of the more recent studies have used nonforensic pediatric cases from hospital perinatal postmortem cases where there is a medically documented history to validate findings. This approach is considered necessary to obtain robust data that can be extrapolated to use in forensic cases where the circumstances and history are unclear. However, one limitation of this is that these cases do not have features of decomposition which usually complicate the assessment in the forensic setting.

Overall, "Was the infant born alive?" remains a difficult forensic question to be approached with great caution. Other than a witness to live birth, there is no single test that can reliably determine whether an infant was live born and a number of findings are often combined to assist in forming an opinion. The usual processes of thorough documentation and peer review are pertinent in these cases; however, retrospective determination that an infant was born alive, based solely on autopsy findings, is a difficult task and in many cases the question of live birth simply cannot be answered definitively. In these cases, stillbirth should be assumed (6, 38). A false positive result is of the most significant concern due the legal implications of an incorrect determination of live birth possibly resulting in wrongful conviction.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International
Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber
This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We would like to thank Dr. Trevor Watkins for his assistance with the preparation of PMCT images for this review.

REFERENCES

1) Saukko P, Knight B. Knights forensic pathology. 4th ed. Boca Raton: CRC Press; 2016. 666 p.
2) DiMaio, V.J.M. and D.S. E, Handbook of Forensic Pathology. 2nd ed. Boca Raton: CRC Press; 207. 326 p.
3) Coroners Act 2003 [Internet]. Brisbane: State of Queensland; 2017 Jun 30 [cited 2018 Aug 31]. 142 p. Available from: https://www.legislation.qld.gov.au/view/pdf/inforce/current/act-2003-013.
4) World Health Organisation: Health statistics and information systems [Internet]. Geneva: World Health Organisation; c2018. Maternal mortality ratio (per 100 000 live births); [cited 2018 Aug 6]. Available from: http://www.who.int/healthinfo/statistics/indmaternalmortality/en/.
5) Herman-Giddens ME, Smith JB, Mittal M, et al., Newborns killed or left to die by a parent: a population-based study. JAMA. 2003 Mar 19; 289(11):1425-9. PMID: 12636466.
6) Byard RW. Sudden death in the young. 3rd ed. New York: Cambridge University Press; 2010. 700 p.
7) Kellett RJ. Infanticide and child destruction--the historical, legal and pathological aspects. Forensic Sci Int. 1992 Feb; 53(1):1-28. PMID: 1568678. https://doi.org/10.1016/0379-0738(92)90129-k.
8) Baber Y, Iles L, O'Donnell C. Determining live birth: an unusual case. Am J Forensic Med Pathol. 2015 Dec; 36(4):262-4. PMID: 26355851. https://doi.org/10.1097/PAF.0000000000000198.
9) Sieswerda-Hoogendoorn T, Soerdjbalie-Maikoe V, Maes A, van Rijn RR. The value of post-mortem CT in neonaticide in case of severe decomposition: description of 12 cases. Forensic Sci Int. 2013 Dec 10; 233(1-3):298-303. PMID: 24314533. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.forsciint.2013.09.023.
10) Alfsen GC, Ellingsen CL, Hernæs L. The child has lived and breathed. Forensic examinations of newborns 1910-1912. Tidsskr Nor Laegeforen. 2013 Dec 10; 133(23-24):2498-501. English, Norwegian. PMID: 24326503. https://doi.org/10.4045/tidsskr.13.0898.
11) Schulte B, Rothschild MA, Vennemann M, Banaschak S. Examination of (suspected) neonaticides in Germany: a critical report on a comparative study. Int J Legal Med. 2013 May; 127(3):621-5. PMID: 23471590. https://doi.org/10.1007/s00414-013-0841-8.
12) Hirvonen J, Tiisala R, Uotila U, et al. Roentgenological and autopsy studies on the gas content of the lungs and gastro-intestinal tract in living and stillborn infants, and sources of error in resuscitation. Dtsch Z Gesamte Gerichtl Med. 1969; 65(2):73-86. PMID: 4895181. https://doi.org/10.1007/bf00583966.
13) Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act 2003 [Internet]. Brisbane: State of Queensland; 2017 Jul 1 [cited 2018 Aug 31]. 84 p. Available from: https://www.legislation.qld.gov.au/view/pdf/2017-07-01/act-2003-031.
14) Queensland clinical guidelines: perinatal care at the threshold of viability [Internet]. Herston (QLD): State of Queensland (Queensland Health) 2014 Sep [cited 2018 Aug 31]. Available from: https://www.health.qld.gov.au/__data/assets/pdf_file/0023/142259/g-viability.pdf.
15) Gilbert-Barness E, Kapur R, Oligny LL, Siebert J. Potter's pathology of the fetus, infant and child. 2nd ed. Vol. 1. Philadelphia: Mosby; 2007. 2320 p.
16) Kiho L, Malcomson RDG. Keeling's fetal and neonatal pathology. New York: Springer International; c2015. Chapter 34, Forensic aspects of perinatal Pathology; p. 863-73.
17) Dorovini-Zis K, Dolman CL. Gestational development of brain. Arch Pathol Lab Med. 1977 Apr; 101(4):192-5. PMID: 576786.
18) Becker MJ, Becker AE. Pathology of late fetal stillbirth. Edinburgh: Churchill Livingstone; 1989. 150 p.
19) Janssen W. Forensic histopathology. Berlin: Springer-Verlag; 1984. 402 p.
20) Guddat SS, Gapert R, Tsokos M, Oesterhelweg L. Proof of live birth using postmortem multislice computed tomography (pmMSCT) in cases of suspected neonaticide: advantages of diagnostic imaging compared to conventional autopsy. Forensic Sci Med Pathol. 2013 Mar; 9(1):3-12. PMID: 22760696. https://doi.org/10.1007/s12024-012-9361-y.
21) World Health Organization [Internet]. Geneva: World Health Organization; c2018. The neglected tragedy of stillbirths; 2016 Jan 20 [cited 2018 Aug 31]. Available from: http://www.who.int/reproductivehealth/topics/maternal_perinatal/stillbirth/Lancet-series/en/.
22) Queensland clinical guidelines: stillbirth care [Internet]. Herston (QLD): State of Queensland (Queensland Health) 2018 Mar [cited 2018 Aug 31]. Available from: https://www.health.qld.gov.au/__data/assets/pdf_file/0023/143087/g-stillbirth.pdf.
23) Neri M, D'Errico S, Fiore C, et al. Stillborn or liveborn? Comparing umbilical cord immunohistochemical expression of vitality markers (tryptase, alpha(1)-antichymotrypsin and CD68) by quantitative analysis and confocal laser scanning microscopy. Pathol Res Pract. 2009; 205(8):534-41. PMID: 19250758. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.prp.2009.01.011.
24) Tabata N, Morita M, Azumi J. A frozen newborn infant: froth in the air passage after thawing. Forensic Sci Int. 2000 Jan 24; 108(1):67-74. PMID: 10697781. https://doi.org/10.1016/s0379-0738(99)00199-1.
25) Milroy, C. Neonatal deaths, infanticide, and the hydrostatic (floatation) test: historical perspectives. Acad Forensic Pathol. 2012 Dec; 2(4):338-45. https://doi.org/10.23907/2012.052.
26) Große Ostendorf AL1, Rothschild MA, Müller AM, Banaschak S. Is the lung floating test a valuable tool or obsolete? A prospective autopsy study. Int J Legal Med. 2013 Mar; 127(2):447-51. PMID: 22733108. https://doi.org/10.1007/s00414-012-0727-1.
27) Mazuchowski EL, Franco DM, Berran PJ, Harcke HT. The virtual hydrostatic test. Am J Forensic Med Pathol. 2017 Mar; 38(1):24-8. PMID: 28005583. https://doi.org/10.1097/PAF.0000000000000287.
28) Lavezzi WA, Keough KM, Der'Ohannesian P, et al. The use of pulmonary interstitial emphysema as an indicator of live birth. Am J Forensic Med Pathol. 2003 Mar; 24(1):87-91. PMID: 12605006. https://doi.org/10.1097/01.PAF.0000052108.20359.C8.
29) Kuroda S, Nagamori H, Ebe M, Sasaki M. Medico-legal studies on the fetus and infant: with special references to histological characteristics of the lungs of liveborn and stillborn infants. Tohoku J Exp Med. 1965 Feb 25; 85(1):40-54. PMID: 14285067. https://doi.org/10.1620/tjem.85.40.
30) Spitz, W.U., Spitz and Fisher's medicolegal investigation of death. 4th ed. Springfield (IL): Charles C Thomas; 2006. 1325 p.
31) Lavezzi WA, McKenna BJ, Wolf BC. The significance of pulmonary interstitial emphysema in live birth determination. J Forensic Sci. 2004 May; 49(3):546-52. PMID: 15171175. https://doi.org/10.1520/jfs2003174.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International

Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber

This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

32) Michiue T, Ishikawa T, Kawamoto O, et al. Postmortem CT investigation of air/gas distribution in the lungs and gastrointestinal tracts of newborn infants: a serial case study with regard to still- and live birth. Forensic Sci Int. 2013 Mar 10; 226(1-3):74-80. PMID: 23290297. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.forsciint.2012.12.011.

33) Thali MJ, Viner MD, Brogdon BG. Brogdon's forensic radiology. Boca Raton: CRC Press; 2011. 654 p.

34) Whitby EH, Paley MN, Cohen M, Griffiths PD. Postmortem MR imaging of the fetus: an adjunct or a replacement for conventional autopsy? Semin Fetal Neonatal Med. 2005 Oct; 10(5):475-83. PMID: 15985391. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.siny.2005.05.006.

35) Thayyil S, Sebire NJ, Chitty LS, et al. Post mortem magnetic resonance imaging in the fetus, infant and child: a comparative study with conventional autopsy (MaRIAS Protocol). BMC Pediatr. 2011 Dec 22; 11:120. PMID: 22192497. PMCID: PMC3259035. https://doi.org/10.1186/1471-2431-11-120.

36) Huisman TA. Magnetic resonance imaging: an alternative to autopsy in neonatal death? Semin Neonatol. 2004 Aug; 9(4):347-53. PMID: 15251150. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.siny.2003.09.004.

37) Barber JL, Sebire NJ, Chitty LS, et al. Lung aeration on postmortem magnetic resonance imaging is a useful marker of live birth versus stillbirth. Int J Legal Med. 2015 May; 129(3):531-6. PMID: 25476541. PMCID: PMC4412725. https://doi.org/10.1007/s00414-014-1125-7.

38) Ong BB,Green M. Infanticide in Malaysia: two case reports and a review of literature. Am J Forensic Med Pathol. 2003 Mar; 24(1):64-9. PMID: 12605001. https://doi.org/10.1097/01.PAF.0000052750.29593.1D.

39) Adelson L. The pathology of homicide. Springfield (IL): Charles C Thomas; 1974. 976 p.

©2018 Academic Forensic Pathology International

Downloaded from www.afpjournal.com by an AFP Journal subscriber

This article is for personal use only and may not be shared or distributed in any fashion

World Health Organization
Technical Report Series
No. 25

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Report on the Second Session

Geneva, 18-21 April 1950

Page

1. Reports of subcommittees 3
2. Medical certification and classification of causes of death . 6
3. Morbidity statistics 7
4. National committees on vital and health statistics 7

Annex 1. Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion : report on the first session 9
Annex 2. Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation : report on the first session 17
Annex 3. Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics : report on the first session 29

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
PALAIS DES NATIONS
GENEVA

OCTOBER 1950

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Second Session

Members :

Dr D. Curiel, Chief, Division of Epidemiology and Vital Statistics, Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, Caracas, Venezuela

Dr P. F. Denoix, Chef des Services techniques et de la Section du Cancer, Institut national d'Hygiène, Paris, France

Dr H. L. Dunn, Chief, National Office of Vital Statistics (US Public Health Service), Washington, D.C., USA

*Dr M. Kacprzak, Professor of Hygiene, Director, State School of Hygiene, Warsaw, Poland

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom (Chairman)

Representative of the United Nations :

F. E. Linder, Chief, Population and Vital Statistics Section, Statistical Office, Lake Success, N.Y.

Observer :

Dr M. de Viado, Social Security Section, ILO

Secretariat :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO (Secretary)

Dr Marie Cakrtova, International Nomenclature of Diseases and Causes of Death Section, WHO

The report on the second session of this committee was originally issued in mimeographed form as document WHO/HS/26, 21 April 1950.

---

* Indicates member unable to attend.

World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 25

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Report on the Second Session [1]

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics held its second session in Geneva from 18 to 21 April 1950.

In the absence of Dr Kacprzak, Dr P. Stocks was elected Chairman of the session.

1. Reports of Subcommittees

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics reviewed the work of its three subcommittees :

Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, which held its first session in Paris from 27 February to 3 March 1950 ;

Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation, which held its first session in Paris from 6 to 10 March 1950 ;

Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics, which held its first session in Geneva from 11 to 14 April 1950.

The reports of these subcommittees were adopted by the committee with minor amendments and some comments, and are annexed to this report.[2]

The committee adopted the following resolution :

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS

1. that these reports be published and, in addition to routine distribution, be made available to the national committees on vital and

---

[1] The Executive Board, at its sixth session, adopted the following resolution :

The Executive Board

1. NOTES the report of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics on its second session, and

2. AUTHORIZES its publication.

(Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 29)

[2] See Annexes 1, 2, and 3, pages 9, 17, and 29.

health statistics (or their equivalents), and to other organizations and persons having an interest in the subject matter contained in them;

2. that the World Health Assembly adopt sections 1, 2, and 3, dealing with the definition of " live birth ", " foetal death ", and the " registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths ", from the report of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, and section 1.1, dealing with the statistical definition of " cancer ", from the report of the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation; [3]

3. that all other pertinent recommendations contained in the reports of these three subcommittees be submitted by WHO to the various nations for study and experimental use, with the aim of facilitating in the future an international review of the proposed procedures in the light of experience gained;

4. that the following problems be suggested for study to national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents): [4]

   (1) in the field of statistics of infant and foetal deaths (Annex 1, section 9)

      (a) special studies on live births and foetal deaths in relation to various factors (gestation period, birth-weight, single or multiple birth, etc.), to obtain a statistical basis for a satisfactory definition of immaturity

      (b) classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated

---

[3] The Third World Health Assembly adopted the following resolution (WHA3.6):

The Third World Health Assembly . . .

3. ADOPTS, as recommendations under Article 23 of the Constitution and Article 17 of Regulations No. 1 of the World Health Organization, the definitions of " live birth " and " foetal death ", from sections 1 and 2 of the report of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion as well as the recommendations of that subcommittee made on " the registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths " in section 3 of its report;

4. ADOPTS also as recommendations under the said provisions of the Constitution and Regulations No. 1, the statistical definition of " cancer " given in the report of the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation;

5. REQUESTS the Director-General to give these definitions as much publicity as possible with a view to their wide acceptance;

[4] The Third World Health Assembly adopted the following resolution (WHA3.6):

The Third World Health Assembly . . .

6. AGREES to submit to the various nations for study and experimental use all the other pertinent recommendations contained in the reports of these three subcommittees and to suggest to national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalent) the studies mentioned in the said report (section 1, paragraphs 3 and 4 of resolution).

(c) magnitude of loss of foetal lives at various periods of pregnancy

(d) better utilization of records of maternity and children's hospitals for medical-statistical research into the causes of foetal and infant death

(2) in the field of cancer statistics (Annex 2)

(a) collection of information concerning difficulties arising in the application of the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death [5] in classifying neoplasms, and formulation of specific suggestions on this matter (section 1.2)

(b) study of the accuracy of diagnoses on death certificates, with particular reference to cancer (section 1.4)

(c) studies of mortality from cancer of different sites by geographical areas, and social and environmental factors (section 1.5)

(d) definitions of anatomical site and stage of the neoplasm (section 2.2)

(3) in the field of hospital statistics (Annex 3)

(a) adaptation of the International Statistical Classification to serve as an index of medical records by diagnosis (section 5 c)

(b) collection of information on the present definitions in use in hospital statistics which enter into the evaluation of hospital experiences by diagnosis (e.g., hospital, hospital bed, inpatient, outpatient, admission, discharge, patient-day, etc.) (section 4)

(c) study of methods for bridging the gap between hospital statistics, which are selective in character, and statistics which would be representative of the community from which the hospital patients are drawn (family type of survey, complete coverage of medical services, etc.) [6]

(d) study of morbidity of repeated hospitalizations (section 5 f)

(e) collection of statistics of mental disorders causing admissions to mental institutions according to various measurable factors reflecting upon etiology, and of statistics of the outcome of hospitalization (section 5 a)

(f) collection of statistics of tuberculosis patients admitted to tuberculosis sanatoria and institutions according to various measurable factors bearing upon the need for beds (section 5 b)

---

[5] Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948-49, 2 vol.

[6] For further comments of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, see Annex 3, page 31, footnote 5.

(g) collection of statistics of obstetrical admissions reflecting upon the use of hospital beds, and outpatient and domiciliary facilities for deliveries (section 5 d)

(h) development of a statistical classification of operations and of anaesthetic procedures (section 5 e)

5. that the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation and the Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics each hold a second session to consider the items still pending of their programme, utilizing as much as possible information collected by the various national committees on the problems suggested for study in hospital statistics and registration of cancer cases.

2. Medical Certification and Classification of Causes of Death

After review of the present state of the problem of medical certification and the difficulties incident to the introduction of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death (Sixth Revision) into the procedure of the various nations, the committee reaffirms the position adopted at its first session, held in Geneva from 23 to 28 May 1949,[7] and urges that the work outlined in the pertinent recommendations be considered a primary and continuing responsibility of WHO, involving not merely the prompt publication of the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death in English, French, and Spanish but also the promotion of the use of the Classification by the nations.

The committee adopted the following resolutions :

I. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS strongly an early implementation of the resolution adopted by the Second Health Assembly concerning the establishment of a clearing centre for problems arising in the application of the International Statistical Classification.[8] The clearing centre should be an integral part of the regular and continuing activities of WHO, providing also a mechanism for collecting and preserving experience and suggestions of value for subsequent revisions of the classification.

II. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS

1. that, drawing upon experiences available in some countries, WHO promote the education of physicians in the proper use of the international form of medical certificate of cause of death, by (a) preparing

---

[7] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 5

[8] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

and circulating pamphlets and manuals, and (b) developing programmes and material for teaching physicians and medical students;

2. that WHO actively promote the use of the International Statistical Classification by countries, by (a) preparing descriptive material and instruction manuals, and (b) stimulating and conducting training courses for morbidity and mortality coders within the educational and training programme of WHO.

3. Morbidity Statistics

The committee adopted the following resolution:

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics,

Considering the magnitude and complexity of statistical procedures in morbidity,

RECOMMENDS that the next session of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics be called early in 1951, to which co-opted members suitable for considering the matter of morbidity statistics should be invited, with the object of obtaining an orientation, evaluation, and selection of the projects requiring international action in this field. In preparation for this session, WHO is requested to ask national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate national and international agencies, for a report on their present and planned activities in morbidity statistics, and also for their viewpoints as to what should be undertaken by WHO and other international organizations to develop and improve morbidity statistics.

4. National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

I. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics,

Considering that, pursuant to the recommendation of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, adopted at its first session,[9] several nations have now organized national committees on vital and health statistics,

RECOMMENDS strongly an early implementation of the resolution adopted by the Second Health Assembly concerning the establishment of a focal unit for maintaining relationship with national committees (or other national equivalents).[10]

---

[9] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 3

[10] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

II. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS that WHO take steps to initiate an international conference of representatives of national committees, to be sent at the expense of their respective governments; this meeting to be held early in 1952.

Annex 1

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

Report on the First Session

Paris, 27 February - 3 March 1950

Page
1. Live birth and live born 11
2. Foetal death 12
3. Registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths 12
4. Tabulation of live births and foetal deaths 12
5. Registration of foetal deaths 14
6. Improvement of reporting of live births and foetal deaths . 14
7. Foetal death certificate 14
8. Foetal death rates 15
9. Resolutions 16

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

First Session

Members :

Dr D. Baird, Regius Professor of Midwifery, University of Aberdeen, United Kingdom (Chairman)

Dr M. A. van Bouwdijk Bastiaanse, Professor of Obstetrics and Gynaecology, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands

Dr E. F. Daily, Director, Division of Health Services, US Children's Bureau, Social Security Administration, Washington, D.C., USA (Rapporteur)

Dr L. Dérobert, Professeur agrégé à la Faculté de Médecine de l'Université de Paris, France

F. Fraser Harris, Director, Health and Welfare Division, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, Canada

Member of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Secretary :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/STDEF/9, 14 March 1950, and WHO/HS/STDEF/9 Rev. 1, 21 April 1950.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

Report on the First Session

The subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Paris from 27 February to 3 March 1950.

The subcommittee reviewed at length the present international situation concerning the great diversity of definitions of live birth and foetal deaths (abortions and stillbirths) in use in different countries, which produces so many difficulties in the international comparability of demographic data. The subcommittee recognized the great importance of setting up uniform standards in this matter which might, by gaining a wide acceptance and application, improve considerably the reliability and comparability of vital statistics in the world.

The question of prematurity (immaturity) presents complex problems because of the absence of basic national information (weight, length, and other characteristics of the immature infant by period of gestation) essential for the purpose of establishing a definition of immaturity (prematurity) likely to be widely adopted.

After studying the various aspects of these problems, the subcommittee decided to present to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics the following recommendations and views.

1. Live Birth and Live Born

The subcommittee felt that consideration should first be given to the definition of " live birth ", since it was not defined uniformly by all countries and as a result statistics directly or indirectly related to live birth were not comparable. Since the French language has no word corresponding to the English term " live birth ", the definition was made to cover both " live birth " and " live born ".

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 3

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

The following definition is recommended for consideration by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, and for adoption by the World Health Assembly:

> Live birth is the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles, whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached; each product of such a birth is considered live born.

2. Foetal Death

The subcommittee discussed the variety of definitions of stillbirth current in different parts of the world, the previous difficulties encountered when an international definition of stillbirth was proposed, and the need for data on total foetal wastage which could not be secured under any of the usual definitions of stillbirth. The subcommittee concluded that " foetal death " should be defined rather than the term " stillbirth ", and that the definition of foetal death should be the reverse of the definition of live birth.

The following definition is recommended for consideration by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, and for adoption by the World Health Assembly:

> Foetal death is death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy; the death is indicated by the fact that after such separation the foetus does not breathe or show any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles.

3. Registration and Tabulation of Live Births and Infant Deaths

All live-born infants should be registered and counted as such irrespective of the period of gestation, and if they die at any time following birth they should also be registered and counted as deaths.

4. Tabulation of Live Births and Foetal Deaths

It was believed desirable to obtain as far as possible tabulations of live births and of foetal deaths by comparable periods of gestation, and that there would be many advantages in having the reportable periods the same for all live births and foetal deaths.

The selection of the number of weeks of gestation to be included in the tabulations recommended was made after studying current data on foetal deaths and live births in various countries. Foetal deaths are now usually tabulated either after the 20th week or the 28th week of gestation. It was noted that very rarely are infants reported as being live born before the 20th week ; at 28 weeks there are, in England, approximately three times as many live births as there are foetal deaths and, judging from this experience, this appears to be about the time when the live born begin to have a fair chance of survival. From the clinical standpoint, it was felt that dividing lines at the 20th and 28th weeks could reasonably be used since clinical conditions affecting live birth and foetal death change appreciably at about these periods.

The subcommittee recommended :

(a) Tabulation of all live births, irrespective of the period of gestation, by all countries, with at least the following groups :

Less than 20 completed weeks of gestation . .	Group I
20 completed weeks of gestation but less than 28	Group II
28 completed weeks of gestation and over. . .	Group III
Gestation period not classifiable in groups I, II, and III	Group IV

(The period of gestation is measured from the beginning of the last menstruation)

(b) Tabulation of all foetal deaths is a desirable goal and should be attained as soon as possible.

(c) As a minimum all countries should register and tabulate all foetal deaths occuring after the 28th completed week of gestation.

(d) The following groups should be used in tabulations of foetal deaths :

Less than 20 completed weeks of gestation . .	Group I
20 completed weeks of gestation but less than 28	Group II
28 completed weeks of gestation and over. . .	Group III
Gestation period not classifiable in groups I, II, and III	Group IV

(The period of gestation is measured from the beginning of the last menstruation)

Foetal deaths, group I, may also be described as " early foetal deaths ".

Foetal deaths, group II, may also be described as " intermediate foetal deaths ".

Foetal deaths, group III, may also be described as " late foetal deaths ".

(e) For international statistical purposes, live births and foetal deaths should be classified into groups I, II, III, and IV as defined above.

(f) The term " abortion " as applied to a product of conception and the term " stillbirth " should be retained only if essential for internal use within a nation. The subcommittee did not attempt to define the term " abortion ".

(g) The term " stillbirth " when used in the statistics of any country should be synonymous with group III (late foetal deaths).

It was realized that the term " stillbirth " would of necessity continue to be used by many countries for some time.

(h) Publication of foetal death statistics alongside of neonatal mortality data should be encouraged to facilitate comparative studies.

5. Registration of Foetal Deaths

Both birth and death certificates should not be required for registration of any foetal death ; a single foetal death certificate should be sufficient.

6. Improvement of Reporting of Live Births and Foetal Deaths

The following steps are considered necessary to promote the reporting of all live births and foetal deaths :

(a) The importance of registration of foetal deaths and live births should be stressed to physicians, midwives, and civil registrars, and their co-operation should be sought.

(b) Laws and regulations concerning the registration of live births should be amended along the lines of section 3 in countries where such a registration depends upon the infant being still alive at the time of registration.

7. Foetal Death Certificate

The subcommittee felt that sufficient experience had not yet been gained to determine the best form for a foetal death certificate and that premature standardization might hinder rather than help the attainment of good statistics in the long run.

The subcommittee recommended that all causes shown in the certificate should be tabulated to provide guidance in subsequently designing an international standard form of certificate of foetal death.

(a) Foetal death certificates should always include at least the following data :

(i) cause of foetal death
(ii) number of weeks of gestation

(b) For those nations or States which can secure additional data on foetal deaths, whether on the registration certificate or by special study, the following information should be obtained from physicians and analysed :

A. Conditions which you believe may have contributed to the death of the foetus
1. General health of the mother ....
2. Conditions of pregnancy and labour ....
3. Conditions of foetus, placenta, and cord ....

B. Foetal autopsy performed : Yes or no ....
Causes found at autopsy ....

C. Cause of foetal death, in your opinion ....

D. Additional data :
1. Duration of pregnancy (in weeks) ....
2. Birth weight ....
3. Time of death : Before labour : Yes or no ....
During labour : Yes or no ....
Uncertain ....
4. (a) Normal labour : Yes or no ....
(b) Manipulative, instrumental, or other operative procedure for delivery

....

(Give details)

8. Foetal Death Rates

Since registration and reporting of foetal deaths will be incomplete in varying degrees in different countries and the total number of pregnancies can be only roughly estimated, it would seem advisable that "foetal death rates " for international comparison be expressed by using as the denominator the number of live births rather than the estimated total number of pregnancies or total number of births. This would not preclude the calculation of other rates for special purposes.

9. Resolutions

Resolution No. 1 : Immaturity

The subcommittee recommends to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics that national committees on vital and health statistics be urged to stimulate the special studies of live births and foetal deaths which will provide data needed to arrive at a satisfactory definition of immaturity. Such special studies will, of course, be carried out in selected areas or by sample techniques assuring adequate representativeness.

It is recommended that the inter-relation of the following factors at least be included in such studies :

(a) gestation period (last completed week measuring from the beginning of the last menstruation)

(b) birth weight (with groupings of not less than 250 g. difference, i.e., 250 to 500 g., 500 to 750 g., 750 to 1,000 g., . . . 3,000 to 3,250 g., etc.)

(c) whether single or multiple birth

(d) whether a first pregnancy or not

(e) sex

(f) race

(g) age and height of the mother

(h) social data (such as occupation of the father or head of the family, and legitimacy)

(i) if dead within one month, the number of days after birth when death occurred.

The influence of epidemic and other diseases upon the incidence of premature labour should also be studied.

Resolution No. 2

The loss of foetal lives at all periods of gestation is considered a public-health problem of great magnitude which should command the particular attention of all nations. It is recommended that the Expert Committee on Health Statistics request the several national committees on vital and health statistics to study :

(a) Suitable classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated.

(b) Magnitude of loss of foetal lives at various periods of pregnancy.

(c) Better utilization of records of maternity and children's hospitals for medical-statistical research into the causes of foetal and infant death.

Annex 2

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

Report on the First Session

Paris, 6-10 March 1950

Page

1. Mortality statistics 19
2. Morbidity statistics and cancer registration 21
3. Therapeutic statistics 23
4. Annual reports on the results of radiotherapy in cancer of the uterine cervix 27

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

First Session

Members :

Dr J. Clemmesen, Chief, Cancer Registry, Copenhagen, Denmark (Chairman)

Dr H. F. Dorn, Biometrics Section, National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health (US Public Health Service), Washington, D.C., USA (Rapporteur)

Members of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. F. Denoix, Chef des Services techniques et de la Section du Cancer, Institut national d'Hygiène, Paris, France

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Consultant :

Dr J. Heyman, Editor, Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix, Stockholm, Sweden

Secretary :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/CANC/12, 10 March 1950, and WHO/HS/CANC/12 Rev.1, 21 April 1950.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

Report on the First Session

The Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Paris from 6 to 10 March 1950.

The subcommittee reviewed the tentative agenda, and agreed to discuss the statistical problems arising in the study of cancer under the following headings in the order shown :

(1) Mortality statistics

(2) Morbidity statistics and cancer registration

(3) Therapeutic statistics

(4) Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix

1. Mortality Statistics

1.1 Statistical definition of " cancer "

It was pointed out that there was no general agreement concerning the statistical definition of " cancer " in terms of the categories appearing in the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death.[3] In previous editions of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death, Hodgkin's disease, leukaemia and aleukaemia, mycosis fungoides (nos. 201, 204, and 205 respectively of the 1948 revision), and some other numerically unimportant conditions now included in code numbers 200-205, were not classified as cancer. In order to remove any doubt concerning the statistical definition of " cancer " and, at the same time, to provide statistics comparable with those of the past, the subcommittee recommends that :

(a) Total cancer deaths should be based upon nos. 140-205 of the International Statistical Classification (1948).

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 4

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

[3] See Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948, 1.

(b) For comparability with the past, the following subgroups should also be shown :

(i) Cancer excluding Hodgkin's disease, leukaemia and aleukaemia —nos. 140-205, except 201 and 204

(ii) Hodgkin's disease—no. 201

(iii) Leukaemia and aleukaemia—no. 204

1.2 Difficulties arising in application of section II—Neoplasms—of the International Statistical Classification (1948)

Several members of the subcommittee pointed out that, in their experience, certain problems had arisen in the use of section II—Neoplasms—of the International Statistical Classification (1948). Among these were (a) lack of sufficient detail for certain sites, (b) inclusion of secondary sites in the same subsections as primary sites, (c) presentation of statistics, when cancer appears on death certificates along with other causes, and (d) some uncertainty concerning definitions of various sites in as much as the classification of neoplasms is based on a mixture of anatomical locations and histological types.

In the discussion of these and other problems, the desirability of collecting information on the current experience of other users of the International Statistical Classification was emphasized. Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends :

that measures should be initiated for the collection, through the various national committees on vital and health statistics, or other appropriate agencies, of information concerning difficulties arising in the use of the section on Neoplasms of the International Statistical Classification (1948), together with specific suggestions for overcoming them, and that this information be referred to the subcommittee for study and recommendation.

1.3 Tabulation of multiple causes of death

The desirability of annual tabulations of multiple causes of death, especially if cancer is one of the certified causes, was discussed. Although general agreement existed on this point, it was believed that many countries would consider annual tabulation too expensive. Nevertheless, it was felt that countries which could afford to do so should be encouraged to make frequent tabulations of multiple causes of death following the form suggested in the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death. Such tabulations could be obtained from representative samples of all deaths. The subcommittee recommends :

that countries should be encouraged to prepare, annually or as frequently as possible, tabulations showing multiple causes of death.

1.4 Accuracy of diagnoses on death certificates

The subcommittee emphasized the importance of continuous efforts to evaluate and improve the accuracy of diagnoses entered upon death certificates, with particular reference to cancer; it felt that too few studies of the reliability of diagnoses on death certificates have been made in recent years. Much of the value of an international statistical classification is lost if the diagnoses as coded are unreliable. Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, be urged to study the question of the accuracy of diagnoses entered on death certificates, with particular reference to cancer, by comparing such diagnoses with the results obtained from postmortems and from other relevant sources of information.

1.5 Studies of geographical variation

The subcommittee reviewed studies which had been made in England and Wales of geographical variation in mortality from cancer of specific sites. It agreed that such studies might well reveal significant variations in mortality from cancer which could form the basis for investigations of etiological factors. Before such studies are made, variation due to differences in age composition of the various populations should be allowed for, and, if studies are made for rural and urban populations, appropriate adjustments should be made for deaths of non-residents. The subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, be encouraged to sponsor studies of geographical variations in mortality from cancer of specific sites, especially with regard to the corresponding variation of social and environmental factors, and that, if urban and rural areas are used for this purpose, definitions of rural and urban areas and the adjustments made to allow for non-residence be indicated clearly. As a basis for such studies, cancer mortality statistics should be tabulated for a series of years, showing, for States, provinces, regions, counties, or other appropriate territorial subdivisions of the nations, the number of deaths for at least each site detailed in the Intermediate List of the International Statistical Classification (1948) and in accordance with WHO Regulations No. 1, Article 6 (b).

2. Morbidity Statistics and Cancer Registration

2.1 Procedures

The subcommittee reviewed the information concerning existing projects for the study of morbidity from cancer and the establishment of cancer registration systems in various countries. It was agreed not to recommend that cancer be made a reportable disease by law.

The subcommittee considered the progress achieved in the various projects already established (a) for registration and follow-up of cancer patients at hospitals and similar institutions in Canada, England, France, and other countries, (b) for ascertainment of total cancer morbidity in selected cities and counties of the USA, and (c) for combining these two aims in Denmark, Norway, and certain areas of the USA.

Such projects were believed to be of great value (a) for improving the possibility that patients developing cancer shall in the future receive the earliest and best treatment available, (b) for increasing knowledge of cancer morbidity and of its relationship with social and environmental factors, (c) for providing indications for scientific studies on particular points of the etiology of cancer, and (d) for ascertaining the prospects of survival and apparent recovery with a view to measuring in the future the value of steps taken to secure earlier and better treatment. The subcommittee recommends:

(1) that efforts be made to determine the total incidence of cancer in populations of sample areas within several countries during a year or period of years, using for that purpose all available sources of information (e.g., doctors, pathologists, hospitals, death certificates);

(2) that cancer-registration projects aiming at ascertainment of follow-up histories of patients should be encouraged with a view to eventual inclusion in such registration systems of all persons affected by cancer, thus eliminating selective bias, so as to arrive at true morbidity, survival, and apparent-recovery rates.

2.2 Definition of anatomical site and stage

The subcommittee recognized that, in order to achieve greater precision in and to improve the comparability of studies of morbidity and of therapeutic statistics of cancer, there should be common agreement on (a) the anatomical delimitations of the sites, and (b) the definition of the stages of disease, that is, the extension of the neoplasm. Although it realized that many years might elapse before these objectives could be achieved, due to the complexity of these problems and to the absence of general agreement at the present time, nevertheless, the subcommittee considered it highly desirable that a start should be made.

Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, in consultation with cancer specialists, be requested to prepare definitions, illustrated by diagrams if possible, of (a) some or all of the principal anatomical sites affected by cancer, and (b) the stages of disease, that is, the extension of the neoplasm, and to submit these definitions to WHO for reference to the subcommittee for study and recommendation.

2.3 Code for histological type

The subcommittee noted that the US National Committee on Vital and Health Statistics was co-operating with a number of professional medical societies in the development of a standard code for histological type of neoplasms. The subcommittee expressed interest in this project, and agreed to postpone any action with reference to the development of a code of this nature until the one now being prepared in the USA could be completed and made available for study.

3. Therapeutic Statistics

The subcommittee reviewed various plans for the presentation of therapeutic statistics, and arrived at the following conclusions:

3.1 Intervals for follow-up

In view of the fact that

(a) the absence of any commonly agreed method of calculating survival and apparent-recovery ("cure") rates for cancer leads to great confusion and prevents correct comparisons of the results of different therapeutic procedures,

(b) a single fixed interval before results are recorded, five years for example, although appropriate for certain types of cancer, is not necessarily of general application for all kinds of neoplasms,

(c) after the lapse of three or four years, rates based upon the total interval for follow-up become increasingly defective owing to such factors as normal mortality and inability to keep patients under continuous observation, and

(d) an annual follow-up examination, especially in the years immediately subsequent to treatment, is in the interest of the patient,

the subcommittee recommends that survival and apparent-recovery rates should be calculated at the end of one year, two years, three years, etc., from the beginning of the observation, rates for the first five years being based on the total number of cases. For subsequent annual intervals the denominator of the rate should be the number still at risk at the beginning of that interval, cumulative rates for periods after five years being obtained by the multiplication of consecutive annual rates.

3.2 Definitions and rules

(a) The starting point of the first 12-month interval should always be specified. For the comparison of different methods of treatment, the date of first treatment for cancer may be the starting point; for the study of the efficiency of medical care or for public-health purposes the date of first diagnosis of cancer may be the starting point; for cases diagnosed in a hospital this will be considered to be the date of the visit or of the admission during which diagnosis is made.

(b) It is very important for accurate evaluation of therapeutic results to achieve a complete follow-up of all patients, and every effort should be made to trace each patient. Those who cannot be traced after each 12-month interval should be assumed, for purposes of uniformity and comparability, to have died of unknown causes during that interval.[4]

(c) All cases diagnosed as cancer, whether treated or not, should be included with the exception of patients referred for diagnosis only.

(d) It is desirable that all diagnoses be confirmed histologically, but every patient diagnosed as having cancer should be included whether or not the diagnosis has been verified histologically. For special purposes those not so verified may be studied separately.

(e) Patients should be classified according to the site of cancer originally diagnosed. If another primary cancer develops, it should be considered as an intercurrent disease.

(f) It is desirable that the condition of patients classified as alive with no evidence of the disease should be established through examination by the reporting physician or hospital.

---

[4] The Expert Committee on Health Statistics wishes to stress the fact that the only way to obtain accurate survival- and recovery-rates which will be beyond criticism is to keep the numbers of patients who are lost sight of and of patients whose condition is uncertain so small that it makes no appreciable difference what assumption is made about them. Nevertheless, since that aim often cannot be completely realized, it is important for purposes of comparability to formulate rules for dealing with the uncertain groups and to agree to use them. From the nature of the problem, it is not possible to devise rules which are perfectly satisfactory both from the theoretical and practical aspects; and the best that can be done is to suggest a formula which takes account of both aspects as far as possible, and ask that it be used for uniformity's sake even by those who may object to some detail of it.

If patients who are lost sight of could be regarded as an unbiased sample, theoretical considerations would require their omission from both numerator and denominator of the rates; but since it is known that in practice the group tends to be overloaded with patients who have died, and since such bias tends to improve the rates of survival and apparent recovery, the committee agrees, although this may introduce a slight bias in the opposite sense, that it is safer to regard all the untraced patients as dead of unknown causes at the end of the annual interval. If later any such patients are found to be alive, the annual rate should then be recalculated accordingly. This will provide a strong incentive to institutions to reduce this group to the absolute minimum by persistent and continued efforts.

(g) Patients should be classified according to their condition at the end of each reporting 12-month interval, whether or not they have been successfully treated for a recurrence.

3.3 Classification of patient's condition

For the calculation of the rates, the condition of each patient at the end of each 12-month period should be recorded and tabulated as follows:

A = number known to be alive
  A_o — with no evidence of the disease
  A_c — with cancer present
  A_x — with presence of cancer uncertain

D = number known to be dead
  D_o — with no evidence of the disease
  D_c — with cancer present
  D_x — with presence of cancer uncertain at death

L = number untraced at end of year

3.4 Definition of rates

The subcommittee recommends that the survival-rates for each of the periods considered be defined as follows:

Crude survival-rate is the number of persons known to be alive at the end of the period considered divided by the total number who were alive at the beginning of this period.

$$SR_{cru} = \frac{A}{A + D + L}$$

There are, of course, different methods of correcting the crude rate to allow for natural mortality, of which the following is one:

Corrected survival-rate is the crude rate as defined above divided by the probability of not dying within a comparable period from any cause other than cancer of the site in question, in a population having the same age distribution as the patients comprising the group. For most sites, this probability (p) does not usually differ appreciably from the probability of not dying from any cause.

$$SR_{cor} = \frac{SR_{cru}}{p}$$

Crude apparent-recovery rate in the first year from the starting point is the number of persons alive with no evidence of the disease at the end of 12 months, divided by the total number who were alive at the start.

$$RR_{cru} = \frac{A_o}{A + D + L}$$

For periods of two, three, four, or five years the denominator of the fraction is the same as that used at the end of the first year; but for annual intervals after five years it is changed to the number alive with no evidence of the disease at the beginning of the interval.

There are also different methods for adjusting the crude apparent-recovery rate, of which the following is one:[5]

Adjusted apparent-recovery rate in the first year is the crude rate as defined above modified to allow for the patients whose condition at the end of the interval was uncertain, and to allow for the duration of life with no evidence of the disease experienced during the 12 months by those who died:

$$RR_{adj} = \frac{A_o \left(1 + \frac{A_x}{A_o + A_c}\right) + \frac{D_o}{2}\left(1 + \frac{D_x + L}{D_o + D_c}\right)}{A + D + L}$$

For periods after the first year, proceed as for the crude rate.

3.5 Graphic presentation of statistics

The subcommittee reviewed with interest the form for the graphic presentation of therapeutic statistics developed by the Institut National d'Hygiène, France, and wishes to call attention to an example of its use appearing in the Bulletin de l'Institut National d'Hygiène.[6] It strongly endorsed the view that therapeutic statistics should be presented in a clear and unequivocal manner, and wished to encourage all efforts for the accomplishment of this purpose. The subcommittee felt that various forms equally satisfactory for the graphic presentation of therapeutic statistics might be devised, and did not believe it desirable, at this time, to recommend any particular pattern. It wishes to call attention, however, to the form used by the Institut National d'Hygiène in the hope that it may stimulate other institutions or persons to develop similar methods for the diagrammatic presentation of therapeutic statistics.

---

[5] Many different methods can be suggested for adjusting the crude apparent-recovery rate, but all are necessarily imperfect and open to some criticism. Whilst recognizing certain defects of the " adjusted apparent-recovery rate ", the Expert Committee on Health Statistics is unable for the time being to improve upon it, and advocates its trial for a period of years in the interests of comparability, emphasizing at the same time that the aim must be to so improve follow-up services that L, A_x, and D_x all approximate to zero, at which point the need for adjustment disappears. If subsequently any patients classed as A_x or D_x are found to have been in one of the defined groups, the rate should be recalculated accordingly.

[6] Bull. Inst. nat. Hyg. 1950, 5, 44

4. Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix

The subcommittee considered the Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix edited by Dr J. Heyman and originally issued by the League of Nations Health Organization. In view of the fact that the subcommittee has recommended that WHO adopt standard rules and procedures for the calculation and presentation of therapeutic statistics and promote their general use in order to bring about comparability, thus implicitly endorsing their value ; and noting the opinion that the publication of the Annual reports referred to above, in spite of certain deficiencies, has stimulated various efforts to improve the presentation of therapeutic results; and, furthermore, believing that the systematic collection and presentation of therapeutic statistics in accordance with standard rules and procedures undoubtedly will encourage the betterment of methods of treatment of persons with cancer ; the subcommittee recommends that these Annual reports continue to be published if at all possible.

The subcommittee, with specific reference to the Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix, recommends :

(a) that their scope be broadened to include all cases of cancer of the uterine cervix whatever the method of treatment ;

(b) that the rules and methods of calculation and presentation of therapeutic statistics proposed by this subcommittee be followed in the preparation of the Annual reports, and that the advice of the subcommittee be sought if any difficulties should arise in this connexion ;

(c) that the report of a given institution should be accepted for publication only if it includes every case of cancer of the uterine cervix examined at the institution, the only exception being patients referred to it for diagnosis only ;

(d) that a careful review should be made of the arrangement of the contents of the published volume with a view to reducing the space allotted to each report by omitting the presentation of very small frequencies, by reducing the amount of detailed statistics already published in previous reports, and by other similar means ;

(e) that a concise, analytical summary, illustrated with appropriate graphs, of the principal conclusions to be drawn from the statistics should be a regular feature of each volume.

Annex 3

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

Report on the First Session

Geneva, 11-14 April 1950

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

First Session

Members :

Dr E. L. Crosby, Director, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., USA

*Dr P. Foltz, Medical Director, Ospedale San Giovanni di Torino, Turin, Italy

Dr Marie Lindhardt, Head, Statistical Section, National Health Service, Copenhagen, Denmark (Chairman)

Professor J. Rasuhin, Professor of Social Medicine, University of Zagreb, Yugoslavia

Member of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Observer :

Dr M. de Viado, Social Security Section, ILO

Secretariat :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO (Secretary)

Dr Marie Cakrtova, International Nomenclature of Diseases and Causes of Death Section, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/Hosp.Stat./7, 18 April 1950, and WHO/HS/Hosp.Stat./7 Rev.1, 21 April 1950.

---

* Indicates member unable to attend.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

Report on the First Session

The Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Geneva from 11 to 14 April 1950.

The terms of reference of the subcommittee are indicated in the following recommendation adopted by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics during its first session :

> The Expert Committee on Health Statistics
>
> RECOMMENDS
>
> (1) that a subcommittee of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics be set up in order to initiate the proper action to be taken by the committee in the field of hospital statistics, primary attention being given to the application of the new International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death and related subjects, and appropriate questions being decentralized for study by national committees on health statistics ; [3]

The subcommittee considered the complexities of the problems of hospital statistics and hospital morbidity statistics, many of which are outlined in a note prepared by the Secretariat.[4] The subcommittee discussed also the limitations of utilizing hospital experience, since the selective character of hospital admissions generally precludes drawing conclusions with regard to the prevalence and distribution of morbid conditions in the community as a whole.[5]

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 3

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

[3] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 8

[4] Unpublished working document WHO/HS/Hosp. Stat./6

[5] In view of the selective character of hospitalized illness, the Expert Committee on Health Statistics stresses the need for investigating methods and possibilities of bridging the gap between hospital statistics and statistics representative of the community from which the patients of the hospital are drawn. The committee believes that the family type of survey or the complete coverage of medical-care services might offer the means of opening hospital statistics to broader interpretation and of enhancing their usefulness for public-health purposes.

In its deliberations, full cognizance was taken of the various classifications of diseases as well as of the purposes of classifying diseases. The Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death[6] was considered at length, particularly with regard to its applicability to hospital statistics.

The subcommittee fully recognized:

(1) the urgent need for data concerning types of illness treated in outpatient and inpatient departments and the durations of stay for different illnesses, so as to permit a review of the distribution and utilization of existing hospital facilities, and to provide a basis for future planning with a view to securing the most effective and economical use of the hospital beds and staff available;

(2) the beneficial effect on patients, physicians, hospitals, and public health of producing accurate diagnostic records;

(3) the possibilities of relating disease incidence to climatic, social, economic, occupational, and biological factors by appropriate statistics derived from diagnostic records of patients;

(4) the possibilities of studying the results of different methods of treatment;

(5) the complexity of studies of hospitalized illness because of variations in definitions, not only of sickness in its various categories, but also of different units of services rendered.

The subcommittee considered the purposes which could be served by statistics of:

(1) patients classified according to diagnosis in

(a) all hospitals, or special hospitals, measured in relation to the population at risk (e.g., data for whole countries or parts of countries or for classes of the population eligible for medical care, such as veterans, members of the armed forces, and patients covered by sickness-insurance schemes);

(b) selected hospitals without possibility of measuring the population at risk;

(2) utilization of hospital beds and facilities, including outpatient departments, according to the types of hospitals and their divisions, and to the social and economic status of the patient, without regard to diagnosis.

---

[6] Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948, 1

The subcommittee presents the following considerations and recommendations to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics:

(1) The subcommittee, concluding that the International Statistical Classification would generally serve the needs of hospitals better than any other classification for the compilation of statistics of illness causing hospitalization, recommends that it be used whenever such compilations of morbidity statistics are made.

(2) The subcommittee felt that certain selected countries and areas with a definable population at risk, and selected hospitals, should be encouraged to compile hospital morbidity statistics routinely. Such compilations should be fostered by national health administrations and national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents). The subcommittee is of the opinion that routine compilation of hospital morbidity statistics in all countries and all hospitals is neither necessary nor advisable.

(3) The subcommittee recommends that the following form of individual report and principles of collection be used and followed when statistics of patients admitted with diseases other than mental are to be compiled :

The section of the report relating to diagnosis should be completed by the physician himself or under his direction. Having considered both the British and US procedures for recording the diagnosis, the subcommittee decided to recommend the one at present in use in England and Wales, subject to further discussion and agreement by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics. This grouping is as follows:

I. Principal disease, injury, or other condition which led to admission.

II. Principal complication(s) of I (stating the most important one first and whether present at admission).

III. Principal accessory acute condition (stating whether present at admission).

IV. Principal accessory chronic condition.

The underlying cause should be entered in I if a complication in II was also present at admission, even though the admission was due to that complication; and in tabulation of statistics according to the principal cause of admission common combinations of an underlying cause should be distinguished from a complication.

The section relating to identifying data should be recorded by medical record or registration officers, and should include as a minimum: name, type, and location of the hospital; the patient's name, national identity number (if any), hospital registration number, race, sex, and date of birth, admission, and discharge; information on service referring patient (general practitioner, consultant, other hospital, etc.).

A special section of the record should be provided for deaths; this should indicate whether or not an autopsy was performed, and the cause of death exactly as entered on the death certificate. In addition, it is recommended that the final autopsy findings, when completed, should be linked with the other information for the purposes of comparing clinical and autopsy diagnoses.

The subcommittee emphasizes that, even if statistics are completed on tabular forms by the hospitals, provision should be made in the compilation of hospital statistics for counting numbers of individuals — admissions or discharges — and of principal diagnoses of various kinds.

(4) The subcommittee realized the necessity for uniform definitions of what constitutes a hospital, hospital bed, inpatient, outpatient, admission, discharge, patient-day, duration of stay, etc., but was not able in the time available to study this question in detail. The subcommittee suggests to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics that the problem of uniform definitions be further studied, and calls attention to the recently completed Handbook on accounting, statistics and business office procedures for hospitals, section I,[7] of the American Hospital Association, which contains a set of such definitions.

(5) The subcommittee recommends that the following special problems in hospital statistics be referred and definitely assigned to appropriate national health-administrations or national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents).

(a) Mental hospitals

Statistics of mental disorders causing admissions to mental institutions should be collected in several countries with a view to increasing knowledge of the incidence of hospitalized disorders of different types in populations according to sex, age, civil state, occupation, duration of disorder, family history, and other measurable factors concerned in etiology, and also statistics of the immediate outcome of hospitalization. These statistics should, if possible, be supplemented by sample studies of mental disorders in the population as a whole.

(b) Tuberculosis hospitals

Statistics of tuberculosis patients admitted to tuberculosis sanatoria and institutions should be collected in several countries with a view to increasing knowledge of the incidence of different types of tuberculosis and its treatment according to race, sex, age, occupation, duration of illness, and other measurable factors bearing upon the need for beds and related to the immediate outcome of hospitalization.

---

[7] American Hospital Association (1950) Handbook on accounting, statistics and business office procedures for hospitals. Section I. Hospital statistics and uniform classification of accounts, Chicago

(c) Diagnostic cross-index

The subcommittee believes that the International Statistical Classification is capable of being subdivided for purposes of indexing medical records by diagnosis and to meet the particular needs of special hospitals or localities. It emphasized that where elaborations are made they should be indicated by letters added to the published code numbers of which the new title forms a subdivision. It was felt that a proper project for a national committee on vital and health statistics would be the development of such an extension of the International Statistical Classification, to serve as a diagnostic cross-index.

(d) Obstetrics

In view of the fact that obstetric departments in hospitals have been able to develop mechanisms for collecting precise data relative to childbirth, and that considerable differences exist in various countries as to the use of hospitals for maternity cases, the subcommittee recommends that information be collected concerning the use of hospital beds, and outpatient and domiciliary facilities for deliveries.

(e) Operations and anaesthetics

The subcommittee recommends that efforts be made to develop a code, similar to the International Statistical Classification, for the purpose of tabulating statistics of operations, with the idea that such a code could be extended for use as an index to the medical records according to operation. It was felt that, since anaesthesia is definitely associated with operative procedures, the question of a classification of anaesthetical procedures should also be studied.

(f) Multiple admissions

The subcommittee recommends that the problems involved in the re-admission of an individual during a given period of time for the same or another illness be investigated by a national committee on vital and health statistics.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
TECHNICAL REPORT SERIES

(Separate editions in English and in French)

		Price
1.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias: report on the fourth session	9d	$0.10
2.	Expert Committee on Biological Standardization: report on the third session	1/6	$0.20
3.	Expert Committee on Biological Standardization: report of the Subcommittee on Fat-Soluble Vitamins	9d	$0.10
4.	Expert Committee on Insecticides: report on the first session	2/3	$0.30
5.	Expert Committee on Health Statistics: report on the first session	9d	$0.10
6.	Active immunization against common communicable diseases of childhood	1/3	$0.15
7.	Expert Committee on Tuberculosis: report on the fourth session	1/3	$0.15
8.	Expert Committee on Malaria: report on the third session	2/3	$0.30
9.	Expert Committee on Mental Health: report on the first session	2/3	$0.30
10.	Expert Committee on Environmental Sanitation: report on the first session	2/-	$0.25
11.	Expert Committee on Plague: report on the first session	1/6	$0.20
12.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias: report on the fifth session	9d	$0.10
13.	Expert Committee on Venereal Infections: report on the third session	1/6	$0.20
14.	Expert Committee on Venereal Infections: report of the Subcommittee on Serology and Laboratory Aspects	2/-	$0.25
15.	Venereal-disease control in the USA: report of the WHO Syphilis Study Commission	3/6	$0.45
16.	Joint FAO/WHO Expert Committee on Nutrition: report on the first session	1/3	$0.15
17.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on Bilharziasis in Africa: report on the first session	9d	$0.10
18.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on Cholera: report on the third session	To be published
19.	Yellow-Fever Panel: report on the first session	9d	$0.10
20.	Joint ILO/WHO Committee on the Hygiene of Seafarers: report on the first session	9d	$0.10
21.	Expert Committee on Drugs Liable to Produce Addiction: report on the second session	9d	$0.10
22.	Expert Committee on Professional and Technical Education of Medical and Auxiliary Personnel: report on the first session	To be published
23.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on African Rickettsioses: report on the first session
24.	Expert Committee on Nursing: report on the first session
25.	Expert Committee on Health Statistics: report on the second session. Including reports of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer, and the Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics	2/-	$0.25
26.	Expert Committee on Antibiotics: report on the first session	9d	$0.10
27.	Expert Group on Prematurity: final report	9d	$0.10
28.	Expert Committee on Rabies: report on the first session	To be published
29.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias: report on the sixth session

Bulk Orders

A discount of 20% will be given to health organizations for orders of 100 copies or more. Such orders should be sent direct to the World Health Organization, Sales Section, Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland.

DEFINITIONS AND INDICATORS IN

FAMILY PLANNING
MATERNAL & CHILD HEALTH
AND
REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH

USED IN THE WHO REGIONAL OFFICE FOR EUROPE

Reproductive, Maternal and Child Health
European Regional Office
World Health Organization

Revised March 1999 & January 2001

DEFINITIONS AND INDICATORS IN

FAMILY PLANNING,
MATERNAL & CHILD HEALTH
and REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH
USED IN WHO/EURO

Overview:

This compilation of definitions and indicators is based on current definitions from several sources (1,2,3,4,5). Where more than one definition or indicator was available, additional sources are included. In addition, formulas are indicated when calculations are necessary. It should be noted that these definitions and indicators are under continuous use and evaluation and are subject to change.

A:

Abortion:

- Induced*: or the voluntary termination of pregnancy, is used to end an already established pregnancy (i.e. a method that acts after nidation has been completed). Unsafe abortion is defined as a procedure for terminating an unwanted pregnancy either by persons lacking the necessary skills or in an environment lacking the minimal medical standards or both. (Division of Family Health and Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction. International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo, Egypt, 5-13 September 1995.)

- Spontaneous*: Termination of pregnancy by expulsion of embryo/foetus before 22 weeks of pregnancy or below 500 gr. of weight. (Source WHO/FHE/MSM/94.11)

Abortion rate

The estimated number of abortions per 1 000 women aged 15/44 years in a given year.

Abortion ratio

The estimated number of abortions per 1 000 live births in a given year

Adolescence, youth and young people

The term "adolescence" has been defined as including those aged between 10 and 19, and “youth" as those between 15 and 24; "young people" is a term that covers both age groups, i.e. those between the ages of 10 and 24. True adolescence, however, being the period of physical, psychological and social maturing from childhood to adulthood, may fall within either age range.

Source: The Reproductive Health of Adolescents: A strategy for action, A Joint WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Adolescent reproductive health

The goal of overall improved adolescent reproductive health involves: more responsible and equitable relationships between young men and young women before and during marriage; decreased incidence of pregnancy before maturity: lower rates of exposure to and contraction of sexually transmitted diseases; and improvement in the status of women.

The means by which adolescent reproductive health is achieved include: improvement in the knowledge and understanding among all key groups of society - including young people themselves - of the physical, psychological and social aspects of adolescent reproductive health; increased training of key people with influence on adolescents, and of adolescents themselves, in counselling and communication skills; promotion of policies and programmes that reflect the best ways of meeting the reproductive health needs of adolescents, with emphasis on young people as a resource for health and provision of alternatives to early childbearing for young women, including better education to improve their status.

Source: The Reproductive Health of Adolescents.' a strategy for action, a Joint, WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Apgar Score:

Evaluation of a newborn physical status by assigning numeric values (0 to 2) to each of the 5 criteria: 1) heart rate, 2) respiratory effort, 3) muscle tone, 4) response to stimulation and 5) skin color. A score of 8 to 10 indicates the best possible condition.

Apgar score (Low): 6 at five minutes as % of all live births.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*)..*

B:

Birth: (see also live birth)

The complete expulsion or extraction of a dead fetus of more than 500g or of a live fetus from its mother irrespective of the duration of pregnancy. (Indicators for assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

Birth rate (or crude birth rate)

The number of births per 1000 population in a given year.

Birth weight:

The weight of a neonate determined immediately after delivery or as soon as thereafter as feasible; it should be expressed to the nearest gram. Source: American Academy of Pediatrics. American college of Obst. Gynecologists. Guidelines for Perinatal Care. 4th ed. 1997.

For live births, birth weight should preferably be measured within the first hour of life before significant postnatal weight loss has occurred. While statistical tabulations include 500 g groupings for birth weight, weights should not be recorded in those groupings. The actual weight should be recorded to the degree of accuracy to which it is measured.

The definitions of "low", "very low", and "extremely low" birth weight do not constitute mutually exclusive categories. Below the set limits they are all-inclusive and therefore overlap (i.e. "low" includes "very low" and "extremely low", while "very low" includes "extremely low").

Low birth weight (LBW)
Less than 2500 g (up to and including 2499g).
Very low birth weight (VLBW)
Less than 1500 g (up to and including 1499g).
Extremely low birth weight
Less than 1000 g (up to and including 999g).

If known, at least 500g (1000g), otherwise, gestational age at least 22 weeks or body length crown/heel-at least 25cm) (International classification of diseases)

Birthweight for perinatal statistics:
By weight intervals of 500g, i.e., 1000-1499g, 1500-1999g. etc. (Wagner, M. Having a baby in Europe. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization, 1985, p. 63).

Breast-feeding:

Feeding a baby by allowing him/her to suck at the mother's breast

Exclusive breast-feeding rate: Proportion of infants less than 4 months of age who are exclusively breast-fed (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. WHO Geneva)

EBFR =

$$\frac{\text{Infants less than four months (under 120 days) of age who were exclusively breast-fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Infants less than four months (under 120 days) of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices.)

This indicator includes breast-feeding from a wet nurse and feeding on expressed breast milk.

Predominant breast-feeding rate:
The proportion of infants less than four months of age who are predominantly breast fed.

PBFR =

$$\frac{\text{Infants under four months (less than 120 days) of age who were predominantly breast fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Infant under four months,(less than 120 days) of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices

Timely complementary feeding rate: Proportion of infants 6-9 months of age who are receiving breast milk and complementary foods (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

TCFR =

Infants 6-9 months (1 80-299 days of age who received complementary foods in addition to breast milk in the last 24 hours
Infants 6-9 months (1 80-299 days) of age (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices.)

Continued breast-feeding rate (2 years)

CBFR =

Proportion of children 20-23 months of age who are breast-feeding,

$$\frac{\text{Children 20-23 months of age who were breast-fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Children 20-30 months of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

Bottle feeding rate: proportion of infants less than 12 months of age who are receiving any food or drink from a bottle with a nipple/teat.

BFR =

$$\frac{\text{Infants < 12 months (<366 days) of age who were bottle-fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Infants < 12 months (<366 days) of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. Geneva: World Health Organization, Number 10, February 1992)

C:

Caesarean section:

Abdominal delivery of the baby by laparotomy and section of the uterus. Source: WHO/FHE/MSM 94.11

Caesarean section rate: as % of all deliveries

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care)

Causes of death:

The causes of death to be entered on the medical certificate of cause of death are all those diseases, morbid conditions or injuries which either resulted in or contributed to death and the circumstances of the accident or violence which produced any such injuries. (WHO Geneva, WHA20.19 WHA43.24, Article 23)

Contraceptive prevalence:

Percentage of couples using a contraceptive method, either modern or traditional.

$$\text{CPR} = \frac{\text{Contraceptive methods use}}{\text{Couples (100 women of fertile age)}}$$

Congenital disorders

Those diseases that are substantially determined before or during birth and which are in principle recognizable in early life. Congenital malformation should be confined to structural defects present at birth, the term congenital anomaly being used to include all biochemical, structural and functional disorders present at birth (Public Health in Europe No.4)

Cost-benefit analysis

The systematic comparison - in monetary terms - of all the costs and benefits of proposed alternative schemes with a view to determining)a) which scheme or combination of schemes will contribute most to the achievement of predetermined objectives at a fixed investment, or (b) the magnitude of the benefit that can result from schemes requiring the minimum investment. The resources required per unit of benefit must be determined, account being taken of the fact that costs and benefits accrue with time (Public Health in Europe No.4)

Crude birth rate:

Annual number of births per 1,000 population (The State of the World's *Children,*1992, UNICEF, p. 98).

Crude death rate:

Annual number of deaths per 1,000 population (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 98).

D:

Delivery:

the process by which fetuses are born. A twin delivery thus counts as one delivery and two births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Detection of multiple pregnancy rate:

detected before delivery as % of all multiple pregnancies. (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen

Direct obstetric deaths: (see Maternal death)

E:

Early neonatal mortality rate: deaths at 0-6 days after live birth x 1000/live births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

$$\text{ENMR} = \frac{\text{Live birth x 1000}}{\text{Live births}}$$

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991) Infant and perinatal mortality 1990: RHAs and DHAS. Monitor DH3 91/2. London, HMSO)

Age classification for early neonatal deaths: (i) under 1 hour, 1 -1 1 hours, 12-23 hours, 24-47 hours, 48-71 hours, 72-167 hours (ii) under 1 hour, 1-23 hours, 24-1 67 hours.(International classification of diseases).

Note: Age at death during the first day of life (day zero) should be recorded in units of completed minutes or hours of life. For the second (day 1), third (day 2) and through 27 completed days of life , age of death should be recorded in days (WHA20.19, WHA 43.24, Article 23 WHO Geneva).

Eclampsia:

Convulsions and coma occurring in a pregnant or puerperal woman and associated with pre-eclampsia, that is a condition in pregnancy manifested by hypertension, oedema and/or proteinuria. Source: WHO/FHE/MSM 94.11

Eclampsia rate:

Eclampsia in pregnancy, during delivery or post-partum as % of all deliveries (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen, Germany 21-22 October 1993, WHO/EURO).

Epidemiological survey

A survey, which may use screening (q.v.) test, but whose principal aim is not to bring patients to treatment but to elucidate the prevalence, incidence and natural history of a disease under study -though case-finding is a natural by-product of such surveys. Also known as a population survey (Public Health in Europe No.4)

F

Family

The UN General Assembly in its resolution 44/82 of 8 December 1989, proclaimed 1994 as the International Year of the Family (IYF) with its theme of "Family: resources and responsibilities in a changing world." No attempt was made by the United Nations to define or delineate the "ideal family" or to direct "family policy" to specific goals. The concept of family is not easy to define. The family has been variously described as the nucleus and pillar of society and the natural bridge between the individual and society. The status of the family has also been referred to by the United Nations Committee on Civil and Political Rights. In commenting on Article 23 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the committee noted that:

> "the concept of the family may differ in some respects from State to State, and even from region to region within a State, and that it is therefore not possible to give the concept a standard definition. However, the Committee emphasises that, when a group of persons is regarded as a family under the legislation and practices of a State, it must be given the protection referred to in article 23."

Source: Year of the Family (1994) the concept of family health (A47 INF.Doc. 7) 6 May 1994.

Family planning

Implies the ability of individuals and couples to anticipate and attain their desired number of children and the spacing and timing of their births. FP is achieved through contraception defined as any means capable of preventing pregnancy - and through the treatment of involuntary infertility. The contraceptive effect can be obtained through temporary or permanent means. Temporary methods include: periodic abstinence during the fertile period, coitus interruptus (withdrawal), using the naturally occurring periods of infertility (e.g. during breast-feeding and postpartum amenorrhoea), through the use of reproductive hormones (e.g. oral pills and long-acting injections and implants), placement of a device in the uterus (e.g. copper-bearing and hormone-releasing intrauterine devices), interposing a barrier that prevents the ascension of the sperm into the upper female genital trace (e.g. condoms, diaphragms, and spermicides). Permanent methods of contraception include male and female sterilization.

Source: Working definition used by the Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction, and the Division of Family Health.

Fertility regulation

Is the process by which individuals and couples regulate their fertility. Methods that can be used for this purpose include, among others, delaying child-bearing, using contraception, seeking treatment for infertility, interrupting unwanted pregnancies, and, in the case of mothers with an infant or a small child, breast-feeding.

Source: Working definition used by the Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction, and the Division of Family Health.

Fertility (Replacement level)

The level of fertility leading to a stable population size (no demographic increase of decline).

Fertility rate (Total) (TRF)

The average number of children that would be born alive to a woman during her lifetime if she were to pass through her childbearing years conforming to the age-specific fertility rates of a given year. The rate refers to a synthetic female cohort. It is computed by the summation of the age-specific fertility rates. The total fertility rate is also used to indicate replacement level fertility; in the more developed countries, a rate of 2.1 is considered to be replacement level.

Source: Recent demographic developments in Europe, 1997, Council of Europe

Fertilization and Conception

The concepts of fertilization and conception are often confused. Fertilization refers to the union of an ovum and a sperm. Conception has been defined by the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology as occurring at the time of implantation of the fertilized ovum into the wall of the uterus - i.e. that point in the biological development corresponding to the beginning stages of a unique biological organism. The above distinction between fertilization and conception is used by the United States National Institutes of health in establishing various guidelines relevant to research in human reproduction.

Source: Working paper prepared and reviewed by WHO on The Definition of a Child.. Implications for Maternal and Child Health Programmes with particular reference to the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Fetal Death:

Death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy; the death is indicated by the fact that after such separation the fetus does not breathe or show any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles.

If gestation is less than 20 completed weeks, but less than 28 completed weeks, then death is called early fetal death. (International classification of diseases.)(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25).

Intermediate fetal death.

(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25, 1950 Expert Committee on Health Statistics: Report on the Second Session including reports on the First Sessions of the Subcommittees on definition of stillbirth, registration of cases of cancer and hospital statistics).

If gestation is 28 completed weeks or more, then death is called late fetal death.

(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25).

Rationale: distinction among intrauterine deaths, antenatal deaths and fetal deaths during delivery is necessary to identify avoidable deaths (in principle, fetal deaths during delivery belong to this group) and to better analyse the problem.*

Implications for the quality of antenatal and delivery care.*

Fetal death rate prior to admission:

Intrauterine deaths after 22 completed weeks before admission to hospital as % of all > 22 weeks pregnancies.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*).*

G:

Gestational age

The duration of gestation is measured from the first day of the last normal menstrual period. Gestational age is expressed in completed days or completed weeks (e.g. events occurring 280 to 286 completed days after the onset of the last normal menstrual period are considered to have occurred at 40 weeks of gestation).

Gestational age is frequently a source of confusion, when calculations are based on menstrual dates. For the purposes of calculation of gestational age from the date of the first day of the last normal menstrual period and the date of delivery, it should be borne in mind that the first day is day zero and not day one; days 0-6 therefore correspond to "completed week zero"; days 7-13 to "completed week one", and the 40th week of actual gestation is synonymous with "completed week 39" Where the date of the last normal menstrual period is not available, gestational age should be based on the best clinical estimate. In order to avoid misunderstanding, tabulations should indicate both weeks and days. (International classification of diseases.)

H:

Health

"A state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity" (Public Health in Europe 4.)

Hospital

A hospital is a residential establishment which provides short-term and long-term medical care consisting of observational, diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative services for persons suffering or suspected to be suffering from a disease or injury, and for parturients. It may or may not also provide services for ambulatory patients on an out-patient basis (Public Health in Europe 4).

Hysterectomy: removal of the uterus.

Hysterectomy rate after delivery: within two days after delivery as % of all deliveries (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen.)

I:

Indirect obstetric deaths (see Maternal death)

Infant mortality rate:

annual number of deaths of infants under one year of age per 1,000 live births.
More specifically this is the probability of dying between birth and exactly one year of age (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 99).

$$\text{Infant mortality rate} = \frac{\text{Deaths under the age of 1 year after live birth x 1 000}}{\text{Live births}}$$

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991)

Instrumental delivery rate: forceps or vacuum extractor as % of all deliveries
(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*).*

Infertility: Inability to conceive, more specifically:

Primary infertility
Means that the couple has never conceived, despite cohabitation and exposure to pregnancy for a period of 2 years.

Secondary infertility
Means that the couple has previously conceived, but is subsequently unable to conceive despite cohabitation and exposure to pregnancy for a period of 2 years. If the woman has breast-fed a previous infant, then exposure to pregnancy is calculated from the end of lactational amenorroehea.

L:

Late neonatal mortality rate: deaths day 7-27 after live birth x 1000/Iive births
(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Deaths at 7-27 days after live birth x 1000
Late neonatal mortality rate = Live births
(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991))

Life expectancy at birth: The number of years new-born children would live is subject to the mortality risks prevailing for the cross-section of population at the time of their birth. (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 99).

Live Birth: the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles, whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached; each product of such a birth is considered liveborn. (International classification of diseases.)

Note: For live births, birth weight should preferably be measured within the first hour of life before significant postnatal weight loss has occurred. While statistical tabulations include 500g groupings for birth weight, weights should not be recorded in those groupings. The actual weight should be recorded to the degree of accuracy to which it is measured. (WHA20.19, WHA43.24 Article 23, WHO Geneva).

M:

Major congenital malformations rate: according to specified list as % of all births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Maternal death:

The death of a women while pregnant or within 42 days of termination of pregnancy, irrespective of the duration and site of the pregnancy, from any cause related to or aggravated by the pregnancy or its management but not from accidental or incidental causes. (The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992. Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23).

Maternal death (late)

A late maternal death is the death of a woman from direct or indirect obstetric causes more than 42 days but less than one year after termination of pregnancy (International classification of Diseases).

Direct obstetric deaths:

Those resulting from obstetric complications of the pregnant state (pregnancy, labour and the puerperium) from interventions, omissions, incorrect treatment, or from a chain of events resulting from any of the above (expressed as rate per 1 000 live births) (The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992, Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23).

Indirect obstetric deaths:

Those resulting from previous existing disease or disease that developed during pregnancy and which was not due to direct obstetric causes, but which was aggravated by physiologic effects of pregnancy (expressed as rate per 1 000 live births). (The MATCAR E Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 199, Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23)..

Maternal mortality rate: Annual number of deaths of women from pregnancy related causes per 1 00,000 live births (The State of the World's Children).

Maternity care

The object of maternity care is to ensure that every expectant and nursing mother maintains good health, learns the art of child care, has a normal delivery and bears healthy children. Maternity care in the narrower sense consists in the care of the pregnant women, her safe delivery, her postnatal care and examination, the care of her newly born infant and the maintenance of lactation (Public Health in Europe 4).

Midwife

A person who, having been regularly admitted to a midwifery educational programme duly recognized in the country in which it is located, has successfully completed the prescribed course of studies in midwifery and has acquired the requisite qualifications to be registered and/or legally licensed to practice midwifery (Public Health in Europe 4).

Miscarriage

The accidental loss of a fetus before a full term pregnancy resulting in the death of the fetus

(Public Health in Europe 4).

N:

Neonatal Period

The neonatal period commences at birth and ends 28 completed days after birth. Neonatal deaths (deaths among live births during the first 28 completed days of life) may be subdivided into early neonatal deaths, occurring during the first seven days of life, and late neonatal deaths, occurring after the seventh day but before 28 completed days of life. (WHO Geneva WHA20.19, WHA43.24, Article 23).

Age at death during the first day of life (day zero) should be recorded in units of completed minutes or hours of life. For the second (day 1), third (day 2) and through 27 completed days of life, age at death should be recorded in days.

Neonatal mortality rate= deaths at 0-27 days after live birth x 1000 / Live births

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991)

Neonatal seizures:

Clinically defined as paroxysmal alterations in neurologic function i.e. behavioural, motor, and/or autonomic function.

Source: Volpe J.J: Neurology of the newborn, 3rd ed. WB Saunders, Philadelphia, 1995.

No prenatal visit: no documented prenatal visit

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

P:

Perinatal period

The perinatal period commences at 22 completed weeks (1 54 days) of gestation (the time when birth weight is normally 500 g), and ends seven completed days after birth. (WHO Geneva, WHA20.19, WHA43.27, Article 23)

Perinatal mortality rate: subdivided in antenatal deaths + deaths in partu + deaths at 0-6 days after live birth x 1000/all births

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Infant Postneonatal Mortality rate = deaths from 28 days to under 1 year after live birth x 1 000 / Live births

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) 1991)

Pregnancy-related death:

A pregnancy-related death is the death of a woman while pregnant or within 42 days of termination of pregnancy, irrespective of the cause of death. (WHO Geneva WHA20.19, WHA43.24, Article 23).

Pre-term infants:

Less than 37 completed weeks (less than 259 days of gestation). (International Classification of Diseases).

R:

Reproductive Health

Within the framework of WHO's definition of health as a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity, reproductive health addresses the reproductive processes, functions and system at ail stages of life.

Reproductive health implies that people are able to have responsible, satisfying and safe sex life and that they have the capability to reproduce and the freedom to decide if, when and how often to do so. Implicit in this are the right of men and women to be informed of and to have access to safe, effective, affordable and acceptable methods of fertility regulation of their choice, and the right of access to appropriate health care services that will enable women to go safely through pregnancy and childbirth and provide couples with the best chance of having a health infant.

Source: Global Policy Committee of the World Health Organization, 2 May 1994: and the WHO Position Paper on Health, Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994.

(NB The definition of Reproductive Health presented in the ICPD document was a direct quote of draft report prepared by FHE and HRP for a document on Reproductive Health which was to be presented to the HRP PCC)

S:

Safe Motherhood

Safe motherhood aims at attaining optimal maternal and newborn health. It implies reduction of maternal mortality and morbidity and enhancement of the health of newborn infants through equitable access to primary health care including family planning, prenatal, delivery and postnatal care for the mother and infant, and access to primary health care including family planning, prenatal, delivery and postnatal care for the mother and infant, and access to essential obstetric and neonatal care.

Source: Mother-Baby Package, and the WHO Position Paper on Health Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994.

Sexual Health

“While recognizing that it is difficult to arrive at a universally acceptable definition of the totality of human sexuality, the following definition of sexual health is presented as a step in this direction:

Sexual health is the integration of the somatic, emotional, intellectual, and social aspects of sexual being in ways that are positively enriching and that enhance personality, communication, and love.

...Thus the notion of sexual health implies a positive approach to human sexuality, and the purposes of sexual health care should be the enhancement of life and personal relationships and not merely the counselling and care related to procreation or sexually transmitted diseases.

Source: Education and Treatment in Human Sexuality: the Training of Health Professionals, A report from a WHO meeting, Technical Report Series 572, World Health Organization, 1975. (N.B. This quote starting on line 4, without quotation marks or attribution to Who, is included as the definition of sexual health in the ICPD document para 7.1)

Sexuality

Human sexuality is a natural part of human development through every phase of life and includes physical, psychological, and social components. Sexual health implies a positive approach to human sexuality and is therefore an essential component of reproductive health. It includes the integration of somatic, emotional, intellectual, and social aspects of an individual in ways which positively enrich and enhance personality, communication, love and human relationships.

Stillbirth:

Birth of a baby showing no signs of life. For international comparisons of perinatal mortality rates only such stillborn infants with a birth weight of 1000 gr. or more are included (from 1989 it is recommended that the lower weight limit should be 500 gr). Sometimes stillborn babies are not weighed , in these cases a gestational age of 28 completed weeks or a body length of 35 cm can be taken as equivalent to 1000 gr birth weight.

Stillbirth rate = $\frac{\text{Stillbirths x 1000}}{\text{live births + stillbirths}}$

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys(OPCS) (1991))

T:

Term

From 37 completed weeks to less than 42 completed weeks (259 to 293 days) of gestation.

Term (Pre-)

Less than 37 completed weeks (less than 259 days) of gestation.

Term (Post-)

42 completed weeks or more (294 days or more) of gestation.

(International Classification of Diseases)

U:

Unattended deliveries : unattended by midwife/doctor as % of all deliveries.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen)

Under five mortality rate: Annual number of deaths of children under five years of age per 1000 live births. More specifically, this is the probability of dying between birth and exactly five years of age (The State of the World's Children.)

REFERENCES

Banfield, P., Worning, AM, Staehr-Johansen, K. The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992.

European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care Tubingen, Germany
21-22 October 1993, WHO/EURO.

Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. Geneva: World Health Organization, Number 10,
February 1992-

International classification of diseases. Manual of the international statistical classification of diseases, injuries and causes of death. Based on the recommendations of the Ninth Revision Conference, 1975 and adopted by the Twenty-ninth World health Assembly. Geneva, World Health Organization 1977, Vol. 1.

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991) Infant and perinatal mortality 1990: RHAs and DHAS. Monitor DH3 91/2 London, HMSO)

Public Health in Europe 4: Glossary of Health Care Terminology, WHO/EURO, 1978

Potts, M. et al. Abortion, Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1977.

The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF.pp 98-99

Wagner, M. Having a baby in Europe. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization, 1985.

WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25, 1950 Expert Committee on Health Statistics: Report on the Second Session including reports on the First Sessions of the Subcommittees on definition of stillbirth, registration of cases of cancer and hospital statistics.

The Reproductive Health of Adolescents. a strategy for action, a Joint,WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Collaboration within the United Nations system: International Year of the Family (1994) the concept of family health (A47 INF.Doc. 7) 6 May 1994.

Education and Treatment in Human Sexuality: the Training of Health Professionals, A report from a WHO meeting, Technical Report Series 572, World Health Organization, 1975.

Mother-Baby Package. Report of an Interregional meeting, Geneva, 18-20 April 1994. WHO/FHE/MSM/94.3

WHO Position Paper on Health Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994

DEFINITIONS AND INDICATORS IN

FAMILY PLANNING
MATERNAL & CHILD HEALTH
AND
REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH

USED IN THE WHO REGIONAL OFFICE FOR EUROPE

Reproductive, Maternal and Child Health
European Regional Office
World Health Organization

Revised March 1999 & January 2001

DEFINITIONS AND INDICATORS IN

FAMILY PLANNING,
MATERNAL & CHILD HEALTH
and REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH
USED IN WHO/EURO

Overview:

This compilation of definitions and indicators is based on current definitions from several sources (1,2,3,4,5). Where more than one definition or indicator was available, additional sources are included. In addition, formulas are indicated when calculations are necessary. It should be noted that these definitions and indicators are under continuous use and evaluation and are subject to change.

A:

Abortion:

- Induced: or the voluntary termination of pregnancy, is used to end an already established pregnancy (i.e. a method that acts after nidation has been completed). Unsafe abortion is defined as a procedure for terminating an unwanted pregnancy either by persons lacking the necessary skills or in an environment lacking the minimal medical standards or both. (Division of Family Health and Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction. International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo, Egypt, 5-13 September 1995.)

- Spontaneous: Termination of pregnancy by expulsion of embryo/foetus before 22 weeks of pregnancy or below 500 gr. of weight. (Source WHO/FHE/MSM/94.11)

Abortion rate

The estimated number of abortions per 1 000 women aged 15/44 years in a given year.

Abortion ratio

The estimated number of abortions per 1 000 live births in a given year

Adolescence, youth and young people

The term "adolescence" has been defined as including those aged between 10 and 19, and “youth" as those between 15 and 24; "young people" is a term that covers both age groups, i.e. those between the ages of 10 and 24. True adolescence, however, being the period of physical, psychological and social maturing from childhood to adulthood, may fall within either age range.

Source: The Reproductive Health of Adolescents: A strategy for action, A Joint WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Adolescent reproductive health

The goal of overall improved adolescent reproductive health involves: more responsible and equitable relationships between young men and young women before and during marriage; decreased incidence of pregnancy before maturity: lower rates of exposure to and contraction of sexually transmitted diseases; and improvement in the status of women.

The means by which adolescent reproductive health is achieved include: improvement in the knowledge and understanding among all key groups of society - including young people themselves - of the physical, psychological and social aspects of adolescent reproductive health; increased training of key people with influence on adolescents, and of adolescents themselves, in counselling and communication skills; promotion of policies and programmes that reflect the best ways of meeting the reproductive health needs of adolescents, with emphasis on young people as a resource for health and provision of alternatives to early childbearing for young women, including better education to improve their status.

Source: The Reproductive Health of Adolescents.' a strategy for action, a Joint, WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Apgar Score:

Evaluation of a newborn physical status by assigning numeric values (0 to 2) to each of the 5 criteria: 1) heart rate, 2) respiratory effort, 3) muscle tone, 4) response to stimulation and 5) skin color. A score of 8 to 10 indicates the best possible condition.

Apgar score (Low): 6 at five minutes as % of all live births.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*)..*

B:

Birth: (see also live birth)

The complete expulsion or extraction of a dead fetus of more than 500g or of a live fetus from its mother irrespective of the duration of pregnancy. (Indicators for assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

Birth rate (or crude birth rate)

The number of births per 1000 population in a given year.

Birth weight:

The weight of a neonate determined immediately after delivery or as soon as thereafter as feasible; it should be expressed to the nearest gram. Source: American Academy of Pediatrics. American college of Obst. Gynecologists. Guidelines for Perinatal Care. 4th ed. 1997.

For live births, birth weight should preferably be measured within the first hour of life before significant postnatal weight loss has occurred. While statistical tabulations include 500 g groupings for birth weight, weights should not be recorded in those groupings. The actual weight should be recorded to the degree of accuracy to which it is measured.

The definitions of "low", "very low", and "extremely low" birth weight do not constitute mutually exclusive categories. Below the set limits they are all-inclusive and therefore overlap (i.e. "low" includes "very low" and "extremely low", while "very low" includes "extremely low").

Low birth weight (LBW)
Less than 2500 g (up to and including 2499g).
Very low birth weight (VLBW)
Less than 1500 g (up to and including 1499g).
Extremely low birth weight
Less than 1000 g (up to and including 999g).

If known, at least 500g (1000g), otherwise, gestational age at least 22 weeks or body length crown/heel-at least 25cm) (International classification of diseases)

Birthweight for perinatal statistics:
By weight intervals of 500g, i.e., 1000-1499g, 1500-1999g. etc. (Wagner, M. Having a baby in Europe. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization, 1985, p. 63).

Breast-feeding:

Feeding a baby by allowing him/her to suck at the mother's breast

Exclusive breast-feeding rate: Proportion of infants less than 4 months of age who are exclusively breast-fed (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. WHO Geneva)

EBFR =

Infants less than four months (under 120 days) of age who were exclusively breast-fed in the last 24 hours

Infants less than four months (under 120 days) of age (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices.)

This indicator includes breast-feeding from a wet nurse and feeding on expressed breast milk.

Predominant breast-feeding rate:
The proportion of infants less than four months of age who are predominantly breast fed.

PBFR =

Infants under four months (less than 120 days) of age who were predominantly breast fed in the last 24 hours

Infant under four months,(less than 120 days) of age
(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices

Timely complementary feeding rate: Proportion of infants 6-9 months of age who are receiving breast milk and complementary foods (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

TCFR =

Infants 6-9 months (1 80-299 days of age who received complementary foods in addition to breast milk in the last 24 hours

Infants 6-9 months (1 80-299 days) of age (Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices.)

Continued breast-feeding rate (2 years)
CBFR =

Proportion of children 20-23 months of age who are breast-feeding,

$$\frac{\text{Children 20-23 months of age who were breast-fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Children 20-30 months of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices).

Bottle feeding rate: proportion of infants less than 12 months of age who are receiving any food or drink from a bottle with a nipple/teat.
BFR =

$$\frac{\text{Infants < 12 months (<366 days) of age who were bottle-fed in the last 24 hours}}{\text{Infants < 12 months (<366 days) of age}}$$

(Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. Geneva: World Health Organization, Number 10, February 1992)

C:

Caesarean section:

Abdominal delivery of the baby by laparotomy and section of the uterus. Source: WHO/FHE/MSM 94.11

Caesarean section rate: as % of all deliveries

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care)

Causes of death:

The causes of death to be entered on the medical certificate of cause of death are all those diseases, morbid conditions or injuries which either resulted in or contributed to death and the circumstances of the accident or violence which produced any such injuries. (WHO Geneva, WHA20.19 WHA43.24, Article 23)

Contraceptive prevalence:

Percentage of couples using a contraceptive method, either modern or traditional.

$$\text{CPR} = \frac{\text{Contraceptive methods use}}{\text{Couples (100 women of fertile age)}}$$

Congenital disorders

Those diseases that are substantially determined before or during birth and which are in principle recognizable in early life. Congenital malformation should be confined to structural defects present at birth, the term congenital anomaly being used to include all biochemical, structural and functional disorders present at birth (Public Health in Europe No.4)

Cost-benefit analysis

The systematic comparison - in monetary terms - of all the costs and benefits of proposed alternative schemes with a view to determining)a) which scheme or combination of schemes will contribute most to the achievement of predetermined objectives at a fixed investment, or (b) the magnitude of the benefit that can result from schemes requiring the minimum investment. The resources required per unit of benefit must be determined, account being taken of the fact that costs and benefits accrue with time (Public Health in Europe No.4)

Crude birth rate:

Annual number of births per 1,000 population (The State of the World's *Children,*1992, UNICEF, p. 98).

Crude death rate:

Annual number of deaths per 1,000 population (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 98).

D:

Delivery:

the process by which fetuses are born. A twin delivery thus counts as one delivery and two births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Detection of multiple pregnancy rate:

detected before delivery as % of all multiple pregnancies. (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen

Direct obstetric deaths: (see Maternal death)

E:

Early neonatal mortality rate: deaths at 0-6 days after live birth x 1000/live births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

ENMR =

$$\frac{\text{Live birth x 1000}}{\text{Live births}}$$

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991) Infant and perinatal mortality 1990: RHAs and DHAS. Monitor DH3 91/2. London, HMSO)

Age classification for early neonatal deaths: (i) under 1 hour, 1 -1 1 hours, 12-23 hours, 24-47 hours, 48-71 hours, 72-167 hours (ii) under 1 hour, 1-23 hours, 24-1 67 hours.(International classification of diseases).

Note: Age at death during the first day of life (day zero) should be recorded in units of completed minutes or hours of life. For the second (day 1), third (day 2) and through 27 completed days of life , age of death should be recorded in days (WHA20.19, WHA 43.24, Article 23 WHO Geneva).

Eclampsia:

Convulsions and coma occurring in a pregnant or puerperal woman and associated with pre-eclampsia, that is a condition in pregnancy manifested by hypertension, oedema and/or proteinuria. Source: WHO/FHE/MSM 94.11

Eclampsia rate:

Eclampsia in pregnancy, during delivery or post-partum as % of all deliveries (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen, Germany 21-22 October 1993, WHO/EURO).

Epidemiological survey

A survey, which may use screening (q.v.) test, but whose principal aim is not to bring patients to treatment but to elucidate the prevalence, incidence and natural history of a disease under study -though case-finding is a natural by-product of such surveys. Also known as a population survey (Public Health in Europe No.4)

F

Family

The UN General Assembly in its resolution 44/82 of 8 December 1989, proclaimed 1994 as the International Year of the Family (IYF) with its theme of "Family: resources and responsibilities in a changing world." No attempt was made by the United Nations to define or delineate the "ideal family" or to direct "family policy" to specific goals. The concept of family is not easy to define. The family has been variously described as the nucleus and pillar of society and the natural bridge between the individual and society. The status of the family has also been referred to by the United Nations Committee on Civil and Political Rights. In commenting on Article 23 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the committee noted that:

> "the concept of the family may differ in some respects from State to State, and even from region to region within a State, and that it is therefore not possible to give the concept a standard definition. However, the Committee emphasises that, when a group of persons is regarded as a family under the legislation and practices of a State, it must be given the protection referred to in article 23."

Source: Year of the Family (1994) the concept of family health (A47 INF.Doc. 7) 6 May 1994.

Family planning

Implies the ability of individuals and couples to anticipate and attain their desired number of children and the spacing and timing of their births. FP is achieved through contraception defined as any means capable of preventing pregnancy - and through the treatment of involuntary infertility. The contraceptive effect can be obtained through temporary or permanent means. Temporary methods include: periodic abstinence during the fertile period, coitus interruptus (withdrawal), using the naturally occurring periods of infertility (e.g. during breast-feeding and postpartum amenorrhoea), through the use of reproductive hormones (e.g. oral pills and long-acting injections and implants), placement of a device in the uterus (e.g. copper-bearing and hormone-releasing intrauterine devices), interposing a barrier that prevents the ascension of the sperm into the upper female genital trace (e.g. condoms, diaphragms, and spermicides). Permanent methods of contraception include male and female sterilization.

Source: Working definition used by the Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction, and the Division of Family Health.

Fertility regulation

Is the process by which individuals and couples regulate their fertility. Methods that can be used for this purpose include, among others, delaying child-bearing, using contraception, seeking treatment for infertility, interrupting unwanted pregnancies, and, in the case of mothers with an infant or a small child, breast-feeding.

Source: Working definition used by the Special Programme of Research and Research Training in Human Reproduction, and the Division of Family Health.

Fertility (Replacement level)

The level of fertility leading to a stable population size (no demographic increase of decline).

Fertility rate (Total) (TRF)

The average number of children that would be born alive to a woman during her lifetime if she were to pass through her childbearing years conforming to the age-specific fertility rates of a given year. The rate refers to a synthetic female cohort. It is computed by the summation of the age-specific fertility rates. The total fertility rate is also used to indicate replacement level fertility; in the more developed countries, a rate of 2.1 is considered to be replacement level.

Source: Recent demographic developments in Europe, 1997, Council of Europe

Fertilization and Conception

The concepts of fertilization and conception are often confused. Fertilization refers to the union of an ovum and a sperm. Conception has been defined by the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology as occurring at the time of implantation of the fertilized ovum into the wall of the uterus - i.e. that point in the biological development corresponding to the beginning stages of a unique biological organism. The above distinction between fertilization and conception is used by the United States National Institutes of health in establishing various guidelines relevant to research in human reproduction.

Source: Working paper prepared and reviewed by WHO on The Definition of a Child.. Implications for Maternal and Child Health Programmes with particular reference to the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Fetal Death:

Death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy; the death is indicated by the fact that after such separation the fetus does not breathe or show any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles.

If gestation is less than 20 completed weeks, but less than 28 completed weeks, then death is called early fetal death. (International classification of diseases.)(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25).

Intermediate fetal death.

(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25, 1950 Expert Committee on Health Statistics: Report on the Second Session including reports on the First Sessions of the Subcommittees on definition of stillbirth, registration of cases of cancer and hospital statistics).

If gestation is 28 completed weeks or more, then death is called late fetal death.

(WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25).

Rationale: distinction among intrauterine deaths, antenatal deaths and fetal deaths during delivery is necessary to identify avoidable deaths (in principle, fetal deaths during delivery belong to this group) and to better analyse the problem.*

Implications for the quality of antenatal and delivery care.*

Fetal death rate prior to admission:

Intrauterine deaths after 22 completed weeks before admission to hospital as % of all > 22 weeks pregnancies.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*).*

G:

Gestational age

The duration of gestation is measured from the first day of the last normal menstrual period. Gestational age is expressed in completed days or completed weeks (e.g. events occurring 280 to 286 completed days after the onset of the last normal menstrual period are considered to have occurred at 40 weeks of gestation).

Gestational age is frequently a source of confusion, when calculations are based on menstrual dates. For the purposes of calculation of gestational age from the date of the first day of the last normal menstrual period and the date of delivery, it should be borne in mind that the first day is day zero and not day one; days 0-6 therefore correspond to "completed week zero"; days 7-13 to "completed week one", and the 40th week of actual gestation is synonymous with "completed week 39" Where the date of the last normal menstrual period is not available, gestational age should be based on the best clinical estimate. In order to avoid misunderstanding, tabulations should indicate both weeks and days. (International classification of diseases.)

H:

Health

"A state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity" (Public Health in Europe 4.)

Hospital

A hospital is a residential establishment which provides short-term and long-term medical care consisting of observational, diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative services for persons suffering or suspected to be suffering from a disease or injury, and for parturients. It may or may not also provide services for ambulatory patients on an out-patient basis (Public Health in Europe 4).

Hysterectomy: removal of the uterus.

Hysterectomy rate after delivery: within two days after delivery as % of all deliveries
(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*.)*

I:

Indirect obstetric deaths (see Maternal death)

Infant mortality rate:

annual number of deaths of infants under one year of age per 1,000 live births.
More specifically this is the probability of dying between birth and exactly one year of age (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 99).

$$\text{Infant mortality rate} = \frac{\text{Deaths under the age of 1 year after live birth x 1 000}}{\text{Live births}}$$

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991)

Instrumental delivery rate: forceps or vacuum extractor as % of all deliveries
(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*).*

Infertility: Inability to conceive, more specifically:

Primary infertility
Means that the couple has never conceived, despite cohabitation and exposure to pregnancy for a period of 2 years.

Secondary infertility
Means that the couple has previously conceived, but is subsequently unable to conceive despite cohabitation and exposure to pregnancy for a period of 2 years. If the woman has breast-fed a previous infant, then exposure to pregnancy is calculated from the end of lactational amenorroehea.

L:

Late neonatal mortality rate: deaths day 7-27 after live birth x 1000/Iive births
(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Deaths at 7-27 days after live birth x 1000
Late neonatal mortality rate = Live births
(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991))

Life expectancy at birth: The number of years new-born children would live is subject to the mortality risks prevailing for the cross-section of population at the time of their birth. (The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF, p. 99).

Live Birth: the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles, whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached; each product of such a birth is considered liveborn. (International classification of diseases.)

Note: For live births, birth weight should preferably be measured within the first hour of life before significant postnatal weight loss has occurred. While statistical tabulations include 500g groupings for birth weight, weights should not be recorded in those groupings. The actual weight should be recorded to the degree of accuracy to which it is measured. (WHA20.19, WHA43.24 Article 23, WHO Geneva).

M:

Major congenital malformations rate: according to specified list as % of all births (European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Maternal death:

The death of a women while pregnant or within 42 days of termination of pregnancy, irrespective of the duration and site of the pregnancy, from any cause related to or aggravated by the pregnancy or its management but not from accidental or incidental causes. (The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992. Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23).

Maternal death (late)

A late maternal death is the death of a woman from direct or indirect obstetric causes more than 42 days but less than one year after termination of pregnancy (International classification of Diseases).

Direct obstetric deaths:

Those resulting from obstetric complications of the pregnant state (pregnancy, labour and the puerperium) from interventions, omissions, incorrect treatment, or from a chain of events resulting from any of the above (expressed as rate per 1 000 live births) (The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992, Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23).

Indirect obstetric deaths:

Those resulting from previous existing disease or disease that developed during pregnancy and which was not due to direct obstetric causes, but which was aggravated by physiologic effects of pregnancy (expressed as rate per 1 000 live births). (The MATCAR E Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 199, Resolution WHA20.19 and WHA43.24, Article 23)..

Maternal mortality rate: Annual number of deaths of women from pregnancy related causes per 1 00,000 live births (The State of the World's Children).

Maternity care

The object of maternity care is to ensure that every expectant and nursing mother maintains good health, learns the art of child care, has a normal delivery and bears healthy children. Maternity care in the narrower sense consists in the care of the pregnant women, her safe delivery, her postnatal care and examination, the care of her newly born infant and the maintenance of lactation (Public Health in Europe 4).

Midwife

A person who, having been regularly admitted to a midwifery educational programme duly recognized in the country in which it is located, has successfully completed the prescribed course of studies in midwifery and has acquired the requisite qualifications to be registered and/or legally licensed to practice midwifery (Public Health in Europe 4).

Miscarriage

The accidental loss of a fetus before a full term pregnancy resulting in the death of the fetus

(Public Health in Europe 4).

N:

Neonatal Period

The neonatal period commences at birth and ends 28 completed days after birth. Neonatal deaths (deaths among live births during the first 28 completed days of life) may be subdivided into early neonatal deaths, occurring during the first seven days of life, and late neonatal deaths, occurring after the seventh day but before 28 completed days of life. (WHO Geneva WHA20.19, WHA43.24, Article 23).

Age at death during the first day of life (day zero) should be recorded in units of completed minutes or hours of life. For the second (day 1), third (day 2) and through 27 completed days of life, age at death should be recorded in days.

Neonatal mortality rate= $\dfrac{\text{deaths at 0-27 days after live birth } \mathbf{x} \text{ 1000}}{\text{Live births}}$

(Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991)

Neonatal seizures:

Clinically defined as paroxysmal alterations in neurologic function i.e. behavioural, motor, and/or autonomic function.

Source: Volpe J.J: Neurology of the newborn, 3rd ed. WB Saunders, Philadelphia, 1995.

No prenatal visit: no documented prenatal visit

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

P:

Perinatal period

The perinatal period commences at 22 completed weeks (1 54 days) of gestation (the time when birth weight is normally 500 g), and ends seven completed days after birth. (WHO Geneva, WHA20.19, WHA43.27, Article 23)

Perinatal mortality rate: subdivided in antenatal deaths + deaths in partu + deaths at 0-6 days after live birth x 1000/all births

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen).

Infant Postneonatal Mortality rate = $\dfrac{\text{deaths from 28 days to under 1 year after live birth x 1 000}}{\text{Live births}}$

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) 1991)

Pregnancy-related death:

A pregnancy-related death is the death of a woman while pregnant or within 42 days of termination of pregnancy, irrespective of the cause of death. (WHO Geneva WHA20.19, WHA43.24, Article 23).

Pre-term infants:

Less than 37 completed weeks (less than 259 days of gestation). (International Classification of Diseases).

R:

Reproductive Health

Within the framework of WHO's definition of health as a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity, reproductive health addresses the reproductive processes, functions and system at ail stages of life.

Reproductive health implies that people are able to have responsible, satisfying and safe sex life and that they have the capability to reproduce and the freedom to decide if, when and how often to do so. Implicit in this are the right of men and women to be informed of and to have access to safe, effective, affordable and acceptable methods of fertility regulation of their choice, and the right of access to appropriate health care services that will enable women to go safely through pregnancy and childbirth and provide couples with the best chance of having a health infant.

Source: Global Policy Committee of the World Health Organization, 2 May 1994: and the WHO Position Paper on Health, Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994.

(NB The definition of Reproductive Health presented in the ICPD document was a direct quote of draft report prepared by FHE and HRP for a document on Reproductive Health which was to be presented to the HRP PCC)

S:

Safe Motherhood

Safe motherhood aims at attaining optimal maternal and newborn health. It implies reduction of maternal mortality and morbidity and enhancement of the health of newborn infants through equitable access to primary health care including family planning, prenatal, delivery and postnatal care for the mother and infant, and access to primary health care including family planning, prenatal, delivery and postnatal care for the mother and infant, and access to essential obstetric and neonatal care.

Source: Mother-Baby Package, and the WHO Position Paper on Health Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994.

Sexual Health

“While recognizing that it is difficult to arrive at a universally acceptable definition of the totality of human sexuality, the following definition of sexual health is presented as a step in this direction:

Sexual health is the integration of the somatic, emotional, intellectual, and social aspects of sexual being in ways that are positively enriching and that enhance personality, communication, and love.

...Thus the notion of sexual health implies a positive approach to human sexuality, and the purposes of sexual health care should be the enhancement of life and personal relationships and not merely the counselling and care related to procreation or sexually transmitted diseases.

Source: Education and Treatment in Human Sexuality: the Training of Health Professionals, A report from a WHO meeting, Technical Report Series 572, World Health Organization, 1975. (N.B. This quote starting on line 4, without quotation marks or attribution to Who, is included as the definition of sexual health in the ICPD document para 7.1)

Sexuality

Human sexuality is a natural part of human development through every phase of life and includes physical, psychological, and social components. Sexual health implies a positive approach to human sexuality and is therefore an essential component of reproductive health. It includes the integration of somatic, emotional, intellectual, and social aspects of an individual in ways which positively enrich and enhance personality, communication, love and human relationships.

Stillbirth:

Birth of a baby showing no signs of life. For international comparisons of perinatal mortality rates only such stillborn infants with a birth weight of 1000 gr. or more are included (from 1989 it is recommended that the lower weight limit should be 500 gr). Sometimes stillborn babies are not weighed , in these cases a gestational age of 28 completed weeks or a body length of 35 cm can be taken as equivalent to 1000 gr birth weight.

$$\textbf{Stillbirth rate} = \frac{\text{Stillbirths x 1000}}{\text{live births + stillbirths}}$$

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys(OPCS) (1991))

T:

Term

From 37 completed weeks to less than 42 completed weeks (259 to 293 days) of gestation.

Term (Pre-)

Less than 37 completed weeks (less than 259 days) of gestation.

Term (Post-)

42 completed weeks or more (294 days or more) of gestation.

(International Classification of Diseases)

U:

Unattended deliveries : unattended by midwife/doctor as % of all deliveries.

(European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care, Tubingen*)*

Under five mortality rate: Annual number of deaths of children under five years of age per 1000 live births. More specifically, this is the probability of dying between birth and exactly five years of age (The State of the World's Children.)

REFERENCES

Banfield, P., Worning, AM, Staehr-Johansen, K. The MATCARE Textbook. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization 1992.

European Consensus Conference on Quality Assurance Indicators for perinatal Care Tubingen, Germany
21-22 October 1993, WHO/EURO.

Indicators for Assessing Breast-feeding Practices. Geneva: World Health Organization, Number 10,
February 1992-

International classification of diseases. Manual of the international statistical classification of diseases, injuries and causes of death. Based on the recommendations of the Ninth Revision Conference, 1975 and adopted by the Twenty-ninth World health Assembly. Geneva, World Health Organization 1977, Vol. 1.

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) (1991) Infant and perinatal mortality 1990: RHAs and DHAS. Monitor DH3 91/2 London, HMSO)

Public Health in Europe 4: Glossary of Health Care Terminology, WHO/EURO, 1978

Potts, M. et al. Abortion, Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1977.

The State of the World's Children, 1992, UNICEF.pp 98-99

Wagner, M. Having a baby in Europe. Copenhagen: European Regional Office, World Health Organization, 1985.

WHO Technical Report Series, No. 25, 1950 Expert Committee on Health Statistics: Report on the Second Session including reports on the First Sessions of the Subcommittees on definition of stillbirth, registration of cases of cancer and hospital statistics.

The Reproductive Health of Adolescents. a strategy for action, a Joint,WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF Statement, World Health Organization, Geneva, 1989.

Collaboration within the United Nations system: International Year of the Family (1994) the concept of family health (A47 INF.Doc. 7) 6 May 1994.

Education and Treatment in Human Sexuality: the Training of Health Professionals, A report from a WHO meeting, Technical Report Series 572, World Health Organization, 1975.

Mother-Baby Package. Report of an Interregional meeting, Geneva, 18-20 April 1994. WHO/FHE/MSM/94.3

WHO Position Paper on Health Population and Development for the International Conference on Population and Development, Cairo 5-13 September 1994

World Health Organization
Technical Report Series
No. 25

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Report on the Second Session

Geneva, 18-21 April 1950

Page
1. Reports of subcommittees 3
2. Medical certification and classification of causes of death . 6
3. Morbidity statistics 7
4. National committees on vital and health statistics 7

Annex 1. Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion : report on the first session 9
Annex 2. Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation : report on the first session 17
Annex 3. Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics : report on the first session 29

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
PALAIS DES NATIONS
GENEVA

OCTOBER 1950

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Second Session

Members :

Dr D. Curiel, Chief, Division of Epidemiology and Vital Statistics, Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, Caracas, Venezuela

Dr P. F. Denoix, Chef des Services techniques et de la Section du Cancer, Institut national d'Hygiène, Paris, France

Dr H. L. Dunn, Chief, National Office of Vital Statistics (US Public Health Service), Washington, D.C., USA

*Dr M. Kacprzak, Professor of Hygiene, Director, State School of Hygiene, Warsaw, Poland

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom (Chairman)

Representative of the United Nations :

F. E. Linder, Chief, Population and Vital Statistics Section, Statistical Office, Lake Success, N.Y.

Observer :

Dr M. de Viado, Social Security Section, ILO

Secretariat :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO (Secretary)

Dr Marie Cakrtova, International Nomenclature of Diseases and Causes of Death Section, WHO

The report on the second session of this committee was originally issued in mimeographed form as document WHO/HS/26, 21 April 1950.

---

* Indicates member unable to attend.

World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 25

EXPERT COMMITTEE ON HEALTH STATISTICS

Report on the Second Session[1]

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics held its second session in Geneva from 18 to 21 April 1950.

In the absence of Dr Kacprzak, Dr P. Stocks was elected Chairman of the session.

1. Reports of Subcommittees

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics reviewed the work of its three subcommittees :

Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, which held its first session in Paris from 27 February to 3 March 1950 ;

Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation, which held its first session in Paris from 6 to 10 March 1950 ;

Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics, which held its first session in Geneva from 11 to 14 April 1950.

The reports of these subcommittees were adopted by the committee with minor amendments and some comments, and are annexed to this report.[2]

The committee adopted the following resolution :

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS

1. that these reports be published and, in addition to routine distribution, be made available to the national committees on vital and

---

[1] The Executive Board, at its sixth session, adopted the following resolution :

The Executive Board

1. NOTES the report of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics on its second session, and

2. AUTHORIZES its publication.

(Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 29)

[2] See Annexes 1, 2, and 3, pages 9, 17, and 29.

health statistics (or their equivalents), and to other organizations and persons having an interest in the subject matter contained in them;

2. that the World Health Assembly adopt sections 1, 2, and 3, dealing with the definition of " live birth ", " foetal death ", and the " registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths ", from the report of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, and section 1.1, dealing with the statistical definition of " cancer ", from the report of the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation; [3]

3. that all other pertinent recommendations contained in the reports of these three subcommittees be submitted by WHO to the various nations for study and experimental use, with the aim of facilitating in the future an international review of the proposed procedures in the light of experience gained;

4. that the following problems be suggested for study to national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents): [4]

   (1) in the field of statistics of infant and foetal deaths (Annex 1, section 9)

      (a) special studies on live births and foetal deaths in relation to various factors (gestation period, birth-weight, single or multiple birth, etc.), to obtain a statistical basis for a satisfactory definition of immaturity

      (b) classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated

---

[3] The Third World Health Assembly adopted the following resolution (WHA3.6):

The Third World Health Assembly . . .

3. ADOPTS, as recommendations under Article 23 of the Constitution and Article 17 of Regulations No. 1 of the World Health Organization, the definitions of " live birth " and " foetal death ", from sections 1 and 2 of the report of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion as well as the recommendations of that subcommittee made on " the registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths " in section 3 of its report;

4. ADOPTS also as recommendations under the said provisions of the Constitution and Regulations No. 1, the statistical definition of " cancer " given in the report of the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation;

5. REQUESTS the Director-General to give these definitions as much publicity as possible with a view to their wide acceptance;

[4] The Third World Health Assembly adopted the following resolution (WHA3.6):

The Third World Health Assembly . . .

6. AGREES to submit to the various nations for study and experimental use all the other pertinent recommendations contained in the reports of these three subcommittees and to suggest to national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalent) the studies mentioned in the said report (section 1, paragraphs 3 and 4 of resolution).

(c) magnitude of loss of foetal lives at various periods of pregnancy

(d) better utilization of records of maternity and children's hospitals for medical-statistical research into the causes of foetal and infant death

(2) in the field of cancer statistics (Annex 2)

(a) collection of information concerning difficulties arising in the application of the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death [5] in classifying neoplasms, and formulation of specific suggestions on this matter (section 1.2)

(b) study of the accuracy of diagnoses on death certificates, with particular reference to cancer (section 1.4)

(c) studies of mortality from cancer of different sites by geographical areas, and social and environmental factors (section 1.5)

(d) definitions of anatomical site and stage of the neoplasm (section 2.2)

(3) in the field of hospital statistics (Annex 3)

(a) adaptation of the International Statistical Classification to serve as an index of medical records by diagnosis (section 5 c)

(b) collection of information on the present definitions in use in hospital statistics which enter into the evaluation of hospital experiences by diagnosis (e.g., hospital, hospital bed, inpatient, outpatient, admission, discharge, patient-day, etc.) (section 4)

(c) study of methods for bridging the gap between hospital statistics, which are selective in character, and statistics which would be representative of the community from which the hospital patients are drawn (family type of survey, complete coverage of medical services, etc.) [6]

(d) study of morbidity of repeated hospitalizations (section 5 f)

(e) collection of statistics of mental disorders causing admissions to mental institutions according to various measurable factors reflecting upon etiology, and of statistics of the outcome of hospitalization (section 5 a)

(f) collection of statistics of tuberculosis patients admitted to tuberculosis sanatoria and institutions according to various measurable factors bearing upon the need for beds (section 5 b)

---

[5] Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948-49, 2 vol.

[6] For further comments of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, see Annex 3, page 31, footnote 5.

(g) collection of statistics of obstetrical admissions reflecting upon the use of hospital beds, and outpatient and domiciliary facilities for deliveries (section 5 d)

(h) development of a statistical classification of operations and of anaesthetic procedures (section 5 e)

5. that the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation and the Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics each hold a second session to consider the items still pending of their programme, utilizing as much as possible information collected by the various national committees on the problems suggested for study in hospital statistics and registration of cancer cases.

2. Medical Certification and Classification of Causes of Death

After review of the present state of the problem of medical certification and the difficulties incident to the introduction of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death (Sixth Revision) into the procedure of the various nations, the committee reaffirms the position adopted at its first session, held in Geneva from 23 to 28 May 1949,[7] and urges that the work outlined in the pertinent recommendations be considered a primary and continuing responsibility of WHO, involving not merely the prompt publication of the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death in English, French, and Spanish but also the promotion of the use of the Classification by the nations.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

I. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS strongly an early implementation of the resolution adopted by the Second Health Assembly concerning the establishment of a clearing centre for problems arising in the application of the International Statistical Classification.[8] The clearing centre should be an integral part of the regular and continuing activities of WHO, providing also a mechanism for collecting and preserving experience and suggestions of value for subsequent revisions of the classification.

II. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS

1. that, drawing upon experiences available in some countries, WHO promote the education of physicians in the proper use of the international form of medical certificate of cause of death, by (a) preparing

---

[7] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 5

[8] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

and circulating pamphlets and manuals, and (b) developing programmes and material for teaching physicians and medical students;

2. that WHO actively promote the use of the International Statistical Classification by countries, by (a) preparing descriptive material and instruction manuals, and (b) stimulating and conducting training courses for morbidity and mortality coders within the educational and training programme of WHO.

3. Morbidity Statistics

The committee adopted the following resolution:

The Expert Committee on Health Statistics,

Considering the magnitude and complexity of statistical procedures in morbidity,

RECOMMENDS that the next session of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics be called early in 1951, to which co-opted members suitable for considering the matter of morbidity statistics should be invited, with the object of obtaining an orientation, evaluation, and selection of the projects requiring international action in this field. In preparation for this session, WHO is requested to ask national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate national and international agencies, for a report on their present and planned activities in morbidity statistics, and also for their viewpoints as to what should be undertaken by WHO and other international organizations to develop and improve morbidity statistics.

4. National Committees on Vital and Health Statistics

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

I. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics,

Considering that, pursuant to the recommendation of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, adopted at its first session,[9] several nations have now organized national committees on vital and health statistics,

RECOMMENDS strongly an early implementation of the resolution adopted by the Second Health Assembly concerning the establishment of a focal unit for maintaining relationship with national committees (or other national equivalents).[10]

---

[9] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 3

[10] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

II. The Expert Committee on Health Statistics

RECOMMENDS that WHO take steps to initiate an international conference of representatives of national committees, to be sent at the expense of their respective governments; this meeting to be held early in 1952.

Annex 1

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

Report on the First Session

Paris, 27 February - 3 March 1950

Page
1. Live birth and live born 11
2. Foetal death 12
3. Registration and tabulation of live births and infant deaths 12
4. Tabulation of live births and foetal deaths 12
5. Registration of foetal deaths 14
6. Improvement of reporting of live births and foetal deaths . 14
7. Foetal death certificate 14
8. Foetal death rates 15
9. Resolutions 16

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

First Session

Members :

Dr D. Baird, Regius Professor of Midwifery, University of Aberdeen, United Kingdom (Chairman)

Dr M. A. van Bouwdijk Bastiaanse, Professor of Obstetrics and Gynaecology, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands

Dr E. F. Daily, Director, Division of Health Services, US Children's Bureau, Social Security Administration, Washington, D.C., USA (Rapporteur)

Dr L. Dérobert, Professeur agrégé à la Faculté de Médecine de l'Université de Paris, France

F. Fraser Harris, Director, Health and Welfare Division, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, Canada

Member of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Secretary :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/STDEF/9, 14 March 1950, and WHO/HS/STDEF/9 Rev. 1, 21 April 1950.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE DEFINITION OF STILLBIRTH AND ABORTION

Report on the First Session

The subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Paris from 27 February to 3 March 1950.

The subcommittee reviewed at length the present international situation concerning the great diversity of definitions of live birth and foetal deaths (abortions and stillbirths) in use in different countries, which produces so many difficulties in the international comparability of demographic data. The subcommittee recognized the great importance of setting up uniform standards in this matter which might, by gaining a wide acceptance and application, improve considerably the reliability and comparability of vital statistics in the world.

The question of prematurity (immaturity) presents complex problems because of the absence of basic national information (weight, length, and other characteristics of the immature infant by period of gestation) essential for the purpose of establishing a definition of immaturity (prematurity) likely to be widely adopted.

After studying the various aspects of these problems, the subcommittee decided to present to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics the following recommendations and views.

1. Live Birth and Live Born

The subcommittee felt that consideration should first be given to the definition of " live birth ", since it was not defined uniformly by all countries and as a result statistics directly or indirectly related to live birth were not comparable. Since the French language has no word corresponding to the English term "live birth", the definition was made to cover both " live birth " and " live born ".

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 3

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

The following definition is recommended for consideration by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, and for adoption by the World Health Assembly :

> Live birth is the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy, which, after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles, whether or not the umbilical cord has been cut or the placenta is attached ; each product of such a birth is considered live born.

2. Foetal Death

The subcommittee discussed the variety of definitions of stillbirth current in different parts of the world, the previous difficulties encountered when an international definition of stillbirth was proposed, and the need for data on total foetal wastage which could not be secured under any of the usual definitions of stillbirth. The subcommittee concluded that " foetal death " should be defined rather than the term " stillbirth ", and that the definition of foetal death should be the reverse of the definition of live birth.

The following definition is recommended for consideration by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics, and for adoption by the World Health Assembly :

> Foetal death is death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother of a product of conception, irrespective of the duration of pregnancy; the death is indicated by the fact that after such separation the foetus does not breathe or show any other evidence of life, such as beating of the heart, pulsation of the umbilical cord, or definite movement of voluntary muscles.

3. Registration and Tabulation of Live Births and Infant Deaths

All live-born infants should be registered and counted as such irrespective of the period of gestation, and if they die at any time following birth they should also be registered and counted as deaths.

4. Tabulation of Live Births and Foetal Deaths

It was believed desirable to obtain as far as possible tabulations of live births and of foetal deaths by comparable periods of gestation, and that there would be many advantages in having the reportable periods the same for all live births and foetal deaths.

The selection of the number of weeks of gestation to be included in the tabulations recommended was made after studying current data on foetal deaths and live births in various countries. Foetal deaths are now usually tabulated either after the 20th week or the 28th week of gestation. It was noted that very rarely are infants reported as being live born before the 20th week ; at 28 weeks there are, in England, approximately three times as many live births as there are foetal deaths and, judging from this experience, this appears to be about the time when the live born begin to have a fair chance of survival. From the clinical standpoint, it was felt that dividing lines at the 20th and 28th weeks could reasonably be used since clinical conditions affecting live birth and foetal death change appreciably at about these periods.

The subcommittee recommended :

(a) Tabulation of all live births, irrespective of the period of gestation, by all countries, with at least the following groups :

Less than 20 completed weeks of gestation	Group I
20 completed weeks of gestation but less than 28	Group II
28 completed weeks of gestation and over	Group III
Gestation period not classifiable in groups I, II, and III	Group IV

(The period of gestation is measured from the beginning of the last menstruation)

(b) Tabulation of all foetal deaths is a desirable goal and should be attained as soon as possible.

(c) As a minimum all countries should register and tabulate all foetal deaths occuring after the 28th completed week of gestation.

(d) The following groups should be used in tabulations of foetal deaths :

Less than 20 completed weeks of gestation	Group I
20 completed weeks of gestation but less than 28	Group II
28 completed weeks of gestation and over	Group III
Gestation period not classifiable in groups I, II, and III	Group IV

(The period of gestation is measured from the beginning of the last menstruation)

Foetal deaths, group I, may also be described as " early foetal deaths ".

Foetal deaths, group II, may also be described as " intermediate foetal deaths ".

Foetal deaths, group III, may also be described as " late foetal deaths ".

(e) For international statistical purposes, live births and foetal deaths should be classified into groups I, II, III, and IV as defined above.

(f) The term " abortion " as applied to a product of conception and the term " stillbirth " should be retained only if essential for internal use within a nation. The subcommittee did not attempt to define the term " abortion ".

(g) The term " stillbirth " when used in the statistics of any country should be synonymous with group III (late foetal deaths).

It was realized that the term " stillbirth " would of necessity continue to be used by many countries for some time.

(h) Publication of foetal death statistics alongside of neonatal mortality data should be encouraged to facilitate comparative studies.

5. Registration of Foetal Deaths

Both birth and death certificates should not be required for registration of any foetal death ; a single foetal death certificate should be sufficient.

6. Improvement of Reporting of Live Births and Foetal Deaths

The following steps are considered necessary to promote the reporting of all live births and foetal deaths :

(a) The importance of registration of foetal deaths and live births should be stressed to physicians, midwives, and civil registrars, and their co-operation should be sought.

(b) Laws and regulations concerning the registration of live births should be amended along the lines of section 3 in countries where such a registration depends upon the infant being still alive at the time of registration.

7. Foetal Death Certificate

The subcommittee felt that sufficient experience had not yet been gained to determine the best form for a foetal death certificate and that premature standardization might hinder rather than help the attainment of good statistics in the long run.

The subcommittee recommended that all causes shown in the certificate should be tabulated to provide guidance in subsequently designing an international standard form of certificate of foetal death.

(a) Foetal death certificates should always include at least the following data :

(i) cause of foetal death

(ii) number of weeks of gestation

(b) For those nations or States which can secure additional data on foetal deaths, whether on the registration certificate or by special study, the following information should be obtained from physicians and analysed :

A. Conditions which you believe may have contributed to the death of the foetus

1. General health of the mother ....

2. Conditions of pregnancy and labour ....

3. Conditions of foetus, placenta, and cord ....

B. Foetal autopsy performed : Yes or no ....

Causes found at autopsy ....

C. Cause of foetal death, in your opinion ....

D. Additional data :

1. Duration of pregnancy (in weeks) ....

2. Birth weight ....

3. Time of death : Before labour : Yes or no ....

During labour : Yes or no ....

Uncertain ....

4. (a) Normal labour : Yes or no ....

(b) Manipulative, instrumental, or other operative procedure for delivery

....

(Give details)

8. Foetal Death Rates

Since registration and reporting of foetal deaths will be incomplete in varying degrees in different countries and the total number of pregnancies can be only roughly estimated, it would seem advisable that "foetal death rates " for international comparison be expressed by using as the denominator the number of live births rather than the estimated total number of pregnancies or total number of births. This would not preclude the calculation of other rates for special purposes.

9. Resolutions

Resolution No. 1 : Immaturity

The subcommittee recommends to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics that national committees on vital and health statistics be urged to stimulate the special studies of live births and foetal deaths which will provide data needed to arrive at a satisfactory definition of immaturity. Such special studies will, of course, be carried out in selected areas or by sample techniques assuring adequate representativeness.

It is recommended that the inter-relation of the following factors at least be included in such studies :

(a) gestation period (last completed week measuring from the beginning of the last menstruation)

(b) birth weight (with groupings of not less than 250 g. difference, i.e., 250 to 500 g., 500 to 750 g., 750 to 1,000 g., ... 3,000 to 3,250 g., etc.)

(c) whether single or multiple birth

(d) whether a first pregnancy or not

(e) sex

(f) race

(g) age and height of the mother

(h) social data (such as occupation of the father or head of the family, and legitimacy)

(i) if dead within one month, the number of days after birth when death occurred.

The influence of epidemic and other diseases upon the incidence of premature labour should also be studied.

Resolution No. 2

The loss of foetal lives at all periods of gestation is considered a public-health problem of great magnitude which should command the particular attention of all nations. It is recommended that the Expert Committee on Health Statistics request the several national committees on vital and health statistics to study :

(a) Suitable classification of foetal deaths when more than one cause is stated.

(b) Magnitude of loss of foetal lives at various periods of pregnancy.

(c) Better utilization of records of maternity and children's hospitals for medical-statistical research into the causes of foetal and infant death.

Annex 2

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

Report on the First Session

Paris, 6-10 March 1950

Page

1. Mortality statistics 19
2. Morbidity statistics and cancer registration 21
3. Therapeutic statistics 23
4. Annual reports on the results of radiotherapy in cancer of the uterine cervix 27

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

First Session

Members :

Dr J. Clemmesen, Chief, Cancer Registry, Copenhagen, Denmark (Chairman)

Dr H. F. Dorn, Biometrics Section, National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health (US Public Health Service), Washington, D.C., USA (Rapporteur)

Members of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. F. Denoix, Chef des Services techniques et de la Section du Cancer, Institut national d'Hygiène, Paris, France

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Consultant :

Dr J. Heyman, Editor, Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix, Stockholm, Sweden

Secretary :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/CANC/12, 10 March 1950, and WHO/HS/CANC/12 Rev.1, 21 April 1950.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON THE REGISTRATION OF CASES OF CANCER AS WELL AS THEIR STATISTICAL PRESENTATION

Report on the First Session

The Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer as well as their Statistical Presentation of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Paris from 6 to 10 March 1950.

The subcommittee reviewed the tentative agenda, and agreed to discuss the statistical problems arising in the study of cancer under the following headings in the order shown :

(1) Mortality statistics

(2) Morbidity statistics and cancer registration

(3) Therapeutic statistics

(4) Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix

1. Mortality Statistics

1.1 Statistical definition of " cancer "

It was pointed out that there was no general agreement concerning the statistical definition of " cancer " in terms of the categories appearing in the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death.[3] In previous editions of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death, Hodgkin's disease, leukaemia and aleukaemia, mycosis fungoides (nos. 201, 204, and 205 respectively of the 1948 revision), and some other numerically unimportant conditions now included in code numbers 200-205, were not classified as cancer. In order to remove any doubt concerning the statistical definition of " cancer " and, at the same time, to provide statistics comparable with those of the past, the subcommittee recommends that :

(a) Total cancer deaths should be based upon nos. 140-205 of the International Statistical Classification (1948).

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 4

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

[3] See Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948, 1.

(b) For comparability with the past, the following subgroups should also be shown :

(i) Cancer excluding Hodgkin's disease, leukaemia and aleukaemia —nos. 140-205, except 201 and 204

(ii) Hodgkin's disease—no. 201

(iii) Leukaemia and aleukaemia—no. 204

1.2 Difficulties arising in application of section II—Neoplasms—of the International Statistical Classification (1948)

Several members of the subcommittee pointed out that, in their experience, certain problems had arisen in the use of section II—Neoplasms—of the International Statistical Classification (1948). Among these were (a) lack of sufficient detail for certain sites, (b) inclusion of secondary sites in the same subsections as primary sites, (c) presentation of statistics, when cancer appears on death certificates along with other causes, and (d) some uncertainty concerning definitions of various sites in as much as the classification of neoplasms is based on a mixture of anatomical locations and histological types.

In the discussion of these and other problems, the desirability of collecting information on the current experience of other users of the International Statistical Classification was emphasized. Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends :

that measures should be initiated for the collection, through the various national committees on vital and health statistics, or other appropriate agencies, of information concerning difficulties arising in the use of the section on Neoplasms of the International Statistical Classification (1948), together with specific suggestions for overcoming them, and that this information be referred to the subcommittee for study and recommendation.

1.3 Tabulation of multiple causes of death

The desirability of annual tabulations of multiple causes of death, especially if cancer is one of the certified causes, was discussed. Although general agreement existed on this point, it was believed that many countries would consider annual tabulation too expensive. Nevertheless, it was felt that countries which could afford to do so should be encouraged to make frequent tabulations of multiple causes of death following the form suggested in the Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death. Such tabulations could be obtained from representative samples of all deaths. The subcommittee recommends :

that countries should be encouraged to prepare, annually or as frequently as possible, tabulations showing multiple causes of death.

1.4 Accuracy of diagnoses on death certificates

The subcommittee emphasized the importance of continuous efforts to evaluate and improve the accuracy of diagnoses entered upon death certificates, with particular reference to cancer; it felt that too few studies of the reliability of diagnoses on death certificates have been made in recent years. Much of the value of an international statistical classification is lost if the diagnoses as coded are unreliable. Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, be urged to study the question of the accuracy of diagnoses entered on death certificates, with particular reference to cancer, by comparing such diagnoses with the results obtained from postmortems and from other relevant sources of information.

1.5 Studies of geographical variation

The subcommittee reviewed studies which had been made in England and Wales of geographical variation in mortality from cancer of specific sites. It agreed that such studies might well reveal significant variations in mortality from cancer which could form the basis for investigations of etiological factors. Before such studies are made, variation due to differences in age composition of the various populations should be allowed for, and, if studies are made for rural and urban populations, appropriate adjustments should be made for deaths of non-residents. The subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, be encouraged to sponsor studies of geographical variations in mortality from cancer of specific sites, especially with regard to the corresponding variation of social and environmental factors, and that, if urban and rural areas are used for this purpose, definitions of rural and urban areas and the adjustments made to allow for non-residence be indicated clearly. As a basis for such studies, cancer mortality statistics should be tabulated for a series of years, showing, for States, provinces, regions, counties, or other appropriate territorial subdivisions of the nations, the number of deaths for at least each site detailed in the Intermediate List of the International Statistical Classification (1948) and in accordance with WHO Regulations No. 1, Article 6 (b).

2. Morbidity Statistics and Cancer Registration

2.1 Procedures

The subcommittee reviewed the information concerning existing projects for the study of morbidity from cancer and the establishment of cancer registration systems in various countries. It was agreed not to recommend that cancer be made a reportable disease by law.

The subcommittee considered the progress achieved in the various projects already established (a) for registration and follow-up of cancer patients at hospitals and similar institutions in Canada, England, France, and other countries, (b) for ascertainment of total cancer morbidity in selected cities and counties of the USA, and (c) for combining these two aims in Denmark, Norway, and certain areas of the USA.

Such projects were believed to be of great value (a) for improving the possibility that patients developing cancer shall in the future receive the earliest and best treatment available, (b) for increasing knowledge of cancer morbidity and of its relationship with social and environmental factors, (c) for providing indications for scientific studies on particular points of the etiology of cancer, and (d) for ascertaining the prospects of survival and apparent recovery with a view to measuring in the future the value of steps taken to secure earlier and better treatment. The subcommittee recommends:

(1) that efforts be made to determine the total incidence of cancer in populations of sample areas within several countries during a year or period of years, using for that purpose all available sources of information (e.g., doctors, pathologists, hospitals, death certificates);

(2) that cancer-registration projects aiming at ascertainment of follow-up histories of patients should be encouraged with a view to eventual inclusion in such registration systems of all persons affected by cancer, thus eliminating selective bias, so as to arrive at true morbidity, survival, and apparent-recovery rates.

2.2 Definition of anatomical site and stage

The subcommittee recognized that, in order to achieve greater precision in and to improve the comparability of studies of morbidity and of therapeutic statistics of cancer, there should be common agreement on (a) the anatomical delimitations of the sites, and (b) the definition of the stages of disease, that is, the extension of the neoplasm. Although it realized that many years might elapse before these objectives could be achieved, due to the complexity of these problems and to the absence of general agreement at the present time, nevertheless, the subcommittee considered it highly desirable that a start should be made.

Accordingly, the subcommittee recommends:

that national committees on vital and health statistics, and other appropriate agencies, in consultation with cancer specialists, be requested to prepare definitions, illustrated by diagrams if possible, of (a) some or all of the principal anatomical sites affected by cancer, and (b) the stages of disease, that is, the extension of the neoplasm, and to submit these definitions to WHO for reference to the subcommittee for study and recommendation.

2.3 Code for histological type

The subcommittee noted that the US National Committee on Vital and Health Statistics was co-operating with a number of professional medical societies in the development of a standard code for histological type of neoplasms. The subcommittee expressed interest in this project, and agreed to postpone any action with reference to the development of a code of this nature until the one now being prepared in the USA could be completed and made available for study.

3. Therapeutic Statistics

The subcommittee reviewed various plans for the presentation of therapeutic statistics, and arrived at the following conclusions:

3.1 Intervals for follow-up

In view of the fact that

(a) the absence of any commonly agreed method of calculating survival and apparent-recovery (" cure ") rates for cancer leads to great confusion and prevents correct comparisons of the results of different therapeutic procedures,

(b) a single fixed interval before results are recorded, five years for example, although appropriate for certain types of cancer, is not necessarily of general application for all kinds of neoplasms,

(c) after the lapse of three or four years, rates based upon the total interval for follow-up become increasingly defective owing to such factors as normal mortality and inability to keep patients under continuous observation, and

(d) an annual follow-up examination, especially in the years immediately subsequent to treatment, is in the interest of the patient,

the subcommittee recommends that survival and apparent-recovery rates should be calculated at the end of one year, two years, three years, etc., from the beginning of the observation, rates for the first five years being based on the total number of cases. For subsequent annual intervals the denominator of the rate should be the number still at risk at the beginning of that interval, cumulative rates for periods after five years being obtained by the multiplication of consecutive annual rates.

3.2 Definitions and rules

(a) The starting point of the first 12-month interval should always be specified. For the comparison of different methods of treatment, the date of first treatment for cancer may be the starting point ; for the study of the efficiency of medical care or for public-health purposes the date of first diagnosis of cancer may be the starting point ; for cases diagnosed in a hospital this will be considered to be the date of the visit or of the admission during which diagnosis is made.

(b) It is very important for accurate evaluation of therapeutic results to achieve a complete follow-up of all patients, and every effort should be made to trace each patient. Those who cannot be traced after each 12-month interval should be assumed, for purposes of uniformity and comparability, to have died of unknown causes during that interval.[4]

(c) All cases diagnosed as cancer, whether treated or not, should be included with the exception of patients referred for diagnosis only.

(d) It is desirable that all diagnoses be confirmed histologically, but every patient diagnosed as having cancer should be included whether or not the diagnosis has been verified histologically. For special purposes those not so verified may be studied separately.

(e) Patients should be classified according to the site of cancer originally diagnosed. If another primary cancer develops, it should be considered as an intercurrent disease.

(f) It is desirable that the condition of patients classified as alive with no evidence of the disease should be established through examination by the reporting physician or hospital.

---

[4] The Expert Committee on Health Statistics wishes to stress the fact that the only way to obtain accurate survival- and recovery-rates which will be beyond criticism is to keep the numbers of patients who are lost sight of and of patients whose condition is uncertain so small that it makes no appreciable difference what assumption is made about them. Nevertheless, since that aim often cannot be completely realized, it is important for purposes of comparability to formulate rules for dealing with the uncertain groups and to agree to use them. From the nature of the problem, it is not possible to devise rules which are perfectly satisfactory both from the theoretical and practical aspects ; and the best that can be done is to suggest a formula which takes account of both aspects as far as possible, and ask that it be used for uniformity's sake even by those who may object to some detail of it.

If patients who are lost sight of could be regarded as an unbiased sample, theoretical considerations would require their omission from both numerator and denominator of the rates ; but since it is known that in practice the group tends to be overloaded with patients who have died, and since such bias tends to improve the rates of survival and apparent recovery, the committee agrees, although this may introduce a slight bias in the opposite sense, that it is safer to regard all the untraced patients as dead of unknown causes at the end of the annual interval. If later any such patients are found to be alive, the annual rate should then be recalculated accordingly. This will provide a strong incentive to institutions to reduce this group to the absolute minimum by persistent and continued efforts.

(g) Patients should be classified according to their condition at the end of each reporting 12-month interval, whether or not they have been successfully treated for a recurrence.

3.3 Classification of patient's condition

For the calculation of the rates, the condition of each patient at the end of each 12-month period should be recorded and tabulated as follows:

A = number known to be alive

- A_o — with no evidence of the disease
- A_c — with cancer present
- A_x — with presence of cancer uncertain

D = number known to be dead

- D_o — with no evidence of the disease
- D_c — with cancer present
- D_x — with presence of cancer uncertain at death

L = number untraced at end of year

3.4 Definition of rates

The subcommittee recommends that the survival-rates for each of the periods considered be defined as follows:

Crude survival-rate is the number of persons known to be alive at the end of the period considered divided by the total number who were alive at the beginning of this period.

$$SR_{cru} = \frac{A}{A + D + L}$$

There are, of course, different methods of correcting the crude rate to allow for natural mortality, of which the following is one:

Corrected survival-rate is the crude rate as defined above divided by the probability of not dying within a comparable period from any cause other than cancer of the site in question, in a population having the same age distribution as the patients comprising the group. For most sites, this probability (p) does not usually differ appreciably from the probability of not dying from any cause.

$$SR_{cor} = \frac{SR_{cru}}{p}$$

Crude apparent-recovery rate in the first year from the starting point is the number of persons alive with no evidence of the disease at the end of 12 months, divided by the total number who were alive at the start.

$$RR_{cru} = \frac{A_o}{A + D + L}$$

For periods of two, three, four, or five years the denominator of the fraction is the same as that used at the end of the first year ; but for annual intervals after five years it is changed to the number alive with no evidence of the disease at the beginning of the interval.

There are also different methods for adjusting the crude apparent-recovery rate, of which the following is one : [5]

Adjusted apparent-recovery rate in the first year is the crude rate as defined above modified to allow for the patients whose condition at the end of the interval was uncertain, and to allow for the duration of life with no evidence of the disease experienced during the 12 months by those who died :

$$RR_{adj} = \frac{A_o\left(1 + \frac{A_x}{A_o + A_c}\right) + \frac{D_o}{2}\left(1 + \frac{D_x + L}{D_o + D_c}\right)}{A + D + L}$$

For periods after the first year, proceed as for the crude rate.

3.5 Graphic presentation of statistics

The subcommittee reviewed with interest the form for the graphic presentation of therapeutic statistics developed by the Institut National d'Hygiène, France, and wishes to call attention to an example of its use appearing in the Bulletin de l'Institut National d'Hygiène.[6] It strongly endorsed the view that therapeutic statistics should be presented in a clear and unequivocal manner, and wished to encourage all efforts for the accomplishment of this purpose. The subcommittee felt that various forms equally satisfactory for the graphic presentation of therapeutic statistics might be devised, and did not believe it desirable, at this time, to recommend any particular pattern. It wishes to call attention, however, to the form used by the Institut National d'Hygiène in the hope that it may stimulate other institutions or persons to develop similar methods for the diagrammatic presentation of therapeutic statistics.

---

[5] Many different methods can be suggested for adjusting the crude apparent-recovery rate, but all are necessarily imperfect and open to some criticism. Whilst recognizing certain defects of the " adjusted apparent-recovery rate ", the Expert Committee on Health Statistics is unable for the time being to improve upon it, and advocates its trial for a period of years in the interests of comparability, emphasizing at the same time that the aim must be to so improve follow-up services that L, A_x, and D_x all approximate to zero, at which point the need for adjustment disappears. If subsequently any patients classed as A_x or D_x are found to have been in one of the defined groups, the rate should be recalculated accordingly.

[6] Bull. Inst. nat. Hyg. 1950, 5, 44

4. Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix

The subcommittee considered the Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix edited by Dr J. Heyman and originally issued by the League of Nations Health Organization. In view of the fact that the subcommittee has recommended that WHO adopt standard rules and procedures for the calculation and presentation of therapeutic statistics and promote their general use in order to bring about comparability, thus implicitly endorsing their value ; and noting the opinion that the publication of the Annual reports referred to above, in spite of certain deficiencies, has stimulated various efforts to improve the presentation of therapeutic results; and, furthermore, believing that the systematic collection and presentation of therapeutic statistics in accordance with standard rules and procedures undoubtedly will encourage the betterment of methods of treatment of persons with cancer ; the subcommittee recommends that these Annual reports continue to be published if at all possible.

The subcommittee, with specific reference to the Annual Reports on the Results of Radiotherapy in Cancer of the Uterine Cervix, recommends :

(a) that their scope be broadened to include all cases of cancer of the uterine cervix whatever the method of treatment ;

(b) that the rules and methods of calculation and presentation of therapeutic statistics proposed by this subcommittee be followed in the preparation of the Annual reports, and that the advice of the subcommittee be sought if any difficulties should arise in this connexion ;

(c) that the report of a given institution should be accepted for publication only if it includes every case of cancer of the uterine cervix examined at the institution, the only exception being patients referred to it for diagnosis only ;

(d) that a careful review should be made of the arrangement of the contents of the published volume with a view to reducing the space allotted to each report by omitting the presentation of very small frequencies, by reducing the amount of detailed statistics already published in previous reports, and by other similar means ;

(e) that a concise, analytical summary, illustrated with appropriate graphs, of the principal conclusions to be drawn from the statistics should be a regular feature of each volume.

Annex 3

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

Report on the First Session

Geneva, 11-14 April 1950

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

First Session

Members :

Dr E. L. Crosby, Director, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., USA

*Dr P. Foltz, Medical Director, Ospedale San Giovanni di Torino, Turin, Italy

Dr Marie Lindhardt, Head, Statistical Section, National Health Service, Copenhagen, Denmark (Chairman)

Professor J. Rasuhin, Professor of Social Medicine, University of Zagreb, Yugoslavia

Member of WHO Expert Committee on Health Statistics :

Dr P. Stocks, Chief Medical Statistician, General Register Office of England and Wales, London, United Kingdom

Observer :

Dr M. de Viado, Social Security Section, ILO

Secretariat :

Dr M. Pascua, Deputy Director, Division of Health Statistics, WHO (Secretary)

Dr Marie Cakrtova, International Nomenclature of Diseases and Causes of Death Section, WHO

The report on the first session of this subcommittee was originally issued in mimeographed form as documents WHO/HS/Hosp.Stat./7, 18 April 1950, and WHO/HS/Hosp.Stat./7 Rev.1, 21 April 1950.

---

* Indicates member unable to attend.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOSPITAL STATISTICS

Report on the First Session

The Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics was established by decision of the Executive Board at its fourth session,[1] in implementation of a request of the Second World Health Assembly.[2]

The subcommittee held its first session in Geneva from 11 to 14 April 1950.

The terms of reference of the subcommittee are indicated in the following recommendation adopted by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics during its first session :

> The Expert Committee on Health Statistics
>
> RECOMMENDS
>
> (1) that a subcommittee of the Expert Committee on Health Statistics be set up in order to initiate the proper action to be taken by the committee in the field of hospital statistics, primary attention being given to the application of the new International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death and related subjects, and appropriate questions being decentralized for study by national committees on health statistics ; [3]

The subcommittee considered the complexities of the problems of hospital statistics and hospital morbidity statistics, many of which are outlined in a note prepared by the Secretariat.[4] The subcommittee discussed also the limitations of utilizing hospital experience, since the selective character of hospital admissions generally precludes drawing conclusions with regard to the prevalence and distribution of morbid conditions in the community as a whole.[5]

---

[1] Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 22, 3

[2] Resolution WHA2.38, Off. Rec. World Hlth Org. 21, 28

[3] World Hlth Org. techn. Rep. Ser. 1950, 5, 8

[4] Unpublished working document WHO/HS/Hosp. Stat./6

[5] In view of the selective character of hospitalized illness, the Expert Committee on Health Statistics stresses the need for investigating methods and possibilities of bridging the gap between hospital statistics and statistics representative of the community from which the patients of the hospital are drawn. The committee believes that the family type of survey or the complete coverage of medical-care services might offer the means of opening hospital statistics to broader interpretation and of enhancing their usefulness for public-health purposes.

In its deliberations, full cognizance was taken of the various classifications of diseases as well as of the purposes of classifying diseases. The Manual of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries, and Causes of Death[6] was considered at length, particularly with regard to its applicability to hospital statistics.

The subcommittee fully recognized:

(1) the urgent need for data concerning types of illness treated in outpatient and inpatient departments and the durations of stay for different illnesses, so as to permit a review of the distribution and utilization of existing hospital facilities, and to provide a basis for future planning with a view to securing the most effective and economical use of the hospital beds and staff available;

(2) the beneficial effect on patients, physicians, hospitals, and public health of producing accurate diagnostic records;

(3) the possibilities of relating disease incidence to climatic, social, economic, occupational, and biological factors by appropriate statistics derived from diagnostic records of patients;

(4) the possibilities of studying the results of different methods of treatment;

(5) the complexity of studies of hospitalized illness because of variations in definitions, not only of sickness in its various categories, but also of different units of services rendered.

The subcommittee considered the purposes which could be served by statistics of:

(1) patients classified according to diagnosis in

(a) all hospitals, or special hospitals, measured in relation to the population at risk (e.g., data for whole countries or parts of countries or for classes of the population eligible for medical care, such as veterans, members of the armed forces, and patients covered by sickness-insurance schemes);

(b) selected hospitals without possibility of measuring the population at risk;

(2) utilization of hospital beds and facilities, including outpatient departments, according to the types of hospitals and their divisions, and to the social and economic status of the patient, without regard to diagnosis.

---

[6] Bull. World Hlth Org. Suppl. 1, 1948, 1

The subcommittee presents the following considerations and recommendations to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics:

(1) The subcommittee, concluding that the International Statistical Classification would generally serve the needs of hospitals better than any other classification for the compilation of statistics of illness causing hospitalization, recommends that it be used whenever such compilations of morbidity statistics are made.

(2) The subcommittee felt that certain selected countries and areas with a definable population at risk, and selected hospitals, should be encouraged to compile hospital morbidity statistics routinely. Such compilations should be fostered by national health administrations and national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents). The subcommittee is of the opinion that routine compilation of hospital morbidity statistics in all countries and all hospitals is neither necessary nor advisable.

(3) The subcommittee recommends that the following form of individual report and principles of collection be used and followed when statistics of patients admitted with diseases other than mental are to be compiled :

The section of the report relating to diagnosis should be completed by the physician himself or under his direction. Having considered both the British and US procedures for recording the diagnosis, the subcommittee decided to recommend the one at present in use in England and Wales, subject to further discussion and agreement by the Expert Committee on Health Statistics. This grouping is as follows:

I. Principal disease, injury, or other condition which led to admission.

II. Principal complication(s) of I (stating the most important one first and whether present at admission).

III. Principal accessory acute condition (stating whether present at admission).

IV. Principal accessory chronic condition.

The underlying cause should be entered in I if a complication in II was also present at admission, even though the admission was due to that complication; and in tabulation of statistics according to the principal cause of admission common combinations of an underlying cause should be distinguished from a complication.

The section relating to identifying data should be recorded by medical record or registration officers, and should include as a minimum: name, type, and location of the hospital; the patient's name, national identity number (if any), hospital registration number, race, sex, and date of birth, admission, and discharge; information on service referring patient (general practitioner, consultant, other hospital, etc.).

A special section of the record should be provided for deaths; this should indicate whether or not an autopsy was performed, and the cause of death exactly as entered on the death certificate. In addition, it is recommended that the final autopsy findings, when completed, should be linked with the other information for the purposes of comparing clinical and autopsy diagnoses.

The subcommittee emphasizes that, even if statistics are completed on tabular forms by the hospitals, provision should be made in the compilation of hospital statistics for counting numbers of individuals — admissions or discharges — and of principal diagnoses of various kinds.

(4) The subcommittee realized the necessity for uniform definitions of what constitutes a hospital, hospital bed, inpatient, outpatient, admission, discharge, patient-day, duration of stay, etc., but was not able in the time available to study this question in detail. The subcommittee suggests to the Expert Committee on Health Statistics that the problem of uniform definitions be further studied, and calls attention to the recently completed Handbook on accounting, statistics and business office procedures for hospitals, section I,[7] of the American Hospital Association, which contains a set of such definitions.

(5) The subcommittee recommends that the following special problems in hospital statistics be referred and definitely assigned to appropriate national health-administrations or national committees on vital and health statistics (or their equivalents).

(a) Mental hospitals

Statistics of mental disorders causing admissions to mental institutions should be collected in several countries with a view to increasing knowledge of the incidence of hospitalized disorders of different types in populations according to sex, age, civil state, occupation, duration of disorder, family history, and other measurable factors concerned in etiology, and also statistics of the immediate outcome of hospitalization. These statistics should, if possible, be supplemented by sample studies of mental disorders in the population as a whole.

(b) Tuberculosis hospitals

Statistics of tuberculosis patients admitted to tuberculosis sanatoria and institutions should be collected in several countries with a view to increasing knowledge of the incidence of different types of tuberculosis and its treatment according to race, sex, age, occupation, duration of illness, and other measurable factors bearing upon the need for beds and related to the immediate outcome of hospitalization.

---

[7] American Hospital Association (1950) Handbook on accounting, statistics and business office procedures for hospitals. Section I. Hospital statistics and uniform classification of accounts, Chicago

(c) Diagnostic cross-index

The subcommittee believes that the International Statistical Classification is capable of being subdivided for purposes of indexing medical records by diagnosis and to meet the particular needs of special hospitals or localities. It emphasized that where elaborations are made they should be indicated by letters added to the published code numbers of which the new title forms a subdivision. It was felt that a proper project for a national committee on vital and health statistics would be the development of such an extension of the International Statistical Classification, to serve as a diagnostic cross-index.

(d) Obstetrics

In view of the fact that obstetric departments in hospitals have been able to develop mechanisms for collecting precise data relative to childbirth, and that considerable differences exist in various countries as to the use of hospitals for maternity cases, the subcommittee recommends that information be collected concerning the use of hospital beds, and outpatient and domiciliary facilities for deliveries.

(e) Operations and anaesthetics

The subcommittee recommends that efforts be made to develop a code, similar to the International Statistical Classification, for the purpose of tabulating statistics of operations, with the idea that such a code could be extended for use as an index to the medical records according to operation. It was felt that, since anaesthesia is definitely associated with operative procedures, the question of a classification of anaesthetical procedures should also be studied.

(f) Multiple admissions

The subcommittee recommends that the problems involved in the re-admission of an individual during a given period of time for the same or another illness be investigated by a national committee on vital and health statistics.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
TECHNICAL REPORT SERIES

(Separate editions in English and in French)

		Price
1.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias : report on the fourth session	9d	$0.10
2.	Expert Committee on Biological Standardization : report on the third session	1/6	$0.20
3.	Expert Committee on Biological Standardization : report of the Subcommittee on Fat-Soluble Vitamins	9d	$0.10
4.	Expert Committee on Insecticides : report on the first session	2/3	$0.30
5.	Expert Committee on Health Statistics : report on the first session	9d	$0.10
6.	Active immunization against common communicable diseases of childhood	1/3	$0.15
7.	Expert Committee on Tuberculosis : report on the fourth session	1/3	$0.15
8.	Expert Committee on Malaria : report on the third session	2/3	$0.30
9.	Expert Committee on Mental Health : report on the first session	2/3	$0.30
10.	Expert Committee on Environmental Sanitation : report on the first session	2/-	$0.25
11.	Expert Committee on Plague : report on the first session	1/6	$0.20
12.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias : report on the fifth session	9d	$0.10
13.	Expert Committee on Venereal Infections : report on the third session	1/6	$0.20
14.	Expert Committee on Venereal Infections : report of the Subcommittee on Serology and Laboratory Aspects	2/-	$0.25
15.	Venereal-disease control in the USA : report of the WHO Syphilis Study Commission	3/6	$0.45
16.	Joint FAO/WHO Expert Committee on Nutrition : report on the first session	1/3	$0.15
17.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on Bilharziasis in Africa : report on the first session	9d	$0.10
18.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on Cholera : report on the third session	To be published
19.	Yellow-Fever Panel : report on the first session	9d	$0.10
20.	Joint ILO/WHO Committee on the Hygiene of Seafarers : report on the first session	9d	$0.10
21.	Expert Committee on Drugs Liable to Produce Addiction : report on the second session	9d	$0.10
22.	Expert Committee on Professional and Technical Education of Medical and Auxiliary Personnel : report on the first session	To be published
23.	Joint OIHP/WHO Study-Group on African Rickettsioses : report on the first session
24.	Expert Committee on Nursing : report on the first session
25.	Expert Committee on Health Statistics : report on the second session. Including reports of the Subcommittee on the Definition of Stillbirth and Abortion, the Subcommittee on the Registration of Cases of Cancer, and the Subcommittee on Hospital Statistics	2/-	$0.25
26.	Expert Committee on Antibiotics : report on the first session	9d	$0.10
27.	Expert Group on Prematurity : final report	9d	$0.10
28.	Expert Committee on Rabies : report on the first session	To be published
29.	Expert Committee on the Unification of Pharmacopoeias : report on the sixth session

Bulk Orders

A discount of 20% will be given to health organizations for orders of 100 copies or more. Such orders should be sent direct to the World Health Organization, Sales Section, Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland.

World Health Organization

World report on the health of refugees and migrants

Health for all, including refugees and migrants: time to act now

World Health Organization

World report on the health of refugees and migrants

World report on the health of refugees and migrants

ISBN 978-92-4-005446-2 (electronic version)
ISBN 978-92-4-005447-9 (print version)

© World Health Organization 2022

Some rights reserved. This work is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 3.0 IGO licence (CC BY-NC-SA 3.0 IGO; https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/igo).

Under the terms of this licence, you may copy, redistribute and adapt the work for non-commercial purposes, provided the work is appropriately cited, as indicated below. In any use of this work, there should be no suggestion that WHO endorses any specific organization, products or services. The use of the WHO logo is not permitted. If you adapt the work, then you must license your work under the same or equivalent Creative Commons licence. If you create a translation of this work, you should add the following disclaimer along with the suggested citation: "This translation was not created by the World Health Organization (WHO). WHO is not responsible for the content or accuracy of this translation. The original English edition shall be the binding and authentic edition".

Any mediation relating to disputes arising under the licence shall be conducted in accordance with the mediation rules of the World Intellectual Property Organization (http://www.wipo.int/amc/en/mediation/rules/).

Suggested citation. World report on the health of refugees and migrants. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2022. Licence: CC BY-NC-SA 3.0 IGO.

Cataloguing-in-Publication (CIP) data. CIP data are available at http://apps.who.int/iris.

Sales, rights and licensing. To purchase WHO publications, see http://apps.who.int/bookorders. To submit requests for commercial use and queries on rights and licensing, see https://www.who.int/copyright.

Third-party materials. If you wish to reuse material from this work that is attributed to a third party, such as tables, figures or images, it is your responsibility to determine whether permission is needed for that reuse and to obtain permission from the copyright holder. The risk of claims resulting from infringement of any third-party-owned component in the work rests solely with the user.

General disclaimers. The designations employed and the presentation of the material in this publication do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of WHO concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries. Dotted and dashed lines on maps represent approximate border lines for which there may not yet be full agreement.

The mention of specific companies or of certain manufacturers' products does not imply that they are endorsed or recommended by WHO in preference to others of a similar nature that are not mentioned. Errors and omissions excepted, the names of proprietary products are distinguished by initial capital letters.

All reasonable precautions have been taken by WHO to verify the information contained in this publication. However, the published material is being distributed without warranty of any kind, either expressed or implied. The responsibility for the interpretation and use of the material lies with the reader. In no event shall WHO be liable for damages arising from its use.

Contents

Foreword vii
Preface ix
Acknowledgements xi
Abbreviations and acronyms xvi

1. Population movement and health: an overview 1
1.1 Introduction 3
1.2 Definitions and terms 5
  1.2.1 Key definitions 5
  1.2.2 Populations not included in this Report 6
1.3 Global displacement and migration patterns 9
1.4 Migratory patterns in WHO regions 12
1.5 Age and gender 13
1.6 Displacement 14
1.7 Health and the dynamics of global displacement and migration 15
  1.7.1 Urbanization 18
  1.7.2 Brain circulation: brain drain versus brain gain 18
  1.7.3 Sending money home 19
  1.7.4 Left-behind families 20
  1.7.5 Discrimination and xenophobia 21
  1.7.6 People smuggling and human trafficking 21
  1.7.7 Climate change 22
1.8 Health and migration policies 23
  1.8.1 Key international frameworks 24
  1.8.2 WHO resolutions and action plans 26
References 28

2. Determinants of refugee and migrant health 39
2.1 Introduction 41
2.2 Sex and gender 43
  2.2.1 Health of women and girls 43
  2.2.2 Health of men and boys 44
  2.2.3 LGBTQI+ populations and sexual minorities 45
  2.2.4 Menstrual hygiene management 47
2.3 Age 48
  2.3.1 Unaccompanied or separated children 48
2.4 Education 50
  2.4.1 Health outcomes 51
  2.4.2 Access to education for refugee and migrant children 52
  2.4.3 Employment challenges associated with level of education 53
2.5 Health literacy 53
  2.5.1 Influence on health outcomes 54
  2.5.2 Strategies to improve health literacy and communication 55

2.6 Income 56
  2.6.1 Health outcomes 56
  2.6.2 Remittances and left-behind families 56
2.7 Migratory status 57
2.8 Social support 58
  2.8.1 Acculturation 58
  2.8.2 Parenting 58
  2.8.3 Substance use 59
2.9 Air quality 60
2.10 Water, sanitation and hygiene 62
  2.10.1 Access to safe drinking-water 62
  2.10.2 Access to safe sanitation 62
  2.10.3 Hygiene 63
2.11 Housing and living environments 64
  2.11.1 Housing 65
  2.11.2 Immigration detention 66
  2.11.3 Housing barriers and solutions 68
2.12 Food and nutrition 69
  2.12.1 Food assistance 71
2.13 Summary 71
References 73

3. Health status of refugees and migrants: a global perspective 91
3.1 Introduction 93
3.2 Occupational health 95
  3.2.1 High-risk and physically demanding sectors of industry 97
  3.2.2 Data challenges 100
3.3 Sexual and reproductive health 104
  3.3.1 Contraception and family planning 104
  3.3.2 Sexually transmitted infections 107
  3.3.3 Sexual and gender-based violence 108
  3.3.4 Female genital mutilation 109
3.4 Maternal and child health 110
  3.4.1 Access to antenatal care 110
  3.4.2 Obstetric, postpartum and postnatal health and access to care 112
  3.4.3 Malnutrition and anaemia 112
  3.4.4 Other child health issues 114
3.5 Noncommunicable diseases and major risk factors 115
  3.5.1 Cardiovascular diseases 117
  3.5.2 Cancer 117
  3.5.3 Hypertension 119
  3.5.4 Diabetes mellitus 120
  3.5.5 Substance use 120
  3.5.6 Obesity 121
3.6 Mental health 124
  3.6.1 Depression and anxiety 124
  3.6.2 Post-traumatic stress disorder 126
  3.6.3 Suicide and self-harm 126
  3.6.4 Schizophrenia and other psychotic disorders 127
  3.6.5 Child mental health 128

3.7 Communicable diseases 129
  3.7.1 HIV/AIDS 130
  3.7.2 Tuberculosis 133
  3.7.3 Malaria 138
  3.7.4 Other communicable diseases 140
3.8 COVID-19 143
  3.8.1 Burden of disease 144
  3.8.2 Health and other impacts 144
  3.8.3 Policy responses 150
  3.8.4 Testing, treatment and vaccination 151
3.9 Summary 153
References 154

4. Refugee- and migrant-sensitive health systems 189
4.1 Introduction 191
4.2 Service delivery 193
  4.2.1 Common barriers 193
  4.2.2 Service models to meet refugee and migrant health needs 196
4.3 Health workforce 199
  4.3.1 Sufficient staffing levels, training and resources 199
  4.3.2 Supporting refugee and migrant health workers 201
  4.3.3 Impact of migration 202
  4.3.4 Better use of health professionals 203
  4.3.5 Countries with a large migrant health workforce 203
4.4 Access to medical products, vaccines and technologies 206
  4.4.1 Access to good-quality and affordable medicines 206
  4.4.2 Access to vaccines 208
4.5 Health information systems 211
  4.5.1 Data collection on refugee and migrant health 211
  4.5.2 Dissemination and use of refugee and migrant health data 215
4.6 Financing 215
  4.6.1 Refugee and migrant expenditure 215
  4.6.2 Public health coverage 216
  4.6.3 Mixed or private health insurance coverage 219
4.7 Leadership and governance 220
  4.7.1 Legal access and entitlement: national policies 221
  4.7.2 Refugee-hosting contexts 226
  4.7.3 Regional leadership and strategies 227
4.8 Summary 229
References 230

5. Mapping progress towards global health goals: an exploratory review 247
5.1 Introduction 249
5.2 The challenge to meet 251
  5.2.1 Making the health of refugees and migrants visible in major data sets 252
  5.2.2 The SDGs and population movement 252
  5.2.3 Moving forward on disaggregation 253
5.3 Review methodology 255
  5.3.1 Criteria for inclusion 255
  5.3.2 Data limitations 256
  5.3.3 Definitions 259

5.4 Review results 261
5.4.1 Housing 262
5.4.2 Health insurance 263
5.4.3 Health and access to health care services 266
5.4.4 Health services and protective interventions 267
5.4.5 Mental health 274
5.4.6 Drinking-water, sanitation and hygiene as a health determinant 276
5.5 Summary 276
References 279

6. Health and migration: the way forward 287
6.1 The current state of affairs 289
6.1.1 Population movement and health: an overview 290
6.1.2 Determinants of refugee and migrant health 291
6.1.3 Health status of refugees and migrants 292
6.1.4 Gaps and good practices in health systems 294
6.1.5 Refugees and migrants are not visible in global data sets: Sustainable Development Goal targets will be missed 297
6.2 The way forward: health for a world in motion 298
6.2.1 Health and migration: a global health priority 298
6.2.2 Towards concerted efforts: a paradigm shift 299
6.2.3 Effectively integrating refugees and migrants into universal health coverage and primary health care 299
6.2.4 Global action plan 301
6.3 Policy and practice 301
6.3.1 Develop short- and long-term public health action plans that include refugees and migrants, and support their implementation 301
6.3.2 Strengthen the capacity and increase the sensitivity of health systems to meet the specific health needs of refugees and migrants 301
6.3.3 Enhance understanding of the health promotion and health needs of refugees and migrants 302
6.3.4 Actively include refugees and migrants within financial and social protection systems 302
6.3.5 Strengthen accountability and indicators framework 303
6.3.6 Promote global research, strengthen knowledge production and build research capacity in health and migration 304
References 305

Annex Methodology 306

Foreword

Today there are some one billion migrants globally, about one in eight people. The experience of migration is a key determinant of health and well-being, and refugees and migrants remain among the most vulnerable and neglected members of many societies.

This report is the first to offer a global review of health and migration and calls for urgent and concerted action to support refugees and migrants across the world to access health care services that are sensitive to their needs. It illustrates the pressing need to study and mitigate the root causes of migration and to radically reorient health systems to respond to a world increasingly in motion.

Whether by choice or by force, to be on the move is to be human and is part of human life. Whatever a person's motivation, circumstance, origin or migratory status, we must unequivocally reiterate that health is a human right for all, and that universal health coverage must be inclusive of refugees and migrants.

We live in challenging times. Disease, famine, climate change and war all converge to threaten our global security, putting unprecedented pressures on our societies and economies. Meanwhile, the COVID-19 pandemic continues to have a disproportionate effect on the health and livelihoods of refugees and migrants, with unique challenges for labour migrants.

At the start of 2022, the World Health Organization (WHO) and its partners were responding to complex humanitarian crises in Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Somalia, South Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen, each of which has fuelled mass population movements and severely tested health systems in host countries. Then came war in Ukraine, which pushed the total number of displaced people above 100 million for the first time in history.

But the full extent of the impact of these upheavals is not yet understood because, as this report demonstrates, refugees and migrants are not fully visible in the available data – a serious gap that must be fixed. We must invest in strengthening and implementing policies that promote refugee and migrant health, guided by innovative data gathering and analysis.

We urge governments, agencies, donors and other partners to think creatively and act compassionately to improve the health of people on the move, and to do so across all sectors of society.

I invite you to read this report and join WHO and our partners in our commitment to build a healthier and more resilient world for all.

Dr Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus
Director-General
World Health Organization

Preface

Every eighth person on the planet is a migrant or displaced, and the numbers are growing. It is widely accepted that the experiences of displacement and migration are key determinants of health and well-being; consequently, responding to migration is crucial for global health. WHO is fundamentally committed to leaving not one of these people behind. It has, therefore, invested in the gathering and review of global evidence and created this World report on the health of refugees and migrants. The report is the first of its kind to illustrate with such breadth and specific detail the multitude of health challenges faced by hundreds of millions of refugees and migrants, drawing on evidence that is as comprehensive as possible from around the globe.

The report presents clear evidence that refugees and migrants can experience poor health outcomes, primarily due to suboptimal working and living conditions, which have a negative impact on the health and well-being of refugees, migrants and asylum seekers, among others. Refugees and migrants often experience much worse health outcomes than host populations, compounded by their vulnerable circumstances and poor health determinants. The report notes just how crucial it is to address the determinants of poor health beyond the health sector when considering the health of refugees and migrants.

Two of the key findings of the report are the virtual absence of comparable data across countries and over time on refugee and migrant health and the lack of disaggregation according to migratory status within global health data sets. The report shows critical gaps globally in data quality and knowledge and calls for investment in fit-for-purpose data, surveillance and monitoring to support robust evidence-informed policies and plans for implementation. If this vital data gap remains, refugees and migrants will continue to be left behind, and achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) will be impossible.

Climate change and the increased number of conflicts mean increasing numbers of people are on the move. The impact of anthropogenic climate change is already felt across 80% of the world's land area, which holds 85% of the world's population. It is predicted that over 200 million additional people will be forced to move by 2050.

There are solutions. This report offers practical considerations to address health disparities for refugees and migrants and to address the root causes that negatively influence health. These include those that traditionally fall outside the strict remit of the health sector, such as education, sex, age and migratory status. Existing health systems should be reorientated to include refugees and migrants in all services and programmes, in line with the principles of universal primary health care and universal health coverage. The health determinants, status and outcomes of refugees and migrants should be monitored to assess progress, or lack thereof, towards the SDGs and other goals and targets. Because the health and well-being of refugees and migrants cut across multiple sectors of society, the health sector must play an important leadership and facilitating role.

With the magnitude of the challenge so plainly evident and with many promising approaches identified, it is now possible for countries, institutions and researchers to prioritize the actions and investments needed to monitor and improve health and migration in line with the SDGs. WHO's Thirteenth General Programme of Work provides a framework for the urgent action necessary, prioritizing the guiding principles of promoting health, keeping the world safe from disease and focusing on the least-served, most vulnerable populations. These align with the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its commitment to leave no one behind. WHO's Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants also includes health as an essential component of protection and assistance for refugees and migrants and good migration governance.

The world has rightly responded with national and international policies and frameworks on health and migration, yet substantial disparities remain. What we need now is action, and it will take whole-of-government and whole-of-society approaches to ensure the health of refugees and migrants and their host populations. With this report, WHO and its Health and Migration Programme reiterate a commitment to promoting and advancing the health issues of all refugees and migrants worldwide.

We hope this report will ring the alarm, inspire compassion, increase understanding and, most of all, urge practical action towards universal health care that leaves no one invisible, no one without essential and quality health services, no one behind. Health for all, including refugees and migrants: time to act now.

Dr Zsuzsanna Jakab
Deputy Director-General
World Health Organization

Dr Santino Severoni
Director
Health and Migration Programme

Acknowledgements

WHO gratefully acknowledges the many experts and agencies who contributed to the planning, development and review of this report.

Leadership and coordination

This report was developed under the overall strategic lead and technical direction of Santino Severoni, Director, WHO Health and Migration Programme, Geneva, Switzerland. Rifat Hossain, Technical lead, data and evidence, WHO Health and Migration Programme, was responsible for coordinating the development and production of the report. Soorej Puthoopparambil, Head, WHO Collaborating Centre on Migration and Health Data and Evidence, Uppsala University, Uppsala, Sweden, provided methodological and technical guidance on the overall content of the report.

Technical writers

The report was drafted by Andrew Wilson, Leyla Alyanak and Felicity Thompson.

WHO contributors and reviewers

The following staff and consultants of the Health and Migration Programme reviewed multiple drafts of the report, checking data and evidence, and/or provided technical support: Richard Alderslade, Giuseppe Domenico Annunziata, Rimu Byadya, Veronica Cornacchione, Mohammad Darwish, Cetin Dikmen, Palmira Immordino, Kanokporn Kaojaroen, Joowon Kim, Alexandra Ladak, Khawla Nasser Aldeen, Miriam Orcutt, Rita Sa Machado, Ana Cristina Sedas, David Tellez and Marie Wolf. The following WHO staff and consultants also contributed to the technical content and review of the report.

WHO headquarters
Elizabeth Aime-Mcdonald, Rajiv Bahl, Anand Balachandran, Valentina Baltag, Julia Berenson, Gautam Biswas, Elaine Borghi, Francesco Branca, James Campbell, Richard Michael Carr, David Clarke, Giorgio Cometto, Bernadette Daelmans, Luz de Regil, Khassoum Diallo, Theresa Diaz, Tessa Edejer, Albis Francesco Gabrielli, Philippe Glaziou, Laurence Grummer-Strawn, Ahmadreza Hosseinpoor, Devora Lillia Kestel, Katherine Kirkby, Monika Kosinska, Etienne Krug, Joseph Douglas Kutzin, Jae-se Lee, Daniel Low-Beer, Blerta Maliqi, Mary Mandahar, Silvio Mariotti, Michelle Mcisaac, Claude Meyer, Gerardo Zamora Monge, Allisyn Carol Moran, Marjolaine Nicod, Alana Margaret Officer, Kathy O'Neill, Sarah Paulin-Deschenaux, Kumanan Rasanathan, Briana Rivas-Morello, Nathalie Laure Roebbel, Sebastian Rositano, Sylvie Eliane Schaller, Gerard P. Schmets, Slim Slama, Marcus Marcellus Stahlhofer, Chelsea Maria Taylor, Meelan Thondoo, Tamitza Toroyan, Inka Weissbecker and Diane Wu.

WHO regional offices

WHO Regional Office for Africa: Ernest Dabire and Abdou Salam Gueye; WHO Regional Office for the Americas: Candelaria Araoz, James Fitzgerald, Julie Helene Issa, Camila Polinori and Ciro Ugarte; WHO Regional Office for South-East Asia: Lin Aung, Aarti Garg, Stephen Paul Jost and Edwin Salvador; WHO Regional Office for Europe: Jozef Bartovic, Kristina Mauer-Stender, Elisabeth Waagensen and Gundo Weiler; WHO Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean: Rana Al Naggar, Ali Ardalan, Hala El Shazly, Awad Mataria and Tonia Rifaey; WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific: Isabel Constance Espinosa, Kira Fortune, Tsering Kalden Lama, Caroline Lukaszyk, Angela Pratt and Jaitra Sathyandran.

Regional literature reviews

The report is based on comprehensive literature reviews of evidence from all WHO regions, which were conducted under the supervision of WHO regional offices.

The literature review for the WHO African Region was conducted, synthesized and written by Jo Vearey (lead), Yacine Ait Larbi and Marta Luzes, Samuel Hall, Nairobi, Kenya, and Edward Govere, Thea de Gruchy, Langa Mlotshwa and Rebecca Walker, African Centre for Migration and Society, Wits University, South Africa.

The literature review for the WHO Region of the Americas was conducted, synthesized and written by Báltica Cabieses (lead), María Inés Álvarez, Alice Blukacz, Marcelo Lizana, Alexandra Obach and Isabel Rada, Programa de Estudios Sociales en Salud, Instituto de Ciencias e Innovaciones Médicas, Universidad del Desarrollo, Santiago, Chile.

The literature review for the WHO South-East Asia Region was conducted, synthesized and written by Anjali Borhade (lead), Nisha Bharti, Subhojit Dey, Isha Jain and Vishika Yadav, Disha Foundation, New Delhi, India.

The literature reviews for the WHO European Region were conducted, synthesized and written by the following teams: Gianfranco Costanzo (lead), Andrea Cavani, Alessandra Diodati, Anteo Di Napoli, Concetta Mirisola, Alessio Petrelli and Leuconoe Grazia Sisti, National Institute for Health, Migration and Poverty, Rome, Italy; Alessandra Bettiol and Irene Mattioli, University of Florence, Florence, Italy; and Pietro Amedeo Modesti, Careggi University Hospital, University of Florence, Florence, Italy (for non-Russian-speaking countries); and Alexey Novozhilov, Federal Research Institute for Health Organization and Informatics, Moscow, Russian Federation (for Russian-speaking countries).

The literature review for the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region was conducted, synthesized and written by Jocelyn DeJong (lead), Chaza Akik, Zeinab Dirani, Layal Hneiny and Eman Sharara, American University of Beirut, Beirut, Lebanon.

The literature review for the WHO Western Pacific Region was conducted, synthesized and written by Lisa Grace S. Bersales (lead), Kristine Faith Agtarap, Claire Berja, Clarinda Lusterio Berja, Michael Dominic Del Mundo and Aileen Guyos, University of the Philippines, Manila, Philippines.

Synthesis of the evidence reviews

The regional evidence reviews were synthesized by the following teams: Catherine K. Ettman and Sandro Galea (Boston University, United States of America), Paul Spiegel, David Tellez, Maryada Vallet and Cyndy Vasquez (Johns Hopkins University, United States of America); and Lisa Grace S. Bersales, Kristine Faith Agtarap, Claire Berja, Clarinda Lusterio Berja, Michael Dominic Del Mundo and Aileen Guyos (University of the Philippines, Manila, Philippines).

The following contributors provided valuable input and feedback on the analysis and presentation of household survey data: Trevor Croft and Shea Rutstein (Demographic and Health Surveys); Holly Newby (formerly of Demographic and Health Surveys and the United Nations Children’s Fund); Atilla Hancioglu and Turgay Unalan (Multiple Indicator Cluster Surveys, United Nations Children’s Fund); Olivier Dupriez, Aivin Vicquierra Solatorio and Matthew John Welch (World Bank and International Household Survey Network).

Institutional contributions

Numerous technical inputs and feedback were received from the following experts: Elisa Benes, Bálint Náfrádi, Andonirina Rakotonarivo and Valentina Stoevska (International Labour Organization); Julia Black, Nuwe Blick, Frank Laczko and Elisa Mosler Vidal (International Organization for Migration Global Migration Data Analysis Centre); Aleksandar Arnikov, Poonam Dhavan, Chiaki Ito, Kit Leung, Janice Lopez, Maeva Peek, Guglielmo Schinina, Agan Sweetmavourneen, Jacqueline Weekers, Kolitha Wickramage and Alice Wimmer (International Organization for Migration, Migration Health Division); Grace

Sanico Steffan (Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights); Jan Beise, Daniela Knoppik, Ralf Moreno, Sebastian Palmas and Danzhen You (United Nations Children's Fund); Monica Aguayo, Miguel Castillo, Xavier Mancero, Rolando Ocampo Fernanda Reynoso, Zulma Sosa and Daniel Taccari (United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean); Ann Burton, Tarek Abou Chabake, Ibrahima Diallo, Sandra Harlass and Peter Ventevogel (United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees); Enrico Bisogno, Tejal Jesrani Haslinger, Claire Healy, Angela Me and Philipp Meissner (United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime); Ginette Azcona, Antra Bhatt and Alembirhan Berhe (UN Women); Gero Carletto and Olivier Dupriez (World Bank); S. Irudaya Rajan and Dilip Ratha (World Bank Global Knowledge Partnership on Migration and Development); Bjorn Gillsater, Harriet Mugera, Katherine Perkins and Charlotte Persson (World Bank-UNHCR Joint Data Centre on Forced Displacement); Michael Flynn (Global Detention Project, Geneva, Switzerland); Amal de Chickera, Ottoline Spearman and Laura van Waas (Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion); Christelle Cazabat (Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre, Geneva, Switzerland); Clara P.C. Fast (Duke University, Durham, United States of America); and Laibah Ashfaq, Paige Chu, Andrea Cortinois, Caitlin Manderville, Ryan Y. Ruan and Andrea Sanchez Martinez (University of Toronto, Toronto, Canada).

External reviewers

The report was also subject to a comprehensive review by global experts on the various areas covered: Shea Rustein (Demographic and Health Surveys); Bernadette Nirmal Kumar (European Public Health Association/Lancet Migration); Thomas H. Gassert (Harvard University, Cambridge, United States of America); Iffat ElBarazi, Michal Grivna and Syed Mahboob Shah (Institute of Public Health, College of Medicine and Health Sciences, United Arab Emirates University, Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates); Anders Hjern (Karolinska Institute, Solna, Sweden); Paul Bukuleke (Makarere University, Kampala, Uganda); Gianfranco Costanzo and Leuconoe Grazia Sisti (National Institute for Health, Migration and Poverty and WHO Collaborating Centre on Health and Migration Evidence and Capacity Building, Rome, Italy); Cesar Infante Xibille (National Public Health Institute, Mexico); Osman Dar (Royal Institute of International Affairs, London, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland); Ibrahim Abubakar and Rita Issa (University College London, London United Kingdom); Charles Agyemang (University of Amsterdam, Amsterdam, the Netherlands); Francesco Castelli and Beatrice Formenti (University of Brescia, Brescia, Italy); Steffanie Ann Strathdee (University of California, San Diego, United States of America); Indika Karunathilake (University of Colombo, Sri Lanka); and Jaime Miranda (Universidad Peruana Cayetano Heredia, San Martin de Porres, Peru).

Financial contributions

WHO gratefully acknowledges the financial contributions to the development and production of this report provided by the Italian National Institute for Health, Migration and Poverty, the German Federal Ministry of Health, the Italian Ministry of Health, the Russian Federation and the Directorate-General for International Partnerships of the European Commission through the Health Systems Strengthening for Universal Health Coverage Partnership Programme.

Abbreviations and acronyms

ANC	antenatal care
ART	antiretroviral therapy
BADEHOG	Household Survey Data Bank (Banco de Datos de Encuestas de Hogares)
BCG	bacille Calmette–Guérin
BMI	body mass index
CHW	community health worker
COVID-19	coronavirus disease
CVD	cardiovascular disease
DHS	Demographic and Health Survey
DHS-VII	Demographic and Health Survey (DHS) phase VII
EEA	European Economic Area
e-health	electronic health
EHR	electronic health record
ESS	European Social Survey
EU	European Union
FGM	female genital mutilation
GAP	Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants, 2019–2023 (WHO)
GDP	gross domestic product
GPW13	Thirteenth General Programme of Work, 2019–2023 (WHO)
HBV	hepatitis B virus
HCV	hepatitis C virus
HICS	health insurance card scheme
HIS	health information systems
HPV	human papillomavirus
IDP	internally displaced person
ILO	International Labour Organization
IOM	International Organization for Migration
IPV	intimate partner violence
LGBTQI+	lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex
LTBI	latent tuberculosis infection
MCH	maternal and child health
MGI	Migration Governance Indicator
m-health	mobile health

MICS	Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey
MICS6	Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey round 6
MIPEX	Migrant Integration Policy Index
MSM	men who have sex with men
NCD	noncommunicable disease
NGO	nongovernmental organization
NHWA	National Health Workforce Accounts
OECD	Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development
OPV	oral poliovirus vaccine
PHC	primary health care
PISA	Programme for International Student Assessment
PTSD	post-traumatic stress disorder
SAVe	Support Asylum and Vulnerabilities through e-health
SDG	Sustainable Development Goal
SES	socioeconomic status
SGBV	sexual and gender-based violence
SRH	sexual and reproductive health
STI	sexually transmitted infection
TB	tuberculosis
UASC	unaccompanied or separated children
UDDT	urine-diverting dry toilet
UHC	universal health coverage
UNDESA	United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs
UNHCR	Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees
UNICEF	United Nations Children’s Fund
UNRWA	United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East
VPD	vaccine-preventable disease
WASH	water, sanitation and hygiene
WHO	World Health Organization

The world witnessed most unprecedented consensus among governments and nongovernmental, civil society and private sector organizations when the 2030 Agenda was adopted at the United Nations General Assembly on 25 September 2015. It was a historic moment for humankind to have this recognition of universal human rights and the rights to health and other basic services, and to have the ultimate pledge to meet these goals and targets for all human beings, including refugees and migrants, by 2030. We must also recall the promise we made in the same year to tackle the climate crisis through the Paris Declaration.

Achieving peace and prosperity for all people and the planet by 2030 requires concrete and concerted efforts that prioritize support to the vulnerable by understanding all their unique challenges and needs and addressing them. This includes ensuring healthy lives and promoting well-being. Good health and well-being are key to peaceful and prosperous societies.

Recognizing that migration and displacement have an impact on the health of the billion people on the move, this report marks a welcome advance in thinking of migration and displacement through one clarifying glass. The lens is universal health coverage and the idea that everyone has a right to "complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity", as stated in the WHO Constitution in 1946.

I commend WHO's report in highlighting the health issues related to refugees and migrants and the call on the global community to collectively tackle this emerging challenge.

Ban Ki-moon
Chairman of Ban Ki-moon Foundation for a Better Future, 8th Secretary-General of United Nations

CHAPTER 1

Population movement and health: an overview

A boy joins other displaced families in Yar Hussain camp in Swabi, 100 kilometres from Islamabad, Pakistan. © IOM / Saleem Rehmat

1.1 Introduction

Displacement and migration are key determinants of health and well-being not only for refugees and migrants but also for the populations in their countries of destination, transit and origin (1–6). The relationship between health and population movement is complex and dynamic. Health can improve when people move from a conflict situation to a peaceful one or from an area of high unemployment to one where better-paid, safe work is plentiful. However, poorer health can result when refugees and migrants are exposed to conditions that undermine good health during different phases of migration (7). Displacement and migration can also result in interruption of health care provision or treatment, leading to challenges in continuity of care. Migration has long been a politically contested issue (8,9). Phenomena, such as conflict, income inequality, economic shifts, urbanization and climate change, inevitably affect population movement and their health. The COVID-19 pandemic vividly illustrated yet again the impact of world events on the health of refugees and migrants (Box 1.1).

A WHO Thailand Migrant and Border Health Officer (centre), a health volunteer from Myanmar (right) and volunteers from Samut Sakhon Hospital (left) visit a Burmese migrant worker and her child in her dormitory in Thailand to talk about how to stay safe from COVID-19.
© WHO / Ploy Phutpheng

Box 1.1.

COVID-19, migration and health

The COVID-19 pandemic reminded the world of the strong connection between health and migration and highlighted how the inclusion of refugees and migrants in global preparedness and response plans is essential to respond effectively to public health emergencies.

Shortly after WHO characterized the outbreak of severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) infections and subsequent COVID-19 as a pandemic, many countries introduced travel restrictions and border closures, even though evidence for the efficacy of these measures was doubtful (10). As a result, many migrants were not able to return to their countries of origin, refugees were not able to travel onwards to their countries of destination, and home governments refused large numbers of returnees (11). By mid-2020, the global number of international migrants had decreased by 2 million: a 27% fall in the growth expected between July 2019 and June 2020 (12). Although individual asylum applications temporarily fell worldwide between 2019 and 2020 to 1.3 million, a decrease of almost 1 million, the number of refugees rose to almost 20.7 million, an increase of nearly 250 000 (13).

A multitude of health-related clinical, logistic and social challenges have emerged for refugees and migrants worldwide as a result of the pandemic. While some challenges are similar to those faced by the populations in destination or transit countries, this report finds that some impacts of the pandemic are heightened among, or even specific to, certain populations on the move. Chapter 3 reviews the impact of COVID-19 on the health of refugees and migrants and Chapter 4 covers governmental responses.

Refugees and migrants may include essential workers, health care providers, scientists and artists, and they bring knowledge, experience, skills and more to the places where they move (14–16). Countries benefit from the contributions of refugees and migrants and also thrive when the entire population is healthy (17,18). The health needs of refugees and migrants have to be recognized (19,20). Significant proportions of refugees and migrants are healthy (19,20), but, like other populations, they also have specific health needs (21–23). If these health needs are ignored, both countries and refugees and migrants can end up paying more in the long run (24) than if the needs had been anticipated, addressed and included in national health policies, programmes and services (25,26).

This introductory chapter frames international migration and displacement in the context of health.

> The COVID-19 pandemic vividly illustrated yet again the impact of world events on the health of refugees and migrants.

1.2 Definitions and terms

This World report on the health of refugees and migrants uses the term "refugees and migrants" in presenting evidence from studies in which the population is not clearly mentioned or includes several groups. Whenever available, data that permit the disaggregation of refugees and international migrants are presented as such. The key definitions used in this report are summarized in section 1.2.1, along with brief descriptions of certain populations who are outside the report's purview. Use of the designations and material in this report does not indicate an opinion on the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or its authorities or on delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries. The term "country" as used in this report also refers, as appropriate, to territories or areas.

While the term "refugee" is defined in the 1951 Convention relating to the status of refugees and the 1967 Protocol relating to the status of refugees (27), there is no international consensus on the definition of "migrant". This makes the work of synthesizing the state of health and migration challenging (28). Thus, multiple definitions exist and discussions that aim to clarify terminology are ongoing, including discussions in 2021 at the 52nd United Nations Statistical Commission, one of which focused on common definitions for measuring concepts in migration (29). The 1998 United Nations Recommendations on statistics of international migration defined "international migrants" as people who changed their country of usual residency (30). The lack of consensus on the definition of "migrant" creates challenges for systematically collecting and analysing data about the health of migrant populations. It also undermines the principle of health for all and increases health inequities across refugee and migrant populations (28,31–33). The definitional challenges point to the need for more higher-quality and standardized, disaggregated data and definitions around health and migration (28).

1.2.1 Key definitions

Discussions on updating the definitions of international migrants are ongoing, with key questions centring around the length of stay and reason for displacement and migration. The terms and definitions most frequently used in this report are described below, although the list is far from exhaustive.

Migrant. A person who moves from one place to another, whether across or within international boundaries. Despite the absence of a universally accepted definition of "migrant", this definition is widely used (34).

International migrant. Any person who changes his or her country of usual residence (35). Unless otherwise identified, the migrants discussed in this report are international migrants.

Refugee. Any person who meets the eligibility criteria under an applicable definition of refugee, as provided for in international or regional refugee instruments, under the mandate of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) or in national legislation. Under international law and the UNHCR's mandate, refugees are persons outside their country of origin who are in need of international protection because they fear persecution or a serious threat to their life, physical integrity or freedom in their country of origin as a result of persecution, armed conflict, violence or serious public disorder (27,36).

Asylum seeker. An individual who seeks international protection. In countries where asylum cases are judged on a case-by-case basis using specific eligibility criteria, asylum seekers are people whose claim has not been finally decided on by the country in which they have submitted it. Not every asylum seeker will ultimately be recognized as a refugee, but every recognized refugee is initially an asylum seeker (36).

International migrant worker. This report uses the International Labour Organization (ILO) definition of "all international migrants who are currently employed or unemployed and seeking employment in their present country of residence" (37).

Migrant in an irregular situation (also irregular migrant, undocumented migrant). A person who moves or has moved across an international border and is not authorized to enter or to stay in a state pursuant to the law of that state and to international agreements to which that state is a party (34).

For full sets of definitions related to refugees and migrants, see the UNHCR's Master glossary of terms (36) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) Glossary on migration (34).

1.2.2 Populations not included in this report

Together, internal migrants and internally displaced persons (IDPs) are considerably more numerous than their counterparts who cross international borders, although there are no precise estimates of their numbers, particularly for internal migrants. In 2013 there were an estimated 763 million internal migrants (that is, migrants who stay within their country of origin), although the figures may be far higher due to the informal nature of much of this movement (38,39). Internal migration is one of the most significant characteristics of developing economies and societies, in which internal migrants account for the majority of workers in the informal economy (40).

There are also millions of people who are described as stateless. Although their health and living conditions are of enormous importance to global health and development, the scope of this report is confined to refugees and international migrants. The health of those who move or are displaced within countries will receive in-depth attention in the near future.

Internal migration and displacement. Much of this type of migration and displacement is thought to result from disparities in living conditions between rural and urban areas, as measured by unemployment, income, consumption or other non-monetary factors (41,42). Gender plays an important and complex role in internal migration, as it does in migration across international borders. For example, significant numbers of women move within their countries to become domestic workers or to take part in industries that hire women for specific types of work (43).

While large-scale rural-to-urban migration (section 1.7.1) rose along with burgeoning economic expansion in the now-developed economies from the 19th to the mid-20th centuries, today's largest internal population shifts are in middle- and low-income countries, particularly China and India (41,44–46).
As with international migration, data on the health implications of internal migration and displacement remain incomplete and fragmented.

IDPs. Individuals who are displaced by conflict or disaster do not always cross an international border. In fact, IDPs represent the majority of the world's displaced, with 55 million globally at the end of 2020 (47). Of these, 48 million people had been affected by conflict or violence and 7 million had been displaced due to disasters, including earthquakes and climate-related issues.

IDPs often show higher rates of undernutrition than non-displaced persons in similar circumstances. Displaced persons are not only forced away from their land and from the natural resources they used to rely on for food but also tend to have less money to buy it. In 2012 in Afghanistan, for instance, most families displaced by conflict spent more than 75% of their limited income on food and still had to reduce both its quality and its quantity (48). In some contexts, IDPs may even be worse off than refugees: a study conducted in Ethiopia, Kenya, Sudan and Uganda showed that more than 15% of the IDPs suffered from acute malnutrition compared with 12% of the refugees (49).

The health needs of IDPs, who lack the formal legal protections afforded to refugees, are little understood, but research suggests they experience equal or worse health outcomes than other conflict-affected populations (50).

Although the needs of IDPs for health care increase during displacement, their access to health services usually deteriorates *(51).*They are often pushed away from familiar health systems, practitioners and facilities, their financial resources are jeopardized and their social networks are destabilized, creating sometimes unsurmountable barriers to accessing care. IDPs with disabilities or illnesses requiring long-term treatment may see their conditions deteriorate drastically after displacement (52). In a 2021 survey of people internally displaced by violence in a country in the WHO African Region, 17% said their access to health care had decreased during displacement, mainly because they could no longer afford it (53).

Mental health is often undermined during displacement. Particularly for children and older people, sudden changes in their usual place of residence, environment and community, and separation from loved ones can be overwhelming psychological stressors (54,55). The most commonly reported impacts of internal displacement on mental health are post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and anxiety and depression (56,57), but displacement can also contribute to drug- and alcohol-use disorders and aggravate or increase the risk for developing chronic disorders, including schizophrenia and psychosis (58).

As many IDPs are displaced due to conflict, women and girls carry the burden of caring for the family because men and boys are often absent. The need to look for food and firewood sometimes raises risks of sexual violence. Health facilities are often scarce in areas where there are IDPs, making sexual and reproductive services inaccessible (59).

Stateless person. The United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons defines stateless people as persons who are not considered to be nationals by any state under the operation of its law (60). Most live in their own countries and may have never crossed an international border (34,61). However, many are migrants or refugees or have histories of migration and forced displacement (62). Statelessness can both cause and be caused by migration. Moreover, displaced people are at a higher risk of becoming stateless due to increased difficulties in proving their nationality, including as a result of conflicting nationality laws, the loss or destruction of important documents, and a lack of access to civil documentation or registration in their country of refuge (62).

There are an estimated 15 million stateless people globally, with an additional tens of millions whose nationality status is at risk (63). Although it is unclear how many migrants or refugees are stateless, the figure is also likely to be significant. This estimate includes Rohingya refugees, stateless Palestinians under the mandate of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and hundreds of thousands of stateless migrants and refugees in industrialized countries.

Stateless people share many of the challenges that refugees and migrants face in accessing health care, as well as additional unique problems owing to their lack of documented nationality. Because many health care systems privilege citizens, stateless people often encounter barriers to access due to their lack of documentation, discrimination by health care providers and high fees, or have their access limited to emergency medical care (64). Discrimination often persists even when nationality is obtained – for example, by being denied entry to hospital (65). In addition to the right to health, the lack of nationality also undermines the fulfilment of other rights – including education, social security and an adequate standard of living – which are intrinsically linked to health (64,66).

An example of how a barrier specific to stateless people can be resolved was recently seen in Lebanon. Initially, registration for COVID-19 vaccination required health care workers to input a nationality into the health information system, meaning that stateless people could not register. Following advocacy by the civil society organization Oummal, the government added the category "stateless" to the registration portal, and this now allows stateless persons to use their identity cards of stateless to access the vaccine (66).

In March 2022, Ukrainians fleeing the Russian invasion line up to leave the country from a train station in the city of Lviv. © WHO / Kasia Strek

1.3 Global displacement and migration patterns

From 1990 to 2020, the global population increased from 5.3 billion to 7.8 billion. During those years, the total number of international migrants increased from 153 million (2.9% of the global population) to 281 million (3.6% of the global population). About 48% of international migrants are women (67) and some 36 million are children (67,68). The greatest increases in international migration during the last decade have been due to family migration (including family reunification) and labour migration (12), although their proportions of the total have changed little. Since the early 2000s, circular migration has also become more common, with migrants moving temporarily for economic opportunities and then returning to their home countries, although the number of annual circular migrants remains unclear (Figs 1.1 and 1.2) (69).

As of 2020, Europe and North America hosted the greatest number of international migrants, followed by northern Africa and western Asia (67). The total numbers and percentages of international migrants by World Health Organization (WHO) region (including migrants, refugees and asylum seekers) are shown in Fig. 1.1. The top three host countries by WHO region are shown in Fig. 1.2.

The number of people who have been forcibly displaced globally continues to increase as a result of conflict, humanitarian and climate-related disasters. UNHCR has estimated the number of forcibly displaced globally to be at 82.4 million (13).[1] Refugees and asylum seekers account for approximately 12% of international migrants, as estimated by the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UNDESA) (67), and most of them live in countries adjacent to their country of origin (Fig. 1.2).

Developing countries hosted 86% of the world's refugees and Venezuelan migrants (13). (Note that the term "Venezuelans displaced abroad" is defined by the UNHCR as "persons of Venezuelan origin who are likely to be in need of international protection under the criteria contained in the Cartagena Declaration, but who have not applied for asylum in the country in which they are present" (13).)

More than half of newly recognized refugees during the first half of 2021 were from five countries: the Central African Republic (71 800 refugees), South Sudan (61 700), the Syrian Arab Republic (38 800), Afghanistan (25 200) and Nigeria (20 300). At the same point in time, there were 92 100 newly displaced Venezuelans (refugees, asylum seekers and migrants) in Latin America and the Caribbean (70). By the end of 2020, more than three quarters of the global refugee population (15.7 million) was in a situation of protracted displacement (13).

---

[1] In May 2022, after the writing of this report had been completed, UNHCR announced that the number of people forced to flee conflict, violence, human rights violations and persecution had surpassed 100 million for the first time on record. The number of forcibly displaced people worldwide was already rising towards 90 million by the end of 2021, propelled by new waves of violence or protracted conflict in countries including Afghanistan, Burkina Faso, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, Myanmar and Nigeria. However, at the time of writing in 2022, the war in Ukraine had displaced 8 million people within the country, and more than 6 million refugee movements from Ukraine had been registered.

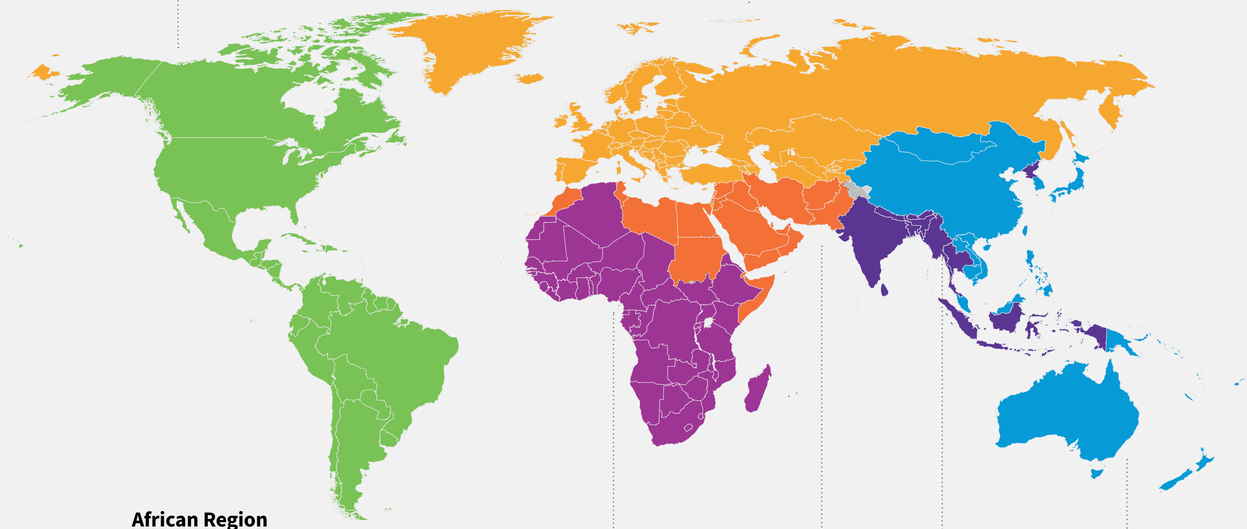
Fig. 1.1. International migrants, refugees and asylum seekers (percentage of the total population), by WHO region, mid-2020

Region of the Americas

International migrants: 6.7% (72 642 744)
Male: 3.3% (35 395 181)
Female: 3.4% (37 247 563)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 18.4% (6 152 256)
Median age of all international migrants: 34.1 years

European Region

International migrants: 13.5% (100 816 833)
Male: 6.6% (48 911 578)
Female: 6.9% (51 905 255)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 5.0% (7 873 548)
Median age of all international migrants: 44.1 years



African Region

International migrants: 3.5% (22 049 842)
Male: 4.0% (11 569 246)
Female: 3.0% (10 480 596)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 21.0% (5 927 542)
Median age of all international migrants: 31.9 years

Eastern Mediterranean Region

International migrants: 22.8% (46 916 863)
Male: 16.0% (30 840 327)
Female: 6.8% (16 076 536)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 36.3% (9 593 354)
Median age of all international migrants: 31.9 years

South-East Asia Region

International migrants: 2.7% (11 768 016)
Male: 2.0% (5 743 000)
Female: 0.7% (6 025 016)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 9.8% (1 195 269)
Median age of all international migrants: 34.7 years

Western Pacific Region

International migrants: 15.7% (24 618 179)
Male: 7.8% (12 347 569)
Female: 8.0% (12 270 610)
Refugees and asylum seekers: 9.6% (712 849)
Median age of all international migrants: 34.9 years

● Not applicable

Source: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (67).

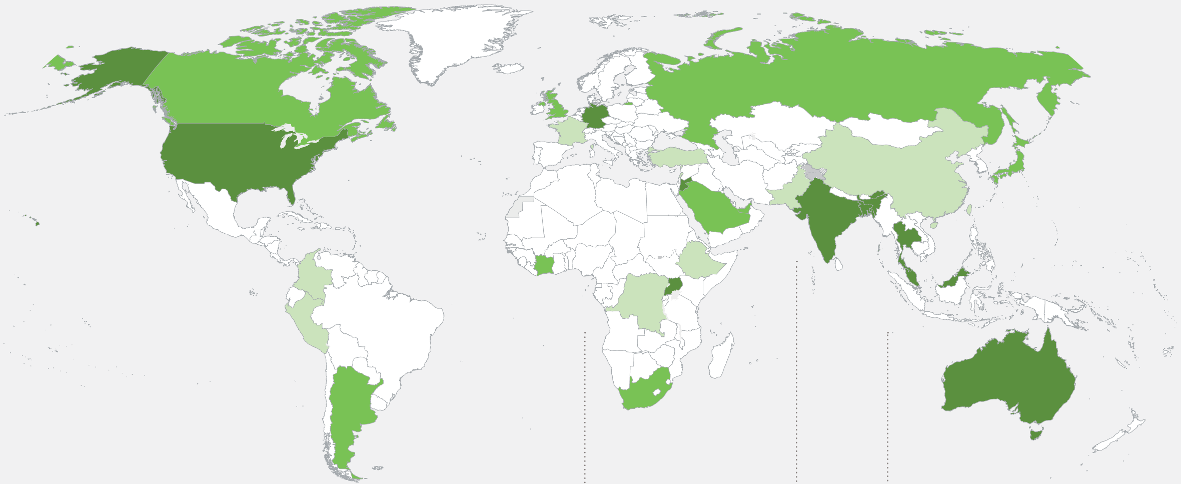
Fig. 1.2. International migrants, refugees and asylum seekers in the top three host countries, by WHO region, 2020

Region of the Americas

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
Canada: 21.3% (8 049 323)	Colombia: 93.5% (1 781 002)
United States: 15.3% (50 632 836)	Peru: 70.9% (867 821)
Argentina: 5.0% (2 281 728)	United States: 2.3% (1 189 312)

European Region

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
Germany: 18.8% (15 762 457)	Türkiye: 64.6% (3 907 788)
United Kingdom: 13.8% (9 359 587)	Germany: 9.2% (1 455 947)
Russian Federation: 8.0% (11 636 911)	France: 6.0% (510 080)



African Region

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
Côte d'Ivoire: 9.7% (2 564 857)	Uganda: 80.3% (1 381 122)
South Africa: 4.8% (2 860 495)	Ethiopia: 67.7% (734 812)
Uganda: 3.8% (1 720 313)	Democratic Republic of the Congo: 55.3% (526 931)

Eastern Mediterranean Region

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
United Arab Emirates: 88.1% (8 716 332)	Jordan: 87.3% (3 017 401)
Saudi Arabia: 38.6% (13 454 842)	Lebanon: 82.0% (1 404 312)
Jordan: 33.9% (3 457 691)	Pakistan: 43.6% (1 428 147)

South-East Asia Region

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
Thailand: 5.2% (3 632 496)	Bangladesh: 40.4% (854 820)
Bangladesh: 1.3% (2 115 408)	India: 4.2% (207 334)
India: 0.4% (4 878 704)	Thailand: 2.7% (98 418)

Western Pacific Region

International migrants (% of total population)	Refugees and asylum seekers (% of international migrants)
Australia: 30.1% (7 685 860)	China: 29.2% (304 041)
Malaysia: 10.7% (3 476 560)	Malaysia: 5.2% (179 744)
Japan: 2.2% (2 770 996)	Australia: 2.0% (154 129)

● Top three host countries of international migrants by WHO region
● Top three host countries of refugees and asylum seekers by WHO region
● Top three host countries of both categories by WHO region
● Not applicable

Source: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (67).

1.4 Migratory patterns in WHO regions

Migratory patterns in the six WHO regions vary greatly, depending on travel routes and methods, reasons for displacement and migration, demographics, and the context in which displacement and migration occurs. All of these have important impacts on the health of refugees and migrants.

WHO African Region. Almost 75% of migrants from countries in sub-Saharan Africa remain within the continent. Approximately 20% travel to Europe, North America, the countries of the Gulf Cooperation Council and Asia along the Central Mediterranean Route (the most dangerous), Western Mediterranean Route, Eastern Mediterranean Route, West African Route and Western Balkan Route (see Box 3.1). Fleeing poverty and conflict and seeking better opportunities and environmental conditions remain important drivers. Even so, the COVID-19 pandemic significantly reduced migratory flows within the Region and to Europe due to the restrictions on movement (71–73).

WHO Region of the Americas. Migration towards North America remains prominent, mostly from other parts of the Americas, as well as from Asia (notably China, India and the Philippines). The United States of America is the largest recipient of migrants worldwide, with 18% of total global migrants (51 million) in 2020 (12). The largest migration corridor in the world is between the United States and Mexico, which is a key country of origin, transit and destination. As well as economic factors, displacement and migration from Central America and the Caribbean reflect environmental events, such as droughts and hurricanes, as well as generalized violence and criminal activity. In 2021 the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela experienced the largest movement of refugees and migrants worldwide, after the Syrian Arab Republic. More than 5.6 million Venezuelans were outside their country of origin towards the end of 2021; of these, more than 80% had fled to countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, most notably Colombia, Ecuador and Peru (73).

WHO South-East Asia Region. In general, this Region sends migrants to other areas, particularly to North America, Europe, countries in the Gulf Cooperation Council, and Australasia. Flows of international migration include movement from Myanmar to Thailand (74); from Nepal (75), Bangladesh and Bhutan to India (76); from many of the Region's countries to the Maldives (77); and from Timor-Leste to Indonesia (78). Rohingya refugees from Myanmar are the biggest refugee group, with close to 1 million living in Bangladesh (79). There are smaller groups of refugees from Myanmar on the Thailand–Myanmar border (80), Sri Lankans in India, and Bhutanese in Nepal, with diverse refugees in Indonesia waiting to go to Australia (81).

WHO European Region. The main drivers of international migration into Europe are intraregional labour migration as a result of the European Union (EU), people fleeing conflict in the Middle East and sub-Saharan Africa via the Central and Western Mediterranean Routes, labour migration from Asia and Latin America, nationals of central and eastern Europe settling in western and southern Europe, and migration between the Russian Federation and countries of the former Soviet Union.[2] In 2020 Europe hosted approximately 6.8 million refugees and people in refugee-like situations, with Türkiye alone hosting nearly 3.7 million refugees, about 15% of all people displaced across borders globally. In 2019 the Russian Federation was the major destination country (12 million) and country of origin (11 million) for international migration in the Region (67,73,82,83).[3]

---

[2] The data presented here do not include the mass displacement resulting from the conflict in Ukraine that began on 24 February 2022.

WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region. Large flows of labour migration have occurred into, from and within the Region, with much of the intraregional movement focused on the high-income countries of the Gulf Cooperation Council (84). In 2017 the Region's countries hosted 23.8 million migrant workers, about 14.5% of the global total (85). Many countries in this Region remain affected by protracted and unresolved conflicts, including Afghanistan, Somalia, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen. These conflicts have resulted in large numbers of refugees, including 6.7 million from the Syrian Arab Republic and 2.6 million from Afghanistan, most of whom are hosted in the Region itself (13,86,87).

WHO Western Pacific Region. In 2020 Australia was among the top 10 host countries, while China and the Philippines were among the top 10 origin countries (12). Malaysia and Singapore are both prominent host and origin countries (73). Migration for seasonal employment is widespread in the Pacific Island nations, with Tonga and Vanuatu sending significant numbers of people to Australia and New Zealand for work in industries such as agriculture and hospitality (88). In 2015 approximately 85%, or 16.2 million, of the world's internally displaced population migrated as a result of natural disasters in Asia and the Pacific (88). The largest sources of refugees in 2020 were China and Viet Nam (89).

With many women migrating during their prime childbearing years, the health needs of women and girls in any given situation are often different from those of men, and they require additional medical services for prenatal, labour and delivery care, and for postpartum care. However, the health of men and boys is also affected by gender-based risks.

1.5 Age and gender

The gender and age distributions of refugees and migrants vary across WHO regions (Fig. 1.1). In most regions the difference between the numbers of males and females is less than 10%, but in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region the proportion is almost double for male refugees and migrants. With many women migrating during their prime childbearing years, the health needs of women and girls in any given situation are often different from those of men, and they require additional medical services for prenatal, labour and delivery care, and for postpartum care (22,90–92). However, the health of men and boys is also affected by gender-based risks (Chapter 2).

---

[3] In May 2022, after the writing of this report had been completed, UNHCR announced that the number of people forced to flee conflict, violence, human rights violations and persecution had surpassed 100 million for the first time on record. UNHCR estimated that during the early part of 2022 the war in Ukraine had displaced 8 million within the country and that more than 6 million refugee movements from Ukraine had been registered.

While many countries hosting refugees have policies allowing refugees to access health and social protection services, that access may be partial, entail prohibitive out-of-pocket expenditures and involve additional barriers, including distance to facilities, language and discrimination by providers.

At mid-year in 2020, migrants aged 65 years and older accounted for an estimated 34.3 million (12.2%) of all international migrants, calculated using the foreign-born or foreign population as a proxy for international migrants (67,93).

1.6 Displacement

The UNHCR estimates that 82.4 million people were forcibly displaced worldwide at the end of 2020, and 34.5 million of these were refugees, asylum seekers and Venezuelan migrants (13). These populations should be a focus of efforts to improve population health, given the additional challenges, stressors and health-eroding environmental exposures they may have experienced (94,95). Fig. 1.1 shows the total number and proportion of refugees and asylum seekers by WHO region.

Refugees and other forcibly displaced populations often have distinct protection and health needs. For example, women and girls often lack access to urgent reproductive health services and are at increased risk of sexual violence (59,90). While many countries hosting refugees have policies allowing refugees to access health and social protection services, that access may be partial, entail prohibitive out-of-pocket expenditures and involve additional barriers, including distance to facilities, language and discrimination by providers (96,97).

The sudden arrival of large numbers of refugees and asylum seekers can severely test public health and social protection services (98,99). Examples of particular challenges include a lack of access to health insurance, barriers to accessing care (including language, previous interactions with medical care services, and understanding of diagnoses, treatment options and use of medicines), the quality of care and satisfaction with care (including a lack of continuity of care and cultural sensitivity, and barriers to understanding and navigating the health system). Women and girls often lack access to urgent reproductive health services and are at increased risk of sexual violence (59,90). In response to these challenges, global assessments have been conducted to report on the ability of various states to address influxes of refugees and migrants (98,100). These assessments highlight potential strains on health care systems, which may be due to a country's size or resources or its position as transit country in the migratory pathway or to receiving a large displaced population; they emphasize the need for international assistance to address the risk of infectious diseases (101,102).

1.7 Health and the dynamics of global displacement and migration

Displacement and migration are major determinants of health for large numbers of people worldwide (103). This report describes in detail various aspects of health and migration, taking into account a number of frameworks for thinking about how migration affects the health of populations (104).

Understanding the determinants of displacement and migration can help health systems, policy-makers and practitioners safeguard and promote the health of refugees and migrants (105,106). For example, a comparative health advantage observed among some refugees and migrants is partly the result of selection bias: younger, healthier persons are able to migrate due to the health requirements that some need to fulfil prior to departure,

((Nutrition))
حليب

Health education sessions help promote healthy eating and prevent diabetes in Jordan's Zaatari refugee camp. © WHO / Tania Habjouqa especially if seeking international employment (107,108). The health of refugees and migrants compared with that of host populations after arrival is also partly related to the overall health of the host country's populations, as well as to the services that the refugees and migrants are able to access (109).

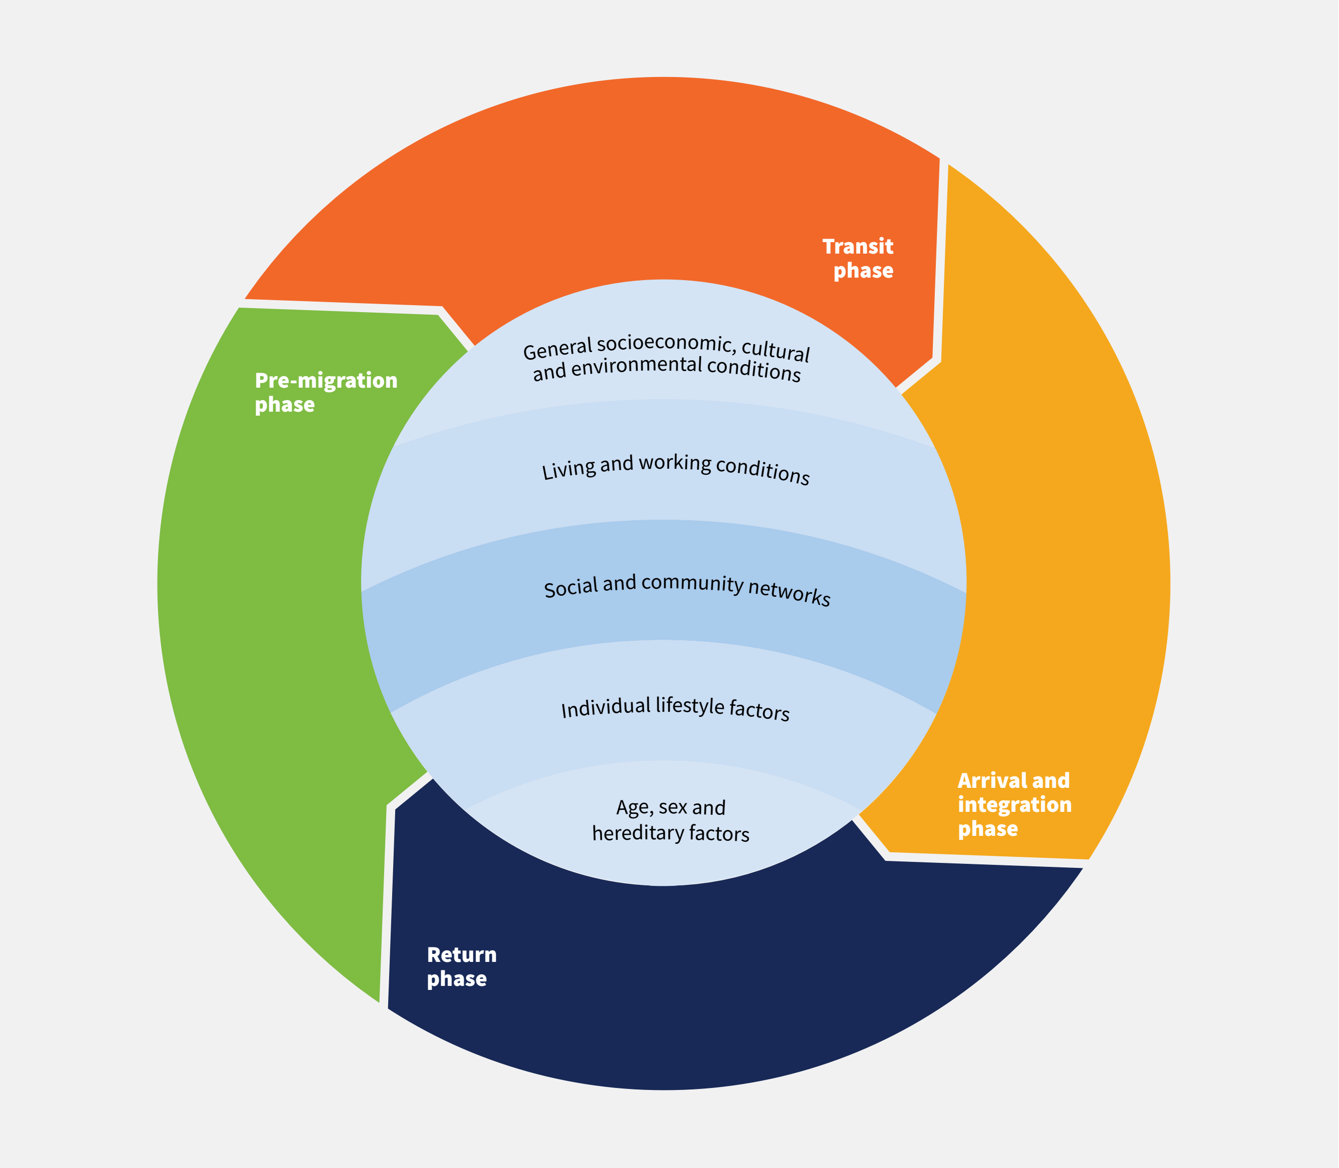
Displacement and migration do not happen in a vacuum. As summarized in the social–ecological model in Fig. 1.3, the contexts that surround migration – before, during, after and on return – influence the health of refugees and migrants as much as their individual characteristics. Population growth and decline are major drivers of migration as people move to access resources. People may choose to migrate to seek economic opportunity, medical treatment, educational opportunity or an improved standard of living (111). Others may instead be forced to leave their homes or places of residence (displacement). Countries may implement policies to encourage or discourage migration depending on their own needs, to respond to the sensitivities of their own labour force, to support social services, for humanitarian reasons or in response to political pressures (24,112,113). Additionally, factors such as ageing, urbanization, conflict and climate change may influence trends in both displacement and migration and the health needs of refugees and migrants (114).

Fig. 1.3 illustrates the determinants that can influence the health and well-being of refugees and migrants at different levels, starting from that of the individual and becoming intertwined throughout the four phases of displacement and migration. It highlights the importance of micro-, meso- and macro-level factors that influence the health vulnerabilities of refugees and migrants during all four phases. For example, when someone with a chronic disease moves from one place to another, their health situation may be worsened during the migration or transit phase because they have limited or intermittent access to health care services (115). Another example includes changes in dietary patterns after migration, which may increase the risk for diseases (108) or, conversely, result in improved health outcomes (116–118).

This social–ecological model represents personal health as the product of multiple factors, cascading outwards from individual characteristics and behaviours to the social and economic conditions that shape people's lives (119). Determinants of health at various levels of the model affect the health of refugees and migrants differently during the different phases of displacement and migration. For example, while a language barrier might not exist in the country of origin, it becomes a relatively significant barrier for a refugee or migrant seeking health care and utilizing health services. Similarly, belonging to a minority group might lead to persecution and eventually to displacement, but might also become the most important reason to be granted protection in another country (refugee status, for example). The intersections of the determinants of health and the different phases of migration with those of the life course (120) may result in distinct, immediate health outcomes, such as in the tragic cases of preventable deaths during transit or over time, for example, in the delayed onset of illness (83,115,119,120).

A comprehensive approach to protecting and promoting the health of refugees and migrants must take into account the full set of determinants of health in each context, both throughout the displacement and migration process and across the life course. In many ways, policies that promote the health of refugees and migrants also promote the health of the larger population, including the host population (121–123).

Fig. 1.3. Determinants of health and phases of migration



Transit phase
Pre-migration phase
General socioeconomic, cultural and environmental conditions
Living and working conditions
Social and community networks
Individual lifestyle factors
Age, sex and hereditary factors
Arrival and integration phase
Return phase

Source: reproduced by permission of the publisher from Dahlgren & Whitehead (110).

The experience of displacement and migration is itself a determinant of health, and examining different phases of displacement and migration helps to illuminate its impact (111). Important cross-cutting factors include sex, age, race or ethnicity, and a variety of socioeconomic conditions experienced during the four phases of migration (124).

In the coming decades, several trends will influence both displacement and migration and the health needs of refugees and migrants. These trends are particularly important for policy-makers who are considering how refugees and migrants contribute to and require different responses from health systems.

1.7.1 Urbanization

Urbanization is perhaps the salient global demographic shift of the first half of the 21st century, with more than half the world now living in urban areas (125). Urbanization refers to the movement of persons from more rural to more urban, or densely populated, areas. People often move to urban centres, either in their home countries or internationally (126), to seek economic opportunity and access to resources, such as education, employment, health care and efficient governance. Urbanization provides opportunities for social and economic progress (127,128); however, adapting to urban living is complex, given the associated reductions in physical activity, increased pollution, overcrowding, poor nutrition, risk of communicable diseases, changes in land use, urban heat island effects, and shifts in lifestyle choices, nutritional patterns and human behaviours (129,130). Women living in poor urban areas are disadvantaged in terms of access to employment, health facilities and secure housing, and their ability to complete their education, and they are more subject to the social and economic effects of crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic (131).

Urbanization may also be associated with poor mental health when conditions include overcrowding, limited resources and the loss of social support systems (132). Key to assessing the influence of urbanization on health is an understanding of health inequities (129) and of the differences between urban dwellers with assets versus urban dwellers without assets. Urbanization can also be associated with better health indicators, particularly for persons who improve their social and economic well-being as a result of moving to more urbanized areas. Given that the number of urban dwellers is projected to grow to 6.7 billion by 2050, focusing on the health of urban refugees and migrants has become urgent (125).

The experience of displacement and migration is itself a determinant of health, and examining different phases of displacement and migration helps to illuminate its impact.

1.7.2 Brain circulation: brain drain versus brain gain

The movement of skilled labour may result in a so-called brain drain, typically from lower-income countries, and a brain gain in higher-income countries in a process known more generically as brain circulation (133,134). Host countries benefit from brain gain – that is, the migration of highly skilled and productive trainees and workers, particularly those who conduct research and provide medical care. Including people with diverse experience and backgrounds in high-skill workplaces can advance technologies, science and governance. Additionally, migrants may return home with new skills or share their skills or knowledge with networks in their countries of origin.

Conversely, brain drain may worsen the availability of services, such as health care, if highly skilled doctors and nurses leave lower-income countries seeking better economic opportunity. Studies of skilled health care workers who left their home countries found that key to the decision to migrate were interests in professional advancement, social support and finding intellectual communities (135). As a result of their departure, fewer skilled workers were left to address the needs of the populations remaining in their countries of origin. The departure of nurses, for example, reduced access to and services for populations in their home countries (135–137). However, this loss may be partly offset because the flow of human capital and talent to other countries can lead to positive outcomes in terms of remittances and of a transfer of skills back to their home countries (138).

1.7.3 Sending money home

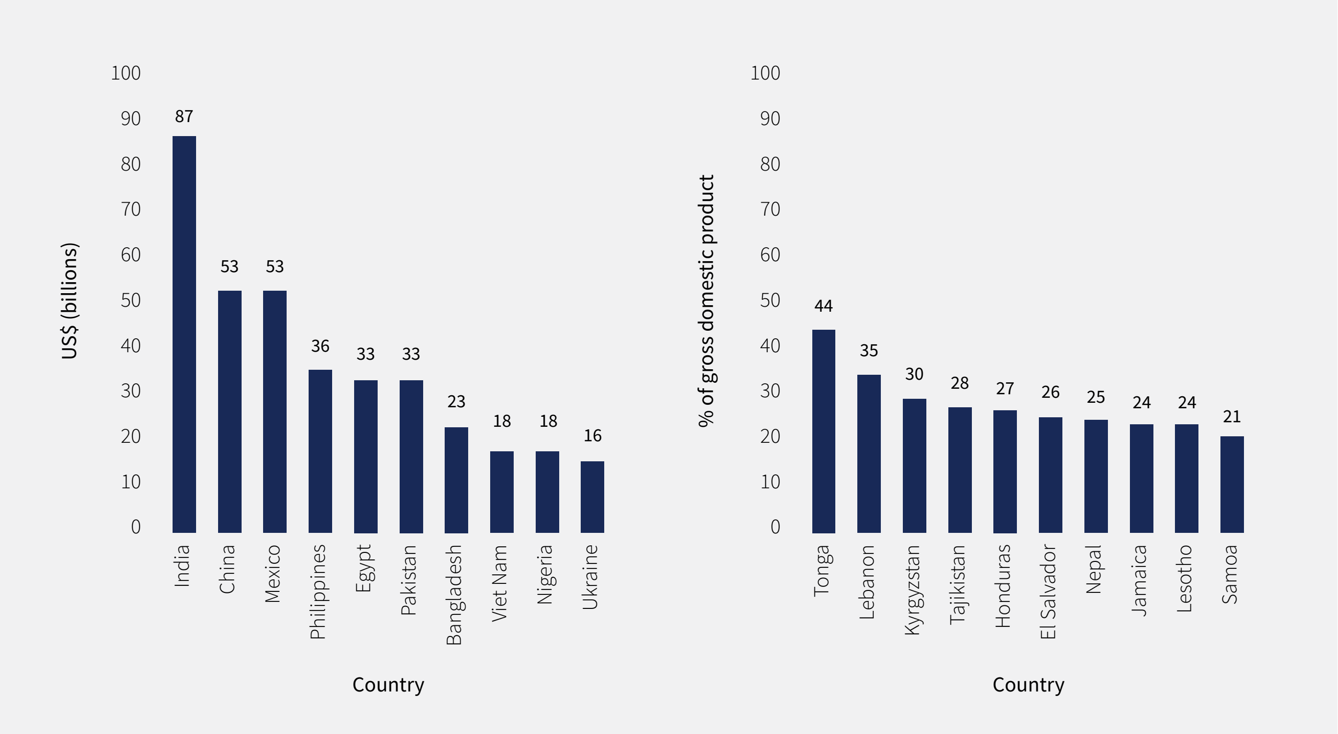
Remittances are an important and positive economic result of migration for migrants themselves and for family and friends remaining in their home countries. Once migrants have accessed economic opportunities, they often send remittances to their families. Remittances account for a large fraction of the global movement of funds. Despite predictions that remittances would fall due to the COVID-19 pandemic (in part as a result of travel restrictions and the economic downturn), remittances proved to be resilient (139). The economic recovery in 2021 followed the resilience of remittance flows seen in 2020, which declined by a modest 1.7% to US$ 549 billion in the face of one of the deepest global recessions. Remittances now stand at more than threefold above official development assistance and are more than 50% higher than foreign direct investment, excluding in China. This underscores the importance of remittance flows in supporting spending in recipient countries during periods of economic hardship (140).

In many low- and middle-income countries, migrants stepped up their support to families back home, especially to countries affected by the spread of the COVID-19 Delta variant. Their ability to help was enabled by a welcome pickup in economic activity and employment in countries that are major destinations for migrants, grounded partly in the exceptional COVID-19 emergency fiscal stimuli and accommodative monetary policies.

In most other areas, remittances have also recovered strongly, registering growth of 5–10% in Europe and Central Asia, the Middle East and northern Africa, southern Asia and sub-Saharan Africa, but at a slower pace of 1.4% in eastern Asia and the Pacific, excluding China (139). The key contributing factors are the willingness of migrants to support their families in times of need, together with the fiscal stimuli and employment support programmes implemented in the United States and European destination countries, which provided many migrants with the financial wherewithal to increase support to their families at home. In the Gulf Cooperation Council countries and the Russian Federation, the recovery of outward remittances was also facilitated by stronger oil prices and the resulting pickup in economic activity.

In 2021 the top five remittance recipients in current US dollars were India, China, Mexico, the Philippines and Egypt. As a share of gross domestic product (GDP), the top five remittance recipients in 2021 were smaller economies: Tonga, Lebanon, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Honduras (Fig. 1.4). The United States was the largest source country for remittances in 2020, followed by the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia and Switzerland. Remittances increase or maintain consumer spending and soften the blow of economic hardship, such as during the COVID-19 pandemic. Remittances are expected to continue growing in 2022, but there are challenges, such as the COVID-19 crisis, which still poses one of the greatest risks to flows to low- and middle-income countries, especially as fiscal stimulus programmes in migrant destination countries cannot continue indefinitely (140).

Fig. 1.4. Top remittance recipients among low- and middle-income countries, 2021 estimates



Source: reproduced by permission of the publisher from Ratha et al. (139).

1.7.4 Left-behind families

Migration affects not only people who move but also their family and community members who remain: an estimated 193 million family members of migrant workers are left behind (i.e. family members who remain in the country of origin) (141). Outward migration can lead to brain drain (section 1.7.2) and care drain in communities of origin: migration of individuals to high-income countries to undertake care jobs for the host population can create a care deficit for their own families, especially for children and older people (142–144). More research is needed to understand the health effects on family members who are left behind. Whether labour migration can help to enhance the well-being of children affected by labour migration depends on factors such as the legal continuum of care, opportunities for children to have contact with their parents and the support received from guardians and the community. Migration can also help to lift families from poverty, where remittances are used to fund health care, medicine and nutritious food; create autonomy for women; and provide opportunities for the families and communities of those who migrate (14–16). At the same time, several reviews and meta-analyses show negative health effects on the left-behind children of migrant workers. These include, for example, the unreliability of remittances, which may disrupt health care for children who are left behind (145–147). Children who stayed behind in their home country also faced increased risks for depression, conduct disorder, substance use, and wasting and stunting relative to the children of non-migrants (146). Differences between the children of migrants and non-migrants were not found for other outcomes around nutrition, abuse, diarrhoea or unintentional injury.

Family separation can affect the health outcomes of the families of both international and internal migrants. However, despite the potential negative health outcomes, economic opportunities remain a significant motivation for migration.

1.7.5 Discrimination and xenophobia

While migration provides many benefits, refugees and migrants may face hateful treatment or attitudes. Xenophobia or othering is the treatment of people as outsiders because of their language, culture, appearance or place of birth. Xenophobia may expose refugees and migrants in host countries to discrimination, mistreatment or violence, and it has serious public health consequences. In addition to limiting access to health services, xenophobia may also lead to migrants developing chronic stress syndrome and a variety of other problems, such as anxiety, sleep disorders and depression (148–151); it can also lead to health systems and health care providers being unaware of and unresponsive to the health needs of refugees and migrants, and to the exclusion of the most vulnerable among them (149,152).

1.7.6 People smuggling and human trafficking

While much migration occurs without contravening laws or regulations, a significant yet unmeasurable portion of migrants is exploited by criminal networks. Although different in legal terms, people smuggling and human trafficking share many similarities in how they are carried out, and are sometimes hard to distinguish from each other.

The smuggling of migrants is defined in the United Nations Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air as the "procurement, in order to obtain, directly or indirectly, a financial or other material benefit, of the irregular entry of a person into a State Party of which the person is not a national or a permanent resident" (153).

In contrast, trafficking in human beings is defined by the United Nations Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children as the "recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation" (154).
There are few data about the health status or specific health care needs of smuggled refugees and migrants or those who are trafficked (155,156). The absence of good data also reflects the complexities of gathering information about "mixed migration", the term applied when a number of people are travelling together for different reasons but using the same routes and means of transport, often with false or no official documents (157).

According to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime's Observatory on Smuggling of Migrants, many smuggled refugees and migrants are subject to physical and psychological abuse perpetrated by a variety of actors, including smugglers but also private individuals, non-state armed groups and state authorities (158). For example, research suggests that smuggled migrants from western Africa, northern Africa and the central Mediterranean undertake huge risks while crossing the desert or sea. Many lack food and water, and some have seen their travel companions die as a result (158).

Women and girls face serious health risks, especially if they are simultaneously breastfeeding and taking care of children or are pregnant, or a combination of these. Similar to children and older people, they are more likely to be abandoned during a smuggling journey. Moreover, abuses are highly gendered (159). Whereas women and girls are more likely to be exposed to sexual violence and to lack access to health services, men and boys (the majority of smuggled people on most routes) also experience physical violence, forced labour and inhuman and degrading treatment.

The enforcement of certain laws may also have implications for health. The detention of irregular migrants by government authorities often involves exposure to insanitary and dangerous conditions in detention centres, as well as to food and water deprivation. Abuse and violence were commonly reported in a study of those who arrived in Italy using the Central Mediterranean Route (159).

Policies and programmes that separate families, limit access to medical or social services, or condone or promote violence, discrimination, prolonged detention or illicit trafficking yield poor health.

The health implications of conditions along migrant smuggling routes make it all the more urgent to pursue Target 10.7 of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which commits the international community to facilitating the orderly, safe, regular and responsible migration and mobility of people.

1.7.7 Climate change

Climate-related displacement and migration are emerging as growing international concerns (160,161). Recent studies suggest that the impact of anthropogenic climate change may already be felt across 80% of the world's land area, which has 85% of the population (162).

Although the link between climate change and the movement of people is complex, climate change is undoubtedly already shifting patterns of mobility and will increasingly do so. Climate migrants are defined as "persons who, predominantly for reasons of sudden or progressive change in the environment due to climate change, are obliged to leave their habitual place of residence, or choose to do so, either temporarily or permanently, within a State or across an international border" (34).

Rapid-onset climate-related crises are already displacing large numbers of people. In 2020, for example, of the 40.5 million newly internally displaced people, 76% (30.7 million) were forced to move by disasters, virtually all of which were weather related, even if not all were directly attributable to climate change. In comparison, 24% (9.8 million) were displaced by conflict and violence (47). In addition, one of the most recent models, and the only one focusing on people internally displaced by slow-onset climate processes, estimates that 140 million people could be internally displaced by 2050 in only sub-Saharan Africa, Latin America and southern Asia (160).

Often, climate change affects human health directly, such as when hazards cause injuries and deaths. The effects of climate change can also be indirect, brought about through factors such as changes in the epidemiological patterns of vector-borne diseases due to shifts in mean temperatures, increased air pollution from wildfires, or the diminishing availability of food and water. Lastly, climate change affects human health through complex interactions with the cultural, social, economic and political milieux in which it takes effect. In some places, it may contribute to risks of conflict and violence by intensifying disputes over scarce resources, reducing economic opportunities, and straining public institutions and infrastructure (163). At this level, climate change acts as a risk multiplier by compounding the effects of pre-existing social and political determinants of health (164).

Quantifying the impact of climate change on human mobility is difficult for several reasons. The key challenge is that climate change acts as a direct driver of migration, and it also influences a range of additional environmental, economic, social, demographic and political drivers of displacement and migration (165,166). Other challenges include logistic difficulties in collecting reliable data and methodological inconsistencies across jurisdictions; the fact that, at least for now, most movements of people happen over short distances and not across international borders; and the almost complete lack of quantitative information about people displaced by slow-onset processes (163,167).

1.8 Health and migration policies

Health and migration policies should be applied in countries of origin, transit and destination and be formulated with the participation of refugees and migrants themselves, in line with wider efforts to include mobile populations within health systems. The Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework formulated in 2016 provides pragmatic and socially inclusive guidelines, some of which can be applied to a wide variety of contexts (168–170).

Policies in countries of origin, transit and destination can promote health in a variety of ways – for example, policies that provide adequate housing, food, medical care, education, work conditions; equitable treatment; and economic opportunities (171). Conversely, policies and programmes that separate families, limit access to medical or social services, or condone or promote violence, discrimination, prolonged detention or illicit trafficking yield poor health (109). For example, political stability is associated with improved health for populations (172,173).

Optimizing the policies that are put in place to improve the health of refugees and migrants and host populations requires engaging with the target communities themselves. Including refugees and migrants in health policies is consistent with the universal values of the SDGs and the pledge to leave no one behind (174). Providing access to basic care and preventive treatment aligns with global standards for human rights. Access to services includes universal health coverage (UHC) and a primary health care (PHC) approach, including services such as language translation services and culturally sensitive case management.

1.8.1 Key international frameworks

Health and displacement and migration are integrally linked to the three agendas of global health, global development and migration governance. At the international level, these global agendas have enshrined addressing the needs of displaced populations and migrants as strategic areas that are key to achieving policy goals. Numerous frameworks, agreements and resolutions have been forged during the last decade within national, regional and multilateral platforms. The two global compacts (the Global compact on refugees (175) and the Global compact for safe, orderly and regular migration (176)), multiple World Health Assembly resolutions and decisions (2008, 2017 and 2018), two global consultations on migration and health (2010 and 2017), the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the United Nations Political Declaration of the High-level Meeting on Universal Health Coverage (2019) provide the basis to advance the formulation of policy and promote multisectoral action to include, protect and integrate refugees and migrants (175–181).

One of the key regulations relevant to the context of displacement and migration is the International Health Regulations (182). While the International Health Regulations are not specific to refugees and migrants, they are legally binding and oblige Member States to develop specific public health core capacities, in particular at points of entry (i.e. international ports, airports and ground crossings) to prevent, protect against, control and provide a public health response to the international spread of diseases, with a precautionary approach.

At the Special Session of the World Health Assembly, a decision was taken to negotiate an international instrument on pandemic preparedness and response that will take into consideration the migratory phenomenon and the needs of refugees and migrants. This could promote better transparency, accountability and management of future public health emergencies (183).

At the heart of these efforts is ensuring the mainstreaming of displacement and migration within the health agenda and of health within the displacement and migration agenda (184). Implementing this vision requires a pragmatic effort across the following three focus areas.

Integrated health needs. The first is to ensure that the health needs of refugees and migrants are applied across the health sector and are explicitly integrated into national health systems and programmes. For instance, the critical importance of migration is recognized in the Global plan to end TB 2018–2022 (185), while ensuring inclusive and sensitive care and prevention services for refugees and migrants is a key pillar of the framework of the End TB Strategy (186).

Beyond the health sector. Secondly, similar to the general population, solutions for improving the health of refugees and migrants cannot be found within the health sector alone (187). To meaningfully address the underlying determinants and inequities as part of the development agenda requires intersectoral action. There is a need to improve migration health literacy within the foreign affairs, labour migration, travel, trade and immigration-control sectors. A positive development has been the inclusion of the health and migration agenda at various high-level regional forums within regional and subregional blocs. Health and migration have emerged as a strategic focus for discussions around labour migration, trade and economic cooperation. It is also becoming apparent that regional and subregional initiatives on cross-border travel, trade and economic cooperation can be important drivers of action for the health of migrants. Examples of regional and subregional migration governance initiatives that include health as a key priority are the African Union Migration and Health Programme (188); the 2018 Quito Process between countries in Latin America and the Caribbean receiving Venezuelan refugees and migrants (189,190); the Colombo Process for labour-sending countries of origin in Asia (191); and the European Commission's migration health programme (192).

Better information. Thirdly, there is a need for improving health information and research platforms to promote the development of evidence-informed policy and practices. Health information systems (HIS), routine health surveys and registries, and other platforms that guide health care decisions often exclude refugees and migrants and do not take account of human mobility. Therefore, it is essential to integrate such modules within a rigorous ethical and data protection framework (193). The challenges of and potential for improving data collection and analysis are dealt with in greater detail in Chapters 5 and 6.

During the last decade, there has been growing recognition that the health needs of refugees and migrants are a global health priority. However, a number of practical considerations must be taken into account. These include identifying and then training staff in key government programmes and structures to take action for refugee and migrant health at the national, regional and local levels. Investments are also needed to support technical cooperation to address health in displacement and migration, galvanize intersectoral action and build evidence platforms to guide action. The resources and knowledge of diaspora populations should also be engaged whenever possible (194–196).

Formulating policies and programmes rooted in emergency preparedness and response remains essential. However, to build resilient, refugee- and migrant-sensitive health systems, structural policies are needed that recognize long-term displacement, regular migration and mixed migration flows. Investment in research needs to be linked to policy-making, and it is crucial to enhance capacities and mentorship among researchers in developing regions. Translating knowledge to policy effectively means both generating rigorous evidence and ensuring that this evidence informs the policy-making process.

While the COVID-19 pandemic will likely push health systems worldwide towards a greater focus on public and population health, several governments have taken proactive measures to promote a refugee- and migrant-inclusive approach to their COVID-19 response and recovery. For example, Peru approved temporary health coverage for refugees and migrants suspected of having or who test positive for COVID-19 (197). Portugal temporarily lifted all barriers and provided free access to their national health service, including for irregular migrants (198). Singapore set up medical facilities and triage clinics in dormitories for migrant workers and provided them with food and other necessities (199). In the United Kingdom, charges were waived for the diagnosis and treatment of COVID-19 for all non-nationals, regardless of their residency or migratory status (200).

Despite these positive developments, many countries have explicitly stated to international human rights bodies that they cannot or do not want to provide health protection, including essential health services, to migrants, and especially to irregular migrants (201). COVID-19 is providing a powerful impetus for change: evidence prior to 2021 shows that, until recently, few countries included refugees and migrants in their national pandemic preparedness plans or in broader health policies (202,203). The rhetoric of leaving no one behind is futile if populations of refugees and migrants continue to be restricted in their abilities and rights to access affordable health and social protection services.

1.8.2 WHO resolutions and action plans

Within the United Nations, WHO has primary responsibility for promoting and achieving health for all and UHC and PHC within the context of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its associated SDGs (180). WHO works with its Member States to achieve the highest level of health for all people by pursuing UHC. Since 2019, WHO's work and activities have been carried out within its Thirteenth General Programme of Work 2019–2023 (GPW13), which was approved by the Seventy-first World Health Assembly in resolution WHA71.1 in 2018 (204). In May 2022 the Health Assembly agreed to extend the timeline of GPW13 to 2025 (205).

GPW13 focuses on the Triple Billion Targets to achieve measurable impacts on people's health at country level (204). The GPW13 framework prioritizes guiding principles that aim to promote health, keep the world safe and serve the vulnerable. The framework re-emphasizes the pledges of the 2030 Agenda to leave no one behind, including refugees and migrants (180).

More specifically, policies that refer to health and displacement and migration have created awareness that these concepts are interlinked. Resolution WHA61.17 (Health of migrants) recognized that multiple dimensions of migration can affect health, that some groups of persons who migrate may have elevated health risks and that the timely and sensitive tracking of data, coordination across organizations and exchange of information could yield improved outcomes (177,206). Similarly, resolution WHA70.15 (Promoting the health of refugees and migrants) urged Member States to "identify and collect evidence-based information, best practices and lessons learned in addressing the health needs of refugees and migrants in order to contribute to the development of a draft global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants" (207). This was translated into a framework that encompasses the priorities and guiding principles necessary to promote the health of refugees and migrants. Accordingly, Member States took note of the WHO Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants, 2019–2023 (GAP) (208), following from the United Nations’ 2016 New York declaration for refugees and migrants (170), which acknowledges specific national commitments adopted by Member States, and the priorities and guiding principles necessary for promoting the health of refugees and migrants, which were adopted at the Seventy-second World Health Assembly in 2019 (209).

WHO's GAP is fully aligned with the framework of priorities and guiding principles to promote the health of refugees and migrants (207), the United Nations’ SDGs (180), the Global compact on refugees and the Global compact for safe, orderly and regular migration (175,176). Both the GAP and the framework of priorities and guiding principles were developed in close collaboration with the IOM, the UNHCR and other relevant stakeholders. A monitoring framework is being developed to track progress on implementing the GAP.

WHO's Health and Migration Programme was created as a strategic commitment to provide global leadership on health and migration issues, including helping to implement the GAP at the global, regional and country levels and to address all of its priorities. These include implementing public health interventions, promoting the continuity and ensuring the quality of health care, engaging in advocacy to mainstream health policies that are sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants, and strengthening capacity to tackle social determinants of health, as well as monitoring trends, strengthening HIS and developing an accountability framework and indicators to monitor and report on progress made in implementation and communication. This report is a response to these priorities.

References

1. Zhunio MC, Vishwasrao S, Chiang EP. The influence of remittances on education and health outcomes: a cross country study. Appl Econ. 2012;44(35):4605–16. doi:10.1080/00036846.2011.593499.
2. Amega K. Remittances, education and health in sub-Saharan Africa. Cogent Econ Finance. 2018;6(1):1516488. doi:10.1080/23322039.2018.1516488.
3. International Labour Organization, Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. How immigrants contribute to developing countries' economies. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2018 (https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/development/how-immigrants-contribute-to-developing-countries-economies_9789264288737-en, accessed 9 January 2022).
4. Report on the health of refugees and migrants in the WHO European Region: no public health without refugees and migrant health. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/311347, accessed 9 January 2022).
5. Kumar C, Oommen E, Fragapane F, Foresti M. Beyond gratitude: lessons learned from migrants' contribution to the COVID-19 response. London: Overseas Development Institute; 2021 (https://cdn.odi.org/media/documents/hmi-migrant_key_workers-working_paper-final.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).
6. Abubakar I, Aldridge RW, Devakumar D, Orcutt M, Burns R, Barreto ML et al. The UCL–Lancet commission on migration and health: the health of a world on the move. Lancet. 2018;392:2606–54. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)32114-7.
7. Nielsen R, Akey JM, Jakobsson M, Pritchard JK, Tishkoff S, Willerslev E. Tracing the peopling of the world through genomics. Nature. 2017;541:302–10. doi:10.1038/nature21347.
8. Esipova N, Ray J, Pugliese A. How the world views migration. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2015 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/how_the_world_gallup.pdf, accessed 28 March 2022).
9. Markaki Y, Longhi S. What determines attitudes to immigration in European countries? An analysis at the regional level. Migr Stud. 2013;1(3):311–37. doi:10.1093/migration/mnt015.
10. Refugees and migrants in times of COVID-19: mapping trends of public health and migration policies and practices. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/341843, accessed 9 January 2022).
11. Connor P. More than nine-in-ten people worldwide live in countries with travel restrictions amid COVID-19. In: Pew Research Center [website]. Washington (DC): Pew Research Center; 2020 (https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2020/04/01/more-than-nine-in-ten-people-worldwide-live-in-countries-with-travel-restrictions-amid-covid-19/, accessed 9 January 2022).
12. International migration 2020: highlights. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 2020 (https://www.un.org/en/desa/international-migration-2020-highlights, accessed 9 January 2022).
13. Global trends: forced displacement in 2020. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/60b638e37/unhcr-global-trends-2020, accessed 23 November 2021).
14. Dumont J-C, Liebig T. Is migration good for the economy? Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2014 (https://www.oecd.org/migration/OECD%20Migration%20Policy%20Debates%20Numero%202.pdf, accessed 6 September 2021).
15. Goldin I, Cameron G, Balarajan M. Exceptional people: how migration shaped our world and will define our future. Princeton (NJ): Princeton University Press; 2012.
16. d'Albis H, Boubtane E, Coulibaly D. Macroeconomic evidence suggests that asylum seekers are not a "burden" for Western European countries. Sci Adv. 2018;4(6):eaaq0883. doi:10.1126/sciadv.aaq0883.
17. Masters R, Anwar E, Collins B, Cookson R, Capewell S. Return on investment of public health interventions: a systematic review. J Epidemiol Community Health. 2017;71(8):827–34. doi:10.1136/jech-2016-208141.
18. Woetzel J, Madgavkar A, Rifai K, Mattern F, Bughin J, Manyika J et al. People on the move: global migration's impact and opportunity. New York: McKinsey Global Institute; 2016 (https://www.mckinsey.com/~/media/mckinsey/industries/public%20and%20social%20sector/our%20insights/global%20migrations%20impact%20and%20opportunity/mgi-people-on-the-move-full-report.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).
19. Aldridge RW, Nellums LB, Bartlett S, Barr AL, Patel P, Burns R et al. Global patterns of mortality in international migrants: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet. 2018;392:2553–66. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)32781-8.
20. Fernández-Reino MF. The health of migrants in the UK. Oxford: The Migration Observatory at the University of Oxford; 2020 (https://migrationobservatory.ox.ac.uk/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/Briefing-The-Health-of-Migrants-in-the-UK.pdf, accessed 4 April 2022).

21. Lebano A, Hamed S, Bradby H, Gil-Salmerón A, Durá-Ferrandis E, Garcés-Ferrer J et al. Migrants' and refugees' health status and healthcare in Europe: a scoping literature review. BMC Public Health. 2020;20:1039. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08749-8.

22. Heslehurst N, Brown H, Pemu A, Coleman H, Rankin J. Perinatal health outcomes and care among asylum seekers and refugees: a systematic review of systematic reviews. BMC Med. 2018;16:89. doi:10.1186/s12916-018-1064-0.

23. Abbas M, Aloudat T, Bartolomei J, Carballo M, Durieux-Paillard S, Gabus L et al. Migrant and refugee populations: a public health and policy perspective on a continuing global crisis. Antimicrob Resist Infect Control. 2018;7(1):113. doi:10.1186/s13756-018-0403-4.

24. Bozorgmehr K, Razum O. Effect of restricting access to health care on health expenditures among asylum-seekers and refugees: a quasi-experimental study in Germany, 1994–2013. PLOS One. 2015;10:e0131483. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0131483.

25. Gottlieb N, Trummer U, Davidovitch N, Krasnik A, Juárez SP, Rostila M et al. Economic arguments in migrant health policymaking: proposing a research agenda. Glob Health. 2020;16:113. doi:10.1186/s12992-020-00642-8.

26. Trummer U, Novak-Zezula S, Renner A, Wilczewska I. Cost savings through timely treatment for irregular migrants and European Union citizens without insurance. Eur J Public Health. 2018;28(suppl 1):cky048.061. doi:org/10.1093/eurpub/cky048.061.

27. Convention and protocol relating to the status of refugees. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 1951 (https://www.unhcr.org/3b66c2aa10, accessed 9 January 2022).

28. Hannigan A, O'Donnell P, O'Keeffe M, MacFarlane A. How do variations in definitions of "migrant" and their application influence the access of migrants to health care services? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326307, accessed 9 January 2022).

29. Statistical Commission: report on the fifty-second session (1–3 and 5 March 2021). New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 2021 (Official records, 2021, Supplement No. 4; https://unstats.un.org/unsd/statcom/52nd-session/documents, accessed 9 January 2022).

30. Recommendations on statistics of international migration, revision 1. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 1998 (https://unstats.un.org/unsd/publication/seriesm/seriesm_58rev1e.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

31. Wickramage K, Vearey J, Zwi AB, Robinson C, Knipper M. Migration and health: a global public health research priority. BMC Public Health. 2018;18:987. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5932-5.

32. Ward M, Kristiansen M, Sørensen K. Migrant health literacy in the European Union: a systematic literature review. Health Educ J. 2019;78(1):81–95. doi:10.1177/0017896918792700.

33. Anderson B, Blinder S. Who counts as a migrant? Definitions and their consequences. Oxford: The Migration Observatory at the University of Oxford; 2019 (https://migrationobservatory.ox.ac.uk/wp-content/uploads/2017/01/Briefing-Who-Counts-as-a-Migrant-Definitions-and-their-Consequences.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

34. Glossary on migration. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2019 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/iml_34_glossary.pdf, accessed 6 November 2021).

35. International migration report 2017: highlights. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 2017 (https://www.un.org/en/development/desa/population/migration/publications/migrationreport/docs/MigrationReport2017_Highlights.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

36. UNHCR master glossary of terms [online database]. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/glossary/, accessed 21 January 2022).

37. ILO global estimates on international migrant workers: results and methodology, second edition. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2021 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---dgreports/---dcomm/---publ/documents/publication/wcms_652001.pdf, accessed 16 January 2022).

38. Cross-national comparisons of internal migration: an update on global patterns and trends. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 2013 (Technical Paper No. 2013/1; https://www.un.org/en/development/desa/population/publications/pdf/technical/TP2013-1.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

39. Lucas REB. Internal migration in developing economies: an overview of recent evidence. Geopolit Hist Int Relat. 2016;8(2):159–91 (https://www.jstor.org/stable/26805968?refreqid=excelsior%3A8f12f5f84e2197aacbf4cddcf79600d2, accessed 9 January 2022).

40. Road map for development of policy framework for the inclusion of internal migrant workers in India. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2020 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---asia/---ro-bangkok/---sro-new_delhi/documents/publication/wcms_763352.pdf, accessed 22 November 2021).

41. Lagakos D. Urban–rural gaps in the developing world: does internal migration offer opportunities? J Econ Perspect. 2020;34(3):174–92 (https://pubs.aeaweb.org/doi/pdfplus/10.1257/jep.34.3.174, accessed 9 January 2022).

42. Greenwood MJ. Internal migration in developed countries. In: Rosenweig MR, Stark O, editors. Handbook of population and family economics: volume 1b. Amsterdam: North Holland; 1997:647–720.

43. Progress on the Sustainable Development Goals: the gender snapshot 2021. New York: UN Women; 2021 (https://www.unwomen.org/en/digital-library/publications/2021/09/progress-on-the-sustainable-development-goals-the-gender-snapshot-2021, accessed 26 December 2021).

44. Vargas-Lundius R, Chowdhury A, Yi S, Seshan G, Yameogo ND. Synthesis report: internal migration and urbanization. Washington (DC): KNOMAD, World Bank; 2018 (https://www.knomad.org/sites/default/files/2018-01/Internal%20Migration%20and%20Urbanization_Synthesis%20Report_1.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

45. Rajan SI, Bhagat RB. Internal migration in India: integrating migration with development and urbanization policies. Washington (DC): KNOMAD, World Bank; 2021 (Policy Brief 12; https://www.knomad.org/sites/default/files/2021-02/Policy%20Brief%20-%20Internal%20Migrationand%20Urbanization%20-%20India%20Policy%20Brief%2012%20Feb%202021.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

46. Chan KW. Internal migration in China: integrating migration with urbanization policies and Hukou reform. Washington (DC): KNOMAD, World Bank; 2021 (https://www.knomad.org/sites/default/files/2022-02/Policy%20Brief%2016_Internal%20Migration%20in%20China-Integrating%20Migration%20with%20Urbanization%20Policies%20and%20Hukou%20Reform-Nov_21.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

47. GRID 2021: global report on internal displacement. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2021 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/global-report/grid2021/, accessed 22 November 2021).

48. Challenges of IDP protection: research study on the protection of internally displaced persons in Afghanistan. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2012 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/sites/default/files/publications/documents/201211-me-afghanistan-challenges-of-idp-protection-country-en.pdf, accessed 14 February 2022).

49. Mason JB, White JM, Heron L, Carter J, Wilkinson C, Spiegel P. Child acute malnutrition and mortality in populations affected by displacement in the Horn of Africa, 1997–2009. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2012;9(3):791–806. doi:10.3390/ijerph9030791.

50. Cantor D, Swartz J, Roberts B, Abbara A, Ager A, Bhutta ZA et al. Understanding the health needs of internally displaced persons: a scoping review. J Migr Health. 2021;4:100071. doi:10.1016/j.jmh.2021.100071.

51. Internal displacement's impacts on health in Yemen. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2020 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/sites/default/files/publications/documents/IDMC_ImpactsonHealthinYemen.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

52. Disability, displacement and climate change. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2021 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/sites/default/files/publications/documents/Disability_Displacement_Climate%20Change.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

53. Impacts of displacement: displaced by violence, Jos, Nigeria. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2021 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/publications/impacts-of-displacement-displaced-by-violence-jos-nigeria, accessed 9 January 2022).

54. Cazabat C. Durable solutions to displacement must include mental health. In: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre [website]. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2019 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/expert-opinion/durable-solutions-to-displacement-must-include-mental-health, accessed 9 January 2022).

55. Uphoff E, Robertson L, Cabieses B, Villalón FJ, Purgato M, Churchill R et al. An overview of systematic reviews on mental health promotion, prevention, and treatment of common mental disorders for refugees, asylum seekers, and internally displaced persons. Cochrane Database Syst Rev. 2020;(9):CD013458. doi:org/10.1002/14651858.CD013458.pub2.

56. Morina N, Akhtar A, Barth J, Schnyder U. Psychiatric disorders in refugees and internally displaced persons after forced displacement: a systematic review. Front Psychiatry. 2018;9:33. doi:10.3389/fpsyt.2018.00433.

57. Dhillon P. Expert opinion: 5 key findings on internal displacement and mental health. In: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre [website]. Geneva: Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre; 2021 (https://www.internal-displacement.org/expert-opinion/5-key-findings-on-internal-displacement-and-mental-health, accessed 4 April 2022).

58. Blackmore R, Boyle JA, Fazel M, Ranasinha S, Gray KM, Fitzgerald G et al. The prevalence of mental illness in refugees and asylum seekers: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS Med. 2020;17(9):e1003337. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003337.

59. Ochiltree K, Toma IA. Gender analysis of the impact of recent humanitarian crises on women, men, girls, and boys in Puntland State in Somalia. Oxford: Oxfam, KAALO; 2021 (https://oxfamilibrary.openrepository.com/bitstream/handle/10546/621186/rr-puntland-state-somalia-gender-analysis-290421-en.pdf;jsessionid=7E5380371CE5E96E8BC362CF330C370D?sequence=1, accessed 21 December 2021).

60. Convention relating to the status of stateless persons. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 1954 (https://www.unhcr.org/protection/statelessness/3bbb25729/convention-relating-status-stateless-persons.html, accessed 29 December 2021).

61. Statelessness around the world. In: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [website]. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2022 (https://www.unhcr.org/statelessness-around-the-world.html, accessed 9 January 2022).

62. Albarazi Z, van Waas L. Statelessness and displacement. Oslo: Norwegian Refugee Council; 2016 (https://www.nrc.no/globalassets/pdf/reports/statelessness-and-displacement.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

63. Statelessness in numbers: 2020. London: Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion; 2020 (https://files.institutesi.org/ISI_statistics_analysis_2020.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

64. Van Hout MC, Bigland C, Murray N. Situation assessment of statelessness, health, and COVID-19 in Europe. London: European Network on Statelessness; 2021 (https://www.statelessness.eu/sites/default/files/2021-04/ENS_Health_Situation_Assessment_Europe.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

65. Van Waas L, de Chickera A, Spearman O. Stateless in a global pandemic: impact report, 2020. Eindhoven: Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion; 2020 (https://files.institutesi.org/Covid19_Stateless_Impact_Report.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

66. Together we can: the COVID-19 impact on stateless people & a roadmap for change. London: Institute on Statelessness and Inclusion; 2021 (https://files.institutesi.org/together_we_can_report_2021.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

67. International migrant stock 2020 [online database]. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs, Population Division; 2020 (https://www.un.org/development/desa/pd/content/international-migrant-stock, accessed 28 May 2021).

68. Child migration. In: UNICEF data [website]. New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/topic/child-migration-and-displacement/migration/, accessed 8 January 2022).

69. Defining and measuring circular migration. Geneva: United Nations Economic Commission for Europe; 2016 (ECE/CES/BUR/2016/OCT/18/Add.1; https://unece.org/fileadmin/DAM/stats/documents/ece/ces/bur/2016/October/18Add1-CircularMigration_for_Bureau_final.pdf, accessed 28 March 2022).

70. Mid-year trends. New York: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/mid-year-trends.html, accessed 26 December 2021).

71. Flahaux M-L, De Haas H. African migration: trends, patterns, drivers. Comp Migr Stud. 2016;4(1):1–25. doi:10.1186/s40878-015-0015-6.

72. Idemudia E, Boehnke K. Patterns and current trends in African migration to Europe. In: Psychosocial experiences of African migrants in six European countries: a mixed method study. Cham: Springer; 2020:15–31.

73. World migration report 2022. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/WMR-2022.pdf, accessed 26 December 2021).

74. Tangcharoensathien V, Thwin AA, Patcharanarumol W. Implementing health insurance for migrants, Thailand. Bull World Health Organ. 2017;95(2):146–51. doi:10.2471/BLT.16.179606.

75. Smith JL, Ghimire P, Rijal KR, Maglior A, Hollis S, Andrade-Pacheco R et al. Designing malaria surveillance strategies for mobile and migrant populations in Nepal: a mixed-methods study. Malar J. 2019;18(1):158. doi:10.1186/s12936-019-2791-1.

76. International labour migration statistics in South Asia: establishing a subregional database and improving data collection for evidence-based policy-making. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2018 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---asia/---ro-bangkok/---sro-new_delhi/documents/publication/wcms_645286.pdf, accessed 7 June 2022).

77. Plewa P. Migration in Maldives: a country profile 2018. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2018 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/mp_maldives_2018.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

78. Kase P. The influence of social demographic factor on individual decision to cross-border migration between Timor Leste and Indonesia. In: Siahaan A, Sihombing T, Shaw R, Jakimow T, Sumintono B, editors. Proceedings of the International Conference on Public Policy, Social Computing and Development 2017 (ICOPOSDev 2017). Paris: Atlantis Press; 2017:227–32 (https://www.atlantis-press.com/article/25889843.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

79. Islam MN, Inan TT, Islam AKMN. COVID-19 and the Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh: the challenges and recommendations. Asia Pac J Public Health. 2020;32(5):283–4. doi:10.1177/1010539520932707.

80. Fellmeth G, Plugge EH, Nosten S, Oo MM, Fazel M, Charunwatthana P et al. Living with severe perinatal depression: a qualitative study of the experiences of labour migrant and refugee women on the Thai–Myanmar border. BMC Psychiatry. 2018;18:229. doi:10.1186/s12888-018-1815-7.

81. Brown TM. Building resilience: the emergence of refugee-led education initiatives in Indonesia to address service gaps faced in protracted transit. Austrian J South-East Asian Stud. 2018;11:165–81. doi:10.14764/10.ASEAS-0001.

82. Villa M, editor. The future of migration to Europe. Milan: Institute for International Political Studies; 2020 (https://www.ispionline.it/sites/default/files/pubblicazioni/ispi_futureofmigration_web_1.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

83. Dearden K, Sánchez Dionis M. Support needed for families of missing migrants: evidence from IOM's "Assessing the needs of families searching for relatives lost in the central and western Mediterranean" project. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021. (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/Support-Needed-for-Missing-Migrants.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

84. The Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) and health worker migration. Washington (DC): Aspen Institute; 2008 (https://www.aspeninstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/files/content/images/GCC%20and%20HWM%20Policy%20Brief.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

85. Situation report on international migration 2019: the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration in the Context of the Arab Region. New York: United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia; 2020 (https://archive.unescwa.org/sites/www.unescwa.org/files/publications/files/situation-report-international-migration-2019-english_1.pdf, accessed 23 November 2021).

86. Global trends 2019: forced displacement in 2019. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2020 (https://www.unhcr.org/5ee200e37.pdf, accessed 23 November 2021).

87. Global trends 2013. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2014 (https://www.unhcr.org/ph/wp-content/uploads/sites/28/2017/03/GlobalTrends2013.pdf, accessed 23 November 2021).

88. Health of refugees and migrants: regional situation analysis, practices, experiences, lessons learned and ways forward. Manila: WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific; 2018 (https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/documents/publications/health-of-refugees-and-migrants-wpro-2018165be999-c496-4779-9b7d-853111f371f9.pdf?sfvrsn=ab7602b1_1&download=true, accessed 29 December 2021).

89. Asia-Pacific migration report 2020: assessing implementation of the global compact for migration. New Delhi: United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; 2020 (https://www.unescap.org/sites/default/d8files/knowledge-products/AP_Migration_R_2020.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

90. Redden K, Safarian J, Schoenborn C, Shortall C, Gagnon AJ. Interventions to support international migrant women's reproductive health in western-receiving countries: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Health Equity. 2021;5(1):356–72. doi:10.1089/heq.2020.0115.

91. Shorey S, Ng ED, Downe S. Cultural competence and experiences of maternity health care providers on care for migrant women: a qualitative meta-synthesis. Birth. 2021;48(4):458–69. doi:10.1111/birt.12581.

92. Bollini P, Pampallona S, Wanner P, Kupelnick B. Pregnancy outcome of migrant women and integration policy: a systematic review of the international literature. Soc Sci Med. 2009;68(3):452–61. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2008.10.018.

93. Jeffers K, Tjaden J, Laczko F. A pilot study on disaggregating SDG indicators by migratory status. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2018 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/a_pilot_study_on_disaggregating_sdg_indicators.pdf, accessed 16 January 2022).

94. Lindert J, von Ehrenstein OS, Priebe S, Mielck A, Brähler E. Depression and anxiety in labor migrants and refugees: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Soc Sci Med. 2009;69(2):246–57. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2009.04.032.

95. Fazel M, Wheeler J, Danesh J. Prevalence of serious mental disorder in 7000 refugees resettled in western countries: a systematic review. Lancet. 2005;365:1309–14. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(05)61027-6.

96. Public health services survey: inclusion of refugees into national health systems [website]. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2020 (https://app.powerbi.com/view?r=eyJrIjoiMWQ0OGM4YWEtNzYxZS00MTVlLTk4ZTItMjk4YzU5NTkwYjhhIiwidCI6ImU1YzM3OTgxLTY2NjQtNDEzNC04YTBjLTY1NDNkMmFmODBiZSIsImMiOjh9&pageName=ReportSection, accessed 28 January 2022).

97. Brandenberger J, Tylleskär T, Sontag K, Peterhans B, Ritz N. A systematic literature review of reported challenges in health care delivery to migrants and refugees in high-income countries: the 3C model. BMC Public Health. 2019;19:755. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-7049-x.

98. Kocot E, Szetela A. Assessing health systems' preparedness for providing care for refugees, asylum seekers and migrants: a scoping review. Eur J Public Health. 2020;30(6):1157–63. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckaa135.

99. 2020 annual public health global review. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/60dc89e24.pdf, accessed 25 November 2021).

100. Alderslade R. A collective WHO European framework for action to support refugees and migrant health. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/325344, accessed 17 July 2021).

101. Malta: assessing health-system capacity to manage sudden, large influxes of migrants: joint report on a mission of the Ministry for Energy and Health of Malta, the International Centre for Migration, Health and Development and the WHO Regional Office for Europe. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2015 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/344402, accessed 28 March 2022).

102. Serbia: assessing health-system capacity to manage sudden large influxes of migrants: joint report on a mission of the Ministry of Health of Serbia and the WHO Regional Office for Europe with the collaboration of the International Organization for Migration. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2015 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/344452, accessed 25 November 2021).

103. Castañeda H, Holmes SM, Madrigal DS, Young M-ED, Beyeler N, Quesada J. Immigration as a social determinant of health. Annu Rev Public Health. 2015;36(1):375–92. doi:10.1146/annurev-publhealth-032013-182419.

104. Galea S, Ettman CK, Zaman M, editors. Migration and health. Chicago: University of Chicago Press; 2022.

105. Kennedy S, Kidd MP, McDonald JT, Biddle N. The healthy immigrant effect: patterns and evidence from four countries. J Int Migr Integr. 2015–16(2):317–32. doi:10.1007/s12134-014-0340-x.

106. Moullan Y, Jusot F. Why is the "healthy immigrant effect" different between European countries? Eur J Public Health. 2014;24(suppl 1):80–6. doi:10.1093/eurpub/cku112.

107. Puschmann P, Donrovich R, Matthijs K. Salmon bias or red herring? Comparing adult mortality risks (ages 30–90) between natives and internal migrants: stayers, returnees and movers in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, 1850–1940. Hum Nat. 2017;28(4):481–99. doi:10.1007/s12110-017-9303-1.

108. Migration health assessments and travel health assistance: 2019 overview of pre-migration health activities. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2020 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/migration-health-assessments.pdf, accessed 25 November 2021).

109. Juárez SP, Honkaniemi H, Dunlavy AC, Aldridge RW, Barreto ML, Katikireddi SV et al. Effects of non-health-targeted policies on migrant health: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet Glob Health. 2019;7(4):e420–35. doi:10.1016/S2214-109X(18)30560-6.

110. Dahlgren G, Whitehead M. Policies and strategies to promote social equity in health: background document to WHO strategy paper for Europe. Stockholm: Institute for Futures Studies; 1991 (https://core.ac.uk/download/pdf/6472456.pdf, accessed 17 June 2022).

111. McAuliffe M, Khadria B, editors. World migration report 2020. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2019 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/wmr_2020.pdf, accessed 19 January 2022).

112. Parsons AJQ, Gilmour S. An evaluation of fertility- and migration-based policy responses to Japan's ageing population. PLOS One. 2018;13(12):e0209285. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0209285.

113. Fix M, Papademetriou DG, Sumption M, editors. Immigrants in a changing labor market: responding to economic needs. Washington (DC): Migration Policy Institute; 2013 (https://www.migrationpolicy.org/sites/default/files/publications/mpi-immigrantschanginglabormarket-2012-final-webversion.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

114. Vollset SE, Goren E, Yuan C-W, Cao J, Smith AE, Hsiao T et al. Fertility, mortality, migration, and population scenarios for 195 countries and territories from 2017 to 2100: a forecasting analysis for the Global Burden of Disease Study. Lancet. 2020 17;396:1285–306. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(20)30677-2.

115. Gushulak BD, MacPherson DW. The basic principles of migration health: population mobility and gaps in disease prevalence. Emerg Themes Epidemiol. 2006;3:3. doi:10.1186/1742-7622-3-3.

116. Helgesson M, Johansson B, Nordquist T, Vingård E, Svartengren M. Healthy migrant effect in the Swedish context: a register-based, longitudinal cohort study. BMJ Open. 2019;9(3):e026972. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-026972.

117. Vang Z, Sigouin J, Flenon A, Gagnon A. The healthy immigrant effect in Canada: a systematic review. In: Population change and lifecourse strategic knowledge cluster discussion paper series. Hamilton (ON): Canadian Research Data Centre Network; 2015 (https://ir.lib.uwo.ca/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1012&context=pclc, accessed 9 January 2022).

118. Ikram UZ, Malmusi D, Juel K, Rey G, Kunst AE. Association between integration policies and immigrants' mortality: an explorative study across three European countries. PLOS One. 2015;10(6):e0129916. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0129916.

119. Kaplan GA. What's wrong with social epidemiology, and how can we make it better? Epidemiol Rev. 2004;26:124–35. doi:10.1093/epirev/mxh010.

120. Kuruvilla S, Sadana R, Montesinos EV, Beard J, Vasdeki JF, Araujo de Carvalho I et al. A life-course approach to health: synergy with sustainable development goals. Bull World Health Organ. 2018;96(1):42–50. doi:10.2471/BLT.17.198358.

121. Spallek J, Zeeb H, Razum O. What do we have to know from migrants' past exposures to understand their health status? A life course approach. Emerg Themes Epidemiol. 2011;8:6. doi:10.1186/1742-7622-8-6.

122. Gong F, Xu J, Fujishiro K, Takeuchi DT. A life course perspective on migration and mental health among Asian immigrants: the role of human agency. Soc Sci Med. 2011;73(11):1618–26. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2011.09.014.

123. Montes de Oca V, García TR, Sáenz R, Guillén J. The linkage of life course, migration, health, and aging: health in adults and elderly Mexican migrants. J Aging Health. 2011;23(7):1116–40. doi:10.1177/0898264311422099.

124. Migration and vulnerability: migration and health. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; (http://migrationdataportal.org/themes/migration-and-health, accessed 28 May 2021).

125. World urbanization prospects 2018. In: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs; 2021 (https://population.un.org/wup/, accessed 17 July 2021).

126. Lerch M. International migration and city growth in the Global South: an analysis of IPUMS data for seven countries, 1992–2013. Popul Dev Rev. 2020;46(3):557–82. doi:10.1111/padr.12344.

127. Adger WN, Crépin AS, Folke C, Ospina D, Chapin III FS, Segerson K et al. Urbanization, migration, and adaptation to climate change. One Earth. 2020;3(4):396–9. doi:10.1016/j.oneear.2020.09.016.

128. Fuller B, Romer P. Urbanization as opportunity. Washington (DC) World Bank; 2014 (https://elibrary.worldbank.org/doi/abs/10.1596/1813-9450-6874, accessed 17 June 2022).

129. Kuddus MA, Tynan E, McBryde E. Urbanization: a problem for the rich and the poor? Public Health Rev. 2020;41:1. doi:10.1186/s40985-019-0116-0.

130. Integrating migration into urban development programmes: a toolkit. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021 (https://unhabitat.org/sites/default/files/2022/02/urban-development-migration-toolkit.pdf, accessed 25 November 2021).

131. Azcona G, Bhatt A, Ndugwa R. COVID-19 exposes the harsh realities of gender inequality in slums. New York: UN Women; 2020 (https://data.unwomen.org/features/covid-19-exposes-harsh-realities-gender-inequality-slums, accessed 27 December 2021).

132. Sampson L, Ettman CK, Galea S. Urbanization, urbanicity, and depression: a review of the recent global literature. Curr Opin Psychiatry. 2020;33(3):233–44. doi:10.1097/YC0.0000000000000588.

133. The world health report 2006: working together for health. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2006 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/43432, accessed 9 January 2022).

134. Cabieses B, Tunstall H. Immigrant health workers in Chile: is there a Latin American 'brain drain'? Rev Panam Salud Publica. 2012;32(2):161–7. doi:10.1590/s1020-49892012000800012.

135. Dohlman L, DiMeglio M, Hajj J, Laudanski K. Global brain drain: how can the Maslow theory of motivation improve our understanding of physician migration? Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(7):E1182. doi:10.3390/ijerph16071182.

136. Garner SL, Conroy SF, Bader SG. Nurse migration from India: a literature review. Int J Nurs Stud. 2015;52(12):1879–90. doi:10.1016/j.ijnurstu.2015.07.003.

137. Bradby H. International medical migration: a critical conceptual review of the global movements of doctors and nurses. Health (London). 2014;18(6):580–96. doi:10.1177/1363459314524803.

138. Hagan JM, Wassink J. New skills, new jobs: return migration, skill transfers, and business formation in Mexico. Soc Probl. 2016;63(4):513–33. doi:10.1093/socpro/spw021.

139. Ratha D, Kim EJ, Plaza S, Seshan G, Riordan EJ, Chandra V. Recovery: COVID-19 crisis through a migration lens. Washington (DC): KNOMAD, World Bank; 2021 (Migration and Development Brief 35; https://www.knomad.org/sites/default/files/2021-11/Migration_Brief%2035_1.pdf, accessed 23 December 2021).

140. Ratha D, Kim EJ, Plaza S, Seshan G. Resilience: COVID-19 crisis through a migration lens. Washington (DC): KNOMAD, World Bank; 2021 (Migration and Development Brief 34; https://www.knomad.org/sites/default/files/2021-05/Migration%20and%20Development%20Brief%2034_1.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

141. Health of families left behind. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2018 (https://www.iom.int/health-families-left-behind, accessed 18 July 2021).

142. Schröder-Butterfill E. Emigration and the care of older people "left behind": the changing role of neighbourhood networks, ethnicity and civil society. J Ethn Migr Stud. 2021;2021:1–19. doi:10.1080/1369183X.2021.2009783.

143. Older people in situations of migration in Africa: the untold migration story. London: HelpAge International; 2017 (Policy paper; https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/older-persons-and-migration-policy-briefing-paper-22-feb-2017.pdf, accessed 4 April 2022).

144. Women on the move: migration, care work and health. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2017 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/259463, accessed 4 April 2022).

145. Wickramage K, Siriwardhana C, Peiris S. Promoting the health of left-behind children of Asian labour migrants: evidence for policy and action. Geneva: International Organization for Migration, Washington (DC): Migration Policy Institute; 2015 (https://www.migrationpolicy.org/sites/default/files/publications/MPI%20Issue%20No%2014_10Sep2015_FINALweb.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

146. Fellmeth G, Rose-Clarke K, Zhao C, Busert LK, Zheng Y, Massazza A et al. Health impacts of parental migration on left-behind children and adolescents: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet. 2018;392:2567–82. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)32558-3.

147. Children "left behind". New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2019 (UNICEF Working Paper; https://www.unicef.org/media/83581/file/Children-Left-Behind.pdf, accessed 27 December 2021).

148. Suleman S, Garber KD, Rutkow L. Xenophobia as a determinant of health: an integrative review. J Public Health Policy. 2018;39(4):407–23. doi:10.1057/s41271-018-0140-1.

149. Grove NJ, Zwi AB. Our health and theirs: forced migration, othering, and public health. Soc Sci Med. 2006;62(8):1931–42. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2005.08.061.

150. Agudelo-Suárez AA, Ronda-Pérez E, Gil-González D, Vives-Cases C, García AM, Ruiz-Frutos C et al. The effect of perceived discrimination on the health of immigrant workers in Spain. BMC Public Health. 2011;11:652. doi:10.1186/1471-2458-11-652.

151. Hall BJ, Pangan CAC, Chan EWW, Huang RL. The effect of discrimination on depression and anxiety symptoms and the buffering role of social capital among female domestic workers in Macao, China. Psychiatry Res. 2019;271:200–7. doi:10.1016/j.psychres.2018.11.050.

152. Drewniak D, Krones T, Wild V. Do attitudes and behavior of health care professionals exacerbate health care disparities among immigrant and ethnic minority groups? An integrative literature review. Int J Nurs Stud. 2017;70:89–98. doi:10.1016/j.ijnurstu.2017.02.015.

153. Protocol against the smuggling of migrants by land, sea and air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against transnational organized crime. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2000 (https://www.unhcr.org/protection/migration/496323791b/protocol-against-smuggling-migrants-land-sea-air-supplementing-united-nations.html, accessed 27 December 2021).

154. Protocol to prevent, suppress and punish trafficking in persons, especially women and children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against transnational organized crime. New York: United Nations; 2000 (https://www.ohchr.org/sites/default/files/Documents/ProfessionalInterest/ProtocolonTrafficking.pdf, accessed 27 December 2021).

155. Human rights of migrants: note by the Secretary-General. In: Seventy-sixth session, United Nations General Assembly, promotion and protection of human rights, 30 July 2021. New York: United Nations; 2021 (A/76/257; https://daccess-ods.un.org/access.nsf/Get?OpenAgent&DS=A/76/257&Lang=E, accessed 29 December 2021).

156. González Morales F. Report on means to address the human rights impact of pushbacks of migrants on land and at sea: report of the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants. New York: United Nations Human Rights Council; 2021 (A/HRC/47/30; https://reliefweb.int/report/world/report-means-address-human-rights-impact-pushbacks-migrants-land-and-sea-report-special, accessed 29 December 2021).

157. The 10-point plan in action, 2016 update. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2016 (https://www.refworld.org/10pointplaninaction2016update.html, accessed 23 November 2021).

158. Key findings on the characteristics of migrant smuggling in west Africa, north Africa and the central Mediterranean. Vienna: United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, Observatory on Smuggling of Migrants; 2021 (https://www.unodc.org/res/som/docs/Observatory_Storymap_1_Final_2021.05.19.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021)

159. Abused and neglected: a gender perspective on aggravated migrant smuggling offences and response. Vienna: United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime; 2021 (https://www.unodc.org/documents/human-trafficking/2021/Aggravated_SOM_and_Gender.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

160. Rigaud KK, de Sherbinin A, Jones B, Bergmann J, Clement V, Ober K et al. Groundswell: preparing for internal climate migration. Washington (DC): World Bank; 2018 (https://openknowledge.worldbank.org/handle/10986/29461, accessed 29 December 2021).

161. Clement V, Rigaud KK, de Sherbinin A, Jones B, Adamo S, Schewe J et al. Groundswell part 2: acting on internal climate migration. Washington (DC): World Bank; 2021 (https://openknowledge.worldbank.org/handle/10986/36248, accessed 29 December 2021).

162. Callaghan M, Schleussner C-F, Nath S, Lejeune Q, Knutson TR, Reichstein M et al. Machine-learning-based evidence and attribution mapping of 100 000 climate impact studies. Nat Clim Chang. 2021;11(11):966–72. doi:10.1038/s41558-021-01168-6.

163. Opitz-Stapleton S, Lovell E, Cao Y, Dupar M, Peters K. Climate change, conflict and fragility: an evidence review and recommendations for research and action. London: Overseas Development Institute; 2020 (https://cdn.odi.org/media/documents/odi_climate_change_conflict_and_fragility.pdf, accessed 28 December 2021).

164. Butler CD. Climate change and global health. Boston (MA): CABI; 2014.

165. Migration and global environmental change: future challenges and opportunities. London: United Kingdom Government Office for Science; 2011 (https://assets.publishing.service.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment_data/file/287717/11-1116-migration-and-global-environmental-change.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

166. IOM outlook on migration, environment and climate change. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2014 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/mecc_outlook.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

167. Internal displacement in the context of the slow-onset adverse effects of climate change: submission by the International Organization for Migration to the Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights of Internally Displaced Persons. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2020 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/idp-climate-change.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

168. Triggs GD, Wall PCJ. "The makings of a success": the Global Compact on Refugees and the inaugural Global Refugee Forum. Int J Refug Law. 2020;32(2):283–339. doi:10.1093/ijrl/eeaa024.

169. Crawford N, O'Callaghan S. The Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework: responsibility-sharing and self-reliance in East Africa. London: Overseas Development Institute; 2019 (https://cdn.odi.org/media/documents/12935.pdf, accessed 29 December 2021).

170. New York declaration for refugees and migrants. In: Seventy-first session, United Nations General Assembly, New York, 19 September 2016. New York: United Nations; 2016 (Resolution A/71/L.1; https://www.un.org/en/development/desa/population/migration/generalassembly/docs/globalcompact/A_RES_71_1.pdf, accessed 16 June 2022).

171. Data, social determinants, and better decision-making for health: the report of the 3-D Commission. Boston: 3-D Commission; 2021 (https://static1.squarespace.com/static/5e2ca08b9fdf240fb1abb55b/t/617aae3927d4790b590aef4e/1635429947691/3DCommission_Report_SDoH_Oct+12_final.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

172. Klomp J, de Haan J. Is the political system really related to health? Soc Sci Med. 2009;69(1):36–46. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2009.03.033.

173. Kirigia JM, Kirigia DG. The essence of governance in health development. Int Arch Med. 2011;4:11. doi:10.1186/1755-7682-4-11.

174. World health statistics 2019: monitoring health for the SDGs, sustainable development goals. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2019 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/324835, accessed 9 January 2022).

175. Global compact on refugees. New York: United Nations; 2018 (https://www.unhcr.org/5c658aed4.pdf, accessed 4 October 2021).

176. Global compact for safe, orderly and regular migration. In: Seventy-third session, United Nations General Assembly, New York, 11 January 2019. New York: United Nations; 2019 (A/RES/73/195; https://www.un.org/en/development/desa/population/migration/generalassembly/docs/globalcompact/A_RES_73_195.pdf, accessed 6 August 2021).

177. Resolution WHA61.17: health of migrants. In: Sixty-first World Health Assembly, Geneva, 19–24 May 2008. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2008:23–25 (WHA61/2008/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA61-REC1/A61_REC1-en.pdf, accessed 17 November 2021).

178. Health of migrants: the way forward. Report of a global consultation, Madrid, Spain, 3–5 March 2010. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2011 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/44336, accessed 9 January 2022).

179. Health of migrants: resetting the agenda. Report of the 2nd Global Consultation: Colombo, Sri Lanka, 21–23 February 2017. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2017 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/gc2_srilanka_report_2017.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

180. Transforming our world: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. New York: United Nations; 2015 (https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/21252030%20Agenda%20for%20Sustainable%20Development%20web.pdf, accessed 9 January 2022).

181. Political declaration of the high-level meeting on universal health coverage. New York: United Nations; 2019 (https://www.un.org/pga/73/wp-content/uploads/sites/53/2019/07/FINAL-draft-UHC-Political-Declaration.pdf, accessed 7 June 2022).

182. International Health Regulations (2005), third edition. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/246107, accessed 26 April 2022).

183. World Health Assembly second special session. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHASS2-REC1/WHASS2_REC1-en.pdf, accessed 7 June 2022).

184. Wickramage K, Annunziata G. Advancing health in migration governance, and migration in health governance. Lancet. 2018;392:2528–30. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)32855-1.

185. Global plan to end TB 2018–2022: the paradigm shift. Geneva: Stop TB Partnership; 2019 (https://www.stoptb.org/sites/default/files/GPR_2018-2022_Digital.pdf, accessed 21 January 2022).

186. Implementing the End TB strategy: the essentials. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2015 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/206499, accessed 9 January 2022).

187. Key learning on Health in All Policies implementation from around the world. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/272711, accessed 7 June 2022).

188. African Union launches a new program on migration and health. Addis Ababa: African Union; 2020 (https://au.int/en/pressreleases/20200723/african-union-launches-new-program-migration-and-health, accessed 29 December 2021).

189. What we do? Origins of the Quito process. Panama City: Proceso de Quito; 2021 (https://www.procesodequito.org/en/what-we-do, accessed 29 December 2021).

190. International technical meeting on human mobility of Venezuelan citizens in the region (Quito process). International Organization for Migration; 2022 (https://www.iom.int/international-technical-meeting-human-mobility-venezuelan-citizens-region-quito-process, accessed 25 March 2022).

191. Regional consultative process on overseas employment and contractual labor for countries of origin in Asia (Colombo Process). Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021 (https://www.iom.int/regional-consultative-process-overseas-employment-and-contractual-labor-countries-origin-asia-colombo-process, accessed 30 December 2021).

192. Migrants' health. Brussels: European Commission; 2016 (https://ec.europa.eu/health/social-determinants/migrants-health_en, accessed 29 December 2021).

193. Collection and integration of data on refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region: technical guidance. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/337694, accessed 12 November 2020).

194. Abdalla FM, Omar MA, Badr EE. Contribution of Sudanese medical diaspora to the healthcare delivery system in Sudan: exploring options and barriers. Hum Resour Health. 2016;14(suppl 1):28. doi:10.1186/s12960-016-0123-x.

195. Taslakian EN, Garber K, Shekherdimian S. Diaspora engagement: a scoping review of diaspora involvement with strengthening health systems of their origin country. Glob Health Action. 2022;15(1):2009165. doi:10.1080/16549716.2021.2009165.

196. Towards 2035. Strategic foresight: making migration and integration policies future ready. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2020 (https://www.oecd.org/migration/mig/migration-strategic-foresight.pdf, accessed 22 January 2022).

197. Healthcare in Peru: "COVID-19 highlighted a great need to expand capacities". Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Global Compact on Refugees; 2020 (https://globalcompactrefugees.org/article/healthcare-peru-covid-19-highlighted-great-need-expand-capacities, accessed 29 December 2021).

198. Raposo VL, Violante T. Access to health care by migrants with precarious status during a health crisis: some insights from Portugal. Hum Rights Rev. 2021;22(4):459–82. doi:10.1007/s12142-021-00621-5.

199. Tackling transmissions in migrant worker clusters [website]. Singapore: Government of Singapore; 2020 (http://www.gov.sg/article/tackling-transmissions-in-migrant-worker-clusters, accessed 29 December 2021).

200. Information on coronavirus (COVID-19) for non-UK nationals. London: Greater London Authority; 2021 (https://www.london.gov.uk//what-we-do/communities/european-londoners-hub/information-coronavirus-covid-19-non-uk-nationals, accessed 29 December 2021).

201. International migration, health and human rights. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2003 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/42793, accessed 9 January 2022).

202. Wickramage K, Gostin LO, Friedman E, Prakongsai P, Suphanchaimat R, Hui C et al. Missing: where are the migrants in pandemic influenza preparedness plans? Health Hum Rights. 2018;20(1):251–8. PMCID: PMC6039731.

203. Seventieth Regional Committee for Europe: virtual session, 14–15 September 2020: progress report on implementation of the Strategy and Action Plan for Refugee and Migrant Health in the WHO European Region. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2021 (EUR/RC70/8(K); https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/333536, accessed 23 November 2021).

204. Resolution WHA71.1. Thirteenth General Programme of Work, 2019–2023. In: Seventy-first World Health Assembly, Geneva, 21–26 May 2018. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2018:3 (A75/8; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326571, accessed 16 June 2022).

205. Programme budget 2022–2023: revision. Extending the Thirteenth General Programme of Work, 2019–2023 to 2025. In: Seventy-fifth World Health Assembly, Geneva, 22–28 May 2022. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2018:3 (WHA71/2018/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA75/A75_8-en.pdf, accessed 16 June 2022).

206. Health of migrants: report by the Secretariat. In: Sixty-first World Health Assembly, Geneva, 19–24 May 2008. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2008 (A61/12; https://apps.who.int/iris/bitstream/handle/10665/23467/A61_12-en.pdf;sequence=1, accessed 10 May 2022).

207. Promoting the health of refugees and migrants. In: Seventieth World Health Assembly, Geneva, 22–31 May 2017. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2017 (WHA70.15; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/275698, accessed 7 June 2022).

208. Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants, 2019–2023. In: Seventy-second World Health Assembly, Geneva, 20–28 May 2019. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2019: Annex 5 (WHA72/2019/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA72-REC1/A72_2019_REC1-en.pdf, accessed 17 June 2022).

209. Promoting the health of refugees and migrants. In: Seventy-second World Health Assembly, Geneva, 20–28 May 2019. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2019: 53 (WHA72(14); https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/328432, accessed 17 June 2022).

CHAPTER 2

Determinants of refugee and migrant health

A Syrian interpreter working at a polyclinic for refugees and migrants in Eskişehir, Türkiye. Refugees and migrants may have difficulty navigating the health care system and communicating. Interpreters help to bridge such barriers. © WHO

2.1 Introduction

This chapter explores the determinants that emerged from a review of the literature on the health of refugees and migrants within the six WHO regions. Determinants of health include a variety of individual, social and environmental factors that can cause poorer health outcomes among refugees and migrants compared with host populations. The determinants are highly interconnected and often interdependent. Many researchers consider the displacement and migration process to be a determinant in itself (1–3).

Refugees and migrants are affected by the same determinants that affect the rest of humanity. However, their migratory status can add a layer of complexity that, when combined with other determinants, makes them particularly vulnerable to specific health risks, thereby affecting their overall health. These determinants are broadly grouped as:

- individual characteristics and behaviours – genetics, gender and personal behaviour and age;
- social and economic environment (Box 2.1) – education, health literacy, income and social status, employment and working conditions, social support networks, culture, and health services (4); and
- physical environment – safe water and clean air, healthy workplaces, safe houses, communities and roads, and food and nutrition.

The determinants described in this chapter affect refugees and migrants differently at various stages of their displacement and migration. For example, issues such as water, sanitation, housing and food tend to be of greatest concern during the migration process, that is, as refugees and migrants make their journeys or first arrive at their destinations. Other determinants, such as income and level of education, may assume greater importance as resettlement progresses; equally, these determinants may influence a person's decision to move in the first place. Sex and gender have cross-cutting impacts throughout migration as in all other areas of life, while migratory status may evolve during the process.

Box 2.1.

Social determinants of health

The social determinants of health are nonmedical factors that influence health outcomes, in both positive and negative ways, by shaping daily life. Social determinants disproportionately affect populations that are most vulnerable. When exploring the health of refugees and migrants, it is the social determinants of health (rather than diseases or medical conditions themselves) that explain most of their poor health outcomes.

Key social determinants include income and social protection, level of education, unemployment and job insecurity, working conditions, food insecurity, housing and basic amenities, early childhood development, social inclusion and non-discrimination, conflict, and access to affordable health services of good quality.

Recognizing their importance, the World Health Assembly adopted resolutions on social determinants of health in 2009 and again in 2012 following the World Conference on Social Determinants of Health in Rio de Janeiro.

Since early 2020, however, the social and health inequalities exposed by the COVID-19 pandemic have led to renewed interest by Member States in WHO's work on the social determinants of health. In 2021, the World Health Assembly passed resolution WHA74.16, highlighting the need to strengthen efforts to address the social determinants of health, calling such efforts "an integral part of the national, regional and international response to the health and socioeconomic crises generated by the current pandemic and to future public health emergencies" (4).

In the Colombian municipality of Arauquita local authorities and humanitarian partners set up shelters and provided aid to people who had recently arrived from the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. © WHO / PAHO / Karen Gonzalez

2.2 Sex and gender

- Sex- and gender-defined roles, norms and behaviour shape many of the challenges that refugees and migrants of all ages are exposed to, ranging from physical, sexual and emotional violence in the household to specific sectors of employment.
- Sex and gender influence access to health services and how these services respond to the particular needs of refugees and migrants across the life course.
- Women and girls face unique challenges and vulnerabilities, such as unique privacy and security challenges in accessing water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH) services and facilities, including for menstrual hygiene management.
- The vulnerability of men and boys to physical and sexual violence, and their need for care and support, is underrecognized.
- Lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex (LGBTQI+) refugees and migrants typically lack social support, face discrimination and experience unique challenges with local health services. Mental health burdens are high among this population.

The roles, norms and behaviour associated with sex and gender have an influence on how people – women, men, girls, boys and people with diverse gender identities – access health services and how health systems respond to their particular needs. Research clearly shows that sex inequality contributes to heightened health risks for women and girls globally. At the same time, examining health issues in terms of sex and gender helps to determine how unbalanced power relations between men and women affect the risks, health-seeking behaviour and health outcomes of men and women in different age and social groups (5–7).

Sex and gender greatly influence displacement and migration. To take only one example, many women who are displaced or choose to migrate do so in their prime childbearing years. Their health needs in any given situation may be very different from those of men, requiring additional medical services for prenatal, labour and delivery, and postpartum care (8,9). Violence and security are other issues that frequently affect women and men very differently, along with safe access to public spaces and facilities. LGBTQI+ minorities face a multitude of challenges, ranging from social stigma to provider discrimination and barriers to accessing health care. Men are also affected differently in a disaster context. Although limited, the evidence indicates that migrant men felt disempowered because they could not provide for their families as they used to in their home country, or were perceived as causing unrest in their host countries (10,11).

2.2.1 Health of women and girls

Sex and gender is often an important determinant of noncommunicable diseases (NCDs). In the WHO European Region, the length of stay in host countries was observed to have an impact on the development of overweight/obese conditions and to affect female refugees and migrants, particularly those from Africa. This may have been the result of cultural attitudes around physical activity and women's physical appearance (12,13). Syrian refugee women in Türkiye had significantly higher levels of overweight/obesity than men, although levels increased with age among both men and women (14). Sex also affected the prevalence of diabetes mellitus and cardiovascular disease (CVD). Some of these health outcomes can be attributed to factors such as a lack of female-only settings in which to perform physical activities, a lack of knowledge and limited exercise skills, as shown from research in Australia (15,16). In addition, a survey-based study among children from occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, found that girls reported restricted access to public spaces compared with boys and feelings of insecurity when outdoors, which limited their activities (17). In Thailand, a survey of migrant workers also found that being female was associated with a lack of exercise, highlighting the need for inclusive and culturally appropriate health promotion strategies (18). Sexual and genderbased violence (SGBV) against women is a factor that can increase vulnerability to suicide and self-harm, as demonstrated among Rohingya refugee women in Bangladesh (19,20). In several regions, female refugees and migrants faced high levels of SGBV, which is linked to trauma and poor mental health outcomes (21–24). In addition, practices such as female genital mutilation (FGM) and early marriage can drive girls to migrate in order to seek safer conditions in other places (25).

In the Republic of Korea, women migrating for marriage experience poorer health outcomes and multilevel social challenges, including acculturative stress, depression and poorer oral health, compared with their host counterparts (26–28). Transnational marriages often demand that women quickly take on new roles in unfamiliar settings, which raises stress levels and the risk of mental health issues.

Cases of sexual violence among refugee and migrant boys and men are often underreported as a result of social and cultural stigma and the belief that men cannot be raped.

Across various employment sectors there is often a sex disparity that results in different injury rates between men and women. Many jobs in high-risk sectors, such as construction, are heavily dominated by men (29–31). International employment schemes also exhibit a sex imbalance, as evidenced by Australia's Seasonal Worker Program and New Zealand's Recognized Seasonal Employer scheme. Both have low female participation rates (17% and 10%, respectively), leading to an overrepresentation of accident-related injuries among men (30). In the household service sector, where predominantly women are employed as migrant domestic workers, female workers are subsequently at higher risk for musculoskeletal disorders, abusive practices and poor mental health (32–34).

2.2.2 Health of men and boys

Refugee and migrant men face their own challenges along the migration journey. Because men are not traditionally recognized as a vulnerable subgroup in the same way as women or children, the needs of men may be overlooked or neglected along the migration journey, particularly those relating to the provision of health services (35).

Evidence indicates that refugee and migrant men experience physical violence, including torture, beatings and imprisonment, during different phases of migration, sometimes more than women (36–40). Such experiences result in a high burden of post-traumatic physical and psychological morbidity, as well as a poorer quality of life and social isolation.

Notably, regional differences occur regarding the type of physical violence experienced by refugee and migrant men. Men transiting through the countries of the WHO African Region and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region frequently report imprisonment and torture, often as a result of political violence or driven by state actors. Studies have included refugees from and transiting through several countries from the African continent bound for Europe (40–42). In contrast, extortion and theft were the most common forms of physical violence experienced by migrant men during transit through Central American countries to the United States (43). A study found that male migrants in transit through a Central American country where they were not nationals experienced a greater burden of violence compared with their female counterparts, although no significant difference was found between male and female migrants who were nationals of that same country (43). This disparity may be a result of irregular migrant conditions and limited social support. High levels of violence were also reported by transsexual, transgender and transvestite individuals.

Cases of sexual violence among refugee and migrant boys and men are often underreported as a result of social and cultural stigma and the belief that men cannot be raped (41,44,45). Evidence from male survivors of sexual violence in three refugee-hosting countries (Bangladesh, Italy and Kenya) identified key barriers and deterrents faced in seeking services after experiencing sexual violence (45). Many met negative attitudes in health care providers and staff, such as disbelief and lack of empathy, and were subjected to humiliating comments from service providers with xenophobic and homophobic misconceptions of male-on-male sexual violence. In a clinic providing medical care to asylum seekers in a country in the WHO European Region, 28% of sexual assault survivors were men; a high proportion of these men indicated that their attack occurred during the migration period rather than in their country of origin (46). A study in one country of refugee survivors of SGBV and torture, including rape, found that none of the men sought treatment or officially reported their injuries (40).

Refugee and migrant men in a few high-income countries in the WHO Region of the Americas reported feeling pressure to fulfil typical masculine social roles, such as sending remittances back home, and to assert their masculinity by establishing themselves as breadwinners (47,48). Being unable to do so, whether because of unemployment or other barriers, was linked to high levels of stress, emotional and behavioural problems, and feelings of inadequacy, leading to a state of "depleted masculinity" (48). In the case of male migrants from Bangladesh and Pakistan working in Greece, such feelings of emasculation have driven many to rework their masculine status into self-exploitative contests (e.g. fruit-picking competitions) that serve the employers' interests while undermining worker solidarity (49).

2.2.3 LGBTQI+ populations and sexual minorities

LGBTQI+ refugees and migrants face particular risks and vulnerabilities as a result of their sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics, similar to LGBTQI+ people among the host population (50). However, migratory status adds an additional layer of complexity. Evidence from the WHO African Region shows that these groups often lack social support, face stigma and discrimination, and experience limited access to and poor treatment from local health services, and these challenges may be compounded by their migratory and/or HIV status (51–53). Stigma presents a major barrier to HIV prevention and care, particularly for men who have sex with men (MSM). In a country from the WHO Region of the Americas, HIV-related stigma was among the most frequently reported barriers to consistent attendance at HIV clinics (54); in Europe, structural stigma towards sexual minorities and immigrants has been associated with a lack of knowledge about HIV prevention and service coverage (55). In a study carried out in another high-income country, 40% of MSM from several migrant originated countries indicated that their reason for migration was to affirm their sexual orientation. The study found that migration to avoid persecution because of being gay was associated with an increased risk of HIV infection after arrival in that country, whereas migrating to lead a gay life was not (56).

LGBTQI+ refugees and migrants reported a variety of mental health burdens, including mental distress, suicidal ideation and traumatic stress, with some indicating that their mental well-being during the post-migration period was either unimproved or worsened compared with their pre-migration well-being (57–60). In a study among LGBTQI+ people seeking refugee status in another country from the WHO Region of the Americas, some reported suffering negative psychological impacts while completing the refugee claims process. Reasons for this included re-traumatization while recounting experiences of violence and persecution, compressed service timelines leading to mental health and identity crises, and the additional burden of proving that they are members of a sexual or gender minority as part of the process (61).

LGBTQI+ refugees and migrants reported a variety of mental health burdens, including mental distress, suicidal ideation and traumatic stress, with some indicating that their mental well-being during the post-migration period was either unimproved or worsened compared with their pre-migration well-being.

In a qualitative study exploring integration experiences, Muslim LGBTQI+ refugees living in high-income countries reported challenges resulting from their intersecting identities; refugees can suffer homophobia, transphobia and discrimination from other refugees while simultaneously experiencing anti-migrant sentiments and/or Islamophobia from host communities (62). Harassment and threats of violence can also discourage LGBTQI+ refugees from seeking the social services and benefits that they are entitled to. The literature indicates that culturally tailored social support groups, participation in civil society and building trust with health care providers who recognize their needs for social support may all help to moderate the effects of the various stressors experienced by LGBTQI+ refugees and migrants (63–65).

Displaced MSM and transgender women interviewed in a cross-sectional study presented higher levels of psychiatric comorbidities compared with their counterparts in the host population as a result of experiencing both displacement- and stigma-related stressors (66). To successfully implement HIV prevention and testing programmes, health care providers must have high levels of comfort with LGBTQI+ issues and also consider how MSM view their sexual behaviour and relationships (67–69). Further research is needed on sexual and Rohingya women and girls using the water facility beside a women's hygiene centre in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. The facility was designed for refugee women by refugee women. © UNHCR / Hasib Zuberi gender minorities such as transgender refugees and migrants. Transgender asylum seekers in a high-income country recounted experiencing pervasive violence from family members, police and their communities, which led to persistent mental health problems (70,71). Compared with male and female migrants, transgender migrants transiting from a middle-income country to a high-income country experienced a significantly greater burden of violence, with psychological violence being reported most often (43). Transgender refugees living in a European country encountered similar stressors and traumas both before and after migration, but also stated that religion could be a protective factor for gender affirmation (72). Transgender women who have migrated to work from a south-east Asian country to a high-income country as transpinay entertainers view their experiences as a positive part of their gender affirmation process and sexual emancipation (73,74).

2.2.4 Menstrual hygiene management

Women and girls often face unique challenges in accessing WASH services and facilities, particularly for menstrual hygiene management (note that WASH is discussed as a separate determinant in section 2.10). In Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, Rohingya refugees reported challenges around access, safety, privacy and dignity, such as the need for private washing spaces for menstrual hygiene materials. Male architects and engineers largely dominate WASH infrastructure planning and design, and often integrate sex assumptions into their work. These assumptions range from determining how much space is needed for women and girls to feel comfortable in WASH facilities to issues of privacy and safety. To counter this, the Women's Social Architecture Project included Rohingya women and girls and female architects in planning WASH facilities to provide a different perspective on how to approach the design of these facilities and where to locate them (75). Among the suggestions included by women were to provide a ramp instead of steps leading to a latrine (as this is easier for older or pregnant women) and shelving and drying areas for sanitary products, and the preferred optimal configuration of privacy screens.

Other countries with large camp-based settings experience the same challenges. In a study among displaced Somali women in northern Kenya, women were often excluded from the design and implementation phases of sanitation initiatives, despite having reported concerns such as personal safety in areas of open defecation, the need for private spaces for menstruation management and problems related to FGM (76).

Poverty can also affect the health of refugee and migrant women, who may lack menstrual hygiene products and access to safe, clean and private toilets (77). A study among Venezuelan migrant women living in Brazil determined that almost half of participants who menstruated (46.4%) did not receive any hygiene kits, 61% were not able to wash their hands as often as they would have liked and the majority did not feel safe using public toilets.

2.3 Age

- The number of older people displaced by humanitarian crises is growing rapidly.
- The impact and needs of children are relatively better studied; however the impact and needs of older people forcibly displaced by catastrophic events are little known, but evidence shows older people are at particularly high risk in such crises across a variety of determinants.

Although the impact of sudden displacement on children is well documented and easily draws the attention of both the public and decision-makers (see section 3.4), less well known or provided for are the needs of older people pushed from their homes by catastrophic events, ranging from earthquakes and flooding to famine and violent conflict.

Ageing is an ever-increasing factor in global health, driven both by the growing longevity of the population and improved survival at younger ages (78,79). Recognizing this demographic fact and its implications, the United Nations General Assembly declared 2021–2030 the Decade of Healthy Ageing (80). WHO has the task of implementing this initiative through working with governments, civil society, international agencies, the private sector and other partners for a decade of concerted action to foster long, healthy lives.

This work will necessarily include the health needs of older refugees and migrants (Box 2.2), with consideration of the different ways that these are manifest across regions and contexts, diseases and conditions and their interaction with other determinants (81). For example, older refugees and migrants are sometimes categorized within two groups: those who have departed their home countries and arrived at their destination as older people, and those who arrived at a younger age and aged in the host country (82). Particularly vulnerable groups, including asylum seekers and migrants in irregular situations, will require specific attention, as will those affected by humanitarian crises.

2.3.1 Unaccompanied or separated children

Migrating without a parent or caretaker may create particular vulnerabilities for unaccompanied or separated children (UASC), including the risk of abuse, trafficking or exploitation in transit and destination countries. During transit, UASC, particularly girls, may join families or groups to which they are unrelated to for protection; however, such groups can also be linked to exploitation and violence (83,84). UASC in Europe are overwhelmingly boys: in 2020 almost 9 in 10 children seeking asylum were boys. While boys may be more likely than girls to travel unaccompanied, this gender disparity may also be explained by challenges in identifying unaccompanied girls because many may go undetected by authorities, either voluntarily or involuntarily, and subsequently fail to receive essential services for health and protection (25).

UASC from the WHO African Region and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region migrating to Europe often follow the Central Mediterranean Route or Eastern Mediterranean Route. However, the Central Mediterranean Route is particularly dangerous for UASC as they are more likely not only to travel alone but also to be exploited, spend more time in transit, and have limited access to protective systems (83).

Box 2.2.
Older age and migration

The number of older people displaced by humanitarian crises is growing rapidly. The proportion of people aged 50 years and older in fragile countries, where conflict and disasters are more likely to occur, is projected to increase from 12.3% (219.9 million) in 2020 to 19.2% (586.3 million) in 2050.

A 2019 study based on interviews conducted during humanitarian crises in 11 countries (Ethiopia, Jordan, Malawi, Mozambique, Pakistan, South Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Republic of Tanzania, the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, Yemen and Zimbabwe) found that 77% of the older people interviewed lacked income, 64% did not have enough to eat and one quarter had no access to clean water (81). Women seemed to be disproportionately affected and accounted for 58% of those living alone, 56% of those caring for others, 56% of those with no access to health care, 58% of those with no access to food and 58% of those with no income.

Older people often encounter exclusion and discrimination, the erosion of traditional and family support systems, a lack of access to information and documentation, and limited access to basic services, including housing, food, nutrition and health. Almost four fifths (77%) of those interviewed said that they had not been asked by any other humanitarian agency about the services being provided to them.

The impact of these issues is exacerbated when older people have to take care of children or other adults. Nearly two thirds of those interviewed (63%) said that they were caring for at least one child, and 44% were caring for another older person.

Source: adapted from McGivern et al. (81).

For example, just under half of adolescents and young people interviewed on their migration experience on the Central Mediterranean Route reported they had been forced to work. In the WHO Region of the Americas, UASC transiting from Central American countries (Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras) to the United States face family separation, struggles with reunification and deportation (85–87).

In destination countries, UASC face specific challenges upon reception and screening. For example, they may need to undergo an age assessment process, which holds its own risks: the processes are not consistent across countries, may be invasive, and can pose protection risks if not conducted properly (88–90). In a longitudinal study among UASC in Norway, 56% were not recognized as minors (91). At both 15 and 26 months after arrival, those who had been placed in reception centres for adults had higher levels of psychological distress symptoms compared with those placed in youth reception centres. Additional challenges for UASC include detention, poor treatment from border and reception officials, and difficulty in accessing health care services because of being unaware of or having difficulty in accessing child-friendly health services (92–95).

The evidence shows that UASC have a significantly high risk of developing mental health issues. Contributory factors include forced separation from family, death of a close family member and lack of social support (96–101). Evidence from the Netherlands also indicates that the type of care facility in which UASC reside influences their mental health: UASC refugees who lived in large reception centres had the lowest quality of living environment and highest mental health problems compared with children living in all other types of accommodation, including in small living units or with foster families (102).

For refugees and migrants, schools often provide a service beyond their educational purpose by linking students with a range of social capital resources; serving as sites for immunization programmes; providing community-based nutrition interventions; and fulfilling their material, practical and emotional needs.

2.4 Education

- Both higher and lower levels of education are associated with poor health outcomes. A lower level of education is associated with poor uptake of health care services and risk of physical assault, whereas a higher level of education is associated with a lower level of physical activity.
- Access to good-quality education after migration is limited in many settings, often affecting young girls disproportionately.
- Across high-income settings, highly skilled refugees and migrants are often employed in jobs below their educational and employment qualifications.

2.4.1 Health outcomes

Refugees and migrants with lower levels of education often experience poorer physical or mental health outcomes than those with higher levels of education (103,104). The prevalence of HIV among Mozambican miners working in South Africa was found to decline with increasing levels of education (105). In a Canadian study, a higher level of education was found to be a protective factor in migrant women for physical assault and from poor mental health (106). A separate study found that refugees and migrants in Canada who were educated to above high-school level were 37% more likely to report excellent, very good or good health compared with those educated to high-school level or lower (104). In a study in Germany, a migration background and lower level of education were both associated with lower uptake of nonmedical antenatal care (ANC) (107). In a case–control study in the Islamic Republic of Iran, Afghan women refugees and migrants had a higher risk of maternal mortality than Iranian women; the risk was concentrated among women with lower levels of education (108). In urban refugees and asylum seekers in Thailand, a cross-sectional study revealed lower levels of education than in the host population, and unmet needs for health services were positively associated with lower levels of education (109). A community-based cross-sectional study of primarily young male migrant labourers in Ethiopia determined that a lower level of education was significantly associated with the risk of malaria (110).

Education level is often considered alongside sex as a determinant of health, with studies highlighting disparities that correspond to these factors for different health outcomes. A quantitative study on refugees in the United Kingdom found that the number of years of education was positively associated with refugee women's self-reported general health status, although this association was not found for refugee men (111). An American study explored how education levels can mediate the association between age at migration and cognitive impairment (112). It concluded that migrant men who had migrated when they were older than 50 years had a significantly higher risk for cognitive impairment than their counterparts born in the United States, although this risk was not significant after adjusting for level of education. However, migrant women who had migrated when they were older than 50 years had a higher risk for cognitive impairment than women born in the United States, even after adjusting for level of education. Evidence from Europe highlights that the prevalence of diabetes in Ghanaian migrant men and women decreased as the level of education increased, although the prevalence increased with increasing level of education among their counterparts in rural Ghana (113).

Studies present a more nuanced picture regarding the educational attainment of refugees and migrants and their awareness of cancer. According to a cross-sectional study, Nepalese migrants in Japan with higher education levels were more likely to seek cancer-related health information compared with migrants with only primary education (114). An American study of prostate cancer screening among migrant men, predominantly of African descent, indicated that being unaware of prostate-specific antigen testing was associated with a low level of formal education (115). In a descriptive cross-sectional study, both Syrian refugees and Lebanese citizens with higher education levels recognized significantly more cancer symptoms and risk factors than those with lower education levels (116). Knowledge of the most common cancers impacting males was also low among both groups. Studies from various high-income settings, including Australia, the United States and countries in Europe, reveal conflicting evidence on the influence of education levels on refugee and migrant women's cancer screening practices (117–122). For example, a study in Australia found no correlation between education level and participation in breast cancer screening practices among migrant women, whereas a cross-sectional study in the United States indicated that Korean migrant women with lower education levels were more likely to use breast cancer screening services such as mammography and clinical breast examination (119,120).

Alternatively, some evidence indicates that a higher level of education is linked to poorer health behaviour, specifically inadequate physical activity. Among Sahrawi refugees in Algeria, having higher education levels was associated with lower physical activity, as many were employed in sedentary jobs (123). A higher level of education was also associated with physical inactivity among Ghanaian migrants living in Europe (124,125). Ghanaians in Amsterdam with lower education levels reported having more physically demanding jobs and higher levels of physical activity compared with Ghanaians in Berlin and London, who had higher education levels. The association between level of education and health outcomes underscores the critical and far-reaching role of education as a determinant of health for refugees and migrants.

2.4.2 Access to education for refugee and migrant children

Access to good-quality education and schools for refugee and migrant children may be inconsistent or limited along the migration pathway, and this often intersects with other social determinants of health. For refugees and migrants, schools often provide a service beyond their educational purpose by linking students with a range of social capital resources; serving as sites for immunization programmes; providing community-based nutrition interventions; and fulfilling their material, practical and emotional needs (126–129). However, various barriers to education remain, many of which disproportionately affect school-aged girls. In Thailand, the country's Education for All initiative aims to provide all children, regardless of legal status, the right to an education; however, migrant children may be prevented from attending school by their parents' fears of local authorities, the high costs of school supplies and language barriers (130). Despite efforts and policies in Rwanda to encourage continuation of schooling, pregnant Burundian refugee girls reported low attendance, largely a result of the stigma associated with teenage pregnancy (131). In Lebanon, adolescent Syrian refugee girls who had lost educational opportunities as a result of displacement reported not attending school because of financial limitations and concerns about SGBV in and around schools (132).

Parental influence and perceptions of education also affect children's enrolment and participation in schools. In a study in Chile, migrant parents of children aged 1–6 years who were not enrolled in school indicated this was because they considered it unnecessary or did not trust the care provided by the school system (133). Arabic-speaking migrant parents living in Sweden cited concerns about the sex education received by their children in Swedish schools, which may accentuate intergenerational conflicts (134). In Bangladesh and Jordan, refugee girls reported parental discouragement and cultural expectations of early marriage as reasons for dropping out of school, as parents may not value education for girls as much as they do for boys. However, some evidence indicates that early marriage is not always imposed but might result from the girls' or families' living situations, where economic hardship and insecurity play a big role in decisions about marriage (135–137).

This calls for further research to develop interventions that address the root causes of early marriage. In the case of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh, despite free education in camps, teacher negligence (e.g. inconsistent attendance and poor teaching practices) driven by low incentives was an additional barrier to education (137).

2.4.3 Employment challenges associated with level of education

Across high-income settings, such as Australia, the United States and countries in Europe, highly skilled refugees and migrants are often employed in jobs that are below their educational and employment qualifications. This is especially the case among highly skilled migrant workers who work in low-skilled jobs and face obstacles to entering the labour market (138–140). Refugees and migrants may face significant delays in acquiring work visas and having their professional qualifications verified, during which time they may take on less-skilled work (141,142). Despite evidence indicating that migrants in the United States were relatively successful in finding work, their occupations did not always match their training or skills, a factor that has affected their quality of life and mental health (143). Some countries have adopted policies in response to these challenges. Several countries have introduced policies that place highly skilled migrant workers in workplaces that match the needs of employers, namely Australia; China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region; New Zealand; and Singapore (141). In Germany, policies for skilled migrant workers came into effect in early 2020, thereby expanding opportunities for qualified professionals from outside the EU to work in Germany (144). Ensuring the recognition of educational and professional qualifications was critical to integrating refugees and migrants into the labour markets of host countries (145).

> Refugee and migrant women in many WHO regions report low levels of health literacy and inadequate knowledge of sexual and reproductive health topics, such as human papillomavirus vaccination, contraception, cancer screening and menstruation.

2.5 Health literacy

- A low level of health literacy, combined with language barriers, hinders the seeking of health care services and adherence to treatment.
- In situations of mass displacement and certain types of labour migration, such as for agricultural work, refugees and migrants often have lower levels of health literacy than the host population.
- Various strategies can improve health literacy among, and communication with, refugees and migrants, including translating clinical and health promotion materials, offering interpretation services within health services and sensitivity training for health staff in cultural and age differences.

WHO states that health literacy is an integral component of PHC and a critical determinant of the well-being of individuals, communities

A migrant worker uses a tele-kiosk to speak to a doctor from his dormitory in Singapore. © WHO / Juliana Tan and health systems (146,147). Many factors relevant to refugees and migrants affect an individual's health literacy. A study of homeless people in Spain, both migrant and of the host population, found no differences in health literacy between the groups (148). However, homeless migrants tended to have more issues related to health care access and utilization and were often not insured when compared to homeless people in the host population. The study concluded that migratory status, language proficiency and socioeconomic status (SES) all play key roles in health literacy and health outcomes.

2.5.1 Influence on health outcomes

Refugees and migrants often report lower levels of health literacy than their host populations. This is of particular concern since refugees and migrants may struggle to adhere to care practices or to seek preventive health care services (149). Refugee and migrant women in many WHO regions report low levels of health literacy and inadequate knowledge of sexual and reproductive health (SRH) topics, such as human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination, contraception, cancer screening and menstruation (150–157). Cultural stigma, taboos and feelings of shame and embarrassment often limit discussion of these topics. However, without critical SRH education and information, many women may remain vulnerable to problems such as sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and unplanned pregnancies. Refugees in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, and in Ethiopia reported limited knowledge of how to treat diarrhoea, despite this being a common illness in such circumstances (158,159). In Canada, a study found that 75% of migrants lacked the health literacy skills to maintain good health compared with 55% of non-migrants. This discrepancy remained even after adjusting for factors such as sex, age, household income and employment status (160). In Germany, a migrant background was found to be significantly associated with lower levels of health literacy (161).

Language barriers also hinder communication between health care providers and their refugee and migrant patients, with both groups citing a need for interpreters during medical consultations (162–166). Interpreters and mediators are especially important to facilitate complex registration processes (167). Research in Switzerland found that a lack of interpreters led to migrants using family members or minors as translators or even resorting to using gestures to communicate (164). In Australia, Afghan women reported that few on-site interpreters were available during imaging and pathology screening appointments, and virtually none were present during labour and birth, leaving many women to depend on their husbands for translation (168). Alternatively, health care providers caring for refugees in Australia, Canada, Ireland and the United States reported that the use of trained interpreters during medical consultations comes with its own challenges, including poor professionalism by interpreters and low confidence and trust in interpreted consultations (169).

Evidence from the United States indicates that health care providers may perceive refugee and migrant parents as having low levels of health literacy, which can have an impact on the establishment of trust between the two parties (170). Different perceptions of ill health and limited knowledge of traditional medicine among health care providers further contribute to these challenges (171). Both patient- and provider-based health literacy difficulties were identified in the provision of maternity care to migrant women in Australia (172). Health care providers have urged the use of technical resources such as electronic health (e-health) tools, digitalized patient portals and electronic reminders in conjunction with health provider communications to support health literacy and information needs.

2.5.2 Strategies to improve health literacy and communication

Various strategies have been adopted to improve health literacy and communication among refugees and migrants. These should take interest, need and engagement into account, along with sociocultural context (173–180). Strategies may include trained cultural mediators and digital approaches. The deployment of trained interpreters and cultural mediators has proven to be useful in communicating with refugees and migrants, and in improving their health (181,182). In the United States, a study conducted with primarily Hispanic migrant women revealed that most (71.3%) were quite open to participating in HIV health education via the internet (173). Among migrant cancer survivors in Australia, evidence showed there was a need for specific written health information related to recovery time after treatment in the language of the migrant and appropriate for their culture and community (174). These findings from Australia indicate that bilingual resources can be beneficial to cross-generational families with varying levels of proficiency in English.

Research in Sweden suggested that to improve self-care adherence among migrant patients with heart failure, nurses should become more sensitive to cultural differences and adapt self-care counselling to the patient's level of health literacy (175). For example, research exploring the interaction between Australian health care practitioners and refugees from Myanmar concluded that the use of metaphors in sexual health dialogue was more linguistically appropriate and culturally accepted than verbatim or literal translations (183). As a result, awareness of the nuances in sexual health vocabulary made dialogue around sexual health more culturally appropriate and allowed health care practitioners to develop a better rapport with their patients. Beyond being culturally and linguistically appropriate for refugee and migrant populations, health communication should also consider the needs of those who are illiterate or have learning disabilities.

2.6 Income

- Direct and indirect costs of health care, including out-of-pocket payments, are problematic for many host populations, but can be an even greater barrier to health care for refugees and migrants, particularly irregular migrants and those in precarious employment.
- Sending remittances home is an essential motivator of labour migration, but may cause migrants to deprive themselves of good nutrition and hinder health-seeking behaviour.
- Remittances often benefit the health-seeking behaviour of left-behind families in the home country, but the association is not fully understood. However, family separation and long-distance relationships can have negative impacts on the mental health of left-behind children and older people, such as grandparents.

Income is a key determinant of health outcomes and access to health services. In addition to being a barrier to accessing health services, economic insecurity may worsen the physical and mental health of refugees and migrants.

2.6.1 Health outcomes

Economic insecurity, poverty and low income are often associated with negative physical and mental health outcomes. Chapter 4 on health systems includes the topic of health financing (section 4.6) and of the direct and indirect costs, including out-of-pocket payments, that are often a barrier to health care for refugees and migrants. Evidence from refugee camps in occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, highlighted the link between income and chronic diseases: the prevalence of chronic diseases was found to be higher among groups with a lower income (184). Access to the labour market and income generation significantly improved the mental health of refugees in Canada (185), while research in South Africa highlighted the role of reliable income and economic capital in determining positive health outcomes among sub-Saharan African migrant women (186). Similarly in Sri Lanka, belonging to temporary migrant households with lower SES was associated with an increased risk of suicidal behaviour (187).

2.6.2 Remittances and left-behind families

Migrants who move for economic or labour reasons can face persistent or continued poverty in the post-migration process, particularly if they must send remittances to families in their home countries (section 1.7.4 discusses left-behind families). In recent years, active immigration policies in countries such as Australia and Singapore have contributed to an increase in immigration in the WHO Western Pacific Region (188), which contains 3 of the 10 countries receiving the most remittances worldwide: China (which is also a top sender of remittances), the Philippines and Viet Nam (189).

In North and South America, migrants from Colombia reported experiencing material deprivation and deep poverty in host countries because of a combination of low wages and sending remittances to their families in Colombia (190). Similarly, in the United Arab Emirates, low wages made it difficult for Bangladeshi migrants to balance daily living expenses with sending money to their families (191). In Pakistan, family members left behind by migrant workers, particularly the wives of migrating husbands, reported a high prevalence of depression and anxiety; however, having a son who had migrated provided economic benefits and had a positive effect on their use of health services (192–194). In Chile and the United States, family separation and distance from the country of origin were reported to be among the major sources of stress (195,196).

Although remittances may help the families of migrant workers to access health services in their home countries, the impact on health and well-being varies. In Togo, the families of international migrants showed increased use of health care services, specifically for maternal and child health (MCH). This increased use was the result not only of additional financial support from remittances but also of exposure to new ideas and practices (197). However, among sub-Saharan African migrants living in France, remitting money and having a child abroad were associated with poor health among migrant women, although not among migrant men (198,199). In Sudan, pressure for women to accept unsolicited or unwanted advice about childbearing or child-rearing from male relatives who had migrated abroad was found to cause stress and anxiety in the families left behind. (200). A study comparing the impact of parental migration on children who are left behind in Ethiopia, India, Peru and Viet Nam found that the negative health effects were greater for children whose parents had migrated for longer periods (201). The context also matters: parental migration was not found to have a significant impact on children left behind in Ethiopia, whereas it led to poorer health outcomes for the children left behind in the other three countries.

2.7 Migratory status

- Fear of deportation and anti-migrant discourse reduce the willingness of migrants to access health services, leading to late diagnosis and, consequently, poorer health outcomes.
- The impact is particularly high among irregular migrants who lack official documents and work in marginalized industries and among asylum seekers whose status has not yet been recognized.

Migratory status, including legal status according to legislation in the transit or destination country, is another important determinant of the health of refugees and migrants. Lack of legal documentation, fear of deportation, and anti-refugee and anti-migrant discourse often prevent refugees and migrants from accessing health services (162,188,202–206). Studies conducted in Sabah, Malaysia, noted the role of citizenship and nationality among migrant children of Philippine and Indonesian migrants and their access to key services. Some had reportedly faced delay as a result of their citizenship status (207,208). In Australia, irregular migrants may not be entitled to free regular health services but only to free emergency care (209). In the WHO South-East Asia Region, fear of deportation because of migratory status as well as higher costs for primary care were reported by irregular migrants as barriers to accessing health care (210,211).

A 3-year cohort study in the United States found that growing anti-migrant rhetoric during the study period was associated with a 43.3% decrease in PHC visits by irregular migrant children and a 34.5% decrease by irregular migrant adults (202). In North and South America, irregular migrants were found to often experience stress, anxiety, fear of administrative barriers, mobility restrictions and constant uncertainty about immigration enforcement (212–214). How health access and outcomes are influenced by migratory status is discussed in detail in Chapter 3. Section 4.7 presents clear examples of how policies based on migratory status limit access to various services for refugees and migrants.

2.8 Social support

- Stress from displacement and migration is itself a determinant of health among refugees and migrants, but it can be alleviated by interventions such as counselling and community outreach.
- The impact of stress is often compounded by leaving behind social support networks.
- Women, particularly mothers, face particular forms of stress in the absence of social support.
- Acculturation – how individuals and groups adapt to the culture of a host country – can be a source of stress and reduce health-seeking behaviour, but it can also be mitigated by health and social system outreach.

The presence or absence of social support may also influence refugee and migrant health status, particularly their mental health. Stress resulting from displacement and migration can be compounded by the loss of social support networks and by acculturation processes experienced in the host country (215,216). Several studies showed that forced displacement and its impact on mental health was partly caused by the loss of psychosocial support systems (20,217,218). In Sweden, for example, a high prevalence of PTSD and depression was found in UASC who had experienced family separation and displacement (219). In several other regions, displacement was also associated with increased sexual risk behaviour for economic and psychosocial reasons (including transactional or survival sex), loss of social support and loneliness (220–222).

2.8.1 Acculturation

In the WHO Region of the Americas, low levels of acculturation were a barrier to accessing health services and were linked to less-informed decision-making about medical treatment (214,223,224). The process may be described as acculturation stress, which is induced by adaptation to a new culture and exacerbated by discrimination and exclusion. A study of Mexican migrants in the United States showed that acculturation stress can lead to poor health outcomes, including mental health issues (225). Conversely, acculturation may also lead to the development of protective factors over time, related to both the strengthening of social networks and family cohesion (226). However, there are gaps in the literature on the impacts of migration- and displacement-related stressors on health and on family support systems.

2.8.2 Parenting

Women, particularly mothers, face particular forms of stress in the absence of social support. A study conducted among Syrian refugees in Lebanon modelled the effects of war exposure and daily stress on maternal mental health, parenting and child psychosocial adjustment (227). The results suggested that both war exposure and daily stress can affect the general mental health of mothers and increase the risk of negative parenting behaviour, contributing to poorer psychosocial outcomes for children. The study concluded that psychosocial and parenting support should be provided for war-affected caregivers, along with interventions to provide for basic survival needs, ensure access to quality health and education services, and break down restrictions on movement and employment. Among refugees living in the United States, the documented effects of maternal traumatic distress on children included depressive symptoms, antisocial behaviour and delinquent behaviour (228).

Research in the United Arab Emirates noted a higher prevalence of symptoms of depression among adolescent migrants (aged 12–18 years) from southern Asia (33.3%) compared with adolescents from the host population (22%) (229). Not receiving a monthly allowance from parents and coming from a single-parent family or a household with low monthly income were predictors of a higher score on a depression scale. Depressive symptoms were associated with poor self-esteem and with experiencing neglect and verbal abuse in school. Conversely, refugees and migrants may find family and social support in their host countries, which may bring health benefits.

2.8.3 Substance use

Substance use and dependence pose a health challenge to diverse populations worldwide and are associated with a wide variety of social determinants, including for refugees and migrants. Studies among refugee groups in several African countries indicated that alcohol and substance use were associated with a higher prevalence of mental health conditions, including a higher prevalence of psychopathologies, as well as related to SGBV or intimate partner violence (IPV) (230,231). At the same time, certain refugees and migrants consume substances at lower rates than local populations for a variety of reasons that may include sex, religion and cultural norms in their countries of origin (232). The complex interplay of social determinants also makes interventions difficult (233–235).

Acculturation was found to play a role in the prevalence of substance use in various studies based in the WHO European Region (234,236). Cross-sectional data from the Finnish Migrant Health and Wellbeing Study demonstrated that having a younger age, higher level of education, employment, longer duration of residence in Finland and language proficiency were associated with binge drinking and daily smoking, with varying patterns of association depending on migrant group and sex. For example, a lower level of education and poor language proficiency acted as protective factors for Kurdish migrant women, given their adherence to traditional cultural norms around substance use (232). The impact of length of stay in the host country remained a factor, although the correlation weakened after adjusting for perceived risk of substance use and dependence (all substances) and for substance accessibility (illegal substances);

Improving energy access for refugee populations, such as through improved cooking stoves, can reduce reliance on biomass and the accompanying challenges, such as high household energy expenditure and poor indoor air quality. It can also reduce the risk of SGBV for women when seeking firewood.

however, some migrants were protected from this phenomenon, presumably because of factors related to their country of origin (234).

Some studies in the United States indicated varying patterns of association for young migrants from Latin America at risk of being drawn into early substance use, but education was a protective factor (237,238). In the WHO Region of the Americas, traumatic experiences during migration often led to a convergence of mental health issues. Interventions targeting substance use in Latin American migrant populations, although effective in improving mental health symptoms, failed to reduce their substance use (239).

Access to handwashing facilities is essential to reducing the transmission of communicable diseases and maintaining safe hygiene practices but can be limited. Maintaining hygiene in refugee camps is challenging as access to handwashing facilities might be limited, hygiene supplies scarce and conditions crowded, thereby increasing the risk of outbreaks of communicable diseases.

2.9 Air quality

- Air quality is critical to the health of refugees and migrants, especially those living in camps and irregular settlements, where the burning of biomass is linked to poor respiratory health.
- In workplaces or dormitories, where many migrant workers spend a great deal of time, overcrowding and inadequate ventilation have been found to contribute to the spread of communicable diseases.

Ensuring proper environmental conditions relating to ventilation, heating and cooling, and indoor air quality is critical for supporting the health, and especially the respiratory health, of refugees and migrants. The literature emphasizes health risks in two settings: refugee settlements and camps; and workplaces and work-related housing.

Migrant workers report facing a variety of hazards related to air quality, which ultimately affects their health and quality of life. A study carried out among migrant farmworkers in the American state of North Carolina found numerous health challenges in their living conditions. These included limited ventilation, extensive mould and dampness, pests such as cockroaches, heating units emitting smoke and fumes overnight, and having to eat and sleep near fields newly sprayed with pesticides (240). Other evidence indicated that being a migrant in the United States is significantly associated with experiencing air of better-than-average quality, whereas being a member of the host population is strongly associated with experiencing air of poorer-than-average quality. The literature indicates that this disparity may be explained by migrants' consumer and environmental behaviours, which can have a lesser impact on air quality compared with the habits of their counterparts in the host population (241).

In a study of migrant workers in central Thailand, almost half reported never opening their bedroom or living room windows for ventilation and 45% reported never cleaning their window screen, with many citing a lack of time for home hygiene as a result of long working hours (242). Notably, 43.8% of migrants in the study presented symptoms that may be related to indoor air quality. Among Rohingya refugees living in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, conditions such as overcrowding, indoor cooking practices and the use of air-impermeable plastic sheets to build shelters can contribute to the spread of acute respiratory infections, which are among the main causes of death for this population (243). (The link between housing and health outcomes is further discussed in section 2.11.1.)

The burning of biomass (wood is by far the most common, but other types include animal dung, crop residues and grass (244)) is of particular concern for the health of refugees living in camps. A comparative study found variable air quality in refugee camps across 10 countries. In shelters in Bangladeshi, Djibouti and Ethiopian camps, where solid fuels are primarily used for cooking, the levels of total volatile organic compounds exceed the recommended safe levels (245). This contrasted with camps in Jordan, Peru and Türkiye, where gas bottles are primarily used as cooking fuel and detected levels of these compounds were lower than the recommended maximum concentrations. In the case of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh, many shelters lack proper ventilation because their kitchen area is often not separated from their living spaces (246). Such conditions increase airborne particulate matter pollution to levels beyond the guideline maximum values.

Burning solid fuels has been linked to poor respiratory health among refugees in Rwanda and the United Republic of Tanzania. However, the use of energy-efficient cooking stoves can significantly improve lung function and have a positive impact on respiratory health, including among individuals with pre-existing airway obstruction and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Among Congolese refugees with airway obstruction in Rwanda, a prospective cohort study showed that those who use an energy-efficient cooking stove experience a significant increase in forced expiratory volume compared with baseline groups (247,248).

Indeed, improving energy access for refugee populations, such as through improved cooking stoves, can reduce reliance on biomass and the accompanying challenges, such as high household energy expenditure and poor indoor air quality. It can also reduce the risk of SGBV for women when seeking firewood (249,250). Additional efforts to address poor air quality include the use of turbine ventilators in refugee camps and recycled plastic bricks as construction material to reduce the high carbon dioxide emissions; however, evidence of the impact of such efforts is limited (251,252).

2.10 Water, sanitation and hygiene

- Challenges to securing WASH services in refugee and migrant settings include scarce hygiene supplies, financial barriers, inadequate measures to counter waterborne diseases, and varying levels of knowledge of hygiene and handwashing practices.
- Refugee populations in camp settings face a variety of challenges to securing safe drinking-water, especially – but not only – in places where water is scarce.
- Some evidence indicates that a higher level of education is associated with greater adherence to safe water-chain practices across all stages between the water source and consumption.
- Although some refugee and migrant groups lack knowledge of hygiene practices, the evidence indicates that disease outbreaks can be prevented when WASH standards are applied (e.g. protecting a water source from contamination, ensuring the proximity of the water source or limiting the number of people using a particular latrine).

2.10.1 Access to safe drinking-water

Refugee populations face a variety of challenges in securing safe drinking-water, particularly when facing water constraints in camp-based settings. Refugees living in camps in the Gambella region of Ethiopia and refugees from occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, living in Lebanon's Shatila camp reported that their drinking-water was contaminated with faecal coliform bacteria and parasites (253,254). Other challenges in securing safe drinking-water included the lack of maintenance of wells and equipment, improper water storage and misperceptions about water quality.

Some evidence indicates an association between a higher level of education and greater adherence to safe water-chain practices. In refugee camps in Ethiopia, households where women (described in the study as caregivers) have no formal education were significantly more likely to have water contaminated with faecal coliform bacteria than households whose caregivers had completed secondary education (253). Similarly, in the Pagirinya Refugee Settlement of northern Uganda, individuals with formal education were more likely to observe safe water-chain practices than those with no formal education (255). Additional barriers to safe drinking-water across refugee camps include long distances between households and water sources, water shortages in the previous month, improper storage and the unavailability of free residual chlorine (255–258). Psychological stress caused by the absence of clean drinking-water was identified as a risk factor for mental health among young (aged 18–32 years) Syrian male refugees living in a refugee camp in Jordan (259).

2.10.2 Access to safe sanitation

Innovative sanitation systems, such as urine-diverting dry toilets (UDDTs), have been introduced into some refugee settings, but with varying results. In the Dollo Ado refugee camp in Ethiopia, research on the acceptability of UDDTs found high use among survey respondents (88.8% and 93.4% in two surveys conducted 18 months apart) (260). Satisfaction levels were significantly higher in the second survey, with 97% of respondents indicating that they were mostly or very satisfied with UDDTs. However, UDDTs were not as widely accepted in the Kakuma refugee camp in Kenya by users who perform anal washing (a cultural practice in their home country) or by women who had experienced FGM (261). These examples illustrate the importance of sociocultural context in assessing the acceptability of sanitation systems. Many settings may also require different interventions to account for the estimated length of stay and population size. Box 2.3 describes the challenges faced by Rohingya refugees in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, in accessing WASH services.

2.10.3 Hygiene

WASH interventions are critical because they address basic and essential needs, including handwashing facilities and hygiene practices. Access to handwashing facilities is essential to reducing the transmission of communicable diseases and maintaining safe hygiene practices but can be limited. Maintaining hygiene in refugee camps is challenging as access to handwashing facilities might be limited, hygiene supplies scarce and conditions crowded, thereby increasing the risk of outbreaks of communicable diseases.

Among South Sudanese refugees in the Rhino Camp Settlement in north-western Uganda, only 23.1% of households reported having access to adequate handwashing facilities, with many citing barriers such as the high cost or lack of soap (264). Despite some improvements in WASH activities, many people in refugee camps across the WHO African Region and WHO European Region continue to experience outbreaks of cholera and typhoid fever, as well as the risk of parasitic infections (265–267). A study in the Borgop-Cameroon refugee camp found that it had not experienced a waterborne disease outbreak in the previous 6 months, probably as a result of conforming to numerous WASH standards, such as ensuring the availability of a protected water source and of sufficient distance between latrines and water sources,

Box 2.3.

Water, sanitation and hygiene in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh

The rapid influx of Rohingya refugees into Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, in 2017 resulted in the formation of new temporary settlements.

These settlements faced many challenges related to water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH), including a lack of WASH facilities and infrastructure; the risk of transmission of diseases such as cholera, diarrhoea and typhoid; a shortage of land area and groundwater; and susceptibility to floods, landslides and soil erosion. Areas of improvement included raising awareness among refugees of waste disposal and proper washing of transport containers (262,263).

The COVID-19 pandemic exacerbated these WASH challenges in an already resource-limited setting. The pandemic made frequent handwashing and maintaining basic hygiene more difficult, with a greater need for new handwashing locations, an increased water supply and additional hygiene promoters (246). Recommendations for addressing the WASH challenges include designing and implementing infrastructure that ensures a long-term water supply, rainwater harvesting and alternative methods for sanitation, such as urine-diverting dry toilets.

and providing the recommended average amount of water per person (268).

Evidence from widely separated camps (in Rwanda and Thailand) on knowledge, attitudes and practices regarding waterborne diseases and WASH practices revealed that many refugees possess poor knowledge of safe water practices. A long duration of stay, unemployment and higher age were significantly associated with poor handwashing practices (267,269).

Migrants often work in occupations where maintaining good hygiene and handwashing practices is imperative, as a protective measure for both the individual and the host community. Migrant farmworkers in the United States are at a heightened risk for additional environmental exposures, such as pesticides, that make access to handwashing facilities even more critical; however, prevalent barriers remain, including a need to promote consistent handwashing behaviours and routine handwashing in migrants and to ensure the provision of hygiene supplies (270–272). In Malaysia, a study among migrant food handlers reported poor-to-moderate knowledge of hygiene practices and food safety (273). Migrants who demonstrated poor knowledge often struggled to understand the information given during food training programmes as a result of communication challenges, language barriers and low levels of education. Similarly, compared with the host population, Nepalese migrants living in China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, displayed considerably poorer knowledge of hand hygiene, with many reporting low levels of education (274).

The inhumane conditions and legal uncertainty of immigration detention can have devastating effects on the mental health and well-being of detainees.

2.11 Housing and living environments

- For refugees and migrants, poor living environments, of which housing is a major factor, are associated with adverse physical and mental health outcomes, such as respiratory diseases and depression.
- Refugee and migrant children living in poor-quality, inadequate housing, particularly in informal settlements, are more likely to experience health problems than children in better-quality housing.
- Although immigration detention is increasing worldwide, information about many detention facilities is restricted and comprehensive data are rare. The available studies have documented harmful physical and mental health impacts due to overcrowding, uncertainty around the period and conditions of detention (especially in countries with no time limits), isolation, confusion, limited health care and insanitary detention conditions.
- Access to safe and secure housing can vary greatly depending on migratory status, which can determine whether refugees and migrants are included in national policies and programmes or qualify for support from international organizations.

Health can be influenced by living environments directly, through poor-quality heating systems and overcrowding, or indirectly through social marginalization, lack of sense of dignity and neighbourhood violence.

The inhumane conditions and legal uncertainty of immigration detention can have devastating effects on the mental health and well-being of detainees. Refugee and migrant populations experience several overlapping challenges related to housing, which often exacerbate their already precarious circumstances.

2.11.1 Housing

The physical state of housing can influence health outcomes. Refugees and migrants can live in a wide variety of settings according to their migration context; for example, those with greater means may live in secure housing, while those in transit or in protracted displacement may find themselves in informal settlements living in tented structures for many years or in detention contexts. Poor living conditions and insecure housing may be associated with adverse physical and mental health outcomes for refugee and migrant populations (275–277). Such an association was observed in informal settlements in Lebanon, where a considerable number of households had more than eight housing problems, including the presence of mice, shared or no bathrooms, lack of natural light and exposed electric wiring (278). Children in these households were more likely to have three or more health problems than children in households with fewer than six housing problems. Further evidence from Syrian migrant agricultural workers in Lebanon found links between a variety of health conditions and poor housing and infrastructure (279).

Overcrowded living spaces increased the risk of communicable disease transmission, especially in refugee camps and in common dormitories and labour camps for migrant workers (280–284). In Algeria, overcrowding among refugees from Niger created an ideal environment for the spread of head lice and louse-borne pathogens (285). In Nyala, Sudan, refugees living in overcrowded camps were affected by a variety of skin diseases (286). In Costa Rica during 2012–2015, a key factor in tuberculosis (TB) transmission among migrants was the high prevalence of overcrowding, which was often driven by low SES and limited geographical mobility (287).

In addition to the risk of communicable disease transmission, refugees and migrants may be exposed to various environmental and social risk factors in their living environment. Poor and insanitary living conditions, such as mould, water damage and indoor pesticide use, contributed to respiratory health problems among migrant farmworkers in the United States (288). In the WHO Region of the Americas, migrants living in crowded housing conditions experienced a poorer quality of life and increased risk of violence and felt less able to protect themselves (289–292). Secure housing was associated with better mental well-being and reduced risk of mental disorders for refugees from occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, living in Lebanon's Shatila refugee camp (293). Similarly, the absence of comfortable accommodation was a risk factor for poor mental health among young (aged 18–32 years) Syrian male refugees in the Za'atari camp in Jordan (259).

In Italy, informal settlements, such as those found in areas of seasonal agricultural work, can represent unsafe and insanitary housing and living conditions (294,295).

Refugees and migrants may also lack residential stability and experience homelessness. In a study in Denmark, Romanian Roma migrants reported unsafe, poorly managed and unaffordable housing, in addition to discrimination and language and cultural barriers, which often led to homelessness (296). In Kirkuk, Iraq, the majority (58%) of street children (defined as children who experience homelessness and live on the street) were found to be refugees (297).

2.11.2 Immigration detention

Immigration detention is a growing global phenomenon that involves detaining foreign nationals as part of administrative, criminal or ad hoc procedures for immigration- or asylum-related reasons. States typically impose these detention measures – which can last from a few hours to several years – to ensure that a person is deported; to verify identity or other documents while an application for protection is being processed or migratory status is being resolved; or to prevent absconding during the adjudication process (298). In the migration context, administrative forms of immigration detention can be defined as "deprivation of liberty decided by the competent administrative authority of a State, whether it is subject to judicial review or not" (299). Detention is often imposed without distinguishing between asylum seekers, irregular migrants, stateless people or refugees (300,301). Certain forms of detention occur at points of entry or along borders, which some countries do not consider to be detention. However, these ad hoc and transit detention practices are forms of deprivation of liberty according to the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, which has affirmed that detention includes all forms of "deprivation of freedom either before, during, or after the trial … as well as deprivation of freedom in the absence of any kind of trial" (302).

An array of sites is used for immigration detention. In the EU, directives require Member States to use specialized facilities – which might include structures that used to be prisons – for confining people who are in return procedures. However, in Canada, Morocco, South Africa, Switzerland and the United States, among other countries, police stations and prison systems are widely used in addition to dedicated centres. In many countries, particularly those that do not have well-developed migration laws or face surges in arrivals, people may be confined in ad hoc detention centres, such as abandoned hotels, shipping containers, open-air camps, warehouses or other informal sites (303).

The COVID-19 pandemic has underscored the importance of broadly defining migration detention because it led to a rise in new, ad hoc detention situations (304). It also led many states to release people from immigration detention, impose moratoria on immigration detention and scale-up the use of non-custodial alternatives.

There are limited data on how many people are placed in immigration detention worldwide. However, studies have shown that this practice is growing, both within countries and across more states, as destination countries seek to externalize migration controls. In the EU, the number of people placed in detention has increased in recent years, with the annual number of detainees more than doubling in some Member States (305). Experts have also documented how key countries have extended detention practices across the globe, leading to the emergence of new migration detention systems that are either offshore or situated in neighbouring countries (306–308). As part of a 2015 survey on the availability of detention data in 33 countries in Europe and North America, a team of investigators reported that only six countries provided full responses to information requests about basic detention data (309).

The harmful impact of immigration detention on people's physical and mental health is well documented, although much of the focus has been on mental health outcomes in administrative detention centres located in high-income countries. Data is lacking on health indicators specific to countries and regions across all income levels. However, experts agree on the need "to develop specialized models and practices of care for the increasing numbers of people across the globe who are confined in detention centres (which could be prisons) for reasons related to their migratory status" (310). Adding urgency to these calls are numerous reports detailing deaths, suicides and cases of self-harming in immigration detention settings (311,312); these are often attributed to a failure to provide adequate health care and to the inhumane conditions of detention (313,314).

The few studies of health outcomes comparing differing national systems indicate that the detrimental impacts of poor detention conditions are endemic. For example, a 2020 study of European detention centres found that "living conditions in the immigration detention settings [were] detrimental to health across all studies" and that the "migrant health experience, consideration of their health and well-being, and the provision of appropriate, responsive health care in immigration detention settings … appeared sub-standard" (315).

Inhumane conditions of detention are frequently cited as features of ad hoc detention situations in transit countries that are the focus of externalized migration controls. A study of a detention centre in one such country concluded:

> Living conditions failed to meet minimum requirements. Health problems diagnosed at [health care facility] consultations reflect the living conditions and consist largely of diseases related to overcrowding, lack of water and ventilation, and poor diet. Furthermore, every month that people stay in detention increases their risk of malnutrition (316).

Other areas of study of health indicators include the impact of detention on children (Box 2.4), as well as on people with pre-existing trauma, such as torture survivors and victims of human trafficking; health impacts stemming from the uncertainty inherent in migration detention; the need for improved health screening for people entering detention; morbidity and mortality; and concerns about health care provision in privately operated detention centres.

The excruciating uncertainty migrant detainees often face as a result of the interminable lack of resolution of their cases, bewilderment over why they appear to be locked in prisons and the lack of clarity over how long they may be detained can have a severe effect on their mental health and well-being (320). Much has been written about the deleterious effect of detention in countries that lack detention time limits, including Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States (321).

Other studies have underscored the lack of access that detainees have to the outside world, including to family support networks, and their subsequent sense of isolation (322); confusion stemming from being detained without being charged with a crime; limited health care provision, including failure to distribute sufficient medicines (323); insanitary detention conditions (322); and the unsuitability of migrant detention systems to treat the specific needs of women (324).

Box 2.4.

Detention of refugee and migrant children

In preparation for drafting of first ever United Nations Global Study on Children Deprived of Liberty, the Independent Expert on Children Deprived of Liberty issued questionnaires to all countries in 2020 asking for data on children in all forms of detention. Based on evidence generated by the Independent Expert's questionnaires and a review of the data, the study estimated that some 80 countries detain children for migration purposes, with the annual number of detained children reaching a conservative estimate of 330 000 (317). In contrast, in a review of 12 countries, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees found that in 2014 nearly 165 000 children were detained (300). However, immigration detention of children is prohibited under international law (318).

Concerning children, there is now overwhelming consensus that even very brief detention can have lasting detrimental impacts on a child's mental and physical health (317,319). Based on the body of evidence in support of this conclusion, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Committee on the Rights of the Child, which oversees implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, concluded in a 2018 general comment about the human rights of children in immigration detention that there can be no justification for locking up children for immigration reasons because, in all cases, it "conflicts with the principle of the best interests of the child", one of the cornerstone principles of the global human rights framework established in Art. 3 of the Convention (318).

The growth of privately operated immigration detention centres has led to concerns over the dual loyalties of health care providers, which may affect trust and the delivery of services (310,325). To mitigate mental and physical harm in detention centres, there are increasing calls to improve health screening. However, cross-national studies found that many countries fail to undertake adequate screening upon entry to and/or exit from detention (326). All people, including refugees and migrants, enjoy a fundamental right to liberty; immigration detention must be an exceptional measure, used only as a last resort and for a minimum period of time. When a person is subject to a detention procedure, states must consider non-custodial alternatives before imposing detention to ensure that it is necessary and proportionate (311,327).

2.11.3 Housing barriers and solutions

The barriers faced by refugee and migrant populations to obtaining safe and secure housing vary extensively, depending on their residential settings. Syrian refugees in Tunisia reported major obstacles to securing good-quality housing including high prices and the availability of only basic accommodation with poor hygiene (328,329). In Jordan, competition for housing and jobs was a main source of tension between Syrian refugees and local communities, as Syrians benefited from a housing subsidy that affected real estate prices (329,330). Among migrant workers in Thailand, living far from work increased fear of both thieves and the police, leading migrants to live closer to their workplaces and in social networks with family and relatives (331).

Some host countries have instituted a variety of housing programmes for refugee and migrant populations that differ by region, migratory status and scope. In the WHO European Region, beneficiaries of international protection may have access to a range of housing accommodation, including public social housing and private accommodation. Programmes such as the Welcome Home programme in Warsaw, Poland, aim to improve access to affordable accommodation by offering rents below market prices. Others, such as the Leverkusen Model of refugee housing in Germany, include support measures, such as information services and assistance in finding accommodation, implemented by local public administrations or complemented by nongovernmental organization (NGO) initiatives. In some cases, cities have rehabilitated buildings, including vacant properties, and made them available to refugees and migrants, as exemplified by the Vilafranca Inclusion programme in Spain (332).

In the WHO Western Pacific Region, thousands of low-skilled migrant workers employed in the construction and marine industries and in various other low-wage sectors in Singapore, live in dormitories, the largest of which have common and shared areas (e.g. recreational facilities, grocery stores and other services). However, such conditions have made migrant workers more vulnerable to infectious diseases, particularly COVID-19 (333). In the WHO South-East Asia Region, many Timorese refugees in the East Nusa Tenggara province of Indonesia continue to live in refugee camps despite various housing aid programmes, citing a better livelihood in the camps and a preference for remaining within their communities (334).

2.12 Food and nutrition

- Food insecurity is a major issue among refugees and migrants, and successful interventions must take local and cultural factors into account.
- When faced with food insecurity, refugees and migrants adopt coping strategies that include skipping meals, borrowing money for food or changing their eating patterns.

Some countries and international organizations have dealt with food insecurity with public health interventions, such as increasing food ration coverage, distributing fortified blended foods, or supporting local home gardens or community kitchens. Food insecurity is a major issue for refugee and migrant populations and may lead to negative physical and mental health outcomes. While different types of migrants face varied food and nutrition-related health impacts, the following section focuses on forcibly displaced populations. Nutritional programmes and food security interventions are crucial for mobile populations, but must take into account the local and cultural context if they are to succeed.

Refugee and migrant populations in several WHO regions have experienced high levels of food insecurity and adopted a variety of coping strategies in response, including skipping meals and borrowing money for food (335–337). Among female asylum seekers and refugees in Durban, South Africa, 92% were found to be food insecure, leading many to reduce their food intake or change the types of food they consumed (336). In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, one fifth of refugees in Egypt could not meet their basic food needs, citing unemployment as a major barrier to food security, and one in three migrants living in Libya reported inadequate food consumption (338,339). Afghan refugees were significantly affected: 88.7% of those living in Iran reported food insecurity, and many Afghan refugee families in Pakistan experienced food insecurity, regardless of the duration of their stay (340).

A comprehensive food security and vulnerability assessment conducted in Jordan showed variation across refugee groups by nationality (341). Among the groups assessed, 24% of refugees from Sudan experienced food insecurity, followed by 23% of Somalian refugees, 15% of Yemeni refugees and 9% of Iraqi refugees. Reasons for food insecurity among these groups included high food expenditure shares, the use of emergency livelihood-based coping strategies to meet basic food needs and limited access to food. Fluctuations in food security have occurred, particularly among Syrian refugees. Food security among registered Syrian refugees has declined in recent years: only 20% of households living outside camps were reported as food secure in 2018 compared with 28% in 2016 (341). Despite food consumption scores remaining stable, food expenditure shares and the use of livelihood-based coping strategies have both increased, contributing to the overall decline of food security among Syrian refugees in Jordan from 2016 to 2018. Further studies in Lebanon, South Africa and Uganda highlighted the relationship between food insecurity and negative health outcomes, including disease-related disability, depression and anxiety (342–344).

A child is screened for malnutrition using a mid-upper arm circumference (MUAC) tape at a nutrition stabilization centre in Abu Shouk IDP camp in North Darfur. © WHO / Lindsay Mackenzie

Even in high-income countries, refugees and migrants may experience food insecurity. In the WHO European Region, refugees and migrants with financial limitations may be less able to acquire food and may face disruption of food intake or eating patterns. They may also face sociocultural challenges in the host country, including obstacles to cooking meals in a new setting (345–350). Among asylum seekers in Norway, 93% were food insecure, with many reporting economic constraints and limited resources (351). In the Republic of Korea, refugees from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea reported significantly lower food security and skipped meals three times more frequently than their host country counterparts (352).

A study of migrants in transit through Mexico found that 74% experienced some degree of food insecurity, ranging from having only one meal to no food at all during one or several consecutive 24-h periods (353). Factors associated with the severity of food insecurity included more days in active transit, more severe illness affecting mobility or the illness of a travel companion during the previous 2 weeks. The study predicted illness by a pre-migration diagnosis of chronic disease.

2.12.1 Food assistance

Some host countries and local and international partner organizations have introduced a variety of interventions to address high levels of food insecurity among refugees and migrants. In Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, increased coverage of food rations, the distribution of fortified blended foods, access to micronutrient powders and other public health interventions improved the nutritional status of Rohingya refugee children (354). In northern Uganda, an income-generating project involving home gardens and increased vegetable production showed that participating refugees were twice as likely to consume vegetables as the refugee comparison group (355).

> Refugee and migrant populations in several WHO regions have experienced high levels of food insecurity and adopted a variety of coping strategies in response, including skipping meals and borrowing money for food.

Community kitchens (also known as healthy kitchens) have been promoted as an intergenerational public health intervention in Lebanon for populations from occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem. Adapted to the cultural context, women prepare subsidized, healthy traditional food in community kitchens for school-aged children attending UNRWA schools. Positive outcomes for participating families included increased spending on food and clothing and reductions in food insecurity (356,357).

2.13 Summary

It is now clear that many, often interconnected, factors affect the health of refugees and migrants and the health of nearby communities, either by undermining or improving it.

Some of these individual characteristics, such as sex and gender, are cross-cutting and affect many of the other challenges faced by refugees and migrants. There is clear evidence that gender inequality fuels health risks for women and girls around the world during different phases of displacement and migration. Although less recognized, men and boys also face sexual violence as well as the additional dangers of working in high-risk sectors. The vulnerabilities of LGBTQI+ and gender-diverse refugees and migrants are exacerbated by cultural taboos and discrimination. Finally, many older migrants and refugees face particular challenges and needs, but these are often underreported or ignored.

The effects of social and economic determinants are more specific. For example, lower levels of education are associated with poorer health outcomes, while higher levels of education can improve livelihoods. A lack of health literacy can prevent refugees and migrants from seeking care or following health-related instructions, but appropriate strategies – linguistic support, sensitivity to cultural differences and consideration of the needs of these populations – have been proven to work. Income and social status also play a role in migrant health, since a lack of resources can affect when and if refugees and migrants receive health care. Their migratory status often excludes them from social insurance schemes, while their legal status or fear of deportation may increase their vulnerability to health problems.

Environmental determinants that negatively influence the health of refugees and migrants include poor air quality, which can impair respiratory health; WASH issues such as contaminated water in camps, or situations in which hygiene is compromised; poor housing and living conditions, such as poor heating or overcrowding, which can contribute to the spread of communicable diseases, or inhumane conditions and legal uncertainty during immigration detention; and food insecurity, which may provoke unhealthy coping strategies, such as missing meals.

Displacement and migration are major determinants of health for refugees and migrants. Given identical health conditions, a migrant will not only be more vulnerable to health issues than a non-migrant but will also face greater barriers to accessing health care.

References

1. Davies A, Basten A, Frattini C. Migration: a social determinant of the health of migrants. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2009 (https://migrationhealthresearch.iom.int/migration-social-determinant-health-migrants, accessed 5 April 2022).
2. Fleischman Y, Willen SS, Davidovitch N, Mor Z. Migration as a social determinant of health for irregular migrants: Israel as case study. Soc Sci Med. 2015;147:89–97. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2015.10.046.
3. Bircher J, Kuruvilla S. Defining health by addressing individual, social, and environmental determinants: new opportunities for health care and public health. J Public Health Policy. 2014;35(3):363–86. doi:10.1057/jphp.2014.19.
4. Resolution WHA74.16. Social determinants of health. In: Seventy-fourth World Health Assembly, Geneva, 24 May–1 June 2021. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021:60–3 (WHA74/2021/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA74-REC1/A74_REC1-en.pdf, accessed 2 July 2022).
5. Strategy for integrating gender analysis and actions into the work of WHO. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2009 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/69857, accessed 5 April 2022).
6. Pega F, Veale JF. The case for the World Health Organization's Commission on Social Determinants of Health to address gender identity. Am J Public Health. 2015;105(3):e58–62. doi:10.2105/AJPH.2014.302373.
7. Stark L, Seff I, Weber A, Darmstadt GL. Applying a gender lens to global health and well-being: framing a Journal of Global Health special collection. J Glob Health. 2020;10(1):010103. doi:10.7189/jogh.10.01013.
8. Redden K, Safarian J, Schoenborn C, Shortall C, Gagnon AJ. Interventions to support international migrant women's reproductive health in western-receiving countries: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Health Equity. 2021;5(1):356–72. doi:10.1089/heq.2020.0115.
9. Shorey S, Ng ED, Downe S. Cultural competence and experiences of maternity health care providers on care for migrant women: a qualitative meta-synthesis. Birth. 2021;48(4).458–69. doi:10.1111/birt.12581.
10. Gender analysis: the situation of refugees and migrants in Greece. Oxford: Oxfam; 2016 (https://www-cdn.oxfam.org/s3fs-public/file_attachments/oxfam_gender_analysis_september2016_webpage.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).
11. Scheibelhofer P. "It won't work without ugly pictures": images of othered masculinities and the legitimisation of restrictive refugee-politics in Austria. NORMA. 2017;12(2):96–111. doi:10.1080/18902138.2017.1341222.
12. Qureshi SA, Straiton M, Gele AA. Associations of socio-demographic factors with adiposity among immigrants in Norway: a secondary data analysis. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):772. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08918-9.
13. Persson G, Mahmud AJ, Hansson EE, Strandberg EL. Somali women's view of physical activity – a focus group study. BMC Womens Health. 2014;14:129. doi:10.1186/1472-6874-14-129.
14. Balcilar M. Health status survey of Syrian refugees in Turkey: non-communicable disease risk factor surveillance among Syrian refugees living in Turkey. Ankara: Disaster and Emergency Management (AFAD); 2016 (https://hsgm.saglik.gov.tr/depo/birimler/kronik-hastaliklar-engelli-db/hastaliklar/kronik_havayolu/raporlar/HEALT_STATUS_SURVEY_of_SYRIAN_REFUGEES_in_TURKEY.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).
15. Alzubaidi H, McNarmara K, Kilmartin GM, Kilmartin JF, Marriott J. The relationships between illness and treatment perceptions with adherence to diabetes self-care: a comparison between Arabic-speaking migrants and Caucasian English-speaking patients. Diabetes Res Clin Pract. 2015;110(2):208–17. doi:10.1016/j.diabres.2015.08.006.
16. El Masri A, Kolt GS, George ES. The perceptions, barriers and enablers to physical activity and minimising sedentary behaviour among Arab-Australian adults aged 35-64 years. Health Promot J Aust. 2021;32(2):312–21. doi:10.1002/hpja.345.
17. Cavazzoni F, Fiorini A, Shoman H, Diab M, Veronese G. The role of gender and living context in shaping Palestinian children's agency and well-being. Gend Place Cult. 2022;29(2):222–47. doi:10.1080/0966369X.2021.1882954.
18. Aung TNN, Shirayama Y, Moolphate S, Lorga T, Yuasa M, Aung MN. Acculturation and its effects on health risk behaviors among Myanmar migrant workers: a cross-sectional survey in Chiang Mai, northern Thailand. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(14):5108. doi:10.3390/ijerph17145108.
19. Rahman MT. Rohingya crisis in Bangladesh and health sector challenges. Anwer Khan Mod Med Coll J. 2018;9(1):3–4. doi:10.3329/akmmcj.v9i1.35814.
20. Joarder T, Sutradhar I, Hasan MI, Bulbul MMI. A record review on the health status of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Cureus. 2020;12(8):e9753. doi:10.7759/cureus.9753.
21. Im H, Swan LE, Warsame AH, Isse MM. Risk and protective factors for comorbidity of PTSD, depression, and anxiety among Somali refugees in Kenya. Int J Soc Psychiatry. 2022;68(1):134–46. doi:10.1177/0020764020978685.
22. Usta J, Masterson AR, Farver JM. Violence against displaced Syrian women in Lebanon. J Interpers Violence. 2019;34(18):3767–79. doi:10.1177/0886260516670881.

23. Nisrane BL, Ossewaarde R, Need A. The exploitation narratives and coping strategies of Ethiopian women return migrants from the Arabian Gulf. Gend Place Cult. 2020;27(4):568–86. doi:10.1080/0966369X.2019.1611545.

24. Oliveira C, Keygnaert I, Martins MRO, Dias S. Assessing reported cases of sexual and gender-based violence, causes and preventive strategies, in European asylum reception facilities. Glob Health. 2018;14(1):48. doi:10.1186/s12992-018-0365-6.

25. Allen R, Beise J, Blume S, Lindt N, Moussa N, Pandolfelli L et al. Uncertain pathways: how gender shapes the experiences of children on the move. New York: United Nations Children’s Fund; 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/resources/uncertain-pathways-how-gender-shapes-the-experiences-of-children-on-the-move/, accessed 5 April 2022).

26. Kim Y, Son I, Wie D, Muntaner C, Kim H, Kim S-S. Don't ask for fair treatment? A gender analysis of ethnic discrimination, response to discrimination, and self-rated health among marriage migrants in South Korea. Int J Equity Health. 2016;15(1):112. doi:10.1186/s12939-016-0396-7.

27. Thao NTP. Different effects of acculturative stress and family life stress on depressive symptoms among married Vietnamese immigrant women in South Korea. Asian Soc Work Policy Rev. 2016;10(2):225–36. doi:10.1111/aswp.12092.

28. Lee H, Seo S, Kang R, Kim Y, Hyun H-K. Increasing access to oral healthcare for marriage-immigrant women in South Korea: programme design to policy recommendation. Int Dent J. 2019;69(5):354–60. doi:10.1111/idj.12479.

29. Adhikari P, Keen S, van Teijlingen E. Workplace accidents among Nepali male workers in the Middle East and Malaysia: a qualitative study. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(5):1115–22. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0801-y.

30. Bailey R. Health care management in Australia's and New Zealand's seasonal worker schemes. Canberra: Department of Pacific Affairs (ANU); 2020 (DPA Working Paper no. 2020/2; https://apo.org.au/node/302960, accessed 5 April 2022).

31. Öztaş D, Kurt B, Koç A, Akbaba M. Living conditions, access to healthcare services, and occupational health and safety conditions of migrant seasonal agricultural workers in the Çukurova region. J Agromedicine. 2018;23(3):262–9. doi:10.1080/1059924X.2018.1470048.

32. Labao HC, Faller EM, Bacayo MFD. "Aches and pains" of Filipino migrant workers in Malaysia: a profile of work-related musculoskeletal disorders. Ann Glob Health. 2018;84(3):474–80. doi:10.29024/aogh.2331.

33. Ghaddar A, Khandaqji S, Ghattas J. Justifying abuse of women migrant domestic workers in Lebanon: the opinion of recruitment agencies. Gac Sanit. 2020;34(5):493–9. doi:10.1016/j.gaceta.2018.11.001.

34. Mendoza NB, Mordeno IG, Latkin CA, Hall BJ. Evidence of the paradoxical effect of social network support: a study among Filipino domestic workers in China. Psychiatry Res. 2017;255:263–71. doi:10.1016/j.psychres.2017.05.037.

35. Arsenijević J, Burtscher D, Ponthieu A, Severy N, Contenta A, Moissaing S et al. "I feel like I am less than other people": health-related vulnerabilities of male migrants travelling alone on their journey to Europe. Soc Sci Med. 2018;209:86–94. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2018.05.038.

36. Mundy SS, Foss SLW, Poulsen S, Hjorthøj C, Carlsson J. Sex differences in trauma exposure and symptomatology in trauma-affected refugees. Psychiatry Res. 2020;293:113445. doi:10.1016/j.psychres.2020.113445.

37. Nelson N, Portnoy PS, Kuppa JO, Rocroi I, Tatel E, Diaz A et al. Patterns of torture among forcibly displaced Eritreans in California: a cross-sectional study. Torture. 2021;31(1):53–63. doi:10.7146/torture.v31i1.121786.

38. Garoff F, Tinghög P, Suvisaari J, Lilja E, Castaneda AE. Iranian and Iraqi torture survivors in Finland and Sweden: findings from two population-based studies. Eur J Public Health. 2021;31(3):493–8. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckab037.

39. Clément R, Lebossé D, Barrios L, Rodat O. Asylum seekers alleging torture in their countries: evaluation of a French center. J Forensic Leg Med. 2017;46:24–9. doi:10.1016/j.jflm.2016.12.011.

40. Liebling H, Barrett H, Artz L. South Sudanese refugee survivors of sexual and gender-based violence and torture: health and justice service responses in northern Uganda. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(5):1685. doi:10.3390/ijerph17051685.

41. Reques L, Aranda-Fernandez E, Rolland C, Grippon A, Fallet N, Reboul C et al. Episodes of violence suffered by migrants transiting through Libya: a cross-sectional study in "Médecins du Monde's" reception and healthcare centre in Seine-Saint-Denis, France. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):12. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-0256-3.

42. Deps P, Collin SM, Aborghetti HP, Charlier P. Evidence of physical violence and torture in refugees and migrants seeking asylum in France. J Forensic Leg Med. 2021;77:102104. doi:10.1016/j.jflm.2020.102104.

43. Leyva-Flores R, Infante C, Gutierrez JP, Quintino-Perez F, Gómez-Saldivar M, Torres-Robles C. Migrants in transit through Mexico to the US: experiences with violence and related factors, 2009-2015. PLOS One. 2019;14(8):e0220775. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0220775.

44. Chynoweth SK, Buscher D, Martin S, Zwi AB. Characteristics and impacts of sexual violence against men and boys in conflict and displacement: a multicountry exploratory study. J Interpers Violence. 2020;38(9-10):NP73470–501. doi:10.1177/0886260520967132.

45. Chynoweth SK, Buscher D, Martin S, Zwi AB. A social ecological approach to understanding service utilization barriers among male survivors of sexual violence in three refugee settings: a qualitative exploratory study. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):43. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00288-8.

46. Belanteri RA, Hinderaker SG, Wilkinson E, Episkopou M, Timire C, De Plecker E et al. Sexual violence against migrants and asylum seekers. The experience of the MSF clinic on Lesvos Island, Greece. PLOS One. 2020;15(9):e0239187. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0239187.

47. Negi NJ, Prickett JC, Overdorff AM, Roberts J, Furman R. Return-migration to Mexico and the gendered transnational migration process. Psychol Men Masc. 2018;19(3):385–91. doi:10.1037/men0000106.

48. Affleck W, Thamotharampillai U, Jeyakumar J, Whitley R. "If one does not fulfil his duties, he must not be a man": masculinity, mental health and resilience amongst Sri Lankan Tamil refugee men in Canada. Cult Med Psychiatry. 2018;42(4):840–61. doi:10.1007/s11013-018-9592-9.

49. Kukreja R. Recouping masculinity: understanding the links between macho masculinity and self-exploitation among undocumented South Asian male migrants in Greece. Geoforum. 2021;122(3):164–73. doi:10.1016/j.geoforum.2021.04.009.

50. Improving the health and well-being of LGBTQI+ people [website]. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://www.who.int/activities/improving-the-health-and-well-being-of-lgbtqi-people, accessed 5 April 2022).

51. Broqua C, Laborde-Balen G, Menetrier A, Bangoura D. Queer necropolitics of asylum: Senegalese refugees facing HIV in Mauritania. Glob Public Health. 2021;16(5):746–62. doi:10.1080/17441692.2020.1851744.

52. Mudarikwa M, Gleckman-Krut M, Payne A-L, Camminga B, Marnell J. LGBTI+ asylum seekers in South Africa: a review of refugee status denials involving sexual orientation & gender identity. Johannesburg: Legal Resources Centre; 2021 (https://lrc.org.za/wp-content/uploads/LGBTI-ASYLUM-REPORT-RFS.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

53. Alessi EJ, Kahn S, Giwa S, Cheung S. "Those tablets, they are finding an empty stomach": a qualitative investigation of HIV risk among sexual and gender minority migrants in Cape Town, South Africa. Ethn Health. 2020;27(1):1–17. doi:10.1080/13557858.2020.1817342.

54. Levison JH, Bogart LM, Khan IF, Mejia D, Amaro H, Alegría M et al. "Where it falls apart": barriers to retention in HIV care in Latino immigrants and migrants. AIDS Patient Care STDS. 2017;31(9):394–405. doi:10.1089/apc.2017.0084.

55. Pachankis JE, Hatzenbuehler ML, Berg RC, Fernández-Dávila P, Mirandola M, Marcus U et al. Anti-LGBT and anti-immigrant structural stigma: an intersectional analysis of sexual minority men's HIV risk when migrating to or within Europe. J Acquir Immune Defic Syndr. 2017;76(4):356–66. doi:10.1097/QAI.0000000000001519.

56. Nieves-Lugo K, Barnett A, Pinho V, Reisen C, Poppen P, Zea MC. Sexual migration and HIV risk in a sample of Brazilian, Colombian and Dominican immigrant MSM living in New York City. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(1):115–22. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0716-7.

57. Golembe J, Leyendecker B, Maalej N, Gundlach A, Busch J. Experiences of minority stress and mental health burdens of newly arrived LGBTQ* refugees in Germany. Sex Res Soc Policy. 2021;18(4):1049–59. doi:10.1007/s13178-020-00508-z.

58. Kahn S, Alessi EJ, Kim H, Woolner L, Olivieri CJ. Facilitating mental health support for LGBT forced migrants: a qualitative inquiry. J Couns Dev. 2018;96(3):316–26. doi:10.1002/jcad.12205.

59. Fox SD, Griffin RH, Pachankis JE. Minority stress, social integration, and the mental health needs of LGBTQ asylum seekers in North America. Soc Sci Med. 2020;246:112727. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2019.112727.

60. Hopkinson RA, Keatley E, Glaeser E, Erickson-Schroth L, Fattal O, Nicholson Sullivan M. Persecution experiences and mental health of LGBT asylum seekers. J Homosex. 2017;64(12):1650–66. doi:10.1080/00918369.2016.1253392.

61. Kahn S, Alessi EJ. Coming out under the gun: exploring the psychological dimensions of seeking refugee status for LGBT claimants in Canada. J Refug Stud. 2018;31(1):22–41. doi:10.1093/jrs/fex019.

62. Alessi EJ, Kahn S, Greenfield B, Woolner L, Manning D. A qualitative exploration of the integration experiences of LGBTQ refugees who fled from the Middle East, North Africa, and Central and South Asia to Austria and the Netherlands. Sex Res Soc Policy. 2020;17(1):13–26. doi:10.1007/s13178-018-0364-7.

63. Kostenius C, Hertting K, Pelters P, Lindgren E-C. From hell to heaven? Lived experiences of LGBTQ migrants in relation to health and their reflections on the future. Cult Health Sex. 2021;20:1–13. doi:10.1080/13691058.2021.1983020.

64. Logie CH, Lacombe-Duncan A, Lee-Foon N, Ryan S, Ramsay H. "It's for us – newcomers, LGBTQ persons, and HIV-positive persons. You feel free to be": a qualitative study exploring social support group participation among African and Caribbean lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender newcomers and refugees in Toronto, Canada. BMC Int Health Hum Rights. 2016;16(1):18. doi:10.1186/s12914-016-0092-0.

65. Kahn S, Alessi E, Woolner L, Kim H, Olivieri C. Promoting the wellbeing of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender forced migrants in Canada: providers' perspectives. Cult Health Sex. 2017;19(10):1165–79. doi:10.1080/13691058.2017.1298843.

66. Clark K, Pachankis J, Khoshnood K, Bränström R, Seal D, Khoury D et al. Stigma, displacement stressors and psychiatric morbidity among displaced Syrian men who have sex with men (MSM) and transgender women: a cross-sectional study in Lebanon. BMJ Open. 2021;11(5):e046996. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2020-046996.

67. Tohme J, Egan JE, Friedman MR, Stall R. Psycho-social correlates of condom use and HIV testing among MSM refugees in Beirut, Lebanon. AIDS Behav. 2016;20 (suppl 3):417–25. doi:10.1007/s10461-016-1498-3.

68. Tohme J, Egan JE, Stall R, Wagner G, Mokhbat J. HIV prevalence and demographic determinants of unprotected anal sex and HIV testing among male refugees who have sex with men in Beirut, Lebanon. AIDS Behav. 2016;20(suppl 3):408–16. doi:10.1007/s10461-016-1484-9.

69. Mutchler MG, McDavitt BW, Tran TN, Khoury CE, Ballan E, Tohme J et al. This is who we are: building community for HIV prevention with young gay and bisexual men in Beirut, Lebanon. Cult Health Sex. 2018;20(6):690–703. doi:10.1080/13691058.2017.1371334.

70. Gowin M, Taylor EL, Dunnington J, Alshuwaiyer G, Cheney MK. Needs of a silent minority: Mexican transgender asylum seekers. Health Promot Pract. 2017;18(3):332–40. doi:10.1177/1524839917692750.

71. Cheney MK, Gowin MJ, Taylor EL, Frey M, Dunnington J, Alshuwaiyer G et al. Living outside the gender box in Mexico: testimony of transgender Mexican asylum seekers. Am J Public Health. 2017;107(10):1646–52. doi:10.2105/AJPH.2017.303961.

72. Rosati F, Coletta V, Pistella J, Scandurra C, Laghi F, Baiocco R. Experiences of life and intersectionality of transgender refugees living in Italy: a qualitative approach. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2021;18(23):12385. doi:10.3390/ijerph182312385.

73. Okada T. Gender performance and migration experience of Filipino transgender women entertainers in Japan. Int J Transgender Health. 2022;23(1-2):24–35. doi:10.1080/26895269.2020.1838390.

74. Okada T. Negotiations in the gendered experiences of transpinay entertainers in Japan. J Contemp East Asia. 2020 Dec 31;19(2):40–60. doi:10.17477/jcea.2020.19.2.040.

75. Farrington M. Social and feminist design in emergency contexts: the Women's Social Architecture Project, Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. Gend Dev. 2019;27(2):295–315. doi:10.1080/13552074.2019.1626593.

76. Thuita W, Conn C, Wilson K. The role of marginalised women in sanitation initiatives: Somali women in northern Kenya. Dev Pract. 2017;27(1):16–25. doi:10.1080/09614524.2017.1256951.

77. Soeiro RE, Rocha L, Surita FG, Bahamondes L, Costa ML. Period poverty: menstrual health hygiene issues among adolescent and young Venezuelan migrant women at the northwestern border of Brazil. Reprod Health. 2021;18(1):238. doi:10.1186/s12978-021-01285-7

78. World report on ageing and health. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2015 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/186463, accessed 28 April 2022).

79. Rudnicka E, Napierała P, Podfigurna A, Męczekalski B, Smolarczyk R, Grymowicz M. The World Health Organization (WHO) approach to healthy ageing. Maturitas. 2020;139:6–11. doi:10.1016/j.maturitas.2020.05.018.

80. Resolution A/RES/75/131. United Nations decade of healthy ageing (2021–2030). In Seventy-fifth session, United Nations General Assembly, New York, 21 December 2020. New York: United Nations; 2020 (https://digitallibrary.un.org/record/3896348?ln=en, accessed 28 April 2022).

81. McGivern V, Bluestone K, Lilly D. If not now, when? Keeping promises to older people affected by humanitarian crises. London: HelpAge International; 2020 (https://www.ageinternational.org.uk/globalassets/documents/reports/2020/if-not-now-when-report.pdf, accessed 11 April 2022).

82. Health of older refugees and migrants, 2018. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (https://www.euro.who.int/__data/assets/pdf_file/0003/386562/elderly-eng.pdf, accessed 28 April 2022).

83. International Organization for Migration, United Nations Children's Fund. Harrowing journeys: children and youth on the move across the Mediterranean Sea, at risk of trafficking and exploitation. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2017 (https://publications.iom.int/books/harrowing-journeys-children-and-youth-move-across-mediterranean-sea-risk-trafficking-and, accessed 21 June 2022).

84. Making the invisible visible: the identification of unaccompanied and separated girls in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia. New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2020 (https://www.unicef.org/eca/media/10676/file/This%20Analysis.pdf, accessed 21 June 2022).

85. Patel SG, Bouche V, Martinez W, Barajas K, Garcia A, Sztainer M, Hawkins K. "Se extraña todo:" family separation and reunification experiences among unaccompanied adolescent migrants from Central America. New Dir Child Adolesc Dev. 2021(176):227–44. doi:10.1002/cad.20404.

86. Doering-White J. The shifting boundaries of "best interest": sheltering unaccompanied Central American minors in transit through Mexico. Child Youth Serv Rev. 2018;92:39–47. doi:10.1016/j.childyouth.2018.01.009.

87. Uprooted in Central America and Mexico: migrant and refugee children face a vicious cycle of hardship and danger. New York: United Nations Children's Fund 2018 (https://www.unicef.org/lac/en/reports/uprooted-central-america-and-mexico, accessed 21 June 2022).

88. Age assessment for children in migration: a human rights-based approach. Brussels: Council of Europe; 2019 (https://rm.coe.int/ageassessmentchildrenmigration/168099529f, accessed 21 June 2022).

89. Age assessment and fingerprinting of children in asylum procedures: minimum age requirements concerning children's rights in the EU. Vienna: European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights; 2018. (https://fra.europa.eu/sites/default/files/fra_uploads/fra-2018-minimum-age-asylum-procedures_en.pdf, accessed 21 June 2022).

90. EASO practical guide on age assessment, second edition. Valletta: European Asylum Support Office; 2018 (https://euaa.europa.eu/sites/default/files/easo-practical-guide-on-age-assesment-v3-2018.pdf, accessed 21 June 2022).

91. Jakobsen M, DeMott MA, Wentzel-Larsen T, Heir T. The impact of the asylum process on mental health: a longitudinal study of unaccompanied refugee minors in Norway. BMJ Open. 2017;7(6):e015157. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2016-015157.

92. Coulter K, Sabo S, Martínez D, Chisholm K, Gonzalez K, Bass Zavala S et al. A study and analysis of the treatment of Mexican unaccompanied minors by customs and border protection. J Migr Hum Secur. 2020;8(2):96–110. doi:10.1177/2331502420915898.

93. Ehntholt KA, Trickey D, Harris Hendriks J, Chambers H, Scott M, Yule W. Mental health of unaccompanied asylum-seeking adolescents previously held in British detention centres. Clin Child Psychol Psychiatry.. 2018;23(2):238–57. doi:10.1177/1359104518758839.

94. Field handbook on unaccompanied and separated children. Alliance for Child Protection in Humanitarian Action; 2016 (https://www.alliancecpha.org/fr/node/2043, accessed 21 June 2022).

95. Zijlstra AE, Menninga MC, Van Os EC, Kalverboer ME. They ask for protection: an exploratory study into experiences with violence among unaccompanied refugee children in Dutch reception facilities. Child Abuse Neglect. 2020;103:104442. doi:10.1016/j.chiabu.2020.104442.

96. Arega NT. Posttraumatic stress among Eritrean unaccompanied refugee minors in Ethiopia. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2020;17(1):1–15. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-02-2020-0016.

97. Badri A, Eltayeb S, Mohamed M, Verdeli H. Mental health and resilience status of Eritrean unaccompanied refugee minors in Sudan. Child Youth Serv Rev. 2020;116:105088. doi:10.1016/j.childyouth.2020.105088.

98. Emedo M, Habeeb S, Joyce M, Anderson S, Lorek A. P4 Adverse experiences of unaccompanied asylum seeking children and the impact on their emotional wellbeing and mental health needs. Arch Dis Child. 2018;103(suppl 1):A2. doi:10.1136/archdischild-2018-rcpch.4.

99. Solberg Ø, Nissen A, Vaez M, Cauley P, Eriksson AK, Saboonchi F. Children at risk: a nation-wide, cross-sectional study examining post-traumatic stress symptoms in refugee minors from Syria, Iraq and Afghanistan resettled in Sweden between 2014 and 2018. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):67. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00311-y.

100. Bjerneld M, Ismail N, Puthoopparambil SJ. Experiences and reflections of Somali unaccompanied girls on their first years in Sweden: a follow-up study after two decades. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2018;14(3):305–17. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-03-2018-0018.

101. Bjerneld M, Puthoopparambil SJ. Companions to unaccompanied asylum-seeking children in Sweden–experiences of Swedish families. International Journal of Migration, Health and Social Care. 2022;18(2):179–91. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-09-2021-0088.

102. Zijlstra AE, Menninga MC, Van Os EC, Rip JA, Knorth EJ, Kalverboer ME. "There is no mother to take care of you". Views of unaccompanied children on healthcare, their mental health and rearing environment. Resid Treat Child Youth. 2019;36(2):118–36. doi:10.1080/0886571X.2018.1559118.

103. Been SK, van de Vijver DAMC, Nieuwkerk PT, Is B, Stutterheim SE, Bos AER et al. Risk factors for non-adherence to cART in immigrants with HIV living in the Netherlands: results from the ROtterdam ADherence (ROAD) project. PLOS One. 2016;11(10):e0162800. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0162800.

104. Chowdhury M, Serieux J. Education and the sustainability of immigrant health: Canadian evidence. Can Public Policy. 2018;44(3):226–40. doi:10.3138/cpp.2017-072.

105. Baltazar CS, DeLima YV, Ricardo H, Botão C, Langa DC, da Costa P et al. HIV prevalence and TB in migrant miners communities of origin in Gaza Province, Mozambique: the need for increasing awareness and knowledge. PLOS One. 2020;15(4):e0231303. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0231303.

106. Lebenbaum M, Stukel TA, Saunders NR, Lu H, Urquia M, Kurdyak P et al. Association of source country gender inequality with experiencing assault and poor mental health among young female immigrants to Ontario, Canada. BMC Public Health. 2021;21(1):739. doi:10.1186/s12889-021-10720-0.

107. Ludwig A, Miani C, Breckenkamp J, Sauzet O, Borde T, Doyle I-M et al. Are social status and migration background associated with utilization of non-medical antenatal care? Analyses from two German studies. Matern Child Health J. 2020;24(7):943–52. doi:10.1007/s10995-020-02937-z.

108. Amini-Rarani M, Mansouri A, Nosratabadi M. Decomposing educational inequality in maternal mortality in Iran. Women Health. 2021;61(3):244–53. doi:10.1080/03630242.2020.1856294.

109. Suphanchaimat R, Sinam P, Phaiyarom M, Pudpong N, Julchoo S, Kunpeuk W et al. A cross sectional study of unmet need for health services amongst urban refugees and asylum seekers in Thailand in comparison with Thai population, 2019. Int J Equity Health. 2020;19(1):205. doi:10.1186/s12939-020-01316-y.

110. Aschale Y, Mengist A, Bitew A, Kassie B, Talie A. Prevalence of malaria and associated risk factors among asymptomatic migrant laborers in West Armachiho District, Northwest Ethiopia. Res Rep Trop Med. 2018;9:95–101. doi:10.2147/RRTM.S165260.

111. Cheung SY, Phillimore J. Gender and refugee integration: a quantitative analysis of integration and social policy outcomes. J Soc Policy. 2017;46(2):211–30. doi:10.1017/S0047279416000775.

112. Downer B, Garcia MA, Saenz J, Markides KS, Wong R. The role of education in the relationship between age of migration to the United States and risk of cognitive impairment among older Mexican Americans. Res Aging. 2018;40(5):411–31. doi:10.1177/0164027517701447.

113. Addo J, Agyemang C, de-Graft Aikins A, Beune E, Schulze MB, Danquah I et al. Association between socioeconomic position and the prevalence of type 2 diabetes in Ghanaians in different geographic locations: the RODAM study. J Epidemiol Community Health. 2017;71(7):633–9. doi:10.1136/jech-2016-208322.

114. Bhandari D, Ozaki A, Kobashi Y, Higuchi A, Shakya P, Tanimoto T. Cancer information seeking and scanning behavior among Nepalese migrants in Japan and its association with preventive behavior. PLOS ONE. 2020;15(6):e0235275. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0235275.

115. Lepore SJ, Nair RG, Davis SN, Wolf RL, Basch CE, Thomas N et al. Patient and physician factors associated with undisclosed prostate cancer screening in a sample of predominantly immigrant black men. J Immigr Minor Health. 2017;19(6):1343–50. doi:10.1007/s10903-016-0468-1.

116. Alawa J, Hamade O, Alayleh A, Fayad L, Khoshnood K. Cancer awareness and barriers to medical treatment among Syrian refugees and Lebanese citizens in Lebanon. J Cancer Educ. 2020;35(4):709–17. doi:10.1007/s13187-019-01516-3.

117. Patel H, Sherman SM, Tincello D, Moss EL. Awareness of and attitudes towards cervical cancer prevention among migrant Eastern European women in England. J Med Screen. 2020;27(1):40–7. doi:10.1177/0969141319869957.

118. Berens E-M, Mohwinkel L-M, van Eckert S, Reder M, Kolip P, Spallek J. Uptake of gynecological cancer screening and performance of breast self-examination among 50-year-old migrant and non-migrant women in Germany: results of a cross-sectional study (InEMa). J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(3):674–7. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0785-7.

119. Lam M, Kwok C, Lee M-J. Prevalence and sociodemographic correlates of routine breast cancer screening practices among migrant-Australian women. Aust N Z J Public Health. 2018;42(1):98–103. doi:10.1111/1753-6405.12752.

120. Lee HY, Lee MH, Jang YJ, Lee DK. Breast cancer screening disparity among Korean American immigrant women in Midwest. Asian Pac J Cancer Prev. 2017;18(10):2663–7. doi:10.22034/APJCP.2017.18.10.2663.

121. Riza E, Karakosta A, Tsiampalis T, Lazarou D, Karachaliou A, Ntelis S et al. Knowledge, attitudes and perceptions about cervical cancer risk, prevention and human papilloma virus (HPV) in vulnerable women in Greece. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(18):6892. doi:10.3390/ijerph17186892.

122. Poncet L, Panjo H, Ringa V, Andro A. Do vulnerable groups access prevention services? Cervical cancer screening and HIV testing among homeless migrant women in the Paris metropolitan area. PLOS One. 2021;16(8):e0255900. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0255900.

123. Andersen E, Kjellså I, Hjellset VT, Henjum S. Insufficient physical activity level among Sahrawi adults living in a protracted refugee setting. BMC Public Health. 2021;21(1):166. doi:10.1186/s12889-021-10217-w.

124. van Nieuwenhuizen B, Zafarmand MH, Beune E, Meeks K, de-Graft Aikins A, Addo J et al. Ideal cardiovascular health among Ghanaian populations in three European countries and rural and urban Ghana: the RODAM study. Intern Emerg Med. 2018;13(6):845–56. doi:10.1007/s11739-018-1846-6.

125. Afrifa-Anane E, de-Graft Aikins A, Meeks KAC, Beune E, Addo J, Smeeth L et al. Physical inactivity among Ghanaians in Ghana and Ghanaian migrants in Europe. Med Sci Sports Exerc. 2020;52(10):2152–61. doi:10.1249/MSS.0000000000002357.

126. Dryden-Peterson S, Dahya N, Adelman E. Pathways to educational success among refugees: connecting locally and globally situated resources. Am Educ Res J. 2017;54(6):1011–47. doi:10.3102/0002831217714321.

127. Kaji A, Parker DM, Chu CS, Thayatkawin W, Suelaor J, Charatrueangrongkun R et al. Immunization coverage in migrant school children along the Thailand-Myanmar border. J Immigr Minor Health. 2016;18(5):1038–45. doi:10.1007/s10903-015-0294-x.

128. Jamaluddine Z, Choufani J, Masterson AR, Hoteit R, Sahyoun NR, Ghattas H. A community-based school nutrition intervention improves diet diversity and school attendance in Palestinian refugee schoolchildren in Lebanon. Curr Dev Nutr. 2020;4(11):nzaa164. doi:10.1093/cdn/nzaa164.

129. Heltne UM, Dybdahl R, Elkhalifa S, Breidlid A. Psychosocial support and emergency education: an explorative study of perceptions among adult stakeholders in Sudan and South Sudan. Sustainability. 2020;12(4):1410. doi:10.3390/su12041410.

130. Shaeffer S. Preschool and primary education: Thailand's progress in achieving education for all. In: Fry GW, editor. Education in Thailand: education in the Asia-Pacific region: issues, concerns and prospects; vol. 42. Singapore: Springer Singapore; 2018 (http://link.springer.com/10.1007/978-981-10-7857-6_5, accessed 5 April 2022).

131. Ruzibiza Y. "They are a shame to the community … "stigma, school attendance, solitude and resilience among pregnant teenagers and teenage mothers in Mahama refugee camp, Rwanda. Glob Public Health. 2021;16(5):763–74. doi:10.1080/17441692.2020.1751230.

132. Garbern SC, Helal S, Michael S, Turgeon NJ, Bartels S. "It will be a weapon in my hand": the protective potential of education for adolescent Syrian refugee girls in Lebanon. Refuge Can J Refug. 2020;36(1):3–13. doi:10.25071/1920-7336.40609.

133. Cabieses B, Chepo M, Oyarte M, Markkula N, Bustos P, Pedrero V et al. Brechas de desigualdad en salud en niños migrantes versus locales en Chile [Health inequality gap in immigrant versus local children in Chile]. Rev Chil Pediatr. 2017;88(6):707–16 (in Spanish). doi:10.4067/S0370-41062017000600707.

134. Herzig van Wees S, Fried S, Larsson EC. Arabic speaking migrant parents' perceptions of sex education in Sweden: a qualitative study. Sex Reprod Healthc. 2021;28:100596. doi:10.1016/j.srhc.2021.100596.

135. Hattar-Pollara M. Barriers to education of Syrian refugee girls in Jordan: gender-based threats and challenges. J Nurs Scholarsh. 2019;51(3):241–51. doi:10.1111/jnu.12480.

136. Knox SE. How they see it: young women's views on early marriage in a post-conflict setting. Reprod Health Matters. 2017;25(suppl 1):96–106. doi:10.1080/09688080.2017.1383738.

137. Prodip MA. Health and educational status of Rohingya refugee children in Bangladesh. J Popul Soc Stud. 2017;25(2):135–46. doi:10.25133/JPSSv25n2.005.

138. Ro A, Goldberg RE. Post-migration employment changes and health: a dyadic spousal analysis. Soc Sci Med. 2017;191:202–11. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2017.09.002.

139. Liu X, Bowe SJ, Milner A, Li L, Too LS, LaMontagne AD. Job insecurity: a comparative analysis between migrant and native workers in Australia. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(21):4159. doi:10.3390/ijerph16214159.

140. Biletta A, Weber T, Vanderleyden J, Brandsma N. How your birthplace affects your workplace [website]. Dublin: European Foundation for the Improvement of Living and Working Conditions; 2019 (https://www.eurofound.europa.eu/publications/policy-brief/2019/how-your-birthplace-affects-your-workplace, accessed 5 April 2022).

141. Human mobility, shared opportunities: a review of the 2009 human development report and the way ahead. New York: United Nations Development Programme; 2020 (https://www.aidsdatahub.org/sites/default/files/resource/undp-iom-human-mobility-shared-opportunities-2021.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

142. Hvidtfeldt C, Schultz-Nielsen ML, Tekin E, Fosgerau M. An estimate of the effect of waiting time in the Danish asylum system on post-resettlement employment among refugees: separating the pure delay effect from the effects of the conditions under which refugees are waiting. PLOS One. 2018;13(11):e0206737. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0206737.

143. Luthra RR. Temporary immigrants in a high-skilled labour market: a study of H-1Bs. J Ethn Migr Stud. 2009;35(2):227–50. doi:10.1080/13691830802586237.

144. Germany opens labour market for skilled workers from non-EU countries. Berlin: German Federal Foreign Office; 2021 (https://www.auswaertiges-amt.de/en/-/2248702, accessed 5 April 2022).

145. Clemens M, Huang C, Graham J. The economic and fiscal effects of granting refugees formal labor market access. Washington (DC): Center for Global Development; 2018 (Working Paper no. 496; https://www.cgdev.org/sites/default/files/economic-and-fiscal-effects-granting-refugees-formal-labor-market-access.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

146. Declaration of Astana. Geneva: World Health Organization; New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/328123, accessed 6 April 2022).

147. Promoting health in the SDGs: report on the 9th Global Conference for health Promotion: All for Health, Health for All, 21–24 November 2016, Shanghai, China. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2017 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/259183, accessed 5 April 2022).

148. Gil-Salmeron A, Smith L, Yang L, Rieder A, Grabovac I. Differences in health status, health behaviour and healthcare utilisation between immigrant and native homeless people in Spain: an exploratory study. Health Soc Care Community. 2021;29(3):856–66. doi:10.1111/hsc.13313.

149. Schaeffer D, Berens EM, Vogt D. Health literacy in the German population. Dtsch Arztebl Int. 2017;114(4):53–60. doi:10.3238/arztebl.2017.0053.

150. Raynault M-F, Féthière C, Côté D. Social inequalities in breast cancer screening: evaluating written communications with immigrant Haitian women in Montreal. Int J Equity Health. 2020;19(1):209. doi:10.1186/s12939-020-01322-0.

151. Allen EM, Lee HY, Pratt R, Vang H, Desai JR, Dube A et al. Facilitators and barriers of cervical cancer screening and human papilloma virus vaccination among Somali refugee women in the United States: a qualitative analysis. J Transcult Nurs. 2019;30(1):55–63. doi:10.1177/1043659618796909.

152. Metusela C, Ussher J, Perz J, Hawkey A, Morrow M, Narchal R et al. "In my culture, we don't know anything about that": sexual and reproductive health of migrant and refugee women. Int J Behav Med. 2017;24(6):836–45. doi:10.1007/s12529-017-9662-3.

153. Ilami A, Winter S. Iranian migrants' lived experiences of access to sexual and reproductive healthcare services in Western Australia: a conventional content analysis. Sex Res Soc Policy. 2021;18(3):533–46. doi:10.1007/s13178-020-00478-2.

154. Dolan H, Li M, Bateson D, Thompson R, Tam CWM, Bonner C et al. Healthcare providers' perceptions of the challenges and opportunities to engage Chinese migrant women in contraceptive counselling: a qualitative interview study. Sex Health. 2020;17(5):405–13. doi:10.1071/SH19215.

155. Åkerman E, Larsson EC, Essén B, Westerling R. A missed opportunity? Lack of knowledge about sexual and reproductive health services among immigrant women in Sweden. Sex Reprod Healthc. 2019;19:64–70. doi:10.1016/j.srhc.2018.12.005.

156. Gausman J, Othman A, Daas I, Hamad I, Dabobe M, Langer A. How Jordanian and Syrian youth conceptualise their sexual and reproductive health needs: a visual exploration using concept mapping. Cult Health Sex. 2021;23(2):176–91. doi: 10.1080/13691058.2019.1698769.

157. El Ayoubi LL, Abdulrahim S, Sieverding M. Sexual and reproductive health information and experiences among Syrian refugee adolescent girls in Lebanon. Qual Health Res. 2021;31(5):983–98. doi:10.1177/1049732321989685.

158. Mekonnen GK, Mengistie B, Sahilu G, Mulat W, Kloos H. Caregivers' knowledge and attitudes about childhood diarrhea among refugee and host communities in Gambella Region, Ethiopia. J Health Popul Nutr. 2018;37(1):24. doi:10.1186/s41043-018-0156-y.

159. Rahman MR, Faiz MA, Nu MY, Hassan MR, Chakrabarty AK, Kabir I et al. A rapid assessment of health literacy and health status of Rohingya refugees living in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh following the August 2017 exodus from Myanmar: a cross-sectional study. Trop Med Infect Dis. 2020;5(3):110. doi:10.3390/tropicalmed5030110.

160. Ng E, Omariba W. Health literacy and immigrants in Canada: determinants and effects on health outcomes. Canadian Council on Learning; 2010 (http://en.copian.ca/library/research/ccl/health_lit_immigrants_canada/health_lit_immigrants_canada.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

161. Berens EM, Pelikan JM, Schaeffer D. The effect of self-efficacy on health literacy in the German population. Health Promot Int. 2022;37(1):daab085. doi:10.1093/heapro/daab085.

162. Qiu J, Song D, Nie J, Su M, Hao C, Gu J et al. Utilization of healthcare services among Chinese migrants in Kenya: a qualitative study. BMC Health Serv Res. 2019;19(1):995. doi:10.1186/s12913-019-4846-y.

163. Gikonyo BM, Kiruthu F. Determinants of provision of public health care services to asylum seekers in Nairobi City County, Kenya. Int Acad J Arts Humanit. 2021;1(2):210–38 (https://ir-library.ku.ac.ke/handle/123456789/22369, accessed 5 April 2022).

164. Jaeger FN, Pellaud N, Laville B, Klauser P. The migration-related language barrier and professional interpreter use in primary health care in Switzerland. BMC Health Serv Res. 2019;19(1):429. doi:10.1186/s12913-019-4164-4.

165. Soneta M, Kondo A, Abuliezi R, Kimura A. International students' experience with health care in Japan. SAGE Open. 2021;11(2). doi:10.1177/21582440211009211.

166. Nathenson RA, Saloner B, Richards MR, Rhodes KV. Spanish-speaking immigrants' access to safety net providers and translation services across traditional and emerging US destinations. Milbank Q. 2016;94(4):768–99. doi:10.1111/1468-0009.12231.

167. Leaving no-one behind: access to social protection for all migrant women. New York: UN Women; 2020 (https://www.aidsdatahub.org/sites/default/files/resource/unwomen-policy-brief-migration-and-social-protection-2020.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

168. Yelland J, Riggs E, Szwarc J, Casey S, Duell-Piening P, Chesters D et al. Compromised communication: a qualitative study exploring Afghan families and health professionals' experience of interpreting support in Australian maternity care. BMJ Qual Saf. 2016;25(4):e1. doi:10.1136/bmjqs-2014-003837.

169. MacFarlane A, Huschke S, Pottie K, Hauck FR, Griswold K, Harris MF. Barriers to the use of trained interpreters in consultations with refugees in four resettlement countries: a qualitative analysis using normalisation process theory. BMC Fam Pract. 2020;21(1):259. doi:10.1186/s12875-020-01314-7.

170. Khuu BP, Lee HY, Zhou AQ, Shin J, Lee RM. Healthcare providers' perspectives on parental health literacy and child health outcomes among Southeast Asian American immigrants and refugees. Child Youth Serv Rev. 2016;67:220–9. doi:10.1016/j.childyouth.2016.06.006.

171. Health of refugees and migrants: regional situation analysis, practices, experiences, lessons learned and ways forward. Manila: WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific; 2018 (https://www.who.int/docs/default-source/documents/publications/health-of-refugees-and-migrants-wpro-2018.pdf?sfvrsn=ab7602b1_1, accessed 5 April 2022).

172. Hughson J, Marshall F, Daly JO, Woodward-Kron R, Hajek J, Story D. Health professionals' views on health literacy issues for culturally and linguistically diverse women in maternity care: barriers, enablers and the need for an integrated approach. Aust Health Rev. 2018;42(1):10. doi:10.1071/AH17067.

173. Villegas N, Cianelli R, de Tantillo L, Warheit M, Montano NP, Ferrer L et al. Assessment of technology use and technology preferences for HIV prevention among Hispanic women. Hisp Health Care Int. 2018;16(4):197–203. doi:10.1177/1540415318808828.

174. Wiley G, Piper A, Butow AMP, Schofield P, Douglas F, Roy J et al. Developing written information for cancer survivors from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds: lessons learnt. Asia Pac J Oncol Nurs. 2018;5(1):121–6. doi:10.4103/apjon.apjon_63_17.

175. Patel H, Szkinc-Olsson G, Al Liddawi ML. A qualitative study of nurses' experiences of self-care counseling in migrant patients with heart failure. Int J Nurs Sci. 2021;8(3):279–88. doi:10.1016/j.ijnss.2021.05.004.

176. Ghahari S, Burnett S, Alexander L. Development and pilot testing of a health education program to improve immigrants' access to Canadian health services. BMC Health Serv Res. 2020;20(1):321. doi:10.1186/s12913-020-05180-y.

177. DeCamp LR, Godage SK, Valenzuela Araujo D, Dominguez Cortez J, Wu L, Psoter KJ et al. A texting intervention in Latino families to reduce ED use: a randomized trial. Pediatrics. 2020;145(1):e20191405. doi:10.1542/peds.2019-1405.

178. Mas FS, Schmitt CL, Jacobsen HE, Myers OB. A cardiovascular health intervention for Spanish speakers: the health literacy and ESL curriculum. J Community Health. 2018;43(4):717–24. doi:10.1007/s10900-018-0475-3.

179. Kosiyaporn H, Julchoo S, Phaiyarom M, Sinam P, Kunpeuk W, Pudpong N et al. Strengthening the migrant-friendliness of Thai health services through interpretation and cultural mediation: a system analysis. Glob Health Res Policy. 2020;5(1):53. doi:10.1186/s41256-020-00181-0.

180. Pocock NS, Chan Z, Loganathan T, Suphanchaimat R, Kosiyaporn H, Allotey P et al. Moving towards culturally competent health systems for migrants? Applying systems thinking in a qualitative study in Malaysia and Thailand. PLOS One. 2020;15(4):e0231154. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0231154.

181. Verrept H. What are the roles of intercultural mediators in health care and what is the evidence on their contributions and effectiveness in improving accessibility and quality of care for refugees and migrants in the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2019 (Health Evidence Network synthesis report no. 64; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/327321, accessed 11 April 2022).

182. McGarry O, Hannigan A, De Almeida MM, Severoni S, Puthoopparambil SJ, MacFarlane A. What strategies to address communication barriers for refugees and migrants in health care settings have been implemented and evaluated across the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (Health Evidence Network synthesis report no. 62; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326238, accessed 11 April 2022).

183. Tuteja A, Sanci L, Mascarenhas L, Riggs E, Dwyer LO, Villet DV et al. Understanding sexual health language: community engagement with refugees from Burma, post settlement in Australia. Sex Transm Infect. 2017;93(suppl 2):A5–6. doi:10.1136/sextrans-2017-053264.13.

184. Jonassen M, Shaheen A, Duraidi M, Qalalwa K, Jeune B, Brønnum-Hansen H. Socio-economic status and chronic disease in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip: in and outside refugee camps. Int J Public Health. 2018;63(7):875–82. doi:10.1007/s00038-018-1122-6.

185. Beiser M, Hou F. Language acquisition, unemployment and depressive disorder among Southeast Asian refugees: a 10-year study. Soc Sci Med. 2001;53(10):1321–34. doi:10.1016/s0277-9536(00)00412-3.

186. Ncube A, Bahta Y, Jordaan A. Coping and adaptation mechanisms employed by sub-Saharan African migrant women in South Africa. Jamba. 2019;11(1):645. doi:10.4102/jamba.v11i1.645.

187. Knipe DW, Gunnell D, Pieris R, Priyadarshana C, Weerasinghe M, Pearson M et al. Socioeconomic position and suicidal behaviour in rural Sri Lanka: a prospective cohort study of 168,000+ people. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2019;54(7):843–55. doi:10.1007/s00127-019-01672-3.

188. Asia-Pacific migration report 2020: assessing implementation of the global compact for migration. Bangkok: United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; 2020 (https://www.aidsdatahub.org/sites/default/files/resource/escap-asia-pacific-migration-repport-2020.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

189. World migration report 2020. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/wmr_2020.pdf, accessed 5 April 2022).

190. Castro A. Pobreza y migraciones [Poverty and migration]. Rev Derecho Estado. 2010;24:65–80 (in Spanish; https://revistas.uexternado.edu.co/index.php/derest/article/view/420, accessed 5 April 2022).

191. Jamil R, Kumar R. Culture, structure, and health: narratives of low-income Bangladeshi migrant workers from the United Arab Emirates. Health Commun. 2021;36(11):1297–308. doi:10.1080/10410236.2020.1750773.

192. Gul A, Naz A, Nadeemullah M. Migration and women left behind: challenges and constraints. Clin Soc Work Health Interv. 2018;9(4):30–5. doi:10.22359/cswhi_9_4_05.

193. Ariadi S, Saud M, Ashfaq A. Analyzing the effect of remittance transfer on socioeconomic well-being of left-behind parents: a study of Pakistan and Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK). J Int Migr Integr. 2019;20(3):809–21. doi:10.1007/s12134-018-0632-7.

194. Mushtaq R, Khalily MT, Gul S. Determinants of depression anxiety stress among left behind families in Azad Jammu & Kashmir. Pak Armed Forces Med J. 2017;67(3):472–7 (https://www.pafmj.org/index.php/PAFMJ/article/view/574, accessed 6 April 2022).

195. McCabe BE, Mitchell EM, Gonzalez-Guarda RM, Peragallo N, Mitrani VB. Transnational motherhood: health of Hispanic mothers in the United States who are separated from children. J Transcult Nurs. 2017;28(3):243–50. doi:10.1177/1043659616644960.

196. Urzúa A, Heredia O, Caqueo-Urízar A. Salud mental y estrés por aculturación en inmigrantes sudamericanos en el norte de Chile [Mental health and stress caused by acculturation in immigrants from South America in northern Chili]. Rev Med Chil. 2016;144(5):563–70 (in Spanish). doi:10.4067/S0034-98872016000500002.

197. Atake EH. The impacts of migration on maternal and child health services utilisation in sub-Saharan Africa: evidence from Togo. Public Health. 2018;162:16–24. doi:10.1016/j.puhe.2018.05.010.

198. Afulani PA, Torres JM, Sudhinaraset M, Asunka J. Transnational ties and the health of sub-Saharan African migrants: the moderating role of gender and family separation. Soc Sci Med. 2016;168:63–71. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2016.09.009.

199. Pannetier J, Lert F, Jauffret Roustide M, du Loû AD. Mental health of sub-Saharan African migrants: the gendered role of migration paths and transnational ties. SSM – Popul Health. 2017;3:549–57. doi:10.1016/j.ssmph.2017.06.003.

200. Mingot ES. The gendered burden of transnational care-receiving: Sudanese families across the Netherlands, the UK and Sudan. Gend Place Cult. 2020;27(4):546–67. doi:10.1080/0966369X.2019.1611546.

201. Nguyen CV. Does parental migration really benefit left-behind children? Comparative evidence from Ethiopia, India, Peru and Vietnam. Soc Sci Med. 2016;153:230–9. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2016.02.021.

202. Nwadiuko J, German J, Chapla K, Wang F, Venkataramani M, Vaidya D et al. Changes in health care use among undocumented patients, 2014–2018. JAMA Netw Open. 2021;4(3):e210763. doi:10.1001/jamanetworkopen.2021.0763.

203. Müllerschön J, Koschollek C, Santos-Hövener C, Kuehne A, Müller-Nordhorn J, Bremer V. Impact of health insurance status among migrants from sub-Saharan Africa on access to health care and HIV testing in Germany: a participatory cross-sectional survey. BMC Int Health Hum Rights. 2019;19(1):10. doi:10.1186/s12914-019-0189-3.

204. Nkulu Kalengayi FK, Hurtig A-K, Ahlm C, Krantz I. Fear of deportation may limit legal immigrants' access to HIV/AIDS-related care: a survey of Swedish language school students in northern Sweden. J Immigr Minor Health. 2012;14(1):39–47. doi:10.1007/s10903-011-9509-y.

205. Yu M, Kelley AT, Morgan AU, Duong A, Mahajan A, Gipson JD. Challenges for adult undocumented immigrants in accessing primary care: a qualitative study of health care workers in Los Angeles County. Health Equity. 2020;4(1):366–74. doi:10.1089/heq.2020.0036.

206. Rajaraman N, Yip T-W, Kuan BYH, Lim JFY. Exclusion of migrant workers from national UHC systems—perspectives from HealthServe, a non-profit organisation in Singapore. Asian Bioeth Rev. 2020;12(3):363–74. doi:10.1007/s41649-020-00138-y.

207. Allerton C. Statelessness and the lives of the children of migrants in Sabah, East Malaysia. Tilburg Law Rev. 2014;19 (1–2):26–34. doi:10.1163/22112596-01902004.

208. Lasimbang HB, Tong WT, Low WY. Migrant workers in Sabah, East Malaysia: the importance of legislation and policy to uphold equity on sexual and reproductive health and rights. Best Pract Res Clin Obstet Gynaecol. 2016;32:113–23. doi:10.1016/j.bpobgyn.2015.08.015.

209. Stubbe Østergaard L, Norredam M, Mock-Munoz de Luna C, Blair M, Goldfeld S, Hjern A. Restricted health care entitlements for child migrants in Europe and Australia. Eur J Public Health. 2017;27(5):869–73. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckx083.

210. Boonchutima S, Sukonthasab S, Sthapitanonda P. Myanmar migrants' access to information on HIV/AIDS in Thailand. J Sport Sci Health. 2020;21(1):111–24 (https://he02.tci-thaijo.org/index.php/spsc_journal/article/download/241521/164472/, accessed 5 April 2022).

211. Regmi PR, van Teijlingen E, Mahato P, Aryal N, Jadhav N, Simkhada P et al. The health of Nepali migrants in India: a qualitative study of lifestyles and risks. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(19):3655. doi:10.3390/ijerph16193655.

212. Wang JS-H, Kaushal N. Health and mental health effects of local immigration enforcement. Int Migr Rev. 2019;53(4):970–1001. doi:10.1177/0197918318791978.

213. Kammogne CL, Marchand A. Ethnicité et statut d'immigrant : quelle association avec le travail et les symptômes dépressifs? [Ethnicity and immigration status: how are they associated with work and depressive symptoms?]. Rev Epidemiol Sante Publique. 2021;69(3):145–53 (in French). doi:10.1016/j.respe.2021.01.009.

214. Mera-Lemp MJ, Martínez-Zelaya G, Orellana A, Smith-Castro V. Acculturation orientations, acculturative stress and psychological well-being on Latin American immigrants settled in Santiago, Chile. Acta Colomb Psicol. 2020;23(1):231–44. doi:10.14718/ACP.2020.23.1.11.

215. Suhaiban A, Grasser J, Javanbakht A. Mental health of refugees and torture survivors: a critical review of prevalence, predictors, and integrated care. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(13):2309. doi:10.3390/ijerph16132309.

216. Novella AC, Monroy AMV, Wharton T. Migración de venezolanos a Florida Central, Estados Unidos: aspectos relacionados con la percepción de condiciones y necesidades de salud mental en 2019 [Migration of Venezuelans to Central Florida, United States: aspects related to the perception of mental health conditions and needs in 2019]. Gerenc Políticas Salud. 2020;19:1–18 (in Spanish). doi:10.11144/Javeriana.rgps19.mvfc.

217. Blackmore R, Boyle JA, Fazel M, Ranasinha S, Gray KM, Fitzgerald G et al. The prevalence of mental illness in refugees and asylum seekers: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS Med. 2020;17(9):e1003337. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003337.

218. Swan LET, Im H. Risk and protective factors for common mental disorders among urban Somali refugee youth. J Child Adolesc Trauma. 2020;14(3):321–33. doi:10.1007/s40653-020-0325-x.

219. Sarkadi A, Ådahl K, Stenvall E, Ssegonja R, Batti H, Gavra P et al. Teaching recovery techniques: evaluation of a group intervention for unaccompanied refugee minors with symptoms of PTSD in Sweden. Eur Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2018;27(4):467–79. doi:10.1007/s00787-017-1093-9.

220. Michalopoulos LM, Ncube N, Simona SJ, Kansankala B, Sinkala E, Raidoo J. A qualitative study of migrant-related stressors, psychosocial outcomes and HIV risk behaviour among truck drivers in Zambia. Afr J AIDS Res. 2016;15(3): 219–26. doi:10.2989/16085906.2016.1179653.

221. Jirattikorn A, Tangmunkongvorakul A, Musumari PM, Ayuttacorn A, Srithanaviboonchai K, Banwell C et al. Sexual risk behaviours and HIV knowledge and beliefs of Shan migrants from Myanmar living with HIV in Chiang Mai, Thailand. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2020;16(4):543–56. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-09-2019-0080.

222. Selvey LA, Lobo RC, McCausland KL, Donovan B, Bates J, Hallett J. Challenges facing Asian sex workers in Western Australia: implications for health promotion and support services. Front Public Health. 2018;6:171. doi:10.3389/fpubh.2018.00171.

223. Zibrik L, Huang A, Wong V, Lauscher HN, Choo Q, Yoshida EM et al. Let's talk about B: barriers to hepatitis B screening and vaccination among Asian and South Asian immigrants in British Columbia. J Racial Ethn Health Disparities. 2018;5(6):1337–45. doi:10.1007/s40615-018-0483-0.

224. Katz SJ, Wallner LP, Abrahamse PH, Janz NK, Martinez KA, Shumway DA. Treatment experiences of Latinas after diagnosis of breast cancer. Cancer. 2017;123(16):3022–30. doi:10.1002/cncr.30702.

225. Finch BK, Frank R, Vega WA. Acculturation and acculturation stress: a social-epidemiological approach to Mexican migrant farmworkers' health. Int Migr Rev. 2004;38(1):236–62. doi:10.1111/j.1747-7379.2004.tb00195.x.

226. Markides KS, Rote S. The healthy immigrant effect and aging in the United States and other western countries. Gerontologist. 2019;59(2):205–14. doi:10.1093/geront/gny136.

227. Sim A, Bowes L, Gardner F. Modeling the effects of war exposure and daily stressors on maternal mental health, parenting, and child psychosocial adjustment: a cross-sectional study with Syrian refugees in Lebanon. Glob Ment Health. 2018;5:e40. doi:10.1017/gmh.2018.33.

228. Sangalang CC, Jager J, Harachi TW. Effects of maternal traumatic distress on family functioning and child mental health: an examination of Southeast Asian refugee families in the US. Soc Sci Med. 2017;184:178–86. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2017.04.032.

229. Shah SM, Al Dhaheri F, Albanna A, Al Jaberi N, Al Eissaee S, Alshehhi NA et al. Self-esteem and other risk factors for depressive symptoms among adolescents in United Arab Emirates. PLOS One. 2020;15(1):e0227483. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0227483.

230. Chiumento A, Rutayisire T, Sarabwe E, Hasan MT, Kasujja R, Nabirinde R et al. Exploring the mental health and psychosocial problems of Congolese refugees living in refugee settings in Rwanda and Uganda: a rapid qualitative study. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):77. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00323-8.

231. Sharma V, Papaefstathiou S, Tewolde S, Amobi A, Deyessa N, Relyea B et al. Khat use and intimate partner violence in a refugee population: a qualitative study in Dollo Ado, Ethiopia. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):670. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08837-9.

232. Salama E, Niemelä S, Suvisaari J, Laatikainen T, Koponen P, Castaneda AE. The prevalence of substance use among Russian, Somali and Kurdish migrants in Finland: a population-based study. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):651. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5564-9.

233. Kane JC, Greene MC. Addressing alcohol and substance use disorders among refugees: a desk review of intervention approaches. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2018 (https://www.unhcr.org/uk/protection/health/5c064a8d4/addressing-alcohol-substance-use-disorders-among-refugees-desk-review-intervention.html, accessed 5 April 2022).

234. Sordo L, Indave BI, Vallejo F, Belza MJ, Sanz-Barbero B, Rosales-Statkus M et al. Effect of country-of-origin contextual factors and length of stay on immigrants' substance use in Spain. Eur J Public Health. 2015;25(6):930–6. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckv144.

235. Widmann M, Apondi B, Musau A, Warsame AH, Isse M, Mutiso V et al. Comorbid psychopathology and everyday functioning in a brief intervention study to reduce khat use among Somalis living in Kenya: description of baseline multimorbidity, its effects of intervention and its moderation effects on substance use. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2017;52(11):1425–34. doi:10.1007/s00127-017-1368-y.

236. Addo J, Cook S, Galbete C, Agyemang C, Klipstein-Grobusch K, Nicolaou M et al. Differences in alcohol consumption and drinking patterns in Ghanaians in Europe and Africa: the RODAM study. PLOS One. 2018;13(11):e0206286. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0206286.

237. Riosmena F, Wong R, Palloni A. Migration selection, protection, and acculturation in health: a binational perspective on older adults. Demography. 2013;50(3):1039–64. doi:10.1007/s13524-012-0178-9.

238. Luo T, Escalante CL. Stringent immigration enforcement and the mental health and health-risk behaviors of Hispanic adolescent students in Arizona. Health Econ. 2021;30(1):86–103. doi:10.1002/hec.4178.

239. Alegría M, Falgas-Bague I, Collazos F, Carmona Camacho R, Lapatin Markle S, Wang Y et al. Evaluation of the integrated intervention for dual problems and early action among Latino immigrants with co-occurring mental health and substance misuse symptoms: a randomized clinical trial. JAMA Netw Open. 2019;2(1):e186927. doi:10.1001/jamanetworkopen.2018.6927.

240. Keim-Malpass J, Spears Johnson CR, Quandt SA, Arcury TA. Perceptions of housing conditions among migrant farmworkers and their families: implications for health, safety and social policy. Rural Remote Health. 2015;15:3076. doi:10.22605/RRH3076.

241. Ma G, Hofmann E. Immigration and environment in the US: a spatial study of air quality. Soc Sci J. 2018;56(1):94–106. doi:10.1016/j.soscij.2018.08.007.

242. Luksamijarulkul P, Suknongbung S, Vatanasomboon P, Sujirarut D. Health status, environmental living conditions and microbial indoor air quality among migrant worker households in Thailand. Southeast Asian J Trop Med Public Health. 2017;48(2):396–406. PMID:29642302.

243. Chan EYY, Chiu CP, Chan GKW. Medical and health risks associated with communicable diseases of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh 2017. Int J Infect Dis. 2018;68:39–43. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2018.01.001.

244. Torres-Duque C, Maldonado D, Pérez-Padilla R, Ezzati M, Viegi G. Biomass fuels and respiratory diseases: a review of the evidence. Proc Am Thorac Soc. 2008;5(5):577–90. doi:10.1513/pats.200707-100RP.

245. Albadra D, Kuchai N, Acevedo De Los Ríos A, Rondinel-Oviedo D, Coley D, da Silva CF et al. Measurement and analysis of air quality in temporary shelters on three continents. Build Environ. 2020;185:107259. doi:10.1016/j.buildenv.2020.107259.

246. Shammi M, Robi MR, Tareq SM. COVID-19: socio-environmental challenges of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. J Environ Health Sci Eng. 2020;18(2):1709–11. doi:10.1007/s40201-020-00489-6.

247. Rivoal M, Haselip JA. The true cost of using traditional fuels in a humanitarian setting. Case study of the Nyarugusu refugee camp, Kigoma region, Tanzania. Nairobi: United Nations Environment Programme; Copenhagen: Denmark Technical University; 2017 (UNEP DTU Partnership Working Paper no. 3; https://unepdtu.org/publications/the-true-cost-of-using-traditional-fuels-in-a-humanitarian-setting-case-study-of-the-nyarugusu-refugee-camp-kigoma-region-tanzania/, accessed 5 April 2022).

248. Wolff F, Kothe H, Mubiru A, Gashirabake J, Uwimana I, Dalhoff K. Positive impact of improved cookstove usage on respiratory health in Congolese refugees: a prospective cohort study. Environ Sci Pollut Res. 2020;27(4):4509–12. doi:10.1007/s11356-019-06816-1.

249. Lehne J, Blyth W, Lahn G, Bazilian M, Grafham O. Energy services for refugees and displaced people. Energy Strategy Rev. 2016;13–14:134–46. doi:10.1016/j.esr.2016.08.008.

250. Benka-Coker ML, Tadele W, Milano A, Getaneh D, Stokes H. A case study of the ethanol CleanCook stove intervention and potential scale-up in Ethiopia. Energy Sustain Dev. 2018;46:53–64. doi:10.1016/j.esd.2018.06.009.

251. Ma'arof MIN, Chala GT, Nair SR. Performance analysis of turbine ventilators for refugee camps usage. Int J Mech Eng Tech. 2019;10(3):1373–83 (https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=3453033, accessed 5 April 2022).

252. Haque MS. Sustainable use of plastic brick from waste PET plastic bottle as building block in Rohingya refugee camp: a review. Environ Sci Pollut Res. 2019;26(36):36163–83. doi:10.1007/s11356-019-06843-y.

253. Mekonnen GK, Mengistie B, Sahilu G, Mulat W, Kloos H. Determinants of microbiological quality of drinking water in refugee camps and host communities in Gambella Region, Ethiopia. J Water Sanit Hyg Dev. 2019;9(4):671–82. doi:10.2166/washdev.2019.148.

254. Khoury S, Graczyk T, Burnham G, Jurdi M, Goldman L. Drinking water system treatment and contamination in Shatila Refugee Camp in Beirut, Lebanon. East Mediterr Health J. 2016;22(8):568–78. doi:10.26719/2016.22.8.568.

255. Mugumya T, Isunju JB, Ssekamatte T, Wafula ST, Mugambe RK. Factors associated with adherence to safe water chain practices among refugees in Pagirinya refugee settlement, northern Uganda. J Water Health. 2020;18(3):398–408. doi:10.2166/wh.2020.230.

256. Ali SI, Arnold M, Liesner F, Fesselet J-F. Characterisation of disinfection by-products levels at an emergency surface water treatment plant in a refugee settlement in northern Uganda. Water. 2019;11(4):647. doi:10.3390/w11040647.

257. Hsan K, Naher S, Griffiths MD, Shamol HH, Rahman MA. Factors associated with the practice of water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH) among the Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. J Water Sanit Hyg Dev. 2019;9(4):794–800. doi:10.2166/washdev.2019.038.

258. Ali SI, Ali SS, Fesselet JF. Evidence-based chlorination targets for household water safety in humanitarian settings: recommendations from a multi-site study in refugee camps in South Sudan, Jordan, and Rwanda. Water Res. 2021;189:116642. doi:10.1016/j.watres.2020.116642.

259. Al-Hourani MAK, Azzam AB, Jaber R. Manifestations of lifeworld crisis among Syrian male youth in Jordanian refugee camps. Int J Child Youth Fam Stud. 2019;10(4):3–23. doi:10.18357/ijcyfs104.1201919284.

260. Patrick M, Tsige Y, Adow A, Abdirashid M, Yunis H, Githiri D et al. Acceptability of urine diversion dry toilets in Dollo Ado refugee camp, Ethiopia. Int J Hyg Environ Health. 2021;234:113745. doi:10.1016/j.ijheh.2021.113745.

261. Nyoka R, Foote AD, Woods E, Lokey H, O'Reilly CE, Magumba F et al. Sanitation practices and perceptions in Kakuma refugee camp, Kenya: comparing the status quo with a novel service-based approach. PLOS One. 2017;12(7):e0180864. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0180864.

262. Akhter M, Uddin SMN, Rafa N, Hridi SM, Staddon C, Powell W. Drinking water security challenges in Rohingya refugee camps of Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. Sustainability. 2020;12(18):7325. doi:10.3390/su12187325.

263. Rahman MR. Rohingya crisis – health issues. Delta Med Coll J. 2018;6(1):1–3. doi:10.3329/dmcj.v6i1.35960.

264. Namara F, Mendoza H, Tumukunde G, Wafula ST. Access to functional handwashing facilities and associated factors among South Sudanese refugees in Rhino Camp Settlement, northwestern Uganda. J Environ Public Health. 2020;2020:3089063. doi:10.1155/2020/3089063.

265. Kisera N, Luxemburger C, Tornieporth N, Otieno G, Inda J. A descriptive cross-sectional study of cholera at Kakuma and Kalobeyei refugee camps, Kenya in 2018. Pan Afr Med J. 2020;37:197. doi:10.11604/pamj.2020.37.197.24798.

266. Claus P-E, Ceuppens A-S, Cool M, Alliet G. Ascaris lumbricoides: challenges in diagnosis, treatment and prevention strategies in a European refugee camp. Acta Clin Belg. 2018;73(6):431–4. doi:10.1080/17843286.2018.1436956.

267. Nahimana M-R, Ngoc CT, Olu O, Nyamusore J, Isiaka A, Ndahindwa V et al. Knowledge, attitude and practice of hygiene and sanitation in a Burundian refugee camp: implications for control of a Salmonella typhi outbreak. Pan Afr Med J. 2017;28:54. doi:10.11604/pamj.2017.28.54.12265.

268. Arétouyap Z, Osang Liku E, Bernard Nka L, Bagnem JE, Zambo EA. Water and hygiene quality in the Borgop-Cameroon Refugee Camp and its potential adverse impacts on environment and public health. J Environ Sci Public Health. 2017;1(3):139–50. doi:10.26502/jesph.96120014.

269. Scobie HM, Phares CR, Wannemuehler KA, Nyangoma E, Taylor EM, Fulton A et al. Use of oral cholera vaccine and knowledge, attitudes, and practices regarding safe water, sanitation and hygiene in a long-standing refugee camp, Thailand, 2012–2014. Vinetz JM, editor. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2016;10(12):e0005210. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0005210.

270. Castillo F, Mora AM, Kayser GL, Vanos J, Hyland C, Yang AR et al. Environmental health threats to Latino migrant farmworkers. Annu Rev Public Health. 2021;42(1):257–76. doi:10.1146/annurev-publhealth-012420-105014.

271. Walton AL, LePrevost C, Wong B, Linnan L, Sanchez-Birkhead A, Mooney K. Pesticides: perceived threat and protective behaviors among Latino farmworkers. J Agromedicine. 2017;22(2):140–7. doi:10.1080/1059924X.2017.1283278.

272. Walton AL, LePrevost C, Wong B, Linnan L, Sanchez-Birkhead A, Mooney K. Observed and self-reported pesticide protective behaviors of Latino migrant and seasonal farmworkers. Environ Res. 2016;147:275–83. doi:10.1016/j.envres.2016.02.020.

273. Woh PY, Thong KL, Behnke JM, Lewis JW, Mohd Zain SN. Evaluation of basic knowledge on food safety and food handling practices amongst migrant food handlers in Peninsular Malaysia. Food Control. 2016;70:64–73. doi:10.1016/j.foodcont.2016.05.033.

274. Suen LKP, Rana T. Knowledge level and hand hygiene practice of Nepalese immigrants and their host country population: a comparative study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(11):4019. doi:10.3390/ijerph17114019.

275. Carta MG, Moro D, Oumar FW, Moro MF, Pintus M, Pintus E et al. A follow-up on psychiatric symptoms and post-traumatic stress disorders in Tuareg refugees in Burkina Faso. Front Psychiatry. 2018;9:127. doi:10.3389/fpsyt.2018.00127.

276. Allen J, Balfour R, Bell R, Marmot M. Social determinants of mental health. Int Rev Psychiatry. 2014;26(4):392–407. doi:10.3109/09540261.2014.928270.

277. Arega NT. The plights of Eritrean refugees in the Shimelba Refugee Camp, Ethiopia. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2017;13(1):93–105. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-02-2016-0007.

278. Habib RR, Ziadee M, Younes EA, Asmar KE, Jawad M. The association between living conditions and health among Syrian refugee children in informal tented settlements in Lebanon. J Public Health. 2020;42(3):e323–33. doi:10.1093/pubmed/fdz108.

279. Habib RR, Mikati D, Hojeij S, Asmar KE, Chaaya M, Zurayk R. Associations between poor living conditions and multi-morbidity among Syrian migrant agricultural workers in Lebanon. Eur J Public Health. 2016;26(6):1039–44. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckw096.

280. Wu X, Lu X, Schneider E, Ahmed JA, Njenga MK, Breiman RF et al. Reassessment of high prevalence human adenovirus detections among residents of two refugee centers in Kenya under surveillance for acute respiratory infections. J Med Virol. 2019;91(3):385–91. doi:10.1002/jmv.25320.

281. Saikal SL, Ge L, Mir A, Pace J, Abdulla H, Leong KF et al. Skin disease profile of Syrian refugees in Jordan: a field-mission assessment. J Eur Acad Dermatol Venereol. 2020;34(2):419–25. doi:10.1111/jdv.15909.

282. Impact of the COVID-19 crisis in the Maldives. Malé: Ministry of Economic Development, Government of Maldives; 2020 (https://maldives.un.org/sites/default/files/2021-03/1598369482.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

283. Sadarangani SP, Lim PL, Vasoo S. Infectious diseases and migrant worker health in Singapore: a receiving country's perspective. J Travel Med. 2017;24(4). doi:10.1093/jtm/tax014.

284. ApartTogether survey: preliminary overview of refugees and migrants self-reported impact of COVID-19. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/337931, accessed 6 April 2022).

285. Louni M, Amanzougaghene N, Mana N, Fenollar F, Raoult D, Bitam I et al. Detection of bacterial pathogens in clade E head lice collected from Niger's refugees in Algeria. Parasit Vectors. 2018;11(1):348. doi:10.1186/s13071-018-2930-5.

286. Öztürk MK. Skin diseases in rural Nyala, Sudan (in a rural hospital, in 12 orphanages, and in two refugee camps). Int J Dermatol. 2019;58(11):1341–9. doi:10.1111/ijd.14619.

287. Fernández-Villalobos NV, Arbeláez-Montoya MP. Factores relacionados con los casos de tuberculosis en Costa Rica, 2012–2015 [Factors related to tuberculosis cases in Costa Rica, 2012–2015]. Rev Cuba Salud Pública. 2020;46(3) (in Spanish; http://www.revsaludpublica.sld.cu/index.php/spu/article/view/1455, accessed 6 April 2022).

288. Kearney GD, Chatterjee AB, Talton J, Chen H, Quandt SA, Summers P et al. The association of respiratory symptoms and indoor housing conditions among migrant farmworkers in eastern North Carolina. J Agromedicine. 2014;19(4):395–405. doi:10.1080/1059924X.2014.947458.

289. Hernández-Vásquez A, Vargas-Fernández R, Rojas-Roque C, Bendezu-Quispe G. Factores asociados a la no utilización de servicios de salud en inmigrantes venezolanos en Perú [Factors associated with the non-utilization of healthcare services among Venezuelan migrants in Peru]. Rev Peru Med Exp Salud Publica. 2019;36(4):583–91 (in Spanish). doi:10.17843/rpmesp.2019.360.4654.

290. Quandt SA, Brooke C, Fagan K, Howe A, Thornburg TK, McCurdy SA. Farmworker housing in the United States and its impact on health. New Solut. 2015;25(3):263–86. doi:10.1177/1048291115601053.

291. Hanley J, Ives N, Lenet J, Hordyk S-R, Walsh C, Ben Soltane S et al. Migrant women's health and housing insecurity: an intersectional analysis. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2019;15(1):90–106. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-05-2018-0027.

292. Chepo M, Astorga-Pinto S, Cabieses B. Atenção inicial a populações migrantes no Chile: iniciativa em atenção primária à saúde após um ano da sua implementação [Initial care for migrants in Chile: status of a primary health care initiative after one year of implementation]. Rev Panam Salud Publica. 2019;43:e71 (in Spanish). doi:10.26633/RPSP.2019.71.

293. Segal SP, Khoury VC, Salah R, Ghannam J. Contributors to screening positive for mental illness in Lebanon's Shatila Palestinian refugee camp. J Nerv Ment Dis. 2018;206(1):46–51. doi:10.1097/NMD.0000000000000751.

294. Corrado A. Is Italian agriculture a "pull factor" for irregular migration – and, if so, why? New York: Open Society Foundations; 2018 (https://www.opensocietyfoundations.org/publications/italian-agriculture-pull-factor-irregular-migration-and-if-so-why, accessed 6 April 2022).

295. Fuori campo 2018: insediamenti informali: marginalità sociale, ostacoli all'accesso alle cure e ai beni essenziali per migranti e rifugiati [Out-of-field 2018: informal settlements: social marginalisation, barriers to access to care and essential goods for migrants and refugees]. Rome: Médecins Sans Frontières; 2018 (in Italian; https://www.medicisenzafrontiere.it/wp-content/uploads/2019/04/Fuoricampo2018.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

296. Ravnbøl CI. Doubling syndemics: ethnographic accounts of the health situation of homeless Romanian Roma in Copenhagen. Health Hum Rights. 2017;19(2):73–88. PMID:29302164.

297. Ahmed N, Kumait AS, Othman S, Al-Tawil N. Assessment of certain aspects and health issues that encountered by street children and adolescents in Kirkuk city. Indian J Forensic Med Toxicol. 2019;13(3):298–304. doi:10.5958/0973-9130.2019.00213.5.

298. General comment No. 5 (2021) on migrants' rights to liberty, freedom from arbitrary detention and their connection with other human rights, the UN Committee on Migrant Workers, Geneva: United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights; 2021 (https://www.ohchr.org/en/documents/general-comments-and-recommendations/general-comment-no-5-2021-migrants-rights-liberty, accessed 6 April 2022).

299. Glossary on migration. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2019 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/iml_34_glossary.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

300. Beyond detention: a global strategy to support governments to end the detention of asylum-seekers and refugees. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2014 (https://www.unhcr.org/protection/detention/53aa929f6/beyond-detention-global-strategy-support-governments-end-detention-asylum.html, accessed 6 April 2022).

301. Flynn M. Who must be detained? Proportionality as a tool for critiquing immigration detention policy. Refug Surv Q. 2012;3(3):40–68. doi:10.1093/rsq/hds008.

302. Fact sheet no. 26, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention. Geneva: United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights; 2000 (https://www.refworld.org/docid/479477440.html, accessed 6 April 2022).

303. Immigration detention centres [website]. Geneva: Global Detention Project; 2022 (https://www.globaldetentionproject.org/detention-centres/list-view, accessed 6 April 2022).

304. COVID-19 & immigration detention: what can governments and other stakeholders do? Geneva: United Nations Network on Migration; 2020 (https://www.refworld.org/docid/5eac26514.html, accessed 6 April 2022).

305. Majcher I, Flynn M, Grange M. Immigration detention in the European Union: in the shadow of the "crisis", first edition. New York: Springer; 2020 (European Studies of Population no. 22; https://www.globaldetentionproject.org/immigration-detention-in-the-european-union-in-the-shadow-of-the-crisis, ccessed 6 April 2022).

306. Ghezelbash D. Refuge lost: asylum law in an interdependent world. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press; 2018.

307. FitzGerald DS. Refuge beyond reach: how rich democracies repel asylum seekers. Oxford, New York: Oxford University Press; 2019.

308. Flynn M. There and back again: on the diffusion of immigration detention. J Migr Hum Secur. 2018;2(3):165–97. doi:10.1177/233150241400200302.

309. The uncounted: detention of migrants and asylum seekers in Europe. Geneva: Global Detention Project; 2015 (https://www.globaldetentionproject.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/12/The-Uncounted.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

310. Brooker S, Albert S, Young P, Steel Z. Mental health care in an invalidating environment: the case of immigration detention in Australia. In: Flynn MJ, Flynn MB, editors. Challenging immigration detention. Cheltenham: Edward Elgar Publishing; 2017.

311. Takei C, Small M, Wu C, Chan J. Fatal neglect: how ICE ignores deaths in detention. New York: American Civil Liberties Union. 2016; (https://www.aclu.org/sites/default/files/field_document/fatal_neglect_acludwnnijc.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

312. Failures and cover-ups: suicide in UK detention centres [website]. London: Bail for Immigration Detainees; 2019 (https://www.biduk.org/articles/532-failures-and-cover-ups-suicide-in-uk-detention-centres, accessed 6 April 2022).

313. Blunt M. Systemic indifference: dangerous & substandard medical care in US immigration detention. New York: Human Rights Watch; 2017 (https://www.hrw.org/sites/default/files/report_pdf/usimmigration0517_web_0.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

314. Kellezi B, Wakefield J, Bowe M. The impact of poor healthcare provision in UK immigration removal centres [website]. London: The Conversation; 2021 (http://theconversation.com/the-impact-of-poor-healthcare-provision-in-uk-immigration-removal-centres-161525, accessed 6 April 2022).

315. van Hout MC, Lungu-Byrne C, Germain J. Migrant health situation when detained in European immigration detention centres: a synthesis of extant qualitative literature. Int J Prison Health. 2020;16(3):221–36. doi:10.1108/IJPH-12-2019-0074.

316. Kuehne A, van Boetzelaer E, Alfani P, Fotso A, Elhammali H, Khamala T et al. Health of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers in detention in Tripoli, Libya, 2018–2019: retrospective analysis of routine medical programme data. PLOS One. 2021;16(6):e0252460. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0252460.

317. Nowak M, Krishan M. The UN global study on children deprived of liberty: the role of academia in "making the invisible and forgotten visible". In: Kury H, Redo S, editors. Crime prevention and justice in 2030. New York: Springer; 2021.

318. Joint general comment No. 4 (2017) of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and No. 23 (2017) of the Committee on the Rights of the Child on state obligations regarding the human rights of children in the context of international migration in countries of origin, transit, destination and return. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights; 2017 (https://digitallibrary.un.org/record/1323015?ln=en, accessed 6 April 2022).

319. Ehntholt KA, Trickey D, Harris Hendriks J, Chambers H, Scott M, Yule W. Mental health of unaccompanied asylum-seeking adolescents previously held in British detention centres. Clin Child Psychol Psychiatry. 2018;23(2):238–57. doi:10.1177/1359104518758839.

320. Durcan G, Stubbs J, Boardman J. Immigration removal centres in England: a mental health needs analysis. London: Centre for Mental Health; 2017 (https://www.basw.co.uk/system/files/resources/basw_71119-7_0.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

321. Mental health in detention: written evidence submitted by Medical Justice to the Shaw Review. London: Medical Justice; 2015 (http://www.medicaljustice.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2016/04/alHealthinDetention-SummarybyMedicalJusticeforShawReview.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

322. Puthoopparambil SJ, Ahlberg BM, Bjerneld M. "A prison with extra flavours": experiences of immigrants in Swedish immigration detention centres. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2015;11:73–85. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-10-2014-0042.

323. Venters HD, McNeely J, Keller AS. HIV screening and care for immigration detainees. Health Hum Rights. 2009;11(2):89–100. PMID:20845844.

324. Van Hout MC. Human rights violations, detention conditions and the invisible nature of women in European immigration detention: a legal realist account. Int J Prison Health. 2021;5. doi:10.1108/IJPH-03-2021-0023.

325. Essex R. Human rights, dual loyalties, and clinical independence: challenges facing mental health professionals working in Australia's immigration detention network. J Bioeth Inq. 2014;11:75–83. doi:10.1007/s11673-013-9493-0.

326. Puthoopparambil SJ, Bjerneld M. Detainees, staff, and health care services in immigration detention centres: a descriptive comparison of detention systems in Sweden and in the Benelux countries. Glob Health Action. 2016;9(1):30358. doi:10.3402/gha.v9.30358.

327. Addressing the health challenges in immigration and detention, and alternatives to detention: a country implementation guide. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2022 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/353569, accessed 9 May 2022).

328. Araissia H. Syrian women refugees in Tunisia: difficulties accessing economic and social rights. Collect Rev Cienc Soc. 2019;6(2):91–103. doi:10.15648/Coll.2.2019.6.

329. Chandler H, Boothby N, McNatt Z, Berrigan M, Zebib L, Freels PE et al. Causes of family separation and barriers to reunification: Syrian refugees in Jordan. J Refug Stud. 2020;33(2):371–89. doi:10.1093/jrs/feaa033.

330. Alsoudi A. The socio-economic impact of Syrian refugees on labor in Jordan: a case study on local communities in Mafraq governorate. J Islam Thought Civiliz. 2020;10(1):1–23. doi:10.32350/jitc.101.01.

331. Kusakabe K, Khuenta K, Hemsakul T, Veena N. Building a home away from home: housing choices of labor migrants in Thailand. Migr Dev. 2019;8(2):176–91. doi:10.1080/21632324.2018.1498255.

332. Good practices for migrant and refugee housing in Europe. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2020 (https://www.unhcr.org/bg/wp-content/uploads/sites/18/2020/10/Good-practices-housing-FINAL-EN.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

333. Koh D. Migrant workers and COVID-19. Occup Environ Med. 2020 Sep;77(9):634–6. doi:10.1136/oemed-2020-106626.

334. Sianipar KD. Resettlement of former East Timorese refugees in East Nusa Tenggara. In: Friedberg E, Hilderbrand ME, editors. Observing policy-making in Indonesia. Singapore: Springer; 2017 (https://link.springer.com/chapter/10.1007/978-981-10-2242-5_5, accessed 6 April 2022).

335. Jamaluddine Z, Sahyoun NR, Choufani J, Sassine AJ, Ghattas H. Child-reported food insecurity is negatively associated with household food security, socioeconomic status, diet diversity, and school performance among children attending UN relief and works agency for Palestine refugees schools in Lebanon. J Nutr. 2019;149(12):2228–35. doi:10.1093/jn/nxz189.

336. Napier C, Oldewage-Theron W, Makhaye B. Predictors of food insecurity and coping strategies of women asylum seekers and refugees in Durban, South Africa. Agric Food Secur. 2018;7:67. doi:10.1186/s40066-018-0220-2.

337. VASyR 2020: Vulnerability assessment of Syrian refugees in Lebanon. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; New York: United Nations Children's Fund; Rome: World Food Programme; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/VASyR%202020.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

338. Laithy HE, Armanious D. Vulnerability assessment of refugees in Egypt: risks and coping strategies. Geneva: United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2019 (https://www.unhcr.org/eg/wp-content/uploads/sites/36/2021/01/Vulnerability-Assessment-of-Refugees-in-Egypt-Risks-and-Coping-Strategies-April-2019.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

339. Migrant emergency food security report: Libya. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2020 (https://migration.iom.int/sites/default/files/public/reports/DTMLibya_MigrantFS_May2020_0.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

340. Khakpour M, Iqbal R, GhulamHussain N, Engler-Stringer R, Koc M, Garcea J et al. Facilitators and barriers toward food security of Afghan refugees residing in Karachi, Pakistan. Ecol Food Nutr. 2019;58(4):317–34. doi:10.1080/03670244.2019.1598982.

341. Carey E, Lindow O, Al Jawamees M, Al Refaay R, Teo Ficcarelli F. Jordan: comprehensive food security and vulnerability assessment 2018. Rome: World Food Programme; 2019 (https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/70245.pdf, accessed 6 April 2022).

342. Salti N, Ghattas H. Food insufficiency and food insecurity as risk factors for physical disability among Palestinian refugees in Lebanon: evidence from an observational study. Disabil Health J. 2016;9(4):655–62. doi:10.1016/j.dhjo.2016.03.003.

343. Logie CH, Okumu M, Mwima S, Hakiza R, Chemutai D, Kyambadde P. Contextual factors associated with depression among urban refugee and displaced youth in Kampala, Uganda: findings from a cross-sectional study. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):45. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00289-7.

344. Maharaj V, Tomita A, Thela L, Mhlongo M, Burns JK. Food insecurity and risk of depression among refugees and immigrants in South Africa. J Immigr Minor Health. 2017;19(3):631–7. doi:10.1007/s10903-016-0370-x.

345. Henjum S, Caswell BL, Terragni L. "I feel like I'm eating rice 24 hours a day, 7 days a week": dietary diversity among asylum seekers living in Norway. Nutrients. 2019;11(10):2293. doi:10.3390/nu11102293.

346. Terragni L, Arnold CD, Henjum S. Food skills and their relationship with food security and dietary diversity among asylum seekers living in Norway. J Nutr Educ Behav. 2020;52(11):1026–34. doi:10.1016/j.jneb.2020.05.009.

347. Sauter A, Kikhia S, Sommoggy J, Loss J. Factors influencing the nutritional behavior of Syrian migrants in Germany – results of a qualitative study. BMC Public Health. 2021;21(1):1334. doi:10.1186/s12889-021-11268-9.

348. Steinhilber A, Dohnke B. Adolescent Turkish migrants' eating behavior in Germany: a comparison to nonmigrants in the home and host countries based on the prototype-willingness model. Cultur Divers Ethnic Minor Psychol. 2016;22(1):114–25. doi:10.1037/cdp0000042.

349. Topalovic T, Episkopou M, Schillberg E, Brcanski J, Jocic M. Migrant children in transit: health profile and social needs of unaccompanied and accompanied children visiting the MSF clinic in Belgrade, Serbia. Confl Health. 2021;15(1):32. doi:10.1186/s13031-021-00366-5.

350. Angeletti S, Ceccarelli G, Bazzardi R, Fogolari M, Vita S, Antonelli F et al. Migrants rescued on the Mediterranean Sea route: nutritional, psychological status and infectious disease control. J Infect Dev Ctries. 2020;14(5):454–62. doi:10.3855/jidc.11918.

351. Henjum S, Morseth MS, Arnold CD, Mauno D, Terragni L. "I worry if I will have food tomorrow": a study on food insecurity among asylum seekers living in Norway. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):592. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-6827-9.

352. Kim J, Lee S, Kim S. Comparisons of food security, dietary behaviors and nutrient intakes between adult North Korean refugees in South Korea and South Koreans. Nutr Res Pract. 2020;14(2):134–42. doi:10.4162/nrp.2020.14.2.134.

353. Aragón Gama AC, Infante Xibille C, Mundo Rosas V, Liu X, Orjuela-Grimm M. Relative severity of food insecurity during overland migration in transit through Mexico. J Immigr Minor Health. 2020;22(6):1118–25. doi:10.1007/s10903-020-01063-w.

354. Leidman E, Humphreys A, Cramer BG, Mil LT-V, Wilkinson C, Narayan A et al. Acute malnutrition and anemia among Rohingya children in Kutupalong Camp, Bangladesh. JAMA. 2018;319(14):1505–6. doi:10.1001/jama.2018.2405.

355. Glaser J, Pittore K, Roefs M. Evaluation of nutrition and income generation intervention (NIGI) Uganda: evaluation on the effect of NIGI on the refugee community in the Omugo refugee settlement in northern Uganda. Wageningen: Wageningen Centre for Development Innovation; 2021 (https://edepot.wur.nl/546245, accessed 6 April 2022).

356. Ghattas H, Choufani J, Jamaluddine Z, Masterson AR, Sahyoun NR. Linking women-led community kitchens to school food programmes: lessons learned from the Healthy Kitchens, Healthy Children intervention in Palestinian refugees in Lebanon. Public Health Nutr. 2020;23(5):914–23. doi:10.1017/S1368980019003161.

357. Sahyoun NR, Jamaluddine Z, Choufani J, Mesmar S, Reese-Masterson A, Ghattas H. A mixed-methods evaluation of community-based healthy kitchens as social enterprises for refugee women. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):1590. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-7950-3.

CHAPTER 3

Health status of refugees and migrants: a global perspective

A Venezuelan living in Peru is working 12–13 hours per day to pay a high price for braving the COVID-19 crisis far from his home country, with challenges finding jobs and limited access to health services. © PAHO / WHO

3.1 Introduction

This chapter explores recent evidence from the six WHO regions to provide a global overview of the health status of refugees and migrants. A comprehensive review of the available literature globally has been conducted, and the results are presented in this report. A main finding of the review was the absence of studies presenting a global or regional synthesis. Comparing individual studies to reach regional or global conclusions also proved to be challenging, mainly because of the use of different indicators and population groups, which were often not clearly defined. The Annex summarizes the methodology and the types of study, disease categories and population groups included in the literature review. With these limitations, this chapter presents global patterns and trends in the health status of refugees and migrants. Wherever possible, it also presents examples from different countries and regions to highlight the global variation for each health challenge.

In spite of some limitations, some compelling conclusions can be made. At the broadest level of overview, being a refugee or migrant clearly carries significant health risks, to the extent that displacement or migration must itself be considered a determinant of health (Box 3.1), as shown in Chapter 2.

This report aims to support and promote the health of refugees and migrants in all of the known contexts in which they may find themselves. It focuses on the

The remains of a boat carrying migrants and asylum seekers that departed Libya but capsized on a sandbar north of the Tunisian islands of Kerkennah. Authorities estimated that 250 people tragically drowned in the incident. © Lindsay Mackenzie human right to health, and highlights health-promoting public health interventions that will help to achieve this goal.

A major conclusion is that more and better-quality evidence is needed, with clearly defined study populations and outcomes and comparable data that reflect the global refugee and migrant population. Information is also needed both on the health needs of refugees and migrants and on current and potential policies and responses. More research is also required to facilitate the creation and promotion of health among refugees and migrants, as indicated in the Ottawa charter for health promotion (1).

Box 3.1.

Death and disappearance: the Missing Migrants Project

Based on a variety of sources (e.g. from coastguards and medical examiners, media reports, nongovernmental organizations, and surveys and interviews of migrants), the International Organization for Migration (IOM) Missing Migrants Project estimates (as of 6 February 2022) that more than 47 296 people died on migration journeys worldwide between 2014 and 2021 (2).

Given the difficulties of data collection, these figures are best understood as a minimum estimate of the true number of deaths during migration.

IOM reports that more than 20 000 individuals disappeared during sea crossings and their remains have not been recovered, with more deaths likely to have gone undocumented. Nearly 8000 fatalities during migration have an unknown or mixed cause of death or disappearance, indicating the scarcity of robust, disaggregated data as well as the lack of official investigation into thousands of deaths.

Fatalities during migration occur across the world when people lack access to safe and legal mobility pathways. However, certain routes are known to be especially deadly for those on the move. For the 2014–2022 period, the largest proportion (23 485 out of 47 296) of deaths and disappearances documented during migration was recorded in the Mediterranean Sea: 80% of these deaths were recorded on the Central Mediterranean Route to Italy and Malta and involved the attempted sea crossing from Algeria, Libya and Tunisia and, to a lesser degree, from Egypt. An additional 5226 deaths were recorded during migration across the Sahara Desert, although the challenges of monitoring this vast area mean that it is extremely likely that far more deaths occurred than have been recorded. At least another 3661 people died attempting to cross the southern border of the United States from Mexico, with most deaths being linked to harsh conditions in the desert regions or to the hazardous Rio Grande river crossing. At least 2664 deaths occurred (of which 1176 were recorded in 2021 alone) on the overseas migration route to the Spanish Canary Islands, a destination for migrants from southern Morocco or western African countries.

A vast amount of work is needed to properly identify those who die during migration. No information is available on the country of origin or identity of more than 21 000 individuals recorded in the Missing Migrants Project database during 2015–2020.

Despite focusing on various diseases and health conditions, this chapter clearly shows that, as a population, refugees and migrants are innately healthy, and in some cases even healthier than the host populations. Some of the evidence indicates that refugees and migrants have an overall mortality advantage (i.e. lower death rates) for the most common diseases compared with the general population. However, as in the general population, there are certain subgroups among refugees and migrants whose high risk of poor health outcomes – and even of death and disappearance during migration (Box 3.1) – is certainly exacerbated by conditions during displacement and migration.

> A significant number of migrant workers are engaged in so-called 3D jobs – dirty, dangerous and demanding – and are at greater risk of occupational accidents, injuries and work-related health problems than their non-migrant counterparts.

3.2 Occupational health

- Male migrant workers appear to be at a higher risk of occupational injuries, mainly because of their employment in high-risk industries, such as mining and construction.
- As well as workplace injury and death, occupational health problems most often include musculoskeletal, respiratory and mental health conditions, as well as other industry-specific hazards.
- Migrant workers are found to have less ability to exercise workers' rights to safe and healthy working conditions.
- Major data gaps are known to exist because of the informal nature of the sectors in which many migrant workers are more likely to work and because information on migratory status is often missing from relevant surveys.
- In data collected through various surveys where migrant workers might be included, information on migratory status is often missing.

ILO estimated that there were 169 million international migrant workers worldwide in 2019, representing around 5% of the global labour force (3). Although labour migration can be beneficial for workers by broadening their employment opportunities, migrant workers can also face hardship and increased vulnerability in their country of destination.

Migrant workers can frequently face negative health outcomes, resulting from workplace hazards, exposure, discrimination, lack of insurance (or loss of insurance when it is not portable), an absence of safety measures, or abuse in jobs in which they face higher risks to their safety and well-being (4–10). Compared with non-migrant workers, migrant workers rarely benefit from equal access to social security systems (11); low-skilled migrant workers, irregular migrants, refugees and asylum seekers face even greater barriers in accessing social protection (12).

Studies suggest that a significant number of migrant workers are engaged in so-called 3D jobs – dirty, dangerous and demanding (sometimes degrading or demeaning) – and are at greater risk of occupational accidents, injuries and work-related health problems than their non-migrant counterparts (13). Particularly if they come from low- and middle-income countries, they are often employed in low-wage or low-skilled occupations. Their jobs may be more dangerous than those of non-migrants, with higher physical demands and poorer environmental working conditions (14).

Additional concerns include the wide variation in conditions regarding social protection and legal status, such as temporary, permanent or sector-specific work, or no legal right to work (15). It is, therefore, essential to promote global frameworks such as the WHO global plan of action on workers' health (2008–2017) and to develop national policies to ensure the protection of migrant workers (16).

A recent meta-analysis of more than 17 million participants in 16 countries across five WHO regions (WHO African Region, WHO Region of the Americas, WHO European Region, WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region and WHO Western Pacific Region) investigated the use of health services by migrant workers (9). Compared with non-migrant workers, migrant workers were less likely to use health services and more likely to have had an occupational injury. Another study concluded that migrant workers faced substantial risk around work-related illness and injury, which is "critically overlooked in research and policy" (13).

The most commonly reported work-related health problems among refugee and migrant workers relate to musculoskeletal, respiratory and mental health, according to a study based in the WHO European Region (4). (Other industry-specific hazards are discussed in section 3.2.1.)

A study in Saudi Arabia comparing occupational injuries among insured Saudi Arabian labourers with those among insured migrant labourers, using data from a health insurance database, concluded that 93.5% of the injured were migrant workers and only 6.5% were from the host population; however, a notable limitation of this study is that migrant workers without health insurance, who may have experienced even higher rates of injury, were excluded (5).

Numerous other studies among migrant workers from China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, and the United States have shown more occupational fatalities among migrant workers compared with workers from host populations (6,10,17). For example, a study in China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, among migrant workers from Nepal reported cases of serious injury (including paraplegia) and workplace death, but postmortem documentation incorrectly attributed the deaths to natural causes (10).

A study conducted among Nepalese migrant workers in Malaysia, Qatar and Saudi Arabia reported poor health and safety regulations, intense productivity pressure and risky practices, such as working without safety equipment. These have led to severe injuries including lost fingers and permanent disabilities (7).

Research in the WHO European Region revealed mixed results: one study within the agriculture sector in Türkiye showed that male migrant workers have similar rates of work-related injury as the host population (18), whereas a study in Denmark reported a greater risk of occupational injuries for migrant workers compared with the host population (19).

Male migrant workers tend to have higher rates of workplace physical injury than female migrant workers, reflecting traditional domains of work in which men tend to work in sectors with higher physical risk (20). A meta-analysis across 13 countries and territories of the WHO European Region included occupational health outcomes for 12 168 migrant workers (representing 25 low- and middle-income countries) employed in mostly unskilled manual labour (13). It found the pooled prevalence of having at least one occupational morbidity to be 47%, with most related to respiratory function, general health problems, mental health and injuries requiring medical care.

Enduring difficult or insecure work conditions, including exploitative treatment and unsafe situations, is related to poor psychosocial and mental health outcomes in studies across multiple regions (8,21–23). For example, some countries follow the approach of legally binding the migrant worker's visa or work permit to the employer or sponsor, which prevents the migrant from taking other employment or even from leaving the country without the employer's permission. Reports indicate that misuse of this system is putting the migrant workers in a vulnerable situation through practices such as withholding the migrant worker's passport or through the worker facing negative consequences for reporting abuse by the employer (24).

Evidence based on Canada's Temporary Foreign Worker Program has shown the impact of precarious employment and legal status on mental health: migrants living away from their families on temporary visas as part of the Canadian programme, especially those on agricultural visas, experience a higher prevalence of stressors that can affect mental health (25,26). Domestic care workers also experience deteriorating mental health and report that long working hours and housing conditions are the major contributors (27).

In a study conducted in Sweden, migrants who were temporarily employed were at increased risk of psychological distress compared with those who had permanent jobs or were self-employed (28).

Similarly, differences in exposures to workplace hazards depending on the country of origin are apparent in Australia: workers born in New Zealand were less likely to be exposed to any psychosocial hazard – for example, discrimination (Box 3.2), job strain, vulnerability and insecurity – but were more likely to be exposed to diesel exhaust and at least one carcinogen compared with migrants born in India and the Philippines (39).

In Chile, Bolivian migrant women in domestic work reported poor working conditions and long working hours, which increased their fatigue and feelings of hopelessness and may, in turn, increase the risk of mental health conditions (40). Returning to the home country may bring financial disadvantages and additional psychosocial stressors or rejection, or pressure to travel again to seek employment abroad (8,41,42).

3.2.1 High-risk and physically demanding sectors of industry

The high risk and physically demanding economic sectors of agriculture, construction and mining are major employers of refugees and migrants globally.

Evidence from the WHO European Region and WHO Western Pacific Region has shown that refugees and migrants, including seasonal workers, are likely to lack awareness of workplace hazards and to be exposed to pesticides, chemicals and workplace abuse (43,44). Farmworkers across the WHO Region of the Americas face various forms of pain and musculoskeletal disorders, as well as exposure to agricultural chemicals that cause respiratory

Box 3.2.

Workplace discrimination and marginalization

Refugees and migrants often report experiencing discrimination, isolation and marginalization in their workplaces. Migrant workers in Italy consistently reported self-perceived workplace discrimination (29,30). In Australia, a report described how migrants of Māori or Pasifika background were more likely to experience ethnic discrimination, bullying, and fair or poor current health compared with their Caucasian counterparts from New Zealand (31). In Saudi Arabia, workplace bullying in health care settings is 25% more prevalent towards migrant workers than towards their non-migrant counterparts (32). Migrants indicated numerous reasons why they may not make a formal complaint about their workplace treatment, with fear of losing employment and risk of deportation the primary concerns (23,33–37). Irregular migrants in Canada and the United States are often not formally employed and, therefore, lack written contracts and social protection. As a result, employers may use the threat of deportation as a disciplinary technique to ensure that migrants accept detrimental working conditions (33–37). Similarly, migrant workers in the Maldives reported the constant threat of deportation and made no formal complaints because of concerns over the precarious nature of their visa status, leading to harmful impacts on their physical and mental health (36). Official complaints mechanisms are essential because migrant workers, such as women in the WHO South-East Asia Region, have been provided false contracts, had their identity documents withheld and had difficulty accessing legal aid (38).

and dermatological problems, cancer and allergies, among other issues (45–47). In Mexico, agricultural labour migrants described poor diets and increased chronic diseases (cardiovascular and metabolic) related to long-term residence in isolated farming environments with poor living and sanitary conditions, and to a heavy workload (48).

Migrants in the Republic of Korea working in the agriculture, livestock and fisheries sectors, among the most physically demanding industries, have reported being unable to claim workers' compensation unless they were severely injured (49). A study on the risk factors for occupational injuries found that Chinese migrant workers in the Republic of Korea working in these industries reported a higher fatality rate from occupational injuries compared with Korean migrant workers in China (4). Studies of migrant farmworkers in South Africa link an increased risk of HIV acquisition to factors including poorly implemented labour legislation, perceptions of anti-migrant sentiment, poor living conditions, inability to take time off to access health care, and psychosocial and behavioural determinants (50,51).

Construction is another sector that has many safety issues and often employs a refugee or migrant workforce. In an ILO study, Syrian refugee construction workers reported a lack of enforcement mechanisms or sanctions for violations of safety procedures (52). In Singapore, migrant workers in the construction, shipyard and process (manufacturing) industries reported trauma-related injuries and sometimes being discharged against medical advice (53). Another sector with a poor record on health and safety is transportation; according to studies based in South Africa and Zambia, truck drivers face sleep disorders, unsafe roads, exposure to criminal activity and violence (both during their journeys and at border crossings), and other poor psychosocial outcomes (54,55).

The risks for refugee and migrant workers in the mining sector are highlighted in literature from the WHO African Region, in particular. Trends in mining employment have shifted in South Africa during the past 50 years: for example, there is increased employment of women and acknowledgement of the need to consider the risks of HIV, TB and silicosis in areas where mineworkers are recruited from and return to (56).

HIV prevalence was found to be high among mineworkers in Mozambique who had worked in mines in South Africa, and among their families; however, the study found that HIV prevalence was lower in households with higher levels of education (57). Another study into the feasibility and acceptability of, and adherence to, daily oral short-term pre-exposure HIV prophylaxis combined with access to HIV testing as a preventive intervention for partners of mineworkers reported positive results overall (58). Additional analysis in the Region has also shown that mineworkers have a significantly higher lifetime risk of developing and potentially transmitting TB after returning to their home communities, and face systemic barriers to accessing their rightful compensation for a lung disease claim linked to occupational risk factors (59).

Challenges remain relating to continuity of care for migrant workers who live with TB and/or HIV because moving for work, and the seasonality of work, impacts their ability to access appropriate medications in a sustained manner. Additional challenges include the accurate calculation of compensation, which requires documentation and identification verification processes (60).

Although not traditionally regarded as high-risk industries, the service and care sectors –including domestic workers and health care staff, of whom the great majority are women – frequently expose individuals to long hours and considerable hardship. Female labour migrants often work in domestic services and caregiving, areas in which musculoskeletal diseases and stress-related conditions persist, with evidence reported from China, Israel and Malaysia (61–65).

Refugees and migrants in the health sector often face discrimination both from other staff and patients. A cross-sectional study on workplace bullying in a hospital in Saudi Arabia found that bullying was more prevalent among expatriate workers such as migrant nurses (66.4%) than in national comparison groups (56.5%) (32). Harassment and discrimination among nursing teams in the United Kingdom's National Health Service were explored in a number of studies (66), with research revealing that migrant nurses in the United Kingdom face prejudice and discrimination when patients (or their family members) refuse to receive care from them or request a non-minority home-care nurse (67). Migrant health workers in Oman faced job security stressors related to the government's preference for employing health workers from the host population (68).

Across most regions, migrant sex workers face a range of abuses. Resulting from marginalization at the intersection of sex and gender, legal status and working in an often-criminalized industry, these abuses have repercussions for SRH, among other health areas (69–75). A qualitative study among male migrant sex workers in London reported high exposure to discrimination, social exclusion and inequalities in accessing health care (76). Social marginalization was linked to low levels of health literacy or use of health screening in migrant sex workers near the Guatemala–Mexico border (77).

3.2.2 Data challenges

Data on the occupational health outcomes of migrant workers remain scarce.

Migrants are more likely to work for small businesses, in the informal economy or as temporary or part-time workers. As such, they are often excluded from the legal frameworks of most countries that require notification and recording of occupational accidents and diseases (78). These circumstances reduce their inclusion in standard data collection systems, such as administrative records, as well as in establishment and household surveys.

Unless a household survey seeking to acquire occupational health data has been specifically designed to cover migrants living in different types of accommodation, information on migratory status may be missing, not appropriately captured or not captured from a sufficiently large sample of migrants to support separate estimates by migratory status.

These issues limit the possibility of analysing the situation of migrant workers without introducing biases resulting from non-coverage or a lack of precision.

As an illustration, the 2021 ILO occupational safety and health statistics database presents information – mainly based on administrative records from 79 countries and for a specific indicator, namely cases of non-fatal occupational injury – disaggregated by two commonly available variables: sex and economic activity (79). The same indicator from the same sources but disaggregated by migratory status is available only for 13 countries. As a result, there is insufficient evidence to inform policy-makers or to tailor health and social protection services to meet the needs of those vulnerable workers.

Administrative sources. Most of the data about occupational injuries are acquired from administrative sources, including insurance records, labour inspectorate records or records of employers' organizations, and other registers. Administrative sources are subject to undercoverage as in most cases they only cover injuries of workers who are employed in the formal sector. They are also subject to important underreporting as a result of workers fearing job loss, not being able to afford time away from work, and having limited or no access to social protection, or of the failure of employers to provide recording mechanisms, among other reasons (80). Migrant workers in precarious employment may also be more likely to experience those barriers to reporting.

Of the few (six) countries with data from administrative sources (Fig. 3.1), the incidence of non-fatal occupational injuries (i.e. new cases of non-fatal occupational injuries during a reference period per 100 000 workers in the reference group) was higher among migrant workers in four of the six (79). In the two other countries, fewer cases of non-fatal occupational injuries were reported by migrant workers compared with their non-migrant counterparts. A possible explanation for this inconsistency is that, in some countries, migrants tend to report work-related illness or injuries less often than their non-migrant counterparts (81). Another factor affecting these contradictory findings may be that migrants are insufficiently captured in standard administrative data collection and reporting systems. That could be the case for irregular migrants or migrants in low-skilled jobs or the informal sector, who are often excluded from social protection frameworks, not registered in the national system or worried about their precarious migratory status (12,19,82).

Migrant workers may also often avoid seeking medical care for fear of being dismissed from work due to injury or absence and many do not want to give information to the authorities for fear of repercussion. This reluctance to access health services or be included in surveys also poses challenges to collecting data and points to broader structural health issues.

Household surveys. Household surveys may contain relevant/disaggregated data, allowing comparison among various types of worker, including migrant workers, and providing information on work-related illnesses or injuries. However, unless the survey has been specifically designed to ensure adequate coverage of migrants, standard household surveys may also suffer from problems of misrepresentation and underreporting (covered in more detail in Chapter 5).

This issue can be particularly important in countries where migrant workers may be concentrated in selected areas that are not sufficiently covered by household surveys or when migrant workers live in collective households and institutions, such as boarding houses, dormitories or worker camps. Additionally, relying on proxy respondents may not be adequate for collecting data on the injuries, accidents and other adverse health outcomes experienced by migrant workers. These issues limit the analysis of the situation of migrant workers: bias may be introduced because of non-coverage by or a lack of precision from household surveys (Fig. 3.2).

Sex and migratory status. In the majority of countries, cases of non-fatal occupational injuries are not disaggregated by migratory status (Fig. 3.1, Fig. 3.2). Since the number of migrant workers or employed migrants for those countries is not available, the working-age population was used to calculate the number of non-fatal occupational injuries

Fig. 3.1. Incidence of non-fatal occupational injuries by international migratory status

Source: ILO Department of Statistics (79).

Fig. 3.2. Cases of non-fatal occupational injuries in working-age men per 100 000 people of working age by sex and migratory status. In more than half of the reporting countries, migrant men are less likely to have reported non-fatal occupational injuries compared with non-migrant men.

Source: ILO Department of Statistics (79).

Household survey data show the same results as some administrative sources and, as indicated in the literature, do not systematically indicate a higher prevalence of occupational injuries among male migrants compared with their non-migrant counterparts (83). It is important to note that the number of countries with available household survey data is small, and that these findings based on a few selected developing countries may not be representative for the rest of the world. Among women, there is little difference between migrants and non-migrants in reporting non-fatal occupational injuries (Fig. 3.3) (79). A possible explanation for this could be that women in general, including refugees and migrants, may work in safer industries and occupations and may, therefore, be at a lower risk of occupational accidents (80). At global level, the latest ILO estimates show that a large majority of female migrants (80%) work in services, whereas 37% of their male counterparts work in industrial sectors, such as construction and mining, two sectors generally recognized as highly hazardous for workers (84–86).

A detailed comparison of the data for both sexes shows that, regardless of migratory status, fewer women have experienced occupational injuries or accidents compared with men in all countries for which data are available (Fig. 3.4). Additionally, some higher-risk male-dominated industries are also sectors where migrant workers reside in camps, workers' dormitories or hotels. For example, this is common in agriculture, construction, fishing, long-distance transportation and mining (84,86,87),

Fig. 3.3. Cases of non-fatal occupational injuries in working-age women

Source: ILO Department of Statistics (79).

Fig. 3.4. Cases of non-fatal occupational injuries in people of working age sectors in which many male migrants are often excluded from the scope of surveys.

Source: ILO Department of Statistics (79).

Exploring the occupational health outcomes of migrants is challenging because relatively small-scale studies report a higher prevalence of occupational injuries among migrants than non-migrants, whereas larger surveys do not always show the same results (19,80,83). This raises questions about the data quality and reliability of surveys that are not specifically tailored to gathering data about occupational health outcomes for migrant workers.

Mainstreaming occupational health and safety questions in surveys of migrants could help to improve the availability of data. The same questions could also be integrated into labour force surveys or other household or individual surveys with a strong labour component that are implemented on a more regular basis. However, the primary challenge is to ensure proper coverage of the migrant population in the sample, according to national specificities. Finally, strengthening legal and statistical frameworks at the national and international levels to improve the overall quality of administrative data could also contribute to providing more and better-quality statistical evidence about the occupational health of migrants.

3.3 Sexual and reproductive health

- Awareness and use of SRH services (including contraception and general sexual education) by some refugees and migrants are low compared with the host population.
- Refugees and migrants, especially women but also men, frequently experience sexual and gender-based violence during displacement and after arrival.
- Some refugee and migrant groups continue to practice FGM and some evidence shows acceptability of the practice decreases over time in host countries.
- Lower levels of knowledge of STIs and increased risks among some groups of refugees and migrants are often associated with limited access to information.

3.3.1 Contraception and family planning

Family planning allows people to have their desired number of children (which may be none) or control the spacing of pregnancies. It is achieved through the use of contraceptive methods and the treatment of infertility (88).

Fertility and childbearing are considered central to the identity of migrant women; their perspectives on contraceptives, often shaped by religion, culture and education, influence the type of contraceptive used or whether they are used at all. However, as shown in this section, in some settings awareness and utilization of SRH services are low among refugees and migrants compared with host populations, often due to a lack of health literacy and awareness, legal status issues and language barriers.

Sexual violence against refugee and migrant women can also be linked to both their arrival and their post-migration experience. Exposure to sexual violence among male refugees and migrants is a potentially understudied issue.

Low levels of awareness and use of contraceptives are reported for refugee and migrant groups across all WHO regions (89–94). Research from the WHO African Region (95–97), WHO South-East Asia Region (90,98,99) and the WHO Western Pacific Region (100,101) highlights the need for early, comprehensive sexual education about various topics, including contraception and family planning, for refugee and migrant groups.

The literature emphasizes that education (from peer educators) should be offered to all age groups but particularly to adolescents and their parents and, where possible, be accompanied by free SRH services. A study of refugees and migrants aged 10–16 years in Thailand explored how the impacts of displacement have shaped their perspectives on SRH and their awareness of puberty or family planning. The results highlight a need for the involvement of peers and key influential adults as the most effective way to reach these vulnerable adolescent groups (102).

In a cross-sectional study conducted among a sample of 260 refugee adolescent girls in Uganda (mostly from the Democratic Republic of the Congo), 31.2% reported ever having used an SRH service, mostly to test for HIV or to seek help for menstruation; this was a much lower proportion than for adult refugee women in the same settlement (58%) (89).

In Australia, refugees and migrants from Eritrea and Sudan acknowledged that social and cultural influences are a barrier to discussing issues around SRH and contraception; however, women across different age groups reported an openness to shifting away from the traditional attitude of avoiding discussion of various SRH topics within familial environments (103).

A survey in Ghana showed low levels of contraceptive use (12%) among female adolescent refugees, although awareness was relatively higher (65%); this indicates a gap between awareness and use (104).

A cross-sectional study in Eritrean refugee camps in Ethiopia recommended improving awareness and use through increasing access to contraceptives in refugee-hosting settings to allow refugee women to make informed choices (105). In the WHO European Region, female refugees and migrants are reported to be at a high risk of reproductive health problems and unmet contraceptive needs than women in the host population, according to studies in Germany and the Netherlands (106,107).

A lack of knowledge or information about where to receive contraception counselling (and HIV testing) among refugee and migrant women reflects a missed opportunity, as several WHO European Region countries have free access to contraception and other SRH services (94,106–109). In the Region, the use of modern contraception is increasing among the host population (110); however, based on the most recent data, unmet family planning needs continue to be an issue for migrant women (94,109).

In the United States, data show that refugee and migrant women are less likely to use the most effective contraceptive methods, including oral contraceptives, injectables, patches and vaginal rings, compared with the host population (93). In Jordan, Syrian women were less likely to use modern contraceptive methods (which are more effective than traditional methods) compared with Jordanian women (111,112).

Fig. 3.5 demonstrates the low but increasing levels of use of some contraceptive methods by Syrian refugees in Lebanon, with traditional methods (rhythm/calendar and withdrawal) being the most common as of 2020 (113–118). The proportion of households reporting condom use remained relatively stable from 2015 to 2020, while the use of traditional methods increased considerably during this period. With regards to contraceptive pills, households reported a steep decline in use between 2019 and 2020, following years of steady increase. Overall, the proportion of Syrian refugee households in Lebanon reporting the use of any type of contraception increased from 38% in 2015 to 55% in 2020.

A cross-sectional study conducted in the United Arab Emirates reported a higher prevalence of contraception use among migrants (77.3%) compared with the host population (54.3%) (119). This highlights the need to interpret study results in relation to the research context, that is, cultural context and type of migrants.

Fig. 3.5. Proportion of Syrian refugee households in Lebanon reporting the use of various types of contraceptive method, 2015–2020

Source: UNHCR (112–117).

Similarly, levels of use of modern contraceptive methods are low among refugee and migrant women in the WHO Western Pacific Region; many opt for more traditional methods because of concerns about the potential side-effects of modern methods such as hormones, limited knowledge of contraceptive options and unsupportive sexual partners (120–124).

A survey in Australia noted that Sri Lankan migrants were less likely to use long-acting reversible contraception (8.5%) and permanent contraceptive methods (2.9%) compared with the host population (14.9% and 28.7%, respectively) (122). Numerous studies across the WHO Region of the Americas (e.g. in Canada (125), Costa Rica (126) and Uruguay (127)) demonstrated the importance of culturally tailored family planning programmes, as well as the provision of contraceptive options according to the preferences and decision-making capacities of refugees or migrant groups of different ethnicities or countries of origin. In Uruguay, African–Caribbean migrants may encounter methods of contraception not widely used in their country of origin (127); in the study in Canada, some migrant women viewed the use of contraceptives as forbidden or dangerous (125).

The literature on early childbearing after marriage at a young age among some refugee and migrant groups was reviewed. In Jordan, a recent survey of women and girls aged 15–29 years found that 28% of those from the Syrian Arab Republic and 12% of those of other nationalities had begun childbearing, compared with 3% of Jordanian women and girls (112). However, this might represent a continuation of practices that existed prior to displacement (128).

Several WHO regions – WHO Region the Americas (129), WHO South-East Asia Region (130), WHO European Region (131,132) and WHO Western Pacific Region (133) – have documented how the number of unintended or unwanted pregnancies may increase during displacement or migration circumstances for various reasons, including a lack of access to services and increased sexual violence (section 3.3.3), leading to unsafe or self-induced abortions among some refugees and migrants.

A study from eastern Myanmar concluded that the need for SRH services in complex and fragile displacement settings is greater than in the more stable settings in the country because of the link between conflict or political violence and increased risks of SGBV, particularly for women and girls (134). The study showed that migrant women in these fragile contexts experience SRH challenges, especially along border regions, such as the risk of trafficking along the Myanmar–China border, limited services (particularly for trafficked women) and the risk of sexual violence in remote, peri-urban areas in Thailand. Economic push-and-pull factors are reported to influence the migration of women in the region, despite the precarious context of political transition.

3.3.2 Sexually transmitted infections

Reviews of the available data on STI screening in refugees and migrants highlight huge differences between nationalities and across regions and subregions globally (see section 3.7.1 for more detailed information on HIV/AIDS).

According to one study, Mexican migrant women in the United States are less likely to have an STI overall than non-Hispanic white and Black women, as measured at the time of giving birth (135). In studies conducted among migrants in Thailand (136) and refugees in Uganda (95), the findings indicated lack of awareness of STI risk, transmission and clinical symptoms, as well as the need to address stigma and improve access to testing for refugee and migrant groups. Compared with Nepalese women in the same geographical area, Bhutanese refugees in Nepal had overall low levels of awareness of STIs (137). In addition, the same study concluded that refugee women were less likely to know that HPV infection, a known STI, is the cause of cervical cancer.

Risk factors for poor SRH (e.g. lower levels of condom use, fewer sexual health check-ups and less access to information about safe sex) are associated with displacement or migration for various reasons related to economic and psychosocial stressors (e.g. selling or exchanging sex for assistance, loss of social support and loneliness). Such risk factors have been documented among all sexes and genders in Australia (75), Thailand (138) and Zambia (55).

Evidence from reports on migration and health in border areas across Central and South America highlights the influence of the migration process on exposure to STIs, including risk factors related to discrimination, sex work, violence and human trafficking, mainly for women (139,140). (See Chapter 2 for a discussion of these and other determinants of risk.)

3.3.3 Sexual and gender-based violence

The research evidence indicates that high levels of SGBV are experienced by refugees and migrants, particularly women and people in vulnerable situations such as migrant workers with low income (130,141–143). Studies among refugees in eastern African countries and in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region report increased IPV and forced pregnancy related to life stressors in host country settings, as well as high rates of SGBV related to escaping armed conflict (143–145). Literature from the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region describes increases in both generalized SGBV and marriage violence during times of war or conflict, with a link between early marriage and IPV (146,147). SGBV and IPV are also experienced by migrant women from Latin America in the United States, linked to cultural patterns in relation to the country of origin as well as to changing power dynamics within the relationship related to migration and acculturation (142,148).

Sexual violence against refugee and migrant women can also be linked to both their arrival and their post-migration experience. This includes abuse and sexual assault or exploitation experienced by migrant women workers or domestic workers, as cited in studies in the WHO Region of the Americas (139,149), WHO European Region (150,151) and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region (152). The migrant women often have increased vulnerabilities because of their legal status, SES or housing insecurity.

In the WHO Region of the Americas, migrant women in particular experience SGBV as well as physical violence and IPV during transit through Mexico to the United States (153–155). These findings indicate that female migrants from Central America are at a higher risk of violence compared with their male and Mexican migrant counterparts.

In a context in which the risk for migrant women of sexual violence, rape and transactional sex is high, it is widely assumed that there is major underreporting of SGBV, particularly in a social context marked by impunity (154), stigma and the normalization of violence (156).

Migrants in transit through Mexico to the United States are at risk of violence, including SGBV, and the dynamics of undocumented migration provide multiple opportunities for this. A study of Central American migrant women in transit, many of whom cited violence as their cause for migration, indicated that social support from institutions (e.g. migrant shelters), people (so-called Good Samaritans) and their families was key to supporting their journey to the United States border (157). It also found that these women possessed significant internal strengths, including religious beliefs, courage, endurance and goal setting that helped them in their successful journeys.

There is a high risk of all forms of sexual violence for men and women during forced displacement and on dangerous migration routes. The Central Mediterranean Route through Libya to Europe is known to have a high risk of physical and sexual violence committed by smugglers, local authorities and police, as well as by other people unknown to the survivors (158,159).

A United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) report of 2017 noted that 72% of detected female victims of trafficking reported sexual exploitation on the Central Mediterranean Route (159). A cross-sectional study conducted in a reception centre in France in 2017 surveyed adults older than 18 years; it found that more than half of the women (53%) and 18% of the men reported sexual violence along the route (141).

Exposure to sexual violence among male refugees and migrants is a potentially understudied issue. Sexual violence against men and boys was reported in research in the WHO South-East Asia Region, especially in refugee camp settings, and included violence inflicted on genitals, forced witnessing of sexual violence, and rape (160).

3.3.4 Female genital mutilation

In 2021 UNICEF estimated that at least 200 million girls and women had undergone FGM in more than 30 countries (161). FGM has no health benefits and can lead to various health complications, including pain during intercourse or the birth process, postpartum complications and pelvic floor symptoms that affect the daily life of women (162). Although FGM is illegal in several countries, including many in the WHO European Region (163), refugee and migrant groups whose countries of origin still widely practice FGM may continue to practice it in their host country, for example as indicated in a study conducted in Saudi Arabia (164).

In high-income host countries, refugee and migrant women may not seek various SRH services because of feelings of shame or stigma around FGM and discrimination from providers (163). Some evidence from Norway and Sweden indicates that refugee and migrant women with a longer period of residence in a host country where the practice is not legal or culturally accepted and those with greater exposure to awareness campaigns and counselling are more likely to reject the practice (165,166).

3.4 Maternal and child health

- Access to MCH services among refugees and migrants is often difficult compared with access for women of the host country, due to barriers such as clinic fees, lack of awareness, education and cultural beliefs. This includes low levels of attendance for antenatal care (ANC). Refugee and migrant women are at a higher risk of negative outcomes during pregnancy and delivery, including mortality.
- Refugee and migrant women and children have higher rates of anaemia, and there is an increased risk of both anaemia and malnutrition in some camp-based settings.
- Refugee and migrant women face various challenges with infant-feeding practices, including exposure to poor-quality substitutes for breast milk.

MCH refers to the health of women during pregnancy, childbirth and the postnatal period, and the promotion of the full potential for health and well-being for mothers and children. Improvements in MCH remain an important goal, as included in the SDGs as Targets 3.1 (by 2030, reduce the global maternal mortality ratio to less than 70 per 100 000 live births) and 3.2 (by 2030, end preventable deaths of newborns and children under 5 years of age, with all countries aiming to reduce neonatal mortality to at least as low as 12 per 1000 live births and under-5 mortality to at least as low as 25 per 1000 live births).

Refugee and migrant children are particularly vulnerable to underweight issues, undernutrition and wasting.

Although important progress has been made over the last two decades, the numbers of women and children dying remains unacceptably high. Addressing inequalities that affect health outcomes, especially sexual and reproductive health and rights and gender issues, is fundamental to ensuring all women, including refugee and migrant women, have access to respectful and high-quality maternity care.

Available evidence from this review indicates relatively poorer knowledge of, and access to, MCH services on behalf of refugee and migrant mothers and children and a higher risk of poor outcomes.

3.4.1 Access to antenatal care

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, refugee and migrant women reported attending fewer ANC appointments compared with women of the host country. For example, in a study among refugee women in Jordan from the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, almost 30% attended fewer than four ANC appointments; younger age, high pregnancy-risk status and a lower number of gynaecological consultations were reported as significant predictors associated with inadequate access to ANC (167). Similarly, a representative survey conducted in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, found that ANC coverage was lower for refugees (88.2%) compared with non-refugees (95.9%) (168). A study focusing on Syrian women in Jordan reported that 82% of Jordanian women attended at least seven ANC appointments compared with only 62% of Syrian women (112).

Data collected among Syrian refugees in Lebanon showed that the most common reasons for not accessing ANC were primarily related to payment of the clinic fee, followed by the belief that such services were not necessary (113–118). Fig. 3.6 shows these and other common barriers to accessing ANC services.

Failing or deciding not to attend ANC services has also been reported among migrant populations; research from the WHO African Region suggested that low ANC attendance in Johannesburg, South Africa, may be related to the predominantly migrant population in the city (169). A study in northern Uganda found that, although there appears to be equal access to and quality of maternal health care for refugee and host community mothers, refugee mothers felt less satisfied with how they were treated during ANC and were more likely to report discrimination by health care staff (170). In Italy, pregnant migrant women were more likely than local women to receive fewer than five gynaecological examinations (16.3% versus 8.5%), have their first examination after the 12th gestational week (12.5% versus 3.8%) and receive fewer than two obstetric ultrasounds (3.8% versus 1.0%) (171).

In the WHO European Region, migratory status and level of education were found to be associated with ANC uptake; a study in Germany determined that being a first-generation migrant and having a lower level of education

Fig. 3.6. Most common reasons (%) for not accessing ANC services reported by Syrian refugees in Lebanon, 2015–2020 were associated with a lower uptake of ANC services (172). Whether ANC is accessed is also associated with the level of awareness of SRH; women in the WHO European Region with experience of post-migration ANC are more likely to have been tested for HIV (173).

Source: UNHCR (112–117).

In the WHO Region of the Americas, studies from Canada and the United States show both delayed and suboptimal ANC among refugees and migrants: in the United States, refugees and migrants have a prevalence of delayed ANC of 20.6% and 15.0%, respectively (174–176).

3.4.2 Obstetric, postpartum and postnatal health and access to care

Among refugee and migrant women, there is some evidence that migratory status may improve their access to postnatal care compared with host country women (174). However, postpartum and postnatal health care received by the refugee and migrant mothers and their children and the health outcomes are not consistently better than the care received by their peers in the host population. For example, Afghan refugee and migrant women are reported to receive little information about postnatal problems and the need for routine care (177). Other child health problems highlighted for refugee children include low birth weight; low levels of vitamins A and D; low AGPAR score (appearance, pulse, grimace, activity and respiration); and congenital heart disease (178,179).

A meta-analysis of 13 studies demonstrated that refugee and migrant women in western European countries have double the risk of dying during or after pregnancy compared with host country women (180). Various studies from the WHO Region of the Americas show that refugee and migrant women are more likely to undergo an unplanned caesarean section, among other adverse birth outcomes or postpartum complications (181–183). Studies of asylum seekers in the Netherlands revealed a statistically significant higher rate of perinatal mortality (3.2%) compared with the host population (0.6%), independent of parity, birth weight or gestational age at birth, as well as a higher rate of intrauterine fetal death (2.3% versus 0.2%) (184).

In the WHO Western Pacific Region, a study of refugee and migrant women in Australia found higher rates of stillbirth, perinatal mortality and repeat abortion compared with the host population (185); these differences were attributed to delays in accessing PHC and hospital-based care, important to the optimization of MCH outcomes. Another study in Australia found that late commencement of ANC, underutilization of interpreting services and midwife-only intrapartum care were associated with an increased risk of stillbirth among migrant women from Africa and India (186).

A further study from Australia linked migration to birth outcomes, as refugee and migrant women were more likely to give birth to children who were small for their gestational age (11.3%) than local host country women (7.3%); this difference was attributed to factors also noted in WHO South-East Asia Region literature, such as pre-migration well-being and maternal stature, the context of the migration journey, settlement conditions, including pregnancy weight gain, and the social environment post-migration (187,188).

3.4.3 Malnutrition and anaemia

Malnutrition and anaemia in both mothers and children have been observed in most WHO regions, although the settings in which these conditions occur vary widely; for example, some refugee camps provide monthly food assistance, free PHC services, nearby health centres and water collection points, and the free distribution of mosquito nets. However, compared with refugees and migrants in other settings, camp-based refugees may have limited access to diversified food sources other than the general food ration and few ways of earning money to purchase these (189).

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, higher rates of anaemia were reported in Syrian refugee mothers compared with Jordanian and Lebanese mothers (178,190,191). In the WHO African Region, a study in Sudan found that being a camp-based refugee is a determinant of anaemia among women of reproductive age (192). The same trend was observed among children, and a study of refugee preschool children in camp settings in Ethiopia reported a link between high levels of anaemia in children and inadequate food rations, insufficient micronutrients, lack of non-food items, such as blankets and clothes, and the selling or sharing of food rations (193). In the WHO European Region, nutritional anaemia is relatively common among refugee and migrant children (194,195), with one study in particular showing that one out of four children in German refugee centres was anaemic (195).

The impact of acculturation on infant-feeding practices was investigated in a meta-synthesis from Australia; this demonstrated that hospital policies in Western Australia (including not allowing the birthing woman's mother or other family members to be present) are seen as a deterrent to lactation. Unfamiliarity with the health system and societal norms often undermined maternal confidence about infant feeding (196,197). In the WHO South-East Asia Region, a higher prevalence of both moderate-

A family from Honduras, part of a "Migrant Caravan", walks on a road in Guatemala. © UNICEF / Daniele Volpe acute undernutrition and severe-acute undernutrition in Rohingya refugee children compared with local children in Bangladesh was observed (198–200).

Further studies in the Region showed that religion, birth weight, disease history, stunting, exclusive breastfeeding, time of initiation of breastfeeding and lack of knowledge about anaemia among parents were all associated with the prevalence of anaemia among migrant children (201,202). Overweight/obesity among children is discussed in section 3.5.6. Refugee and migrant children are particularly vulnerable to underweight issues, undernutrition and wasting (203–207). A cross-sectional study in two refugee reception centres in Greece concluded that the prevalence of underweight for refugee children was 7.8%; the proportion of underweight boys in one reception centre and girls in the other was found to be very high, according to WHO trigger levels (208).

Inadequate infant-feeding practices and chronic infant undernutrition were explored in a mixed-methods study along the Thailand–Myanmar border, finding increased odds of underweight among migrants (209). Studies of refugee children from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in the Republic of Korea and on children enrolled in UNRWA schools in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, highlight how children experience the double burden of undernutrition/malnutrition and obesity (210,211).

Compared with refugees and migrants in other settings, camp-based refugees may have limited access to diversified food sources other than the general food ration and few ways of earning money to purchase these.

3.4.4 Other child health issues

Child health (with children defined by UNICEF as any person younger than 18 years) is a broad field, with various issues being of interest in distinct regions (Chapter 4 discusses childhood vaccination rates and uptake).

For example, among Syrian refugees in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, data indicate that mortality rates are higher among children born to Syrian refugee women than in those of the host population (179).

The mortality of children under 5 years of age was explored in a retrospective cross-sectional survey in the Meheba refugee camp in Zambia, which found that malaria and respiratory infections accounted for 81% of child deaths and diarrhoea for 10%; an increased frequency of visits to the health care facility significantly reduced mortality in children (212).

In the WHO European Region, it was reported that the overall health of refugee and migrant children is often contingent on the child's particular experiences in the home country, during travel and after arrival at the destination country, as well as being linked to the health of their mother (213,214). Because of the disruption of health care in the conflict zones from where the children may have come, they may be more vulnerable to vaccine-preventable diseases (VPDs) such as latent TB infection (LTBI) and hepatitis B virus (HBV) infection (215). Also reported within the WHO European Region are nutritional deficiencies, poor oral health, skin conditions, and airway and gastrointestinal infections (216).

Studies conducted across the WHO European and Eastern Mediterranean Region show that oral health is poor among refugee and migrant children, with dental care considered a key problem in populations such as UASC in Spain and Syrian refugees in Jordan (217–220). In Italy, a study among a sample of 553 children found caries prevalence of 77.5% in the migrant group compared with 55.9% in the non-migrant group, with the unmet restorative treatment needs index being higher among migrant children (221). Box 3.3 gives more information on how the migration process affects the health of children.

3.5 Noncommunicable diseases and major risk factors

- NCDs are an increasing health burden among refugee and migrant populations, often linked to longer residence in the host country, particularly high- and middle-income countries.
- Diabetes mellitus and hypertension are left undiagnosed and uncontrolled for some refugees and migrants, who have a higher prevalence than the host population, leading to a higher risk of CVDs.
- Cancer is often diagnosed at later stages among refugees and migrants, who often have lower uptake of or access to preventive measures.
- Evidence suggests that mental health problems, the stress of adapting to a new environment, unemployment and previous experience of war can contribute to an increase in substance use.
- Refugees and migrants may experience issues related to underweight and weight loss, even in their host country, and others may also experience increased risk of high body mass index (BMI) once they reside in host countries.

Across WHO regions, NCDs constitute the major part of the burden of disease for all populations, including refugees and migrants. The increased prevalence is associated with factors such as the social and environmental determinants of health, changing lifestyles and the impact of behavioural determinants such as use of tobacco and alcohol, unhealthy diet and lack of exercise, ageing, social exclusion, low levels of health literacy and limited access to health care.

The most prevalent NCDs are CVDs (particularly coronary artery disease), cancer, respiratory disease and diabetes. In particular, diabetes, cancer and CVDs, and the linked risk factors of obesity, and substance use, have been discussed in regional literature, providing the framework for this report. Obesity is also considered in this section, together (briefly) with undernutrition.

Interestingly, a study among Syrian refugees and host communities found that 50.4% of refugee households and 60.2% of host community households reported that a member of their household had been diagnosed with one of the five NCDs under investigation (i.e. hypertension, CVDs, diabetes, chronic respiratory disease and arthritis). Host community prevalence was higher than that of refugees for all conditions except for chronic respiratory disease. Care-seeking for NCDs was high for all five conditions, with 82.9% of refugees and 97.8% of host respondents having sought care in Lebanon for their condition (232).

A higher risk of type 2 diabetes mellitus, hypertension and CVDs was observed among refugees and migrants in the WHO Western Pacific Region, associated with socioeconomic factors such as perceived ethnic discrimination, and low levels of health literacy with regards to NCD prevention (233,234). As observed for other NCDs, the length of stay and acculturation

Box 3.3.
Children on the move and unaccompanied or separated children

Of the approximately 281 million migrants in 2020, it is estimated that 36 million (close to 13%) were children (222). Close to 14 million live in Asia, 11 million in Europe and North America and 6.2 million in Africa.

Among those forcibly displaced, children are drastically overrepresented.

Worldwide, more than 4 out of 10 forcibly displaced people are younger than 18 years, with 33 million children living in forced displacement – either internally displaced within their country or as refugees or asylum seekers abroad – at the end of 2020 (223).

Characterizing the health status of children on the move is a challenge because of the diverse backgrounds and experiences of refugee, migrant and internally displaced children, as well as the lack of comprehensive, disaggregated and comparable data. However, findings generally show that children on the move tend to have a higher exposure to risk factors than children in host communities because of poor living conditions or limited access to hygiene, and because health care is routinely disrupted or halted when children and families move or are displaced (224). Exposure to risk factors can be even higher when other factors are considered, such as disability status, sex and gender, or being a member of a minority group.

Other social and environmental determinants of health influencing the well-being of children on the move include health literacy, which can be affected by the limited language proficiency of their parents, their level of education and income (i.e. socioeconomic status), migratory status and food insecurity (225).

The journey is often the most dangerous stage for many children, particularly for unaccompanied or separated children (UASC). During the journey, children may be exposed to the risk of injuries, extreme weather conditions or acute infectious disorders. UASC are at particular risk of physical and sexual violence (213). An analysis of the journey of some 11 000 migrant and refugee adolescents (aged 14–17 years) and young people (aged 18–24 years) along the Mediterranean routes found that 8 out of 10 adolescents reported exploitation (159).

Children on the move are also at greater risk of psychosocial and mental health problems (226). They may feel overwhelmed, confused or distressed, frightened and anxious, as well as experience sleep problems, and outbursts of anger and sadness (227). This is particularly the case for forcibly displaced and refugee children, who commonly experience mental health problems, such as post-traumatic stress disorder or depression (228).

Children on the move are faced with legal, procedural, financial, cultural and social barriers that can exclude them from accessing health services, including routine immunization, nutrition and child health services, and mental health services. Common exclusion barriers include discrimination and stigmatization by health care providers and host community members, language barriers, lack of access to information, prohibitive costs, the inaccessibility of health insurance and other social protection schemes, and legal status (229). A lack of firewalls between service providers and immigration authorities may deter undocumented migrants from seeking health services for fear of arrest, detention and deportation (230). Finally, children at the greatest risk of hunger and disease have also seen their already fragile health and food systems buckle under the strain of the COVID-19 pandemic. Around 50% of countries in which UNICEF has active humanitarian operations reported a reduction in access to health care among displaced and refugee populations as a direct consequence of the pandemic (231).

were associated with CVD risk factors, such as diabetes and obesity, with those who migrate at younger ages being more susceptible (235–237).

Other NCDs to note from the literature reviewed include nutrition-related health issues, such as scurvy and anaemia in the WHO African Region (238,239); inflammatory diseases in the WHO Region of the Americas, such as inflammatory bowel disease, Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis (240–242); and renal diseases in the WHO European Region (243,244).

3.5.1 Cardiovascular diseases

The prevalence of CVDs varies widely across the WHO regions. CVDs are known to affect refugee and migrant populations disproportionately in the WHO European Region, as multiple studies have demonstrated that factors such as the social determinants of health and ethnicity often negatively affect the prevalence and types of disease among these populations (245–247). In Italy, refugees and migrants from sub-Saharan African and south Asian countries were found to have a higher risk of CVDs than native host country populations (248–250).

However, data from the United States show a lower prevalence of cardiovascular events such as heart attack and stroke in individuals born in other countries (e.g. naturalized citizens, refugees and migrants) compared with the host population; in particular, a lower prevalence was observed among those from Mexico as well as Asian, Caribbean and Central American countries (251).

In Goiás State, Brazil, a 2020 report indicated that CVDs were one of the main reasons for migrants to seek medical attention, representing 32.7% of cases of CVD within the State (252). Medical consultations for circulatory system diseases among Venezuelan refugees and migrants in Colombia increased by 93.4% in 2019 from 2018 figures (253).

Studies among Syrian refugees residing in Jordan and Lebanon reported a CVD prevalence of 8.2–20.9% (254,255).

3.5.2 Cancer

Evidence from WHO regions in relation to cancer among refugees and migrants is not uniform and there is no clear pattern. There is little consistency within and between WHO regions regarding factors linked to cancer among refugees and migrants and limited information regarding cancer among refugee and migrant children. For these reasons it is difficult to draw conclusions at national, regional and global levels.

In Canada, migrants diagnosed with cancer were found to have a mortality advantage over non-migrant populations, and studies from Chile and the United States pointed to the country of origin as a potential protective factor (256–258). This aligns with global analyses showing a mortality advantage for refugees and migrants across most categories in the International Statistical Classification of Diseases and Related Health Problems, tenth revision, compared with the general population (259).

Similar results were observed in the WHO Western Pacific Region, with the literature suggesting that foreign country of origin was associated with lower cancer morbidity and mortality (260,261). In contrast, in the WHO European Region, studies in Norway and Italy suggested that cancer among refugee and migrant populations tends to be diagnosed at an advanced stage, leading to poorer health outcomes compared with the host population (262,263).

In Lebanon and Jordan, there is a need for increased funding and use of standard operating procedures across the countries and for humanitarian responses to ensure that patients with cancer have equitable access to care; for example, data from the UNHCR on Syrian and Iraqi refugees seeking cancer treatment or investigation during 2016–2017 showed that one third were for breast cancer, followed by leukaemia or other blood cancers (12%) and then colorectal cancer (11%), among others (264,265).

In the WHO African Region, several studies on refugee and migrant women in Ethiopia, South Africa and Uganda demonstrated a lack of knowledge and awareness with regards to cervical cancer, emphasizing the need for interventions that prioritize prevention, risk reduction and early detection and treatment (266–268). This was also emphasized by results from the WHO European Region: a study in Italy demonstrated that migrant women have a 40% lower uptake of cervical smear tests than Italians and a 55% lower uptake of mammography (269). Similar findings elsewhere confirmed this trend, with migrant women reporting lower utilization of mammography and cervical cancer screening compared with non-migrant women, as observed in many studies across several countries in the WHO European Region (270,271) and among Syrian refugee women in Türkiye (272).

Various studies found that levels of knowledge and awareness about HPV and HPV vaccination as a protective measure against cervical cancer were low among refugee and migrant women, with many not having heard of HPV, unaware it could lead to cervical cancer, incorrectly believing the vaccine was a cure and perceiving that their risk of HPV infection was low (133,273–278). Many expressed a willingness to accept the HPV vaccine if a physician recommended it and could provide more information about cervical cancer.

Among Syrian refugee women in Greece, a study found that only 27.3% were aware of the HPV vaccine; of those who were aware of the vaccine, several did not know the optimal age of vaccination (279). Evidence from Australia highlighted how parents of adolescents from Arabic-speaking countries play a significant role in shaping attitudes towards HPV vaccination and its acceptability (280).

Studies from the United States highlighted the various barriers faced by refugee and migrant women with regards to accessing the vaccine, including long clinic waiting times, employment inflexibility, lack of vaccine coverage for non-citizens and a lack of school entry policies; however, facilitators of vaccination included transportation services, late clinic opening hours, familial support and a doctor's recommendation (281–283). With regards to vaccine uptake, a study concluded that only 30.8% of refugee girls and women (aged 11–26 years) of Myanmar in the United States completed the course of HPV vaccines (284). In Denmark, refugee girls displayed significantly lower HPV vaccine uptake than their Danish counterparts, with region of origin, duration of residence and income all being associated with uptake (285).

The prevalence of digestive cancers among migrants has also been studied in certain regions. In the WHO Region of the Americas, gastric cancer diagnosed at a late stage was recorded among migrants from Mexico as well as from African, Caribbean and Central American countries (286). Lower rates of decline (among men aged ≥ 50 years) and higher rates of increase of colorectal cancer in Hispanic migrants compared with non-Hispanic whites were reported in the United States (287). Finally, hepatocellular carcinoma caused by HBV has been detected mostly among male migrants in the United States from China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mexico, the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Viet Nam, as well as from countries in eastern Africa (288).

3.5.3 Hypertension

The prevalence of hypertension, an important risk factor for CVDs and a major cause of premature death worldwide, varies across regions and country income groups. The WHO African Region demonstrated the highest prevalence of hypertension (27%), mainly because of a rise in risk factors for hypertension (e.g. excessive salt consumption and being overweight) (289). Hypertension represents a burden of disease also among migrants from the African Region, as documented in the WHO European Region, where hypertension has been reported to be related to ethnicity overall (246).

Migrants often experience obstacles in accessing medical care, which can result in poor hypertension management. For example, in the Netherlands migrants from Ghana have a higher prevalence of hypertension and lower levels of awareness and control of hypertension than the local population (290). In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, the prevalence of hypertension among refugees and migrants varied by ethnic group, and host country; studies have reported a prevalence in Qatar ranging from < 30% (272,291–293) to 65% for south-east Asians (including people from Bangladesh, India, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka) (294) and even 72% among a sample of Syrian refugees in Lebanon (295).

A study in the United Arab Emirates found that the prevalence of hypertension among migrant workers from Bangladesh, India and Pakistan (30.5%) was much higher than that for the local population (14.0%); further, 76% of migrants classified as hypertensive were not aware of their condition (296). In the WHO Western Pacific Region, a higher risk of hypertension was reported among refugees and migrants because of factors such as poverty and a lack of knowledge about preventing or managing NCDs (280,297,298).

NCDs constitute the major part of the burden of disease for all populations, including refugees and migrants. The increased prevalence is associated with factors such as the social and environmental determinants of health, changing lifestyles and the impact of behavioural determinants such as use of tobacco and alcohol, unhealthy diet and lack of exercise, ageing, social exclusion, low levels of health literacy and limited access to health care.

In the WHO Region of the Americas, a study in the United States found that being born elsewhere and having been resident for only a short period in the host country was associated with better cardiovascular health and a lower incidence of CVD compared with those born in the United States. However, cardiovascular health among recently arrived migrants declined as their duration of stay increased (237,299).

Another study conducted in the United States among a diverse sample of migrants found that those from south-east Asia and the Russian Federation had the highest prevalence of hypertension; migrants from India and from Caribbean and Central American countries had the highest prevalence of overweight/ obesity; migrants from Africa and the Middle East had the highest prevalence of diabetes; and migrants from Europe had the lowest prevalence of all three conditions, demonstrating the importance of tailoring interventions for migrants with different countries of origin and ethnic diversities (299).

3.5.4 Diabetes mellitus

The literature on diabetes presents a complex picture across the WHO regions. In a study of the prevalence of type 2 diabetes in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, prevalence estimates varied between 9.2% and 19.3% among Syrian refugees in Jordan (291,300) and between 8.3% and 15.8% among labour migrants in the United Arab Emirates (301,302), suggesting perhaps potentially comparable levels of prevalence between refugees and migrants in the region.

Conversely, however, a quality-of-life survey conducted in the Gauteng province of South Africa demonstrated that migratory status is associated with a lower prevalence of type 2 diabetes and hypertension compared with non-migrant populations (303).

A number of studies have compared diabetes prevalence among refugee and migrant populations with that of their host populations. However, migration may be only one of the many relevant determinant factors, making such comparisons difficult.

In the WHO European Region, all migrant groups were found to have a higher prevalence and likelihood of diabetes compared with their host populations. Among all migrant groups within the Region, those from the WHO South-East Asian Region were reported to present the highest risk (304). This trend in migrant populations demonstrating a disproportionate burden of disease, particularly diabetes, compared with host country populations is also evident in the WHO Western Pacific Region. Diabetes prevalence, especially with regards to gestational diabetes, was noted to be higher among Asian migrant women in Australia compared with both the host population and the population in the country of origin (305). This indicates a need for more awareness of gestational diabetes in these migrant women during ANC (306,307).

The influence of negative acculturation, related to the adoption of negative health behaviour that could impact the prevalence of diabetes, was examined in the WHO Region of the Americas and the WHO Western Pacific Region (233,235,308,309). Sociocultural factors, such as cultural beliefs and traditions, affect the self-management of diabetes, particularly dietary habits and medication adherence. In particular, scepticism about the benefits of medication for diabetes has been observed among migrants in both the WHO Region of the Americas and the WHO Western Pacific Region (310–313).

The prevalence of diabetes among adult Syrian refugees in Jordan, an urban middle-income host setting, was estimated at 6.1%; inadequate treatment was reported to lead to other health complications (314). Similarly, Syrian refugees in Türkiye faced challenges in identifying and controlling diabetes, with only 72% of those diagnosed with diabetes taking medication (272). A group of Syrian refugees in Lebanon scored 6 out of 10 on an assessment scale for diabetes core knowledge (self-management) with higher scores linked to education level and previous diabetes education and support (315).

3.5.5 Substance use

Substance use among refugees and migrants has been studied across several WHO regions and includes the use of alcohol, tobacco, sedatives, cannabis, opioids, inhalants, stimulants and hallucinogens. Many of these substances are commercially marketed and, therefore, are associated with the commercial determinants of health, that is, the private sector activities that affect people's health positively or negatively, including "production, price-setting and aggressive marketing of products such as ultra-processed foods, tobacco, sugar-sweetened beverages and alcohol" (316).

In Sweden, refugees and migrants have significantly lower levels of all substance use disorders compared with the Swedish-born population overall, although the longitudinal data show that these levels converge with those of the Swedish-born population over time (317).

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, a study among refugee school students residing in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, found that these students were more likely than native-born students to use psychoactive substances such as energy drinks (318). In the United Arab Emirates, current levels of smoking (28%) and using smokeless tobacco (11%) represent a significant public health burden among migrant workers (319).

Among some refugee groups in the WHO African Region, alcohol and substance use were linked to a higher prevalence of mental health conditions, including psychopathologies (320–322), as well as to the occurrence of SGBV or IPV (321,323). Evidence suggests that factors such as mental health problems, the stress of adapting to a new environment, unemployment and previous experience of war can contribute to an increase in substance use (323).

3.5.6 Obesity

Studies across regions demonstrate an increased risk of high BMI among refugee and migrant populations once they reside in host countries, which also increases their risk for NCDs (245,324–329). The literature presents a nuanced picture, highlighting regional variations that may be explained by contextual factors, including acculturation. In many high-income countries across the WHO Region of the Americas, the WHO European Region and the WHO Western Pacific Region, dietary acculturation, duration of stay and changes in lifestyle as migrants integrate within host communities may contribute to an increased risk of poorer nutritional status and higher levels of obesity (324,330–332).

A study of migrant workers in Thailand found that obesity is often associated with factors such as being older than 40 years, being female, having engaged in assimilation strategies to become more adapted to the host society and having a lower level of education (328). The study also highlighted the need for comprehensive preventive health interventions targeting the health literacy of these groups. In Australia, evidence from Arabic-speaking refugee and migrant populations indicated that they engaged in lower levels of physical activity compared with host populations, with barriers to participation including factors such as mainstream language illiteracy, limited exercise skills and a lack of female- or male-only settings for physical activities (310).

Studies from the WHO African Region have documented dietary and lifestyle changes related to displacement, which can often be associated with lower SES and loss of assets (327,333). One such study reported that 5% of male and 32% of female Saharawi refugees living in the Western Sahara of Algeria faced obesity, and only 10% of households cultivated vegetables, instead relying on starchy staple foods (334). Differences between the sexes for this health issue and others were also discussed in Chapter 2.

In the United States, it was observed that length of stay in the destination country has an impact on the prevalence of obesity.

The prevalence of obesity in Hispanic migrants who had been there for 15 years reached 24.2%, while those who had been there for 5 years had a lower prevalence of 14.5% (324). Similar observations have been made in the WHO European Region, with the duration of stay associated with the development of overweight/obesity (335–337), even when adjusted for age; this association is stronger for women and African migrants (325). Several studies in the WHO European Region also noted the importance of using the central or abdominal obesity indicator, in addition to general obesity, for refugee and migrant groups, as it is a well-established indicator for CVD risk (338,339).

Differences may exist between ethnic refugee and migrant groups, with a study showing a higher abdominal obesity risk compared with the general population for Bangladeshi women, Pakistani men and women, Black African women and Black Caribbean women (340). Therefore, WHO recommends that measures of abdominal obesity through waist circumference are particularly important for members of specific ethnic groups, including those of a south Asian origin (341).

Although undernutrition has not been directly linked with NCDs, protein-caloric deficiencies and/or micronutrient depletion can have multiple ill effects. Adult refugees and migrants may arrive in the host country underweight and with protein-caloric deficiencies and/or micronutrient depletion but find it hard to establish a healthy diet even after arrival. Evidence from Switzerland found that the prevalence of underweight among adult refugees (5.7%) was higher than that in Swiss adults (4.7%), with the study citing financial hardship, language barriers and lack of cooking skills, as obstacles to maintaining a healthy diet (342). A study on changes in body weight among refugees from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in the Republic of Korea found that refugees who lost weight between two separate examinations were more likely to exhibit irregular meal consumption patterns and consume insufficient levels of vitamin B2 and calcium (343).

Overweight among children. Overweight/obesity among children is a growing global concern. It is, however, difficult to generalize about the prevalence of overweight/obesity in refugee and migrant children and adolescents because of the characteristic differences in populations and destination countries. Economic, social and other factors give rise to the differentials found between refugee/migrant children and those from the host populations, as found in various studies mentioned below.

In the WHO European Region, data indicate that one in three children is overweight or obese, and that children and adolescents (aged 5–19 years) show rising obesity rates in most European countries (344). It is also observed that, overall, non-European refugee and migrant children are at a higher risk for overweight/obesity than their host country counterparts (205) and have a higher consumption of low-priced, high-sugar and high-fat foods, and poorer adherence to national dietary recommendations (345,346). Overweight and obese refugee and migrant children and adolescents are also of concern in other high-income settings.

Studies from Canada, Germany and the United States have indicated that children with a migrant background are at a higher risk for overweight/obesity than their host country counterparts. Studies in the United States found that the prevalence of obesity levelled off for children from the host population but continued to increase for migrant children and adolescents (347–349). A study in Australia found that migrant children from low- and middle-income countries had higher rates of overweight/obesity compared with migrant children from high-income countries or Australian children (350). Similarly, a mixed-methods cross-sectional study in Canada found that older refugee children from privileged backgrounds in low-income countries were at a higher risk of overweight/obesity (351).

Data from five countries in the Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) survey (352) on BMI showed that students who are children of migrants (often referred to as second-generation migrants) had lower levels of obesity compared with their host country counterparts, with migrants in China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, and Spain having only marginally greater levels of obesity (Table 3.1). Spain was also the only country to report a higher prevalence of overweight among children of migrants (11.9%) compared with host country children (7.6%). Further, children of migrants in three countries (Ireland, Panama and the United Arab Emirates) were more likely to have BMI levels considered healthier than host country students (352). In Australia, Chinese migrants who arrived as children or adolescents were more likely to report CVD risk factors, such as obesity and diabetes, than migrants who arrived during adulthood, as younger migrants may be quicker to adopt the unhealthy diets and lifestyles associated with their host countries (235). Evidence from Canada and the United States has indicated that older refugee and migrant children are particularly at risk for overweight/obesity, with significant variation across children from different countries of origin and of different SES (353,354).

These results are in contrast to those found for child and adolescent migrants in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, who displayed lower levels of overweight/obesity than host country populations. Lower obesity levels were reported for migrant students in the United Arab Emirates (5.7%) than for host country students (11%). In Qatar, Qatari students had a higher likelihood of obesity than non-Qatari students (355). Even among young preschool children in the United Arab Emirates, host country children exhibited a higher prevalence of overweight and consumed discretionary calorie-high foods more frequently than migrant children (356).

Table 3.1. Students with different nutritional status in selected countries, by BMI and migratory status in the PISA survey, 2018

Country	Nutritional status (no. (%))
	Children from host population			Children of migrants
	Obese[a]	Overweight[a]	Healthy[a]	Obese[a]	Overweight[a]	Healthy[a]
China, Hong Kong Special Administrative Region	38 (1.5)	185 (7.2)	2350 (91.3)	11 (2.5)	31 (7.2)	391 (90.3)
Ireland	279 (13.0)	270 (12.6)	1597 (74.4)	26 (7.0)	44 (11.8)	302 (81.2)
Panama	248 (8.7)	337 (11.8)	2271 (79.5)	4 (3.6)	8 (7.2)	99 (89.2)
Spain	378 (1.7)	1740 (7.6)	20 660 (90.7)	39 (2.4)	190 (11.9)	1363 (85.6)
United Arab Emirates	801 (11.0)	1146 (15.8)	5323 (73.2)	290 (5.7)	641 (12.6)	4138 (81.6)

[a] Obese, overweight and healthy are defined as having a BMI of > 30.0, > 25.0, or 18.5–24.9, respectively (353).
Source: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (352).

3.6 Mental health

- The prevalence of depression and anxiety can be higher among refugees and migrants at different stages of the displacement and migration experience, based on various individual, social and environmental factors.
- Conflict- and war-affected refugees and migrants display higher levels of PTSD and other mental health issues, particularly younger migrants and adolescents.
- There is limited evidence and a great need for research on how psychotic disorders and schizophrenia affect refugees and migrants.
- Evidence shows that the incidence of psychoses is higher among migrant populations in a number of countries, linked to the cumulative effect of social disadvantages before, during and after migration.
- Refugee, asylum seeker and irregular migrant children, in particular, display a higher prevalence of mental health issues compared with host populations.

Migrants and refugees can be exposed to various stress factors that affect their mental health and psychosocial well-being before and during their migration journey and during their settlement and integration. A wide range of mental health conditions may present, including depression, anxiety, PTSD, suicide, self-harm and psychotic disorders. The prevalence of these conditions is highly variable as it depends on social and environmental factors, in addition to access to mental health services and diagnosis. The following results indicate, however, that the prevalence of mental health problems may be high.

Many migrants and refugees lack access to mental health services or experience barriers in accessing these. They also face disruptions in continuity of care. The mental health needs of migrants and refugees should be addressed by organizing inclusive and accessible promotion and prevention programmes; strengthening mental health as part of general health services; and ensuring timely diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation.

A recent WHO estimate of prevalence found that the burden of mental disorders is high in conflict-affected populations, including refugees, in whom the prevalence of many of the major mental disorders is as high as 22.1% at any given time (357). Some studies conducted in refugee populations resettled in high-income countries have shown an increased risk of suicidal behaviour, likely the result of the combination of socioeconomic disadvantage, exposure to potentially traumatic events, burden of mental disorders and lack of appropriate and accessible care (358,359).

3.6.1 Depression and anxiety

A high prevalence of depression among refugees and migrants across the WHO regions is widely documented and can develop at various points along the displacement and migration pathways. For example, depression can begin in home countries as a result of exposure to traumatic events, after experiencing violence along the displacement and migration journey, or when living in host countries as a result of discrimination, marginalization and a loss of resources (360–373).

A global meta-analysis found that refugees and asylum seekers had high and persistent levels of PTSD and depression (374). However, the prevalence of depression and anxiety in refugees and migrants varies widely across the WHO regions, driven by a number of regional and contextual factors. In the WHO European Region, refugees have a somewhat similar prevalence of anxiety (13%) as the general population (9%), but a markedly higher prevalence of depressive disorders (32% versus 4%) (375).

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, Syrian female refugees present higher scores of maternal depression than low-income Lebanese mothers (370). Notably, data vary on the impact of duration in the host country on the prevalence of depression and anxiety. Among Syrian workers in Egypt, an increased duration of living in the host country is a significant risk factor for depression (373).

A longitudinal study among young refugees (aged 19–25 years) in Sweden concluded that the prevalence of common mental disorders decreased with increased education and that a decreasing prevalence of PTSD was associated with a longer duration of stay in Sweden. Being a UASC was associated with a significantly higher risk of PTSD compared with the young Swedish population or with accompanied young migrants in Sweden (376).

The literature indicates that mental health issues among refugees and migrants in the WHO Region of the Americas have increased in recent years. For example, a study conducted between 2018 and 2019 in Colombia shows that the number of Venezuelans in Colombia treated for depression increased by 108.3% and the number treated for anxiety increased by 224.6% (253). In the United States, Brazilian women have reported increased levels of depression and anxiety as a result of separation from their families and social isolation (377).

Among refugees in the WHO African Region, the prevalence of symptoms of common mental health conditions is high (378–380).
A study among refugees in South Africa revealed a prevalence of 49.4% for anxiety, 54.6% for depression and 24.9% for PTSD. Several factors increased the risk of these mental health challenges, including a history of family separation, discriminatory experiences, sexual violence and abuse, recent arrival in the country, and being divorced or widowed (381,382).

Mental health outcomes have been studied among different refugee and migrant populations in the WHO South-East Asia Region, notably Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Studies among Rohingya refugees found high levels of PTSD, depression, sleep disorders and functional impairment (disability), along with very high levels of daily stressors associated with camp life, such as food insecurity, lack of freedom of movement and concerns about personal safety (383–385).

The prevalence of mental health issues varies among migrant workers. In Thailand, migrant workers from Myanmar exhibited a prevalence of 11.9% for symptoms of depression or anxiety; this reduction in prevalence compared with previous studies was possibly indicative of a supportive community and workplace environment, as well as effective delivery of health promotion strategies that include mental health (386,387). Nepalese migrant workers exhibit a prevalence of 28.2% for psychological distress, 35.9% for depression and 41% for anxiety (388). Factors that migrants from Nepal attributed to poor mental health included the high expectations of families in their home countries, unfair treatment at work, poor-quality accommodation and a poor social life, in addition to limited access to mental health services (389).

> The prevalence of mental health conditions among refugees and migrants is highly variable as it depends on social and environmental factors, in addition to access to mental health services and diagnosis. However, results indicate that the prevalence of mental health problems may be high.

Isolation and discrimination are significantly associated with depression and anxiety among migrants in the WHO Western Pacific Region. However, the formation of deep social connections with the host community as well as the provision of social integration services are reported to be valuable in promoting migrant mental well-being (64,390–392).

3.6.2 Post-traumatic stress disorder

Exposure to traumatic events occurs throughout the world. However, exposure is unequally distributed within the global population, and the risk of PTSD varies substantially with the type of traumatic event. Events involving interpersonal violence (especially IPV) are associated with the highest risk of PTSD (393). The long-term effects of abuse or other traumatic events can include severe anxiety, stress or fear; the use of alcohol or drugs; depression; eating disorders; and self-injury or suicide (394).

Syrian refugees within the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region present numerous mental health complications, which have been further exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. For example, a study of mental health among Syrian refugees suggested that they had a higher prevalence of PTSD resulting from quarantine (82.5%) compared with the host population (66.5%) (395). Studies have indicated relatively high levels of PTSD among refugees and migrants: a prevalence of 24.3% was found among refugees in Berlin (396) and of 35.7% among Arabic-speaking asylum seekers living in three collective accommodation centres in Erlangen, Germany (397). In Sweden, a survey of 455 asylum seekers from Afghanistan, Eritrea, Iraq, Somalia and the Syrian Arab Republic living in three large housing facilities found a prevalence of 67.9% for depression, 60.7% for PTSD and 59.3% for anxiety (398). These levels are considerably higher than those of other groups, including refugees in the United States from countries where traumatic stress was endemic (399).

Similarly, exposure to war and violence within families and communities was identified as a risk factor for PTSD and internalizing mental health issues in the WHO African Region and WHO Region of the Americas (400–404). Family accumulation of PTSD symptoms was identified in Burundian refugee families in Tanzanian camps, where PTSD prevalence in mothers was 33% and 29% in fathers. The same study found that children living with two parents who had experienced traumatic events were also more likely to present high levels of PTSD symptoms and impairment (see also section 3.6.5 on child mental health) (405). In a study among asylum seekers from El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras in the United States, almost one third met the diagnostic criteria for PTSD and about 17% did so for both PTSD and depression (406).

However, it should be noted that signs of normal distress and mental disorder are often not easily distinguished in studies conducted in humanitarian settings, including in refugee settings, leading to inflated estimates of mental health conditions such as PTSD (407).

3.6.3 Suicide and self-harm

The evidence identified in regional research on suicide and self-harm is limited, making it difficult to draw conclusions in this report on their prevalence and the factors influencing them. However, a few studies described in this section have examined suicide attempts and ideation in refugee settings, especially among adolescents. Some of the studies that focused on refugee populations resettled in high-income countries have shown increased risk of suicidal behaviours, likely the result of a combination of socioeconomic disadvantage, exposure to potentially traumatic events, the burden of mental disorders and a lack of appropriate and accessible care.

A study examining the psychosocial and clinical profiles of people visiting the emergency department in Qatar as a result of accidental self-harm and suicide attempts found higher suicidal mortality among expatriates (35.5%) than among Qataris (21.4%) (408). Adolescents (the majority aged 13–15 years) living in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, and in five UNRWA camps in the occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic expressed high rates of suicidal ideation (25.6%). Factors associated with suicidal thinking included using cannabis and tobacco, having no close friends, experiencing food insecurity, having worry-induced insomnia and perceptions of limited parental support, among others (409).

A study among adolescent refugees in Uganda concluded that female adolescents had a higher prevalence of suicidal ideation and psychological distress than their male counterparts, with major risk factors including loneliness, isolation and having no hope for the future (410).

Rohingya refugee women face numerous challenges that increase their vulnerability to suicidal ideation and other mental health problems within the emergency operations in Bangladesh. These factors include prolonged exposure to conflict and persecution, lack of privacy and safe spaces, high levels of SGBV, and limited access to integrated mental health and psychosocial support (411,412). A further problem in the camps was a scarcity of humanitarian staff with the capacity to deal with suicide risk among refugees. In a study conducted among humanitarian staff working in Cox's Bazar in Bangladesh, 26% reported having worked with a person at risk of suicide and a similar proportion disagreed with the statement that suicide was a problem in the community. Only 63% of those surveyed said they felt confident in carrying out a suicide risk assessment (413).

Although refugee and migrant populations face unique challenges that may increase their vulnerability to suicide and self-harm, the evidence varies when comparing these populations with those of their host countries. Among people with a mental disorder in Sweden, the rates of suicide attempts are lower in refugees compared with Swedish-born individuals (414). A study assessing data from a psychiatric hospital in Qatar found no difference in the levels of near-fatal deliberate self-harm between Qatari and non-Qatari patients, possibly because of the small sample sizes (415). The prevalence of suicide attempts among adolescent migrants in various European countries has been reported to be higher than that for host populations (416).

3.6.4 Schizophrenia and other psychotic disorders

There is good evidence that the prevalence of psychosis is higher in many migrant populations than in host country populations in a number of countries (417). Prevalence varies with region of origin, region of destination and their combination, which suggests that prevalence is strongly influenced by the social context. Research has identified a diverse range of social factors – including childhood separation from parents, discrimination and, at an area level, ethnic density – as being of potential importance (418). Studies also suggest that the cumulative effect of social disadvantages (e.g. lower SES, experiences of social disempowerment) before, during and after migration is associated with the increased risk of psychosis in migrants, independently of ethnicity or length of stay in the country of arrival (417).

Refugees and migrants in Sweden have been identified as having an above-average risk of these conditions compared with host populations (419). In a large, prospective cohort study in Sweden, the prevalence of schizophrenia was elevated among migrants (adjusted hazard ratio, 2.20) and their children (adjusted hazard ratio, 2.00) compared with Swedish-born individuals. This is similar for compulsory hospitalization, for which the risk is highest for individuals from sub-Saharan African, Middle Eastern and north African countries compared with Swedish-born individuals (420).

However, a meta-analysis comparing refugees with non-refugee migrants in Canada found no association between the type of migration and risk of non-affective psychosis among refugees (421). Similarly, a study in Australia found no difference in overall rates of hospital admission after presentation of a first episode of psychosis among migrants compared with host populations; however, there was a higher rate of involuntary admission for migrants, especially those from Africa (422). Further research is needed to better understand the link between migration and the prevalence of psychotic disorders.

3.6.5 Child mental health

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, a study found the prevalence of moderate-to-severe PTSD among refugee Syrian schoolchildren in Jordan to be 31%; it was statistically significantly higher both in female adolescents compared with adolescent males and in children who had experienced the death of one or both parents compared with those whose parents were living (423). In Lebanon, Syrian refugee children commonly reported flashbacks (30%) and nightmares (22%) (424). In the United Arab Emirates, adolescents (aged 12–18 years) from southern Asian countries reported the highest prevalence of symptoms of depression (33.3%) compared with their counterparts from Australia, Canada and the United States (12.8%), Arabic-speaking countries (10.5%) and the United Arab Emirates (22.0%) (425).

In the United States, children of irregular migrants (aged 4–8 years) experienced greater behavioural conduct problems and hyperactivity than did older children (426). Children who had experienced family separation presented significantly more emotional problems than children who had not been separated (426). A meta-analysis of eight studies of child and adolescent refugees and asylum seekers revealed that 22.7% were diagnosed with PTSD (35% for those displaced for over 2 years), 13.8% were diagnosed with depression and 15.8% with an anxiety disorder (427). In contrast, in general populations of children and adolescents globally, there is a prevalence of 2.6% for any depressive disorder and 6.5% for any anxiety disorder (428).

Evidence from countries in the WHO African Region, the WHO European Region and the WHO Western Pacific Region further suggests that UASC and unaccompanied adolescents are at risk of developing mental health problems, such as traumatic acute stress or anxiety, and a range of behavioural and emotional problems resulting from higher levels of exposure to violence, family separation, deceased or missing family members and living in closed detention (429–436). UASC are particularly vulnerable because they may face not only exposure to multiple traumatic events, such as armed conflict, loss of close relationships and personal violence, but are also without the protective buffer of primary caregivers, as reported in research from the WHO European Region (437,438).

3.7 Communicable diseases

- Evidence shows that refugees and migrants do not spread diseases in host countries; their susceptibility to infection is increased by the environmental risk factors related to their living and working conditions.
- Delayed HIV testing and diagnosis are major challenges for refugee and migrant populations due to barriers such as limited access to health care, social stigma and discrimination, among others. Evidence indicates that post-migration acquisition of HIV/AIDS plays a key role.
- Data on prevalence of TB show a recent increase among refugee and migrant populations in countries hosting the largest numbers. However, overall prevalence in many host countries remains low. Multidrug-resistant TB and LTBI affect refugees and migrants at higher levels than host populations; evidence varies regarding the prevalence of extrapulmonary TB.
- Tropical and parasitic diseases risk spreading to non-endemic regions if timely diagnosis and treatment are not provided to mobile populations, particularly in destination countries.

Refugee and migrant workers have limited access to health care facilities and usually receive late and/or substandard treatment for malaria. Government policies may not always include malaria as an occupational health concern, meaning that migrant workers can be excluded from malaria prevention and treatment services available under the labour laws of a host country.

The control of communicable disease is a global priority, highlighted by the experience of the recent COVID-19 pandemic. New emerging and re-emerging forms of infection will continue to occur. These diseases disproportionally impact resource-constrained communities and are linked to a complex range of overlapping determinants of health, including the availability of safe drinking-water and basic sanitation (WASH), housing conditions, climate change risks, gender inequity, sociocultural factors and poverty, among others.

It is clear that displacement and migration pathways may expose refugee and migrant populations to communicable diseases during their journey to destination countries (439,440). Which specific diseases will vary immensely by region because of endemicity and local epidemiology. However, the highly prevalent infectious diseases affecting refugees and migrants globally, identified in the literature and discussed in this section, include HIV, TB and malaria. (SARS-CoV-2 is discussed separately in section 3.8.)

The risk of transmission between and within regions is increased by a lack of preventive and curative services that are mobility aware and by barriers to health care services (Chapter 4) preventing refugees and migrants from receiving timely diagnosis, treatment and care for communicable diseases.

3.7.1 HIV/AIDS

Refugee and migrant populations face numerous social, economic, political and legal barriers that have resulted in delayed testing and higher risk for HIV transmission. Refugees and migrants living with HIV report stigma and discrimination from health care workers, host societies and their own families and communities, with many choosing not to openly disclose their status because of fears of isolation and marginalization (441–450). Discrimination, among other barriers to accessing health services, is discussed further in Chapter 4.

Research across the regions documents numerous additional challenges for these populations, including language barriers, low SES, lack of knowledge and low levels of health literacy, all of which affect vulnerability to HIV transmission (72,451–455). Such challenges also threaten the success of antiretroviral therapy (ART), which is critical to maintaining viral suppression both in terms of the person's own health and in reducing the possibility of transmission (456).

Increased rates of HIV transmission in refugee and migrant populations have been observed, particularly along border areas

Girls from the Baqa'a Palestinian refugee camp in Jordan visit the National Centre for Diabetes, Endocrinology & Genetics in Amman. Such visits have become routine among school students and typically involve a general health check-up, weight measurement, and health education. © WHO / Tania Habjouqa and transportation routes around the world. Several WHO regions have also identified a geographical link between HIV serostatus and movement across international borders. One study from the WHO African Region found that high levels of HIV prevalence were significantly linked to high mobility at the national borders of Zimbabwe and discussed the potential for conditions related to mobility leading to risky behaviours, increasing vulnerability to HIV (454).

In the WHO Western Pacific Region, the border between China and Viet Nam is a high-risk area for HIV transmission, particularly for migrant sex workers seeking short-term work, because of inconsistent condom use (457). Moreover, the Thailand–Myanmar border area, where TB–HIV coinfection is prevalent among refugees and migrants, is a difficult environment for detection and treatment because many migrants are highly mobile and difficult to reach for follow-up (458). This example also raises the importance of cross-border continuity of care.

Refugees and migrants may often face discrimination from their home communities and host society (459). For example, African-born women living in the United States report pre- and post-migration HIV-related stigma, including within their families and with intimate partners, African migrant communities and the host population (447). At the border between Mexico and Guatemala, research suggests that sex and gender, social class and race/ethnicity are key determinants of HIV/AIDS-related stigma, and also provide a foundation on which migration-related stigma can be constructed (459). SGBV increases the risk of HIV infection (154).

Late-stage diagnosis of HIV/AIDS is a substantial health concern among refugee and migrant populations. In Europe, 56% of migrants from sub-Saharan African countries and 54% of migrants from south-east Asian countries present at a late stage of HIV infection (460). Research indicates that almost 30% of HIV-positive migrants in the United States were diagnosed at a late stage, a proportion higher than that of the equivalent United States population; this is a common issue among Caribbean, particularly male, migrants (461–463).

However, there is increasing evidence of post-migration acquisition of HIV, particularly in Europe (464,465): research has suggested that 63% of HIV-positive migrants in nine European countries acquired HIV after migration (466). In France, HIV acquisition after settlement was found to be linked to short or transactional partnerships, unstable housing and lack of a resident permit (449).

Mobile migrant populations – such as Shan migrant workers in Thailand and circular migrant female workers (i.e. those moving repeatedly between host and home communities) across Lake Victoria (from Kenya, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania) – cite high mobility as a barrier to accessing HIV treatment once diagnosed, in addition to stigmatization, discrimination and a perception of being at low risk (467,468).

Other groups at higher risk of infection discussed in the literature are refugee and migrant MSM and male migrant sex workers. In Lebanon, refugee MSM are more likely to engage in unprotected sex with high-risk partners compared with Lebanese MSM; however, the refugees are significantly less likely to have ever been tested for HIV (46%) compared with Lebanese MSM (62%) (448). In another study in Lebanon, refugee MSM reported feeling uncomfortable with doctors, lacking information about where to obtain free HIV testing and having experienced discrimination from health care providers based on their refugee status (455).

Male migrant sex workers in Europe have a disproportionately high burden of STIs and HIV infection, along with heightened exposure to discrimination and social exclusion, as well as limited access to health services (76,469). In the WHO Western Pacific Region, migrant MSM display a higher prevalence of HIV and STIs compared with resident MSM, with evidence suggesting that newly arrived Asian-born MSM are diagnosed at a more advanced stage of HIV infection than non-migrant MSM (470–472). Similarly, a study conducted on male migrants from African and Caribbean countries and on male Black migrants, including MSM, found that there was an association between HIV infection and STIs, including an increased risk of HPV infection and syphilis (473).

Access to treatment can be limited for refugees and migrants living with HIV, with many relying on various sources for support and services (474). Among migrant MSM with HIV in Australia, high costs led migrants to acquire ART through compassionate access schemes (471).

Malawian migrants in South Africa expressed appreciation for health care workers who dispensed a six-month supply of ART refills on their behalf to friends and family members, who then organized delivery via bus and truck drivers (475). A cross-sectional survey found that migrants from Lesotho in South Africa experienced barriers to accessing ART, including transport costs, a lack of knowledge about where to obtain ART and fears over their legal status (476). Service providers also identified a lack of transfer letters (i.e. form referrals from another clinic or other health institution) as a primary challenge in facilitating care and treatment for migrants. Among migrants with HIV in the Netherlands, risk factors for non-adherence to combination ART included low levels of social support and education (477).

Of concern are the poor health outcomes of migrants living with HIV across various contexts. In Botswana, a retrospective cohort study indicated that migrants initiated ART more rapidly than the host population; however, analysis of 5-year survival rates indicated that migrants had a higher mortality than citizens after entry into care and ART initiation (478). Compared with HIV-positive individuals from the host population in the Netherlands, HIV-positive migrants had poorer treatment outcomes and lower treatment adherence (479). Among asylum seekers in Canada, a retrospective cohort study found that 62% of newly diagnosed HIV infections were in late presenters, and only 45% received care within 30 days of diagnosis (480).

Numerous interventions and policies can be integrated into national health systems to increase testing, reduce late-stage diagnosis and improve treatment access for migrants (see also Chapter 4 on health systems). Evidence from the WHO African Region, WHO South-East Asia Region and WHO Western Pacific Region has shown that introducing diverse opportunities for HIV testing (e.g. rapid or self-testing) can provide useful alternatives for refugees and migrants who have limited access to or low levels of knowledge about local testing sites, or those concerned with stigmatization over seeking HIV services (481–483).

Intervention mapping, or a method for developing health promotion programmes, proved useful in a Ugandan refugee camp; HIV care was integrated with hypertension and diabetes services after involving community members in the implementation and planning process, thus reducing the stigma of treatment for HIV (484). Additional evidence from Australia suggests that expanding access to ART for all HIV-positive temporary residents can reduce HIV transmission without placing a significant financial burden on the national government (485).

3.7.2 Tuberculosis

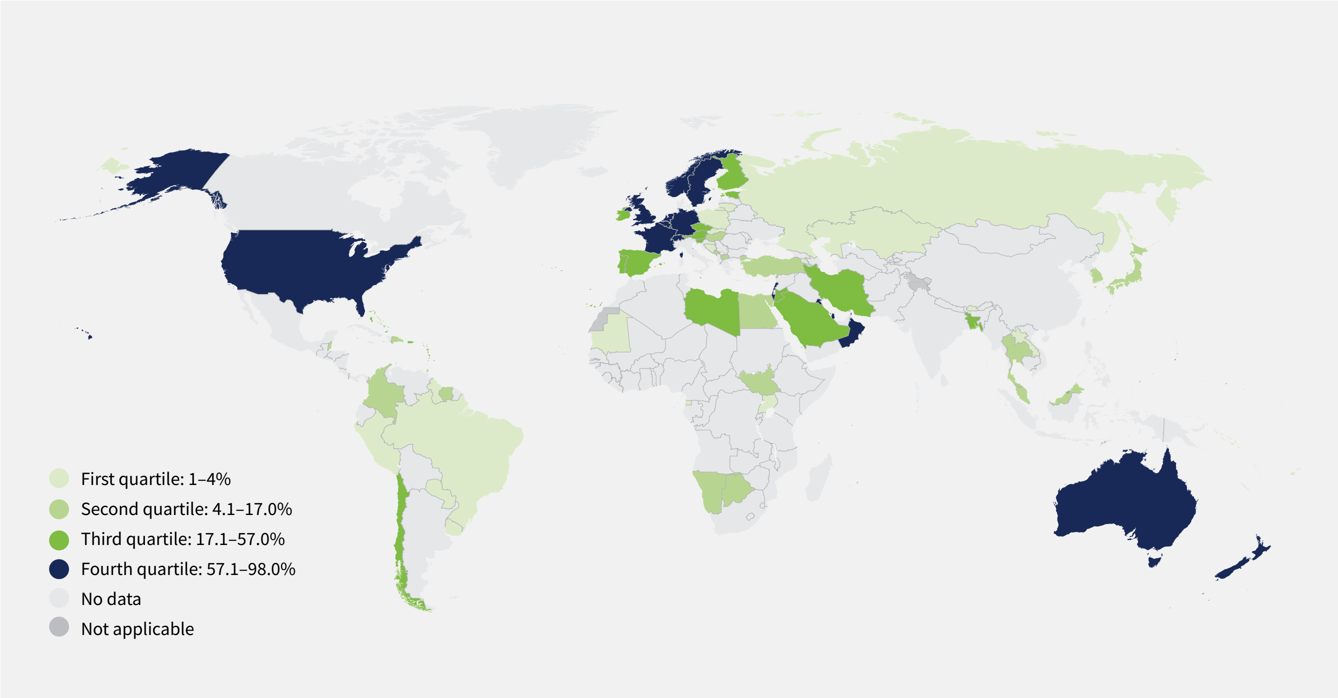
Globally, the proportion of TB cases of foreign origin varies considerably, with refugee- and migrant-hosting locations – including Australia and the United States, as well as western European countries – reporting higher proportions of foreign-origin cases, as illustrated in Fig. 3.7 (486).

Refugee and migrant populations experience a range of living conditions that often make them more vulnerable to TB transmission, including overcrowding, poorly ventilated living quarters, suboptimal shelters made with air-impermeable plastic sheets, informal settlements and unstable housing (see also Chapter 2 for a description of housing and living settings as a health determinant) (487,488).

However, studies demonstrate that, while risk of TB transmission is increased within migrant communities and households, there is no increased risk of TB transmission to host populations. Where there is a functioning surveillance system and a universal public health system that includes migrants, there is low risk of transmission from migrant populations to host populations (489).

Foreign-born patients with TB represent 8.7% of all TB cases in the WHO European Region in 2019, although this varies widely between EU and European Economic Area (EEA) countries (34.5%) and non-EU/EEA countries and areas (2.2%) (490). There is also high variability between countries: the proportion of TB cases of foreign origin is high in Malta (95.9%) and Luxembourg (90.0%), but low in Bulgaria (0%)

Fig. 3.7. Proportion of TB cases among foreign-born individuals, 2020



First quartile: 1–4%
Second quartile: 4.1–17.0%
Third quartile: 17.1–57.0%
Fourth quartile: 57.1–98.0%
No data
Not applicable

Source: WHO (483).

and Romania (0.4%) (note that Romania has the highest incidence of TB cases in EU/EEA countries at 66 per 100 000) (490). In Jordan, 29.3% of TB cases among Syrian refugees are in refugees residing in camps, despite the fact that only a small proportion of all Syrian refugees (17.1%) reside in camps (491).

Fig. 3.8 illustrates the changing proportion of TB cases that were of foreign origin in the five most popular destination and host countries for migrants during 2008–2020 (486). Although four of these countries (Germany, Saudi Arabia, the United Kingdom and the United States) showed a trend of a slow increase in the proportion of TB cases of foreign origin, the proportion remained almost unchanged in the Russian Federation during 2008–2020 (492).

Fig. 3.9 depicts the changing proportions of new TB and retreatment of relapsed TB occurring in people of foreign origin in the countries hosting the largest (Germany; 2008–2020), second largest (Türkiye; 2008–2020) and fifth largest (Colombia; 2018–2020) number of refugees. The data indicate a steep increase in the proportion of TB cases occurring in people of foreign origin in Germany and Türkiye during 2008–2020. Data from the third- and fourth-largest refugee-hosting countries, Pakistan and Uganda, were not available: Pakistan does not currently collect or report TB data disaggregated by foreign-born individuals, and data from Uganda were available only for 2020 (3%). Germany is the only country to be included within the five most popular destinations for both refugees and migrants;

Fig. 3.8. Proportion of TB cases attributable to foreign-born individuals in the five top destination countries for international migrants, 2008–2020

Source: WHO (483).

Fig. 3.9. Proportion of TB cases attributable to foreign-born individuals in three of the five top destination countries for refugees, 2008–2020 the proportion of TB cases in Germany occurring in refugees and migrants was 70% in 2020.

Source: WHO (483).

The numerous challenges to be faced along the displacement and migration pathways can simultaneously increase the vulnerability of refugees and migrants to TB and limit their access to care. As for HIV, treatment interruption poses a major risk and can contribute to drug resistance. Factors such as deportation, low levels of screening and exposure to medical and social risk factors can complicate the detection and successful treatment of TB for refugee and migrant populations (493–497).

As observed in migrants along the Thailand–Myanmar border, the ability to manage the condition is affected by the expensive and arduous cross-border migration between countries with different burdens of TB; the unavailability of appropriate treatment regimens at various stages of migration; and interrupted, unsuccessful or unaffordable treatment (498). The nature of the disease, coupled with an increased risk of exposure to other communicable diseases, also increases the coinfection risk for migrants (Box 3.4) (499–501).

Box 3.4.

Coinfection with tuberculosis and HIV

Sub-Saharan Africa experiences the largest burden of TB and HIV, accounting for two thirds (67%) of the population living with HIV globally in 2020 and 95% of global TB deaths. Infection with HIV is a known risk factor for new infection with Mycobacterium tuberculosis and for progression of latent tuberculosis (TB) to active disease (492,499,502). TB–HIV coinfection accelerates the decline of immunological functions if untreated and makes both harder to treat. TB–HIV coinfection is of particular concern among refugee and migrant populations. Data from refugee camps in Ethiopia indicate that HIV infection is associated with unsuccessful TB treatment outcomes (500). Evidence from the Gambella region in Ethiopia further supports these findings; a retrospective study comparing treatment outcomes for TB found lower treatment success rates (74.2%) in refugees than in surrounding communities (88.1%), while rural, female and HIV-negative patients with TB were more likely to be successfully treated than their respective counterparts (i.e. urban, male and TB–HIV-coinfected patients) (501). A high prevalence of HIV (24.2%) has been reported in communities in southern Mozambique, the origin of migrant miners. A further 7.5% of miners within these communities have reported previous TB infection, a major concern because many display limited knowledge of TB prevention methods as well as low levels of condom use (57).

Multidrug-resistant TB, LTBI and extrapulmonary TB. Various forms of TB affect refugees and migrants on a regional level, with notable trends varying across the WHO regions. Drug-resistant TB is a prominent emerging concern for migrant and displaced populations in many regions (458,503–507).

In EU and EEA countries, the highest prevalence of multidrug-resistant TB and extensively drug-resistant TB was observed among migrants of non-EU/EEA origin (508). In the United States, migrants present with greater resistance to anti-TB medicines compared with the local population, although this varies by regional origin and type of medicine. Compared with the local population, migrants from Latin America have TB with more resistance to pyrazinamide, and migrants from other subregions, including southern Asia, Asian–Pacific and eastern European countries, have TB with higher resistance to ethambutol (509). Similarly, newly arrived migrants in Qatar are more likely to have drug-resistant TB than the local population (510).

There is limited evidence about how refugee and migrant populations are affected by extrapulmonary TB, although its lower prevalence in migrants (16.7%) in Saudi Arabia compared with the host population (83.3%) has been reported (511,512). However, evidence from Ethiopian refugee camps has indicated a slightly higher prevalence of extrapulmonary TB in refugees (22.8%) compared with populations in surrounding communities (18.2%), as well as higher risk of unsuccessful treatment outcomes (501). According to a cross-sectional analysis of 23 years of data (1995–2017) from 32 countries in the WHO European Region, the proportion of extrapulmonary TB among all cases of TB is greater among migrants (45.2%) than among non-migrants (21.7%) (513). Extrapulmonary TB is linked to risk factors such as extremes of age (children and older adults), female sex, HIV-positive status, comorbidities (e.g. chronic renal disease and diabetes) and coming from countries with a high TB incidence rate.

Throughout the WHO Western Pacific Region, TB cases attributed to the reactivation of LTBI in migrants from high-incidence countries is a growing concern for low-incidence countries. In Australia, 34.4% of LTBI cases in 2016 were estimated to have occurred in migrants who had migrated since 2007, mostly from China, India and the Philippines, with new migrants who were younger than 35 years making up 16.3% of those with LTBI (514). Similarly, in Singapore the prevalence of LTBI was higher in migrants from India (30.8%) and China (17.1%) than for Singapore-born study participants (10.7%) (515). Further evidence from Japan suggests that migrant populations faced a greater risk of interrupting their LTBI treatment and being lost to follow-up (516).

As a result of the high prevalence of LTBI among migrants, it has been suggested that low-incidence countries should make screening for LTBI a top priority. This has been implemented in the WHO European Region, where 22 of the 36 countries assessed were found to include LTBI screenings in refugee centres (517). However, this approach is complex since evidence indicates that mass population-wide LTBI testing and treatment are not feasible because of imperfect tests, stigma around screening, the risk of serious or fatal side-effects from treatment, and high costs for an unproven public health impact. Current guidance, including that of the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control, indicate targeting LTBI screening at individuals from countries with higher TB incidence (518).

Therefore, a comprehensive package of interventions is necessary, including testing relevant individuals, ensuring consistent monitoring and evaluation of TB interventions, and delivering safe and effective treatment regimens with no (or minimal) risk of adverse events (519–521). Interventions should also include public health services that specifically include refugees and migrants as well as testing and treatment focused on mobile populations.

Various studies and analyses have been conducted to determine the feasibility and effectiveness of different TB programmes. A study in Canada highlighted the cost–effectiveness of pre-immigration LTBI screening for migrants moving to low-incidence countries (522). Evidence from the United Kingdom supports multidisease screening – combining testing for LTBI, HIV, HBV and hepatitis C virus (HCV) – indicating it is not only feasible but also needed, considering the high proportion of previously unscreened migrants (523). In response to the lack of evidence for the cost–effectiveness of screening migrants for TB, a European database of multicountry evidence has been established (524). A study of TB prevalence among visa applicants to Australia – predominantly young adults from various Asian countries – reported that prevalence among this group was declining and likely to remain low. The study concluded that Australian support for TB control programmes overseas and preventive interventions were likely to have the greatest impact on the domestic TB burden (525).

Consistently, studies have shown that the various types of TB disproportionately affect refugees and migrants. In Spain, a retrospective observational study of people with spinal TB found that the percentage of these who were foreign born increased from 14% to 45.2% over 10 years (526). According to one study, 90% of all cases of bone and joint TB in the United Kingdom occurred in migrants, with many experiencing treatment delays between the onset of symptoms and referral to a tertiary orthopaedic centre (527).

Also in the United Kingdom, a retrospective study concluded that 93% of patients with intestinal TB were born abroad, primarily in Africa and the Indian subcontinent; however, diagnosis is challenging and often delayed (528). Among Syrian refugees with pulmonary TB in Türkiye, higher numbers of patients stopping or transferring treatment were reported and fewer Syrian patients were successfully treated (63.6%) compared with Turkish patients (88.8%) (529).

3.7.3 Malaria

Displacement and migration are critical when considering the control of malaria, particularly in low-transmission or non-endemic countries where imported cases can present additional challenges to diagnosis and treatment, such as in refugee transit or reception centres or in labour migrant contexts. Conversely, refugees and migrants moving to areas of high transmission of malaria from non-endemic areas are at a higher risk of developing severe forms of malaria.

Notably, the WHO European Region and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region demonstrate interregional transmission of malaria, with countries reporting an increase in imported malaria cases (530–534). In the WHO European Region, the re-emergence of cases of malaria has been attributed to people in transit from sub-Saharan African countries and to malaria occurring in refugees and migrants from countries where the disease is prevalent (535–538). In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, low- and zero-incidence countries, such as Kuwait, Qatar and Saudi Arabia, have experienced increased numbers of cases of malaria among migrants, underscoring the importance of having national malaria surveillance systems in place to detect areas of concern (539–541). Evidence from Henan Province in China, which has been in the malaria elimination stage since 2010, illustrates these risks: more than 90% of imported malaria cases have occurred in labour migrants from Africa, primarily Angola, Equatorial Guinea and Nigeria (542). Similarly, evidence from Nepal shows that more than half (54.1%) of cases of malaria occurring in border districts are imported (543).

Research from the WHO South-East Asia Region indicates that refugee and migrant populations face multiple barriers to accessing health care for malaria, such as reduced access to health facilities, including issues with distance and lack of transportation; a lack of awareness of health services, particularly the availability of free testing and treatment for malaria, as well as low levels of health literacy; and the perception that screening is necessary only for the unwell (543–545).

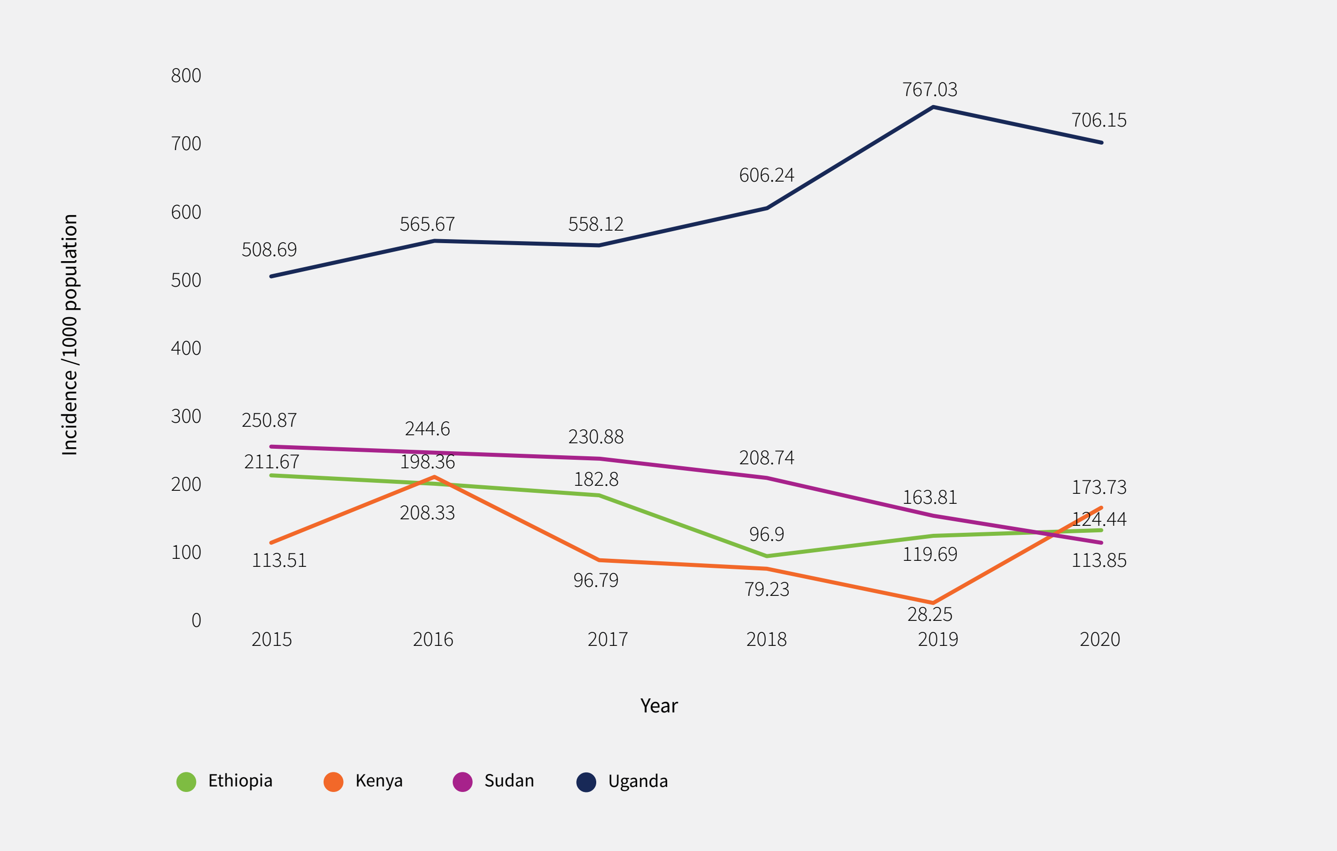
There is ongoing intraregional transmission of malaria in the WHO African Region and WHO Region of the Americas where, for example, Venezuelan refugees and migrants in Colombia are seeking health care services for malaria in increasing numbers (546), and the transmission of malaria in refugee camps in Ethiopia and Uganda continues to particularly affect young children, especially those under 5 years of age (547–549).

Fig. 3.10 shows the incidence of malaria among refugees in Ethiopia, Kenya, Sudan and Uganda from 2015 to 2020, as recorded by the Integrated Refugee Health Information System (also known as the iRHIS) (550). The incidence of malaria among refugees remained relatively constant in Ethiopia and Sudan, declining only slightly from 2015 to 2020. However, an increase in incidence was observed in Kenya from 2019 to 2020, following a steady decline during previous years. A gradual increase in malaria incidence was reported in Uganda from 2015 to 2019, with a slight decrease in 2020.

According to data from the Standardized Expanded Nutrition Survey (551), there was a sharp decline in the proportion of households with at least one long-lasting insecticide-treated net in refugee camps in Kenya from 2018 to 2019 (Fig. 3.11). Although the data sets in Fig. 3.10 and Fig. 3.11 are of different types, and a decrease in the incidence of malaria cannot be directly associated with increased use of the long-lasting insecticide-treated net, the nets are one of the interventions proven to combat malaria. These data indicate the need for further interventions to convert available knowledge into practice.

Geography and type of employment often influence, and can increase, the risk of malaria for refugee and migrant populations. In the Greater Mekong subregion of south-east Asia, migrants employed as rubber tappers, forest workers, miners, military personnel and farmers often work near border regions and forest fringe areas that are highly receptive to malaria, such as the Thailand–Myanmar border (552–554). Refugee and migrant workers have limited access to health care facilities and usually receive late and/or substandard treatment for malaria. Government policies may not always include malaria as an

Fig. 3.10. Incidence of malaria among refugee populations in Ethiopia, Kenya, Sudan and Uganda, 2015–2020



Source: UNHCR, unpublished data.

Fig. 3.11. Proportion of households owning at least one long-lasting insecticide-treated net in selected refugee camps in Ethiopia, Kenya, Sudan and Uganda, 2015–2019 occupational health concern, meaning that migrant workers can be excluded from malaria prevention and treatment services available under the labour laws of a host country (555,556).

Source: UNHCR (545).

In the WHO African Region, increased elevation also appears to be associated with a higher burden of malaria, as observed in the elevated Kiziba refugee camps in Rwanda and in migrant labourers in north-western Ethiopia; evidence has suggested that labourers in highland areas are 2.34 times more likely to develop malaria than those in lowland areas (557,558).

3.7.4 Other communicable diseases

Other communicable diseases affect refugees and migrants on a regional or more local level, and there are gaps in the data that reveal the need for increased diagnosis, testing and surveillance to contain transmission and provide treatment. Several diseases affect refugee and migrant populations across the WHO regions, including leprosy in islands off the coast of eastern Africa (e.g. the Comoros archipelago, Madagascar, Mayotte and Réunion), strongyloidiasis in migrants from Latin America in the United States and Europe, and dengue and chikungunya in migrants in Qatar (559–561). Hepatitis, leishmaniasis and Chagas disease are briefly discussed in this section, as they continue to affect refugee and migrant populations across several WHO regions. Additional waterborne, tropical and parasitic infections known to affect refugees and migrants are also briefly discussed.

Hepatitis. Throughout the regions, refugees and migrants consistently have a higher prevalence of hepatitis than their host country counterparts.

In data collected from a sample of the pre-entry health assessments conducted on all refugee applicants to the United Kingdom as part of their resettlement, the positivity rate for HBV infection was found to be the highest among the communicable diseases assessed (2.04% of the cohort), with risk factors including sub-Saharan African origin and a history of blood transfusions (562). In Canada, a higher prevalence of HCV infection was detected in migrants than in non-migrants, with migrants having a seroprevalence 1.5–1.7 times higher than the host population (563). Among undocumented migrants and uninsured legal residents in the Netherlands, one study found a higher prevalence of chronic HBV and HCV infections than in the host population, with many cases being newly diagnosed (564). In Thailand, migrant sex workers have a higher prevalence of HBV infection (11.4%) than that observed in the general population (4%) (74); in the EU/EEA, the HBV prevalence for migrants from endemic regions is 5% compared with 1% in the general population (74,565).

A review of national policies and guidelines for delivering TB, HIV, HBV and HCV services for refugees and migrants in the WHO European Region found that policies are often not in alignment with WHO's recommendations, and services may not always be accessible to migrant populations. For example, France, Italy and the United Kingdom have similar HBV screening policies; however, screening and testing may not always be routine, and can depend on the judgement of a physician (566). In Italy, thresholds are reported for both HBV and HCV (566).

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, hepatitis E virus antibody-positive cases are nearly double (22.9%) in non-Qataris than in the host population (11.5%) (567). In Lebanon, outbreaks of hepatitis A virus infection have been associated with the Syrian refugee crisis, particularly in the settlement areas in the Beqaa and North governorates (568). This highlights the need for greater surveillance efforts in the Region in addition to vaccination and sanitation efforts to prevent further outbreaks. A small pilot study among Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh found a prevalence of HCV infection that was 10 times greater than that of the host population, highlighting the risk of severe liver disease in the long term in this migrant group (569).

A lack of awareness or knowledge of hepatitis was reported as a key risk factor among refugees and migrants in several studies. In Ethiopia, 86.5% of refugees in the Gambella Region did not know how HBV and HCV infections are transmitted, and 86.8% were unaware of the availability of the HBV vaccine (570); this lack of knowledge was of major concern as, in this study, the overall prevalence of the HBV surface antigen (HBsAg, indicating infectious disease) and HCV antibodies among refugees was 7.3% and 2.0%, respectively. Similarly, in Australia limited knowledge of the types of hepatitis, as well as transmission and treatment for the disease, was reported among Arabic- and Assyrian-speaking migrants; most strikingly, community health workers (CHWs) were found to have little knowledge of HBV infection (571).

Leishmaniasis. Leishmaniasis, a neglected tropical disease, has been identified in refugee and migrant populations in the WHO African Region, WHO Region of the Americas, WHO European Region and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region. It has also been diagnosed among refugees in Türkiye, Syrian refugees in Jordan, Venezuelan migrants in Brazil and agricultural migrant labourers in north-west Ethiopia: coinfection with malaria and visceral leishmaniasis was also diagnosed in Ethiopia (572–575).

Various changes in disease patterns have been noted, including visceral leishmaniasis changing from endemic to a sporadic form among migrants in rural parts of the Islamic Republic of Iran, as well as high rates of cutaneous leishmaniasis in migrants in Saudi Arabia (576–578). Timely diagnosis can be complicated by the introduction of locally uncommon species of leishmaniasis following intraregional migration, and various socioeconomic and environmental factors can lead to complex clinical presentations, requiring frequent and repeated systemic treatment (579,580).

Chagas disease. Chagas disease, a parasitic disease endemic in Latin America, has had regional implications for migrant populations in the WHO Region of the Americas and the WHO European Region as it is estimated that many infected with this neglected tropical disease are undiagnosed (581,582). Challenges to early detection include the high proportion of asymptomatic cases, but there are also policy barriers to health services for this disease (583).

For example, research suggests that Bolivian migrants in Brazil have faced obstacles to accessing Chagas-related services, such as language barriers and requirements for identity documents, but also current approaches to the disease do not consider the distinct epidemiological profiles of different groups (584). Access to screening and care is particularly important for Bolivian migrants in Brazil, since research suggests that a history of rural jobs in the Plurinational State of Bolivia is significantly associated with the disease (585).

Migration from Latin America to Europe has raised concerns over diagnosis and treatment of Chagas disease. Of concern is the high prevalence among Latin American migrants in Europe compared with Latin Americans in their country of origin. For example, prevalences of 18.1% and 5.5% were recorded among migrants from the Plurinational State of Bolivia and Paraguay, respectively, higher than their national prevalence estimates (586). Further, 43% of identified cases in Europe are among people living in Spain (587).

However, comprehensive public health approaches can have a positive impact. For example, improved rates of screening among Bolivians in Madrid were associated with people having received information about Chagas in Spain and being advised to test, especially if the advice was provided by a medical professional (588).

Recent research from across WHO regions indicates that various refugee and migrant groups, including children, have experienced a disproportionate burden of COVID-19, often exacerbated by socioeconomic and health system factors.

Waterborne, tropical and parasitic infections. Several waterborne, tropical and parasitic infections affect refugees and migrants, with specific subpopulations at higher risk. In the WHO African Region and WHO Region of the Americas, cholera and diarrhoeal diseases affect refugee and migrant groups, with a particularly high prevalence reported in children under 5 years of age (126,589,590): for example, children in refugee camps in Kenya who are younger than 5 years were reported as having a risk of cholera that was 51% higher than for children aged 5 years and older (591).

Factors contributing to an increased risk of childhood diarrhoea include a lack of proper handwashing facilities, consumption of surface water and the lack of a latrine, as indicated in the context of a refugee camp in Ethiopia (592).

Regarding parasitic infections, refugees and migrants are at risk of a variety of infections, including helminth infections among TB-positive refugees in the United States, Cryptosporidium spp. infections among migrant workers in Qatar and schistosomiasis among asymptomatic Eritrean refugees in Europe (593–595). Refugees and migrants in sub-Saharan African countries continue to be at risk for infection from tropical and other communicable diseases, including leprosy, Rift Valley fever and trachoma (559,596–598).

3.8 COVID-19

- There are increased risks for SARS-CoV-2 infection and severe COVID-19 among some refugees and migrants, especially for those who live in crowded conditions, have occupations in which working from home is not possible, and live in countries where national and local policies exclude refugees and migrants from pandemic-related health services.
- Positive examples exist from countries that include and encourage refugees and migrants, regardless of status, to get tested and vaccinated and seek health care.
- The indirect impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic are significant, including loss of income, being stranded by travel restrictions, having limited access to information due to language and other barriers and facing discrimination.
- Financial barriers, language barriers, fear of deportation and lack of trust in health care services prove to be significant barriers for refugees and migrants in seeking health care, including for suspected COVID-19.
- Where essential health care workers include significant numbers of migrants, such workers were at a much greater risk of severe COVID-19 than non-essential workers.

The COVID-19 pandemic has exposed vulnerabilities and exacerbated inequalities within and between all countries. The pandemic has been very hard on the poor, who have experienced higher rates of infection, hospitalization and death than the wealthier. They have also been hit particularly hard by the economic slowdowns associated with restrictive measures.

Among the most adversely affected people have been refugees and migrants, who have been disproportionately and systematically disadvantaged with respect to social standing and economic and political power, often experiencing crowded work or living conditions over which they have no effective control, and who have had less access to vaccinations and health care.

3.8.1 Burden of disease

Recent research from across WHO regions indicates that various refugee and migrant groups, including children, have experienced a disproportionate burden of COVID-19, often exacerbated by socioeconomic and health system factors (599–605). Older refugees and migrants are at particular risk because of the nature of the disease and their migratory status, particularly those in transit or irregular situations (606,607).

In June 2021, the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control identified occupational risk, overcrowded accommodation in camps and closed settings (including detention and reception centres), and lower levels of accessibility of public health services as the main risk factors for refugee and migrant exposure to SARS-CoV-2, and low COVID-19 vaccine uptake in migrants compounding the issue (608). This is consistent with reported outbreaks in WHO European Region detention centres (see section 2.11.2 on immigration detention) and camp-like settings, and in non-closed containment settings, in which transmission is linked to neighbourhood deprivation levels, poor hygiene facilities and limited ability to physically distance or self-isolate (609–612). For example, countries that host large numbers of low-wage migrant workers had a significantly higher proportion of migrants testing positive compared with the host population (613,614).

Conversely, a study investigating the impact of COVID-19 in the Italian reception system for migrants and refugees in the first pandemic wave reported an incidence of cases in line with that of the general resident population in Italy (612).

Refugees and migrants also face additional risks as a result of their living and working conditions. For refugees from Bhutan and Myanmar in the United States who were part of the essential workforce, having an infected family member increased their likelihood of infection by 26.9%, which was of particular concern given that refugee families often reside in multigenerational households (615). Early evidence suggests that COVID-19 transmission was significantly lower than might have been expected among refugees in camps in Bangladesh (616).

However, there are insufficient disaggregated data from which to make generalizations. Moreover, as with most refugee and migrant health concerns, disease transmission is context specific and subject to many determinants (Fig. 3.12) (617).

3.8.2 Health and other impacts

The COVID-19 pandemic has had a variety of indirect effects on the health of refugee and migrant populations across a wide range of sectors. In several high-income countries in the WHO European Region, for example, social distancing and lockdown measures affected the ability of migrants to access social protections, such as furlough-type payments, particularly for self-employed and day labourers (618,619). Other indirect impacts include proliferating restrictive migration measures, such as border closings, the suspension of resettlement programmes and processing of asylum applications (620) and job losses (621–624), which have often exacerbated pre-existing structural inequalities.

Fig. 3.12. Compounding risks for migrants in the context of COVID-19

UNDOCUMENTED OR IRREGULAR STATUS
Lack of legal status may create formal barriers or lead to a reluctance to access assistance because of fear of arrest.

STIGMA AND DISCRIMINATION
Increasing discrimination and stigma, as well as blame for spreading COVID-19, can prevent people from seeking assistance and support.

POOR LIVING AND WORKING CONDITIONS
Conditions may include overcrowding, such as in camp or detention settings, inadequate sanitation and hygiene, and inability to isolate or physically distance.

EXCLUSION
Migrants may be deprioritized or excluded from health care and prevention and response efforts.

LOSS OF SOCIAL SUPPORTS
Loss of contact with family and community networks because of quarantine and/or border closures, can prevent return home and lead to anxiety because of isolation.

LABOUR EXPLOITATION AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING
Epidemics and pandemics can exacerbate existing vulnerabilities and put people at a greater risk of exploitation and trafficking.

LIMITED OR NO ACCESS TO ESSENTIAL SERVICES
There may be informal and formal barriers to accessing essential services, such as food, shelter, health care, psychosocial support, legal assistance, and water, sanitation and hygiene services.

SEX AND GENDER
Female domestic workers are often employed in isolated workplaces and at an increased risk of sexual and gender-based violence because of lockdown and movement restrictions.

SOCIAL, RELIGIOUS AND CULTURAL OBSTACLES
Lack of familiarity with and awareness of health procedures and available support, and a lack of culturally appropriate services may prevent health care access.

COMMUNICATION BARRIERS
There may be barriers in understanding or accessing key information on health care and challenges in reporting health conditions.

FINANCIAL BARRIERS
Financial barriers may prevent access to health systems and support, including a lack of insurance and high costs of care or the cost of transport to health care centres.

PROTECTION AND SAFETY
Refugees and migrants may be unable to seek safety because of border closures and travel or movement restrictions.

Source: International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (610).

In the WHO ApartTogether survey of 30 000 refugees and migrants globally (625), refugees and migrants reported that the COVID-19 pandemic significantly affected their access to work, their personal safety and financial means, as well as their social and mental well-being. Homeless refugees and migrants, refugees and migrants living in insecure accommodation or asylum centres, and irregular migrants reported the worst impacts of the pandemic on their daily lives. The same groups, as well as respondents without any schooling, were also less likely to seek health care for suspected COVID-19 symptoms. As shown in Fig. 3.13, the main reasons for not seeking health care were financial constraints (35%) and fear of deportation (22%).

Impact on women and girls. There is considerable evidence that refugee and migrant women and girls have been severely affected in many ways, from their mental health to their ability to earn their livelihoods to an increased risk of child marriage (626–631).

Fig. 3.13. Reasons for not seeking medical care in case of suspected COVID-19 symptoms

Source: WHO (618).

A qualitative study on refugee women in Nairobi, Kenya, reported an increase in home deliveries during the pandemic and reduced uptake of ANC services, as well as the uptake of facility-based services becoming more challenging (632).

The United Nations Population Fund reported that the increased poverty and school closures associated with the COVID-19 pandemic led to an even higher prevalence of marriage at a young age in the Middle East and in northern African countries (633). In 2020 it was estimated that half a million more girls were at risk of child marriage because of the pandemic. As many as half of all refugee girls in secondary school will not return when schools reopen; in countries where the enrolment at school of refugee girls is less than 10%, such as Ethiopia and Pakistan, all school-aged girls are at risk of dropping out permanently (630).

The pandemic has also had significant impacts on the trafficking and exploitation of Sri Lankan female migrant workers, as illegal recruiters and traffickers have taken advantage of their increased livelihood insecurity, school closures, and job and income losses (634). A study on SGBV against women in Syrian refugee camps in Jordan provided evidence of a trend of increased violence during the pandemic (635).

Impact on mental health. Refugees and migrants participating in the WHO ApartTogether survey reported a significant impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and associated lockdowns on their mental health conditions (Fig. 3.14). About 50% of respondents reported higher levels of symptoms of depression, worry, anxiety and loneliness, while 20% reported an increased use of drugs and alcohol. Other preliminary evidence supported the finding that the mental health of refugees and migrants worsened during the pandemic (623,636–640).

Impact on livelihoods and nutrition. The indirect or secondary consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic have extended well beyond physical health to have economic, nutritional, educational and security implications. Syrian refugee families in Lebanon have been economically affected, with 80% of breadwinners losing their jobs and 60% experiencing a reduction in wages, leaving many unable to afford basic needs. A total of 70% of Syrian refugee children did not continue their education at home and experienced behavioural changes because of increased stress and anxiety (621).

Regarding food security, refugee camps in Rwanda experienced a reduction in food rations as a result of declining donations to the World Food Programme (641). In Asia, nearly 660 000 migrant workers were returned to Bangladesh following the outbreak of the pandemic, a further 2 million face possible deportation and at least 71 000 migrants were estimated to have returned to Myanmar by May 2020, primarily from Thailand (642–645).

Fig. 3.14. Migrant and refugee respondents identifying deterioration in their mental health since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, by their housing situation

Note: number of respondents for each issue: 15 278 depression, 15 483 worry, 15 291 anxiety, 14 730 loneliness, 13 340 anger, 13 454 reminders, 12 344 physical stress reactions, 13 343 irritability, 13 314 hopelessness, 13 232 sleep problems, 8 915 drugs and alcohol (survey question used this term); number of participants differed by housing situation, e.g. for depression the number responding were 13 562 for house/apartment, 359 for asylum center, 1190 for refugee camp, 167 for on the streets or in insecure accommodation.

Source: WHO (618).

Discrimination and stigma. Refugees and migrants participating in the WHO ApartTogether survey also reported that discrimination increased in the context of the pandemic (Fig. 3.15); this was particularly felt by homeless respondents and those living in insecure accommodation or asylum centres. Other reports also suggest that racism and discrimination increased during the pandemic. For example, discrimination and xenophobia against Asian individuals was reported to have increased in some countries following the virus outbreak in Wuhan, China (646,647).

Restrictions on movement. The COVID-19 pandemic and resulting restrictive migration policies strongly affected global mobility and international migration. Shortly after WHO declared the SARS-CoV-2 outbreak a pandemic in March 2020 (648), many States introduced travel restrictions and border closures.

Mobility restrictions in 2020 during the pandemic can be categorized into three phases. In the first phase (January–March 2020), countries introduced many mobility restrictions in the form of travel bans and health requirements. Borders were closed at an unprecedented level, even within the border-free Schengen area (622).

Fig. 3.15. Migrant and refugee respondents identifying worsening of perceived discrimination because of the COVID-19 pandemic

Note: data from a total of 19 009 respondents. 16 143 treated differently because of origin; 18 131 treated with kindness; 13 185 called names because of origin/religion, 13 499 being avoided, 13 932 being anxious about me, 11 062 unfair treatment by police.

Source: WHO (618).

In April 2020, about 91% of the world's population lived in countries with travel restrictions for non-citizens and non-residents; 39% lived in countries with complete border closure for non-citizens and non-residents (649).

In the second phase (June–September 2020), most countries introduced a staggered reopening. Travel bans were increasingly replaced by health measures, such as COVID-19 tests. However, some island countries, such as Australia and New Zealand, kept their borders closed to pursue an elimination strategy against the virus. In the third phase (October–December 2020), countries responded to new outbreaks and virus mutations. Health certificates were increasingly introduced as new travel measures, while screening and quarantine requirements were increasingly phased out. Because of new virus mutations, restrictions were imposed on travel from South Africa and the United Kingdom. These measures continued into the first months of 2021 (622).

UNDESA estimated that by mid-2020 the number of migrants globally decreased by 2 million. This corresponds to a decrease of 27% in the expected growth between July 2019 and June 2020 (650). Member States of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) reported that the number of new residence permits granted to migrants dropped by an average of 46% in the first half of 2020 (651). Similarly, refugee flows were affected. In the first half of 2020, 586 100 new claims for asylum were submitted globally, corresponding to 32% less than during the same period in 2019. Resettlement numbers dropped even more significantly in the first half of 2020 (by 46%) compared with the same period in 2019 (652).

Many labour migrants were not able to return to their countries of origin during the pandemic, a serious burden for those who had lost their jobs. The IOM estimated that at least 2.75 million migrants were stranded as of July 2020 (653), some without sufficient resources or access to consular assistance and at risk of losing their legal status (622). Many migrant workers decided to return to their home countries out of fear of a worsening COVID-19 situation, job loss, expected job loss or expiration of their work permit. However, particularly during the first months of the pandemic in 2020, many migrant workers were not able to return because international flights were reduced or cancelled, and home governments were not accepting large numbers of returnees (654).

Irregular migration continued throughout the pandemic, but at lower levels than would normally have been observed (655). Many risks of the journey were exacerbated; for example, fewer search and rescue operations were running and border closures often resulted in individuals travelling by more dangerous routes.

Impact on working and living conditions. Refugees and migrants living and working in crowded settings were particularly exposed to SARS-CoV-2 infection. Outbreaks were reported globally in different refugee camps, shelters, accommodation facilities for migrant workers, and reception and detention centres (614,656–658). Because of the crowded settings, refugees and migrants may not have been able to follow prevention measures, such as hand hygiene, social distancing or self-isolation for symptoms and infection (609,656,658,659). Data on the spread of SARS-CoV-2 in refugee camps are scarce, although some reports indicated that the number of cases in refugee camps remained lower than projected. Reasons for this could be the isolation of camps from local communities and undertesting (660,661).

However, migrant workers, and particularly low-skilled migrant workers, faced an increased risk of exposure to the virus at their workplaces and dormitories. During the early months of the COVID-19 pandemic in Kuwait, significant spread and clustering events occurred among migrant workers as a result of their poor and densely populated living conditions (662). Data from Singapore show that migrant workers were disproportionally affected by the pandemic, with migrant workers living in dormitories accounting for 93% of the total confirmed COVID-19 cases in that country (614,663).

Refugees and migrants often work in critical sectors, which were strongly affected by the pandemic (664–666). In the United States, 69% of all migrants in the labour force, 74% of all migrant workers with irregular status and 70% of refugees were classified as essential workers, that is, they were employed in sectors such as meat packaging, agriculture, health care, construction, child care or critical retail (667).

Health care workers were disproportionately affected, and contributed substantially to the front line of the COVID-19 response in many countries (658,668). A study of the contributions of migrants in OECD countries cited the examples of Australia and Luxembourg, where 50% of doctors are foreign born, and of Israel and Switzerland, where 30% of nurses are foreign born (669). Of the 20 countries with the highest numbers of COVID-19 cases globally (as of 1 March 2021), seven depend heavily on migrant workers in the health care sector: Czechia, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States (669).

A study among different occupational groups in the United Kingdom showed that many essential workers (i.e. those occupations deemed critical to the COVID-19 response) were at heightened risk of infection and severe COVID-19. At the top of this category, health care workers were found to have a sevenfold higher risk of infection, while social care and transport workers had a twofold higher risk. Further analysis of the data revealed that non-white essential workers had the highest risk of severe COVID-19 (670).

3.8.3 Policy responses

National responses to COVID-19 varied considerably; policies ranged from discriminatory practices, excluding refugees and migrants from access to health care, to inclusive policies, integrating migrants and refugees within COVID-19 responses and protecting them according to international conventions. Although national responses varied, many countries ensured access to health care for all migrants and refugees regardless of nationality and legal status. With regards to legal status and access to the labour market, numerous States followed a flexible approach in terms of administrative migration procedures. Several States suspended forced returns and implemented alternatives to immigration detention, taking into consideration the health concerns of the public (620).

Research from the WHO African Region suggests that previous experience of Ebola outbreaks was beneficial to the response to COVID-19; for example, populations were already familiar with the importance of handwashing; previously established laboratory systems assisted in providing earlier COVID-19 diagnoses; control over irregular border crossings was improved; and health care workers had already received training in both containing transmission of the virus and in understanding how xenophobia and discrimination could affect refugees and migrants during disease outbreaks (671–673).

Countries in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, such as Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, announced that those with COVID-19 could receive free medical treatment in public health hospitals regardless of their migratory status (674). However, a lack of institutional trust may have deterred undocumented migrants from accessing care in medical facilities because of fears of deportation or arrest (675). The Government of Qatar also declared that migrants who tested positive for SARS-CoV-2 could access free treatment and that migrant workers under quarantine could continue to receive wages, although this may not have occurred in practice (676).

International organizations, including the IOM and WHO, played key roles in Libya in assisting with the preparation of a nine-pillar COVID-19 preparedness and response plan, and in strengthening COVID-19 surveillance by consolidating data from health facilities and migrant sites covered by the IOM Displacement Tracking Matrix (677).

In Latin America, the pandemic revealed and exacerbated the social vulnerability of migrants in various contexts, as well as the impact of non-inclusive public health policies (678). For example, the closing of the border between Colombia and Venezuela might have contributed to negative perceptions of refugees and migrants by portraying them as a source of COVID-19. This, in turn, may have increased their health risks, despite Colombian efforts to promote the health of Venezuelan refugees and migrants (679).

Studies indicate that some Venezuelan refugees and migrants in the region experienced a decrease in access to health care services because of the pandemic. For example, almost half of the 959 individuals included in a study across Colombia, Ecuador and Peru reported that they could access health care services only for emergencies; a further 16% reported a total lack of access to health services (680). In the town of Tijuana, Mexico, near the border with the United States, migrants reported increased financial and administrative barriers to accessing health care during the pandemic (681).

It is also important to consider the invisibility of migrants in the definition of public and health policies. It has been reported that tightened migration policies in the United States, such as a restrictive interpretation of the Title 42 public health statute (682) and strong migration control measures in Mexico, may have negatively affected not only access to health care but also the migration patterns within the whole region (683).

3.8.4 Testing, treatment and vaccination

Even before the pandemic, vaccine uptake was lower among migrants than in the general population. Accordingly, vaccine hesitancy and structural barriers, such as language and cultural barriers, played a vital part in the COVID-19 vaccine roll out and uptake for migrant communities (684,685). In the United States, a study conducted among Brazilian migrants found that contact testing and tracing for COVID-19 was hindered by fears of deportation, limiting responses to the pandemic and leading to increased infection risks (686). A study from South Africa indicated that non-citizens were largely excluded from the national response to the pandemic, including the responses related to issues of poverty, hunger, the economy and mental health (624).

However, there are positive examples. For example, Australia and Egypt offered free access to COVID-19 testing for migrants, similar to that provided for the host population (617,687). In Australia, this was carried out in collaboration with the Australian Red Cross, and subsequent treatment was also offered by all states and territories. After large COVID-19 outbreaks in dormitories of migrant workers in Singapore, a national task force to address the outbreak response in the country was launched, deploying on-site medical posts to dormitories to provide testing and screening services (614,663). Countries such as Colombia, Nepal, Peru, Portugal and Türkiye guaranteed refugees and migrants, including irregular migrants and migrants with a pending application, access to health care services including testing and vaccination (620).

There are also examples of national leadership that used the pandemic to expand or improve access to health services for refugees and migrants. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the Ministry of Health of Peru launched a community-based initiative to improve both access to TB screening and active detection of COVID-19 cases within the Venezuelan refugee and migrant population, expanding active case detection efforts for COVID-19 (688). Free UHC for all non-citizens was offered by Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates during the COVID-19 pandemic (674). However, there is evidence that some migrants were hesitant to use such opportunities in these contexts because of fear of identity exposure, arrest or even deportation (675). The United Kingdom has a specific initiative encouraging undocumented migrants and other unregistered migrant groups to register with PHC providers to access the national vaccination programme (689). One of the few nationally representative studies within the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region explored COVID-19 vaccine hesitancy in Qatar and found that migrants, who account for the majority of the country's population, had a substantially higher intention of avoiding vaccination than the host population, highlighting the importance of specialized outreach to address hesitancy (684).

Unlike the beginning of the HIV epidemic, when refugees were not included in national AIDS control programmes or able to access ART (690), refugees have been included in the COVID-19 planning and vaccination programmes of various countries (691,692). As of November 2021, 128 countries were confirmed to be providing vaccinations for forced migrants, with Jordan being among the first to do so (693).

However, when it comes to routine immunization, gaps in coverage for refugees and migrants persisted even before the pandemic. A study published in 2018 reported that out of 21 randomly selected low- and middle-income countries from the Asia–Pacific Region, only the Maldives, Papua New Guinea and Thailand included migrants in their pandemic influenza preparedness plans (694).

A recent survey conducted by UNICEF found that refugees and migrants were not covered under new or expanded social protection measures related to COVID-19 in half of the 159 countries included in the survey (231). As a response to this issue, the Inter-Agency Standing Committee and partners launched the Humanitarian Buffer mechanism within the COVAX Facility to provide access to COVID-19 vaccines to refugees, asylum seekers, IDPs and other vulnerable and humanitarian populations (695). Through this mechanism, for example, the Islamic Republic of Iran received 1.6 million doses to cover the needs of Afghan refugees in the country (696).

The 2021 WHO publication Refugees and migrants in times of COVID-19: mapping trends of public health and migration policies and practices (620) identifies three components necessary for an integrated approach to migration and public health policies in the COVID-19 context: (i) ensuring protection-sensitive access to territory (e.g. enabling access to territory and asylum procedures for people in need of international protection), (ii) ensuring immigration status flexibility (e.g. facilitating regularization of undocumented migrants to ensure safe and lawful access to health services), and (iii) ensuring non-discriminatory access to health care (e.g. providing equal access to health care for all, regardless of status, nationality, sex or gender, or ethnicity).

3.9 Summary

It is clear that refugees and migrants face poorer health outcomes than people in host countries around the world if the conditions they live and work in are not conducive to good health. However, the threats, risks and vulnerabilities often differ between regions and among groups. It is also clear that poorer health outcomes for refugees and migrants are not universal; research has revealed deviations from this rule in some regions and for some diseases.

Refugees and migrants tend to be employed in low-paid sectors in which their safety and well-being are at risk, the so-called 3D jobs, and in low-paid high-risk sectors in which conditions are poor and they may face risks to physical and mental health, including abuse. All these factors are exacerbated by their lack of social protection.

Across regions, the SRH needs of refugees and migrants are not as well met as they are for host populations, with low awareness and use of contraception, unmet family planning needs, and structural and legal barriers to accessing SRH health care. Refugees and migrants also tend to experience poorer access to MCH services than women in the host country, including low attendance at ANC, hampered by barriers such as out-of-pocket costs, low awareness, low level of education and cultural beliefs.

Refugees and migrants are at particular risk of NCDs; some of these are significant causes of premature mortality, especially where there are barriers to accessing health care. Such NCDs include CVDs, hypertension, diabetes, chronic respiratory disease and cancer, which is often diagnosed late; unhealthy diet, lack of physical exercise, overweight/obesity and use of alcohol and tobacco are risk factors for NCDs.

Although refugees and migrants may experience a wide range of mental health conditions, these vary depending on social and environmental factors, such as the absence of family or social support, discrimination, age, ethnicity and time spent in the host country. Some specific populations are more affected than others, for example, younger people from conflict-affected countries, undocumented children, UASC and older people.

Similar to the rest of the population, refugees and migrants may encounter infectious diseases along their journey. However, they also face additional barriers to receiving timely diagnosis, treatment and care. For example, stigma and discrimination often hamper access to health services related to HIV/AIDS, and the process of migration can make access and adherence to TB treatment more difficult.

Finally, refugees and migrants have been disproportionately affected by the COVID-19 pandemic, which has increased their burden of disease, reduced their income, affected their social and mental well-being and reduced their mobility through travel restrictions.

References

1. Ottawa charter for health promotion. Geneva: World Health Organization; 1987 (https://apps.who.int/iris/rest/bitstreams/1152389/retrieve, accessed 29 March 2022).
2. Missing migrants project [website]. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2022 (https://missingmigrants.iom.int/, accessed 6 February 2022).
3. ILO global estimates on international migrant workers – results and methodology, third edition. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2021 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/@dgreports/@dcomm/@publ/documents/publication/wcms_808935.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).
4. Simon J, Kiss N, Łaszewska A, Mayer S. Public health aspects of migrant health: a review of the evidence on health status for labour migrants in the European Region. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2015 (Health Evidence Network Synthesis report no. 43; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326345, accessed 29 March 2022).
5. Abbas M, Kashif M, Balkhyour M, Ahmad I, Asam Z-U-Z, Saeed R. Trends in occupational injuries and diseases among Saudi and non-Saudi insured workers. East Mediterr Health J. 2018;24(10):1010–17. doi:10.26719/2018.24.10.1010.
6. Moyce SC, Schenker M. Occupational exposures and health outcomes among immigrants in the USA. Curr Environ Health Rep. 2017;4(3):349–54. doi:10.1007/s40572-017-0152-1.
7. Adhikary P, Keen S, van Teijlingen E. Workplace accidents among Nepali male workers in the Middle East and Malaysia: a qualitative study. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(5):1115–22. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0801-y.
8. Tilahun M, Workicho A, Angaw DA. Common mental disorders and its associated factors and mental health care services for Ethiopian labour migrants returned from Middle East countries in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. BMC Health Serv Res. 2020;20(1):681. doi:10.1186/s12913-020-05502-0.
9. Pega F, Govindaraj S, Tran NT. Health service use and health outcomes among international migrant workers compared with non-migrant workers: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS One. 2021;16(6):e0252651. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0252651.
10. Aryal N, Regmi PR, van Teijlingen E, Simkhada P, Adhikary P, Bhatta YKD et al. Injury and mortality in young Nepalese migrant workers: a call for public health action. Asia Pac J Public Health. 2016;28(8):703–5. doi:10.1177/1010539516668628.
11. Migrant access to social protection under Bilateral Labour Agreements: a review of 120 countries and nine bilateral arrangements. Report No. 57. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2017 (ESS Working Paper, no. 57; https://labordoc.ilo.org/discovery/fulldisplay/alma994955792602676/41ILO_INST:41ILO_V2, accessed 29 March 2022).
12. Andrade M, Sato L, Hammad M. Improving social protection for migrants, refugees and asylum seekers in Egypt: an overview of international practices. Brasília: International Policy Centre for Inclusive Growth (IPC-IG); 2021 (https://www.unicef.org/egypt/media/6881/file/Improving%20social%20protection%20for%20migrants,%20refugees%20and%20asylum%20seekers%20in%20Egypt%20%7C%20Full%20report.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).
13. Hargreaves S, Rustage K, Nellums LB, McAlpine A, Pocock N, Devakumar D et al. Occupational health outcomes among international migrant workers: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet Glob Health. 2019;7(7):e872–82. doi:10.1016/S2214-109X(19)30204-9.
14. Moyce SC, Schenker M. Migrant workers and their occupational health and safety. Annu Rev Public Health. 2018;39:351–65. doi:10.1146/annurev-publhealth-040617-013714.
15. Employment, unemployment, and participation rates by place of birth and sex. International Migration Database. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2021 (https://stats.oecd.org/Index.aspx?DataSetCode=MIG_NUP_RATES_GENDER, accessed 29 March 2022).
16. WHO global plan of action on workers' health (2008–2017): baseline for implementation. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2013 (https://apps.who.int/iris/rest/bitstreams/1344161/retrieve, accessed 4 May 2022).
17. Lyu S, Hon C, Chan A, Wong F, Javed A. Relationships among safety climate, safety behavior, and safety outcomes for ethnic minority construction workers. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2018;15(3):484. doi:10.3390/ijerph15030484.
18. Öztaş D, Kurt B, Koç A, Akbaba M. Living conditions, access to healthcare services, and occupational health and safety conditions of migrant seasonal agricultural workers in the Çukurova Region. J Agromedicine. 2018;23(3):262–9. doi:10.1080/1059924X.2018.1470048.
19. Biering K, Lander F, Rasmussen K. Work injuries among migrant workers in Denmark. Occup Environ Med. 2017;74(4):235–42. doi:10.1136/oemed-2016-103681.
20. Giraudo M, Bena A, Mosca M, Farina E, Leombruni R, Costa G. Differences in work injury risk between immigrants and natives: changes since the economic recession in Italy. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):836. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-7178-2.

21. Saquib N, Zaghloul MS, Saquib J, Alhomaidan HT, Al-Mohaimeed A, Al-Mazrou A. Association of cumulative job dissatisfaction with depression, anxiety and stress among expatriate nurses in Saudi Arabia. J Nurs Manage. 2019;27(4):740–8. doi:10.1111/jonm.12762.
22. Dhungana RR, Aryal N, Adhikary P, Kc RK, Regmi PR, Devkota B et al. Psychological morbidity in Nepali cross-border migrants in India: a community based cross-sectional study. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):1534. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-7881-z.
23. Ziersch A, Walsh M, Due C, Reilly A. Temporary refugee and migration visas in Australia: an occupational health and safety hazard. Int J Health Serv. 2021;51(4):531–44. doi:10.1177/0020731420980688.
24. Reform of the Kafala (sponsorship) system. Quezon City: Migrant Forum in Asia; Policy Brief No. 2; 2012 (https://www.ilo.org/dyn/migpractice/docs/132/PB2.pdf, accessed 20 June 2022)
25. Strauss K, McGrath S. Temporary migration, precarious employment and unfree labour relations: exploring the "continuum of exploitation" in Canada's Temporary Foreign Worker Program. Geoforum. 2017;78:199–208. doi:10.1016/j.geoforum.2016.01.008.
26. Binford AL. Assessing temporary foreign worker programs through the prism of Canada's Seasonal Agricultural Worker Program: can they be reformed or should they be eliminated? Dialect Anthropol. 2019;43(4):347–66. doi:10.1007/s10624-019-09553-6.
27. Cranford C, Vosko L, Zukewich N. The gender of precarious employment in Canada. Relat Ind. 2003;58. doi:10.7202/007495ar.
28. Sidorchuk A, Engström K, Johnson CM, Kayser Leeoza N, Möller J. Employment status and psychological distress in a population-based cross-sectional study in Sweden: the impact of migration. BMJ Open. 2017;7(4):e014698. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2016-014698.
29. Di Napoli A, Rossi A, Baralla F, Ventura M, Gatta R, Perez M et al. Self-perceived workplace discrimination and mental health among immigrant workers in Italy: a cross-sectional study. BMC Psychiatry. 2021;21(1):85. doi:10.1186/s12888-021-03077-6.
30. Di Napoli A, Gatta R, Rossi A, Perez M, Costanzo G, Mirisola C et al. [Perceived discrimination at work for being an immigrant: a study on self-perceived mental health status among immigrants in Italy]. Epidemiol Prev. 2017;41(3–4 suppl 1):33–40 (in Italian). doi:10.19191/EP17.3-4S1.P033.063.
31. Carey RN, El-Zaemey S, Daly A, Fritschi L, Glass DC, Reid A. Are there ethnic disparities in exposure to workplace hazards among New Zealand migrants to Australia? Asia Pac J Public Health. 2021;33(8):870–9. doi:10.1177/10105395211007648.
32. Al-Surimi K, Al Omar M, Alahmary K, Salam M. Prevalence of workplace bullying and its associated factors at a multi-regional Saudi Arabian hospital: a cross-sectional study. Risk Manag Healthc Policy. 2020;13:1905–14. doi:10.2147/RMHP.S265127.
33. Basok T, Bélanger D, Rivas E. Reproducing deportability: migrant agricultural workers in south-western Ontario. J Ethn Migr Stud. 2014;40(9):1394–413. doi:10.1080/1369183X.2013.849566.
34. Holmes SM. An ethnographic study of the social context of migrant health in the United States. PLOS Med. 2006;3(10):e448. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.0030448.
35. Kammogne CL, Marchand A. Ethnicité et statut d'immigrant: quelle association avec le travail et les symptômes dépressifs? Rev Epidemiol Sante Publique. 2021;69(3):145–53. doi:10.1016/j.respe.2021.01.009.
36. Rauf M. Socio-economic and legal issues and challenges of foreign migrant worker in Maldives: a case study of construction industry in male. J Leg Stud Res. 2019;5(5):188–209 (https://thelawbrigade.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Mohammad-Rauf.pdf, accessed 29 March 2020).
37. Asia-Pacific migration report 2020: assessing implementation of the global compact for migration. Bangkok: United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; 2020 (https://www.unescap.org/resources/asia-pacific-migration-report-2020, accessed 5 April 2022).
38. Women migrant workers in the Asean economic community. New York: United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN Women); 2017 (https://asiapacific.unwomen.org/en/digital-library/publications/2017/06/women-migration-workers-in-asean, accessed 29 March 2022).
39. Gosselin A, Daly A, El Zaemey S, Fritschi L, Glass D, Perez ER et al. Does exposure to workplace hazards cluster by occupational or sociodemographic characteristics? An analysis of foreign-born workers in Australia. Am J Ind Med. 2020;63(9):803–16. doi:10.1002/ajim.23146.
40. Leiva Gomez S, Agüero MM, Fornes AC. Condiciones laborales de migrantes bolivianas que realizan trabajo de cuidado en Iquique [Labor conditions of Bolivian migrants who provide care work in Iquique]. Si Somos Am. 2017;17(1):11–37 (in Spanish). doi:10.4067/S0719-09482017000100011.
41. Joshi M. Occupational hazards among migrant workers: impact on their fertility and mental health. Occup Env Med. 2019;76(1):A99. doi:10.1136/OEM-2019-EPI.273.
42. Obali Odolla J. The other side of "economic migration": psychosocial issues affecting young people returning to Ethiopia. Intervention. 2016;14(3):330–4 (https://www.interventionjournal.com/sites/default/files/The_other_side_of__economic_migration___.15.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

43. Valenti A, Persechino B, Rondinone BM, Fortuna G, Boccuni V, Iavicolo S. Risk perception among migrant agricultural workers. Occup Environ Med. 2018;75(suppl 2):A477. doi:10.1136/oemed-2018-ICOHabstracts.1358.

44. Bailey R. Health care management in Australia's and New Zealand's seasonal worker schemes. Canberra: Department of Pacific Affairs (ANU); 2020 (DPA Working Paper 2020/2; https://apo.org.au/node/302960, accessed 29 March 2022).

45. Linardelli MF. [Among the farm, the factory, and home: productive and reproductive work of female migrant farmworkers in Mendoza (Argentina) and its impact in the health-disease process.] Salud Colect. 2018;14(4):757–77 (in Spanish). doi:10.18294/sc.2018.1395.

46. McClure HH, Josh Snodgrass J, Martinez CR, Squires EC, Jiménez RA, Isiordia LE et al. Stress, place, and allostatic load among Mexican immigrant farmworkers in Oregon. J Immigr Minor Health. 2015;17(5):1518–25. doi:10.1007/s10903-014-0066-z.

47. Desarrollo y salud en Costa Rica: elementos para su análisis [Development and health in Costa Rica: elements for analysis]. Organización Panamericana de la Salud Ministerio de Salud Organización Panamericana de la Salud, Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales. – Organización Panamericana de la Salud (https://www.acnur.org/fileadmin/Documentos/Publicaciones/2008/6307.pdf, accessed 24 June 2022).

48. Gálvez M del CA, Gordillo G del CA, Solana EE, Gálvez M del CA, Gordillo G del CA, Solana EE. Prácticas de alimentación y salud entre trabajadores agrícolas migrantes en Miguel Alemán, Sonora, México [Nutrition and health practices among migrant farm workers in Miguel Aleman, Sonora, Mexico]. Poblac Salud Mesoamérica. 2019;17(1):201–24 (in Spanish). doi:10.15517/psm.v17i1.37822.

49. Lee J-Y, Cho S. Prohibition on changing workplaces and fatal occupational injuries among Chinese migrant workers in South Korea. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(18):3333. doi:10.3390/ijerph16183333.

50. de Gruchy T. Responding to the health needs of migrant farm workers in South Africa: opportunities and challenges for sustainable community-based responses. Health Soc Care Community. 2020;28(1):60–8. doi:10.1111/hsc.12840.

51. de Gruchy T, Vearey J. "Left behind": why implementing migration-aware responses to HIV for migrant farm workers is a priority for South Africa. Afr J AIDS Res. 2020;19(1):57–68. doi:10.2989/16085906.2019.1698624.

52. Work permits and employment of Syrian refugees in Jordan: towards formalising the work of Syrian refugees. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2017 (http://www.ilo.org/beirut/publications/WCMS_559151/lang--en/index.htm, accessed 29 March 2022).

53. Chan JS, Chia DW, Hao Y, Lian SW, Chua MT, Ong ME. Health-seeking behaviour of foreign workers in Singapore: insights from emergency department visits. Ann Acad Med Singapore. 2021;50(4):315–24. doi:10.47102/annals-acadmedsg.2020484.

54. Roche J, Vos AG, Lalla-Edward ST, Venter WDF, Scheuermaier K. Relationship between sleep disorders, HIV status and cardiovascular risk: cross-sectional study of long-haul truck drivers from southern Africa. Occup Environ Med. 2021;oemed-2020-107208. doi:10.1136/oemed-2020-107208.

55. Michalopoulos LM, Ncube N, Simona SJ, Kansankala B, Sinkala E, Raidoo J. A qualitative study of migrant-related stressors, psychosocial outcomes and HIV risk behaviour among truck drivers in Zambia. Afr J AIDS Res. 2016;15(3):219–26. doi:10.2989/16085906.2016.1179653.

56. Ehrlich R, Montgomery A, Akugizibwe P, Gonsalves G. Public health implications of changing patterns of recruitment into the South African mining industry, 1973–2012: a database analysis. BMC Public Health. 2017;18(1):93. doi:10.1186/s12889-017-4640-x.

57. Baltazar CS, DeLima YV, Ricardo H, Botão C, Langa DC, da Costa P et al. HIV prevalence and TB in migrant miners communities of origin in Gaza Province, Mozambique: the need for increasing awareness and knowledge. PLOS One. 2020;15(4):e0231303. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0231303.

58. Falcao J, Zerbe A, Lahuerta M, Baggaley R, Ahoua L, DiMattei P et al. Factors associated with use of short-term pre-exposure prophylaxis for HIV among female partners of migrant miners in Mozambique. AIDS Patient Care STDS. 2017;31(12):528–34. doi:10.1089/apc.2017.0179.

59. Smith J, Blom P. Those who don't return: improving efforts to address tuberculosis among former miners in southern Africa. New Solut. 2019;29(1):76–104. doi:10.1177/1048291119832082.

60. Kistnasamy B, Yassi A, Yu J, Spiegel SJ, Fourie A, Barker S et al. Tackling injustices of occupational lung disease acquired in South African mines: recent developments and ongoing challenges. Global Health. 2018;14(1):60. doi:10.1186/s12992-018-0376-3.

61. Green O, Ayalon L. Violations of workers' rights and exposure to work-related abuse of live-in migrant and live-out local home care workers - a preliminary study: implications for health policy and practice. Isr J Health Policy Res. 2018;7(1):32. doi:10.1186/s13584-018-0224-1.

62. Labao HC, Faller EM, Bacayo MFD. "Aches and pains" of Filipino migrant workers in Malaysia: a profile of work-related musculoskeletal disorders. Ann Glob Health. 2018;84(3):474–80. doi:10.29024/aogh.2331.

63. Mendoza NB, Mordeno IG, Latkin CA, Hall BJ. Evidence of the paradoxical effect of social network support: a study among Filipino domestic workers in China. Psychiatry Res. 2017;255:263–71. doi:10.1016/j.psychres.2017.05.037.

64. Hall BJ, Pangan CAC, Chan EWW, Huang RL. The effect of discrimination on depression and anxiety symptoms and the buffering role of social capital among female domestic workers in Macao, China. Psychiatry Res. 2019;271:200–7. doi:10.1016/j.psychres.2018.11.050.

65. Women on the move: migration, care work and health. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2017 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/259463, accessed 21 April 2022).

66. Rhead RD, Chui Z, Bakolis I, Gazard B, Harwood H, MacCrimmon S. Impact of workplace discrimination and harassment among National Health Service staff working in London trusts: results from the TIDES study. BJPsych Open. 2020;7(1):e(10). doi:10.1192/bjo.2020.137.

67. Collection and integration of data on refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region (2020). Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/337694, accessed 29 March 2022).

68. Ennis CA, Walton-Roberts M. Labour market regulation as global social policy: the case of nursing labour markets in Oman. Glob Soc Policy. 2018;18(2):169–88. doi:10.1177/1468018117737990.

69. Walker R. Selling sex, mothering and "keeping well" in the city: reflecting on the everyday experiences of cross-border migrant women who sell sex in Johannesburg. Urban Forum. 2016;28:59–73. doi:10.1007/s12132-016-9284-x.

70. Mutola S, Pemunta NV, Ngo NV, Otang OI, Tabenyang T-CJ. The plight of female Cameroonian migrant sex workers in N'Djamena, Chad: a case of intersectionality. J Immigr Minor Health. 2022;24(2):430–6. doi:10.1007/s10903-021-01216-5.

71. Rosenberg JS, Bakomeza D. Let's talk about sex work in humanitarian settings: piloting a rights-based approach to working with refugee women selling sex in Kampala. Reprod Health Matters. 2017;25(51):95–102. doi:10.1080/09688080.2017.1405674.

72. Sex workers: monitoring implementation of the Dublin Declaration on Partnership to Fight HIV/AIDS in Europe and Central Asia: 2014 progress report. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2015 (https://op.europa.eu/en/publication-detail/-/publication/f2695f12-8450-11e5-b8b7-01aa75ed71a1/language-en, accessed 29 March 2022).

73. Goldenberg SM, Krüsi A, Zhang E, Chettiar J, Shannon K. Structural determinants of health among im/migrants in the indoor sex industry: experiences of workers and managers/owners in Metropolitan Vancouver. PLOS One. 2017;12(1):e0170642. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0170642.

74. Hongjaisee S, Khamduang W, Sripan P, Choyrum S, Thepbundit V, Ngo-Giang-Huong N. Prevalence and factors associated with hepatitis B and D virus infections among migrant sex workers in Chiangmai, Thailand: a cross-sectional study in 2019. Int J Infect Dis. 2020;100:247–54. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2020.09.004.

75. Selvey LA, Lobo RC, McCausland KL, Donovan B, Bates J, Hallett J. Challenges facing Asian sex workers in Western Australia: implications for health promotion and support services. Front Public Health. 2018;6:171. doi:10.3389/fpubh.2018.00171.

76. Ruiz-Burga E. Implications of migration patterns and sex work on access to health services and key health outcomes: a qualitative study on male migrant sex workers in London. Int J Sex Health. 2021;33(3):237–47. doi:10.1080/19317611.2021.1902893.

77. Febres-Cordero B, Brouwer KC, Rocha-Jimenez T, Fernandez-Casanueva C, Morales-Miranda S, Goldenberg SM. Influence of peer support on HIV/STI prevention and safety amongst international migrant sex workers: a qualitative study at the Mexico–Guatemala border. PLOS One. 2018;13(1):e0190787. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0190787.

78. Challenges for the collection of reliable OSH data - fact sheet. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2017 (https://www.ilo.org/global/topics/safety-and-health-at-work/events-training/events-meetings/world-day-for-safety/WCMS_546702/lang--en/index.htm, accessed 29 March 2022).

79. ILOSTAT Data. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2022 (https://ilostat.ilo.org/data/, accessed 4 May 2022).

80. Orrenius PM, Zavodny M. Do immigrants work in riskier jobs? Demography. 2009;46(3):535–51. doi:10.1353/dem.0.0064.

81. Orellana C, Kreshpaj B, Burstrom B, Davis L, Frumento P, Hemmingsson T et al. Organisational factors and under-reporting of occupational injuries in Sweden: a population-based study using capture–recapture methodology. Occup Environ Med. 2021;78(10):745–52. doi:10.1136/oemed-2020-107257.

82. World social protection report 2020–22. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2021 (https://www.ilo.org/global/research/global-reports/world-social-security-report/2020-22/lang--en/index.htm, accessed 29 March 2022).

83. Salminen S. Are immigrants at increased risk of occupational injury? A literature review. Ergon Open J. 2011;4:125–30. doi:10.2174/1875934301104010125.

84. Coderre-Proulx M, Campbell C, Mandé I. International migrant workers in the mining sector. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2016 (http://www.ilo.int/wcmsp5/groups/public/---ed_protect/---protrav/---migrant/documents/publication/wcms_537175.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

85. Bulat P, Protić J, Hirose K. Occupational safety and health in the construction sector in Serbia. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2019 (http://www.ilo.org/budapest/what-we-do/publications/WCMS_671139/lang--en/index.htm, accessed 29 March 2022).

86. Buckley M, Zendel A, Biggar J, Frederiksen L, Wells J. Migrant work and employment in the construction sector. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2016 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---ed_protect/---protrav/---migrant/documents/publication/wcms_538487.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

87. Vallejos QM, Quandt SA, Grzywacz JG, Isom S, Chen H, Galván L et al. Migrant farmworkers' housing conditions across an agricultural season in North Carolina. Am J Ind Med. 2011;54(7):533–44. doi:10.1002/ajim.20945.

88. Family planning - a global handbook for providers. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/260156/, accessed 29 March 2022).

89. Ivanova O, Rai M, Mlahagwa W, Tumuhairwe J, Bakuli A, Nyakato VN et al. A cross-sectional mixed-methods study of sexual and reproductive health knowledge, experiences and access to services among refugee adolescent girls in the Nakivale refugee settlement, Uganda. Reprod Health. 2019;16(1):35. doi:10.1186/s12978-019-0698-5.

90. Ahmed R, Farnaz N, Aktar B, Hassan R, Shafique SB, Ray P et al. Situation analysis for delivering integrated comprehensive sexual and reproductive health services in humanitarian crisis condition for Rohingya refugees in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh: protocol for a mixed-method study. BMJ Open. 2019;9(7):e028340. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-028340.

91. Botfield JR, Zwi AB, Rutherford A, Newman CE. Learning about sex and relationships among migrant and refugee young people in Sydney, Australia: "I never got the talk about the birds and the bees". Sex Educ. 2018;18(6):705–20. doi:10.1080/14681811.2018.1464905.

92. Matsumoto M, Wimer G, Sethi A. Health needs of refugees: port of arrival versus permanent camp settings. East Mediterr Health J. 2019;25(5):306–14. doi:10.26719/emhj.18.041.

93. Tapales A, Douglas-Hall A, Whitehead H. The sexual and reproductive health of foreign-born women in the United States. Contraception. 2018;98(1):47–51. doi:10.1016/j.contraception.2018.02.003.

94. Schmidt N, Quack K, Fargnoli V, Epiney M, Irion O. Exploring barriers to reproductive health services for migrant women in Geneva using a community-based approach. Geburtshilfe Frauenheilkd. 2017;77(02):182–91. doi:10.1055/s-0037-1598145.

95. Logie CH, Okumu M, Mwima S, Kyambadde P, Hakiza R, Kibathi IP et al. Sexually transmitted infection testing awareness, uptake and diagnosis among urban refugee and displaced youth living in informal settlements in Kampala, Uganda: a cross-sectional study. BMJ Sex Reprod Health. 2020;46(3):192–9. doi:10.1136/bmjsrh-2019-200392.

96. Logie CH, Okumu M, Mwima SP, Kyambadde P, Hakiza R, Kibathi IP et al. Exploring associations between adolescent sexual and reproductive health stigma and HIV testing awareness and uptake among urban refugee and displaced youth in Kampala, Uganda. Sex Reprod Health Matters. 2019;27(3):86–106. doi:10.1080/26410397.2019.1695380.

97. Dune T, Mapedzahama V. Culture clash: Shona (Zimbabwean) migrant women's experiences with communicating about sexual health and wellbeing across cultures and generations. Afr J Reprod Health. 2017;21(1):18–29. doi:10.29063/ajrh2017/v21i1.1.

98. Kågesten AE, Zimmerman L, Robinson C, Lee C, Bawoke T, Osman S et al. Transitions into puberty and access to sexual and reproductive health information in two humanitarian settings: a cross-sectional survey of very young adolescents from Somalia and Myanmar. Confl Health. 2017;11 (suppl 1):24. doi:10.1186/s13031-017-0127-8.

99. Kannappan S, Shanmugam K. Peer educators as change leaders - effectiveness of peer education process in creating awareness on reproductive health among women workers in textile industry. Indian J Community Med. 2019;44(3):252–5. doi:10.4103/ijcm.IJCM_6_19.

100. Botfield J, Newman C, Zwi A. P4.51 Engaging young people from migrant and refugee backgrounds with sexual and reproductive health promotion and care in Sydney, Australia. Sex Trans Inf. 2017;93(2). doi:10.1136/sextrans-2017-053264.548.

101. Botfield JR, Newman CE, Zwi AB. Engaging refugee and migrant young people with sexual health care: does generation matter more than culture? Sex Res Soc Policy. 2018;15(4):398–408. doi:10.1007/s13178-018-0320-6.

102. Lee C, Aules Y, Sami S, Lar PK, Schlect J, Robinson C. Sexual and reproductive health needs and risks of very young adolescent refugees and migrants from Myanmar living in Thailand. Confl Health. 2017;11(suppl 1):30. doi:10.1186/s13031-017-0130-0.

103. Rogers C, Earnest J. Sexual and reproductive health communication among Sudanese and Eritrean women: an exploratory study from Brisbane, Australia. Cult Health Sex. 2015;17(2):223–36. doi:10.1080/13691058.2014.967302.

104. Ganle JK, Amoako D, Baatiema L, Ibrahim M. Risky sexual behaviour and contraceptive use in contexts of displacement: insights from a cross-sectional survey of female adolescent refugees in Ghana. Int J Equity Health. 2019;18(1):127. doi:10.1186/s12939-019-1031-1.

105. Gebrecherkos K, Gebremariam B, Gebeyehu A, Siyum H, Kahsay G, Abay M. Unmet need for modern contraception and associated factors among reproductive age group women in Eritrean refugee camps, Tigray, north Ethiopia: a cross-sectional study. BMC Res Notes. 2018;11(1):851. doi:10.1186/s13104-018-3956-7.

106. Inci MG, Kutschke N, Nasser S, Alavi S, Abels I, Kurmeyer C et al. Unmet family planning needs among female refugees and asylum seekers in Germany – is free access to family planning services enough? Results of a cross-sectional study. Reprod Health. 2020;17(1):115. doi:10.1186/s12978-020-00962-3 .

107. Raben LAD, van den Muijsenbergh METC. Inequity in contraceptive care between refugees and other migrant women? A retrospective study in Dutch general practice. Fam Pract. 2018;35(4):468–74. doi:10.1093/fampra/cmx133.

108. Åkerman E, Larsson EC, Essén B, Westerling R. A missed opportunity? Lack of knowledge about sexual and reproductive health services among immigrant women in Sweden. Sex Reprod Healthc. 2019;19:64–70. doi:10.1016/j.srhc.2018.12.005.

109. Mamuk R, Şahin NH. Reproductive health issues of undocumented migrant women living in Istanbul. Eur J Contracept Reprod Health Care. 2021;26(3):202–8. doi:10.1080/13625187.2020.1843618.

110. Action plan for sexual and reproductive health: towards achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in Europe - leaving no one behind. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2016 (https://www.euro.who.int/__data/assets/pdf_file/0003/322275/Action-plan-sexual-reproductive-health.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

111. Jones NA, Baird S, Kilburn A, Hamad BA, Banioweda J, Alabbadi K et al. Adolescent well-being in Jordan: exploring gendered capabilities, contexts and change strategies - a synthesis report on GAGE Jordan baseline findings. In: Gender and Adolescence: Global Evidence. London: Overseas Development Institute; 2019 (https://reliefweb.int/report/jordan/adolescent-well-being-jordan-exploring-gendered-capabilities-contexts-and-change, accessed 29 March 2019).

112. Jordan population and family health survey 2017–18. Amman: Department of Statistics, Government of Jordan; 2019 (http://dosweb.dos.gov.jo/products/dhs2017-2018/, accessed 29 March 2022).

113. At a glance: health access and utilization survey among non-camp refugees in Lebanon - November 2015. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2015 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/glance-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-non-camp-refugees-lebanon-november, accessed 29 April 2022).

114. At a glance: health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon - September 2016. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2016 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/glance-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-september, accessed 29 April 2022).

115. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon - November 2017. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2017 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-november-2017, accessed 29 April 2022).

116. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon - December 2018. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2018 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-december-2018, accessed 29 April 2022).

117. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon - November 2019. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2019 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-november-2019, accessed 29 April 2022).

118. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon - October 2020. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/unhcr-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-october-2020, accessed 29 April 2022).

119. Kanwal N, Muttappallymyalil J, Al-Sharbatti S, Ismail I. Contraceptive utilisation among mothers of reproductive age in Ajman, United Arab Emirates. Sultan Qaboos Univ Med J. 2017;17(1):e50–8. doi:10.18295/squmj.2016.17.01.010.

120. Tran TDH, Tuan DK, Anh ND, Le TKA, Bui TTH. Premarital sex, contraceptive use among unmarried women migrant workers in industrial parks in Vietnam, 2015. Health Care Women Int. 2018;39(4):377–88. doi:10.1080/07399332.2017.1412439.

121. Shah R, Kiriya J, Shibanuma A, Jimba M. Use of modern contraceptive methods and its association with QOL among Nepalese female migrants living in Japan. PLOS One. 2018;13(5):e0197243. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0197243.

122. Ellawela Y, Nilaweera I, Holton S, Rowe H, Kirkman M, Jordan L et al. Contraceptive use and contraceptive health care needs among Sri Lankan migrants living in Australia: findings from the understanding fertility management in contemporary Australia survey. Sex Reprod Healthc. 2017;12:70–5. doi:10.1016/j.srhc.2017.03.003.

123. Dolan H, Li M, Bateson D, Thompson R, Tam CWM, Bonner C et al. "Every medicine is part poison": a qualitative inquiry into the perceptions and experiences of choosing contraceptive methods of migrant Chinese women living in Australia. BMC Womens Health. 2021;21(1):100. doi:10.1186/s12905-021-01226-3.

124. Inoue K, Kelly M, Bateson D, Rutherford A, Stewart M, Richters J. Contraceptive choices and sexual health of Japanese women living in Australia: a brief report from a qualitative study. Aust Fam Physician. 2016;45(7):523–7. PMID:27610438.

125. Metusela C, Ussher J, Perz J, Hawkey A, Morrow M, Narchal R et al. "In my culture, we don't know anything about that": sexual and reproductive health of migrant and refugee women. Int J Behav Med. 2017;24(6):836–45. doi:10.1007/s12529-017-9662-3.

126. Migración y salud en Costa Rica: elementos para su análisis [Migration and health in Costa Rica: elements for analysis]. San José: Ministerio de Salud, Costa Rica; 2003 (in Spanish; https://www.acnur.org/fileadmin/Documentos/Publicaciones/2008/6307.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

127. Cardozo Delgado S. Mujeres que migran: atención en salud sexual y reproductiva a migrantes afrocaribeñas en Uruguay [Women on the move: sexual and reproductive health care for Afro-Caribbean migrants in Uruguay]. Encuentros Latinoamericanos (segunda época). 2018;2(2):49–85 (in Spanish; https://ojs.fhce.edu.uy/index.php/enclat/article/view/124, accessed 29 March 2022).

128. Sieverding M, Krafft C, Berri N, Keo C. Persistence and change in marriage practices among Syrian refugees in Jordan. Stud Fam Plann. 2020;51(3):225–49. doi:10.1111/sifp.12134.

129. Wanigaratne S, Wiedmeyer M-L, Brown HK, Guttmann A, Urquia ML. Induced abortion according to immigrants' birthplace: a population-based cohort study. Reprod Health. 2020;17(1):143. doi:10.1186/s12978-020-00982-z.

130. Fetters T, Rubayet S, Sultana S, Nahar S, Tofigh S, Jones L et al. Navigating the crisis landscape: engaging the ministry of health and United Nations agencies to make abortion care available to Rohingya refugees. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):50. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00298-6.

131. Fontanelli Sulekova L, Spaziante M, Vita S, Zuccalà P, Mazzocato V, Spagnolello O et al. The pregnancy outcomes among newly arrived asylum-seekers in Italy: implications of public health. J Immigr Minor Health. 2021;23(2):232–9. doi:10.1007/s10903-020-01126-y.

132. Jokela S, Lilja E, Kinnunen TI, Gissler M, Castaneda AE, Koponen P. Births and induced abortions among women of Russian, Somali and Kurdish origin, and the general population in Finland - comparison of self-reported and register data. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2018;18(1):296. doi:10.1186/s12884-018-1931-x.

133. Loganathan T, Chan ZX, de Smalen AW, Pocock NS. Migrant women's access to sexual and reproductive health services in Malaysia: a qualitative study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(15):5376. doi:10.3390/ijerph17155376.

134. Tanabe M, Greer A, Leigh J, Modi P, Davis WW, Mhote PP et al. An exploration of gender-based violence in eastern Myanmar in the context of political transition: findings from a qualitative sexual and reproductive health assessment. Sex Reprod Health Matters. 2019;27(2):1665161. doi:10.1080/26410397.2019.1665161.

135. Obregón M. Extending the Latina Paradox: comparative findings of sexually transmitted infections among Mexican origin, black, and white birth-giving women. Popul Rev. 2019;58(1). doi:10.1353/prv.2019.0003.

136. Tangmunkongvorakul A, Musumari PM, Srithanaviboonchai K, Manoyos V, Techasrivichien T, Suguimoto SP et al. "When I first saw a condom, I was frightened": a qualitative study of sexual behavior, love and life of young cross-border migrants in urban Chiang Mai, Thailand. PLOS One. 2017;12(8):e0183255. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0183255.

137. Bhatta MP, Johnson DC, Lama M, Maharjan B, Lhaki P, Shrestha S. Cervical cancer and human papillomavirus vaccine awareness among married Bhutanese refugee and Nepali women in eastern Nepal. J Community Health. 2020;45(3):516–25. doi:10.1007/s10900-019-00770-2.

138. Jirattikorn A, Tangmunkongvorakul A, Musumari PM, Ayuttacorn A, Srithanaviboonchai K, Banwell C et al. Sexual risk behaviours and HIV knowledge and beliefs of Shan migrants from Myanmar living with HIV in Chiang Mai, Thailand. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2020;16(4). doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-09-2019-0080.

139. Morales A, Li Wing-Ching K, Acuña G. Migración y salud en zonas fronterizas: Nicaragua y Costa Rica [Migration and health in border areas: Nicaragua and Costa Rica]. United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean; 2010 (in Spanish; https://repositorio.cepal.org/handle/11362/7236, accessed 29 March 2022).

140. Montiel Armas I, Canales Cerón AI, Vargas Becerra PN. Migración y salud en zonas fronterizas: Guatemala y México [Migration and health in border areas: Guatemala and Mexico]. United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean; 2010 (in Spanish; https://repositorio.cepal.org/handle/11362/7233, accessed 29 March 2022).

141. Reques L, Aranda-Fernandez E, Rolland C, Grippon A, Fallet N, Reboul C et al. Episodes of violence suffered by migrants transiting through Libya: a cross-sectional study in "Médecins du Monde's" reception and healthcare centre in Seine-Saint-Denis, France. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):12. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-0256-3.

142. Parrado EA, Flippen CA, McQuiston C. Migration and relationship power among Mexican women. Demography. 2005;42(2):347–72. doi:10.1353/dem.2005.0016.

143. Vu A, Wirtz A, Pham K, Singh S, Rubenstein L, Glass N et al. Psychometric properties and reliability of the Assessment Screen to Identify Survivors Toolkit for Gender Based Violence (ASIST-GBV): results from humanitarian settings in Ethiopia and Colombia. Confl Health. 2016;10:1. doi:10.1186/s13031-016-0068-7.

144. Al-Modallal H. Effect of intimate partner violence on health of women of Palestinian origin. Int Nurs Rev. 2016;63(2):259–66. doi:10.1111/inr.12239.

145. Delkhosh M, Merghati Khoei E, Ardalan A, Rahimi Foroushani A, Gharavi MB. Prevalence of intimate partner violence and reproductive health outcomes among Afghan refugee women in Iran. Health Care Women Int. 2019;40(2):213–37. doi:10.1080/07399332.2018.1529766.

146. Bartels SA, Michael S, Bunting A. Child marriage among Syrian refugees in Lebanon: at the gendered intersection of poverty, immigration, and safety. J Immigr Refug Stud. 2021;19(4):472–87. doi:10.1080/15562948.2020.1839619.

147. Al-Natour A, Al-Ostaz SM, Morris EJ. Marital violence during war conflict: the lived experience of Syrian refugee women. J Transcult Nurs. 2019;30(1):32–8. doi:10.1177/1043659618783842.

148. Hirsch JS, Muñoz-Laboy M, Nyhus CM, Yount KM, Bauermeister JA. They "miss more than anything their normal life back home": masculinity and extramarital sex among Mexican migrants in Atlanta. Perspect Sex Reprod Health. 2009;41(1):23–32. doi:10.1111/j.1931-2393.2009.4112309.x.

149. Granada I, Ortiz P, Muñoz F, Jiménez AS, Pombo C, Tamayo L. La migración desde una perspectiva de género: ideas operativas para su integración en proyectos de desarrollo [Migration from a gender perspective: operational ideas for mainstreaming in development projects]. Washington (DC): Inter-American Development Bank; 2021 (in Spanish; https://publications.iadb.org/publications/spanish/document/La-migracion-desde-una-perspectiva-de-genero-Ideas-operativas-para-su-integracion-en-proyectos-de-desarrollo.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

150. Oliveira C, Keygnaert I, Oliveira Martins M do R, Dias S. Assessing reported cases of sexual and gender-based violence, causes and preventive strategies, in European asylum reception facilities. Glob Health. 2018;14(1):48. doi:10.1186/s12992-018-0365-6.

151. Keygnaert I, Guieu A. What the eye does not see: a critical interpretive synthesis of European Union policies addressing sexual violence in vulnerable migrants. Reprod Health Matters. 2015;23(46):45–55. doi:10.1016/j.rhm.2015.11.002.

152. Nisrane BL, Ossewaarde R, Need A. The exploitation narratives and coping strategies of Ethiopian women return migrants from the Arabian Gulf. Gend Place Cult. 2020;27(4):568–86. doi:10.1080/0966369X.2019.1611545.

153. Leyva-Flores R, Infante C, Gutierrez JP, Quintino-Perez F, Gómez-Saldivar M, Torres-Robles C. Migrants in transit through Mexico to the US: experiences with violence and related factors, 2009-2015. PLOS One. 2019;14(8):e0220775. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0220775.

154. Baranowski KA, Wang E, D'Andrea MR, Singer EK. Experiences of gender-based violence in women asylum seekers from Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala. Torture. 2019;29(3):46–58. doi:10.7146/torture.v29i3.111970.

155. Soria-Escalante H, Alday-Santiago A, Alday-Santiago E, Limón-Rodríguez N, Manzanares-Melendres P, Tena-Castro A. "We all get raped": sexual violence against Latin American women in migratory transit in Mexico. Violence Against Women. 2022;28(5):1259–81. doi:10.1177/10778012211013909.

156. Infante C, Leyva-Flores R, Gutierrez JP, Quintino-Perez F, Torres-Robles CA, Gomez-Zaldívar M. Rape, transactional sex and related factors among migrants in transit through Mexico to the USA. Cult Health Sex. 2020;22(10):1145–60. doi:10.1080/13691058.2019.1662088.

157. Lemus-Way MC, Johansson H. Strengths and resilience of migrant women in transit: an analysis of the narratives of Central American Women in irregular transit through Mexico towards the USA. J Int Migr Integr. 2020;21(3):745–63. doi:10.1007/s12134-019-00690-z.

158. Female refugees face physical assault, exploitation and sexual harassment on their journey through Europe. London: Amnesty International; 2016 (https://www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2016/01/female-refugees-face-physical-assault-exploitation-and-sexual-harassment-on-their-journey-through-europe/, accessed 29 March 2022).

159. Harrowing journeys: children and youth on the move across the Mediterranean Sea, at risk of trafficking and exploitation. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2017 (https://publications.iom.int/books/harrowing-journeys-children-and-youth-move-across-mediterranean-sea-risk-trafficking-and, accessed 29 March 2022).

160. Chynoweth SK, Buscher D, Martin S, Zwi AB. Characteristics and impacts of sexual violence against men and boys in conflict and displacement: a multicountry exploratory study. J Interpers Violence. 2020;088626052096713. doi:10.1177/0886260520967132.

161. Female genital mutilation (FGM) statistics. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/topic/child-protection/female-genital-mutilation/, accessed 29 March 2022).

162. WHO guidelines on the management of health complications from female genital mutilation. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/206437, accessed 29 March 2022).

163. Turkmani S, Homer CSE, Dawson A. Maternity care experiences and health needs of migrant women from female genital mutilation-practicing countries in high-income contexts: a systematic review and meta-synthesis. Birth. 2019;46(1):3–14. doi:10.1111/birt.12367.

164. Rouzi AA, Berg RC, Alamoudi R, Alzaban F, Sehlo M. Survey on female genital mutilation/cutting in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. BMJ Open. 2019;9(5):e024684. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-024684.

165. Johansen REB. Virility, pleasure and female genital mutilation/cutting. A qualitative study of perceptions and experiences of medicalized defibulation among Somali and Sudanese migrants in Norway. Reprod Health. 2017;14(1):25. doi:10.1186/s12978-017-0287-4.

166. Wahlberg A, Johnsdotter S, Selling KE, Källestål C, Essén B. Baseline data from a planned RCT on attitudes to female genital cutting after migration: when are interventions justified? BMJ Open. 2017;7(8): e017506. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2017-017506.

167. Tittle V, Bennett DL, Hajat S, Shishtawi A, Zeidan W, Abuzabaida F et al. Antenatal care among Palestine refugees in Jordan: factors associated with UNRWA attendance. East Mediterr Health J. 2019;25(2):98–103. doi:10.26719/emhj.18.017.

168. Children in the State of Palestine: child development data from the 2019/2020 multiple indicator cluster survey (MICS) New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2021 (https://www.unicef.org/sop/reports/children-state-palestine-0, accessed 29 March 2022).

169. Gumede S, Black V, Naidoo N, Chersich MF. Attendance at antenatal clinics in inner-city Johannesburg, South Africa and its associations with birth outcomes: analysis of data from birth registers at three facilities. BMC Public Health. 2017;17(suppl 3):443. doi:10.1186/s12889-017-4347-z.

170. Rustad SA, Binningsbø HM, Gjerløw H, Mwesigye F, Odokonyero T, Østby G. Maternal health care among refugees and host communities in northern Uganda: access, quality, and discrimination. Front Glob Womens Health. 2021;2:626002. doi:10.3389/fgwh.2021.626002.

171. Di Napoli A, Rossi A, Battisti L, Cacciani L, Caranci N, Cernigliaro A et al. [Evaluating health care of the immigrant population in Italy through indicators of a national monitoring system]. Epidemiol Prev. 2020;44(5-6 suppl 1):85–93 (in Italian). doi:10.19191/EP20.5-6.S1.P085.077.

172. Ludwig A, Miani C, Breckenkamp J, Sauzet O, Borde T, Doyle I-M et al. Are social status and migration background associated with utilization of non-medical antenatal care? Analyses from two German studies. Matern Child Health J. 2020;24(7):943–52. doi:10.1007/s10995-020-02937-z.

173. Fakoya I, Álvarez-del Arco D, Copas AJ, Teixeira B, Block K, Gennotte A-F et al. Factors associated with access to HIV testing and primary care among migrants living in Europe: cross-sectional survey. JMIR Public Health Surveill. 2017;3(4):e84. doi:10.2196/publichealth.7741.

174. Kentoffio K, Berkowitz SA, Atlas SJ, Oo SA, Percac-Lima S. Use of maternal health services: comparing refugee, immigrant and US-born populations. Matern Child Health J. 2016;20(12):2494–501. doi:10.1007/s10995-016-2072-3.

175. Mahon A, Merry L, Lu O, Gagnon AJ. Postpartum pain in the community among migrant and non-migrant women in Canada. J Immigr Minor Health. 2017;19(2):407–14. doi:10.1007/s10903-016-0364-8.

176. Wanigaratne S, Shakya Y, Gagnon AJ, Cole DC, Rashid M, Blake J et al. Refugee maternal and perinatal health in Ontario, Canada: a retrospective population-based study. BMJ Open. 2018;8(4):e018979. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2017-018979.

177. Sharifi M, Amiri-Farahani L, Haghani S, Hasanpoor-Azghady SB. Predicting factors of postnatal information needs of Afghan migrants women in Iran. Nurs Pract Today; 2019:6(4). doi:10.18502/npt.v6i4.1945.

178. Alnuaimi K, Kassab M, Ali R, Mohammad K, Shattnawi K. Pregnancy outcomes among Syrian refugee and Jordanian women: a comparative study. Int Nurs Rev. 2017;64(4):584–92. doi:10.1111/inr.12382.

179. Abdulrahim S, Rafei RE, Beydoun Z, Hayek GYE, Nakad P, Yunis K. A test of the epidemiological paradox in a context of forced migration: low birthweight among Syrian newborns in Lebanon. Int J Epidemiol. 2019;48(1):275–86. doi:10.1093/ije/dyy200.

180. Pedersen GS, Grøntved A, Mortensen LH, Andersen A-MN, Rich-Edwards J. Maternal mortality among migrants in western Europe: a meta-analysis. Matern Child Health J. 2014;18(7):1628–38. doi:10.1007/s10995-013-1403-x.

181. Merry L, Semenic S, Gyorkos TW, Fraser W, Gagnon AJ. Predictors of unplanned cesareans among low-risk migrant women from low-and middle-income countries living in Montreal, Canada. Birth. 2016;43(3):209–19. doi:10.1111/birt.12234.

182. Tsai H-J, Surkan PJ, Stella MY, Caruso D, Hong X, Bartell TR et al. Differential effects of stress and African ancestry on preterm birth and related traits among US born and immigrant Black mothers. Medicine (Baltimore). 2017;96(5):e5899. doi:10.1097/MD.0000000000005899.

183. Bahamondes L, Laporte M, Margatho D, de Amorim HSF, Brasil C, Charles CM et al. Maternal health among Venezuelan women migrants at the border of Brazil. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1771. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09912-x.

184. Verschuuren AEH, Postma IR, Riksen ZM, Nott RL, Feijen-de Jong EI, Stekelenburg J. Pregnancy outcomes in asylum seekers in the north of the Netherlands: a retrospective documentary analysis. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2020;20(1):320. doi:10.1186/s12884-020-02985-x.

185. Yelland J, Mensah F, Riggs E, McDonald E, Szwarc J, Dawson W et al. Evaluation of systems reform in public hospitals, Victoria, Australia, to improve access to antenatal care for women of refugee background: an interrupted time series design. Spiegel P, editor. PLOS Med. 2020;17(7):e1003089. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003089.

186. Mozooni M, Pennell CE, Preen DB. Healthcare factors associated with the risk of antepartum and intrapartum stillbirth in migrants in Western Australia (2005–2013): a retrospective cohort study. PLOS Med. 2020;17(3):e1003061. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003061.

187. Grundy S, Lee P, Small K, Ahmed F. Maternal region of origin and small for gestational age: a cross-sectional analysis of Victorian perinatal data. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2021;21(1):409. doi:10.1186/s12884-021-03864-9.

188. Lee SJ, Hashmi AH, Min AM, Gilder ME, Tun NW, Wah LL et al. Short maternal stature and gestational weight gain among refugee and migrant women birthing appropriate for gestational age term newborns: a retrospective cohort on the Myanmar-Thailand border, 2004–2016. BMJ Glob Health. 2021;6(2):e004325. doi:10.1136/bmjgh-2020-004325.

189. A "SMART" core [website]. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://sens.unhcr.org/about-us/a-smart-core/, accessed 29 March 2022).

190. AbuKishk N, Turki Y, Saleh S, Albaik S, Hababeh M, El-Khatib Z et al. Anaemia prevalence in children newly registered at UNRWA schools: a cross-sectional study. BMJ Open. 2020;10(9):e034705. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2019-034705.

191. Asmar MK, Zablit CG, Daou R, Yéretzian JS, Daoud H, Rady A. Prevalence of anemia and associated factors in women of childbearing age in rural Lebanon. J Public Health. 2018;26(3):39–49. doi:10.1007/s10389-017-0853-9.

192. Elmardi KA, Adam I, Malik EM, Abdelrahim TA, Elhag MS, Ibrahim AA et al. Prevalence and determinants of anaemia in women of reproductive age in Sudan: analysis of a cross-sectional household survey. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1125. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09252-w.

193. Jemal Y, Haidar J, Makau WK. The magnitude and determinants of anaemia among refugee preschool children from the Kebribeyah refugee camp, Somali region, Ethiopia. South Afr J Clin Nutr. 2017;30(1):1–6. doi:10.1080/16070658.2017.1237446.

194. Orbatu D, Alaygut D, Siviş ZO, Pakdemirli A, Malbora B. Evaluation of nutritional anemia in Middle Eastern migrant and refugee children. Turk J Pediatr Dis. 2020;14(3):244–8. doi:10.12956/tchd.718636.

195. Jablonka A, Wetzke M, Sogkas G, Dopfer C, Schmidt RE, Behrens GMN et al. Prevalence and types of anemia in a large refugee cohort in western Europe in 2015. J Immigr Minor Health. 2018;20(6):1332–8. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0725-6.

196. Joseph J, Brodribb W, Liamputtong P. "Fitting-in Australia" as nurturers: meta-synthesis on infant feeding experiences among immigrant women. Women Birth. 2019;32(6):533–42. doi:10.1016/j.wombi.2018.12.002.

197. Primary health care in the Western Pacific Region: looking back and future directions. Manila: WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/276248, accessed 29 March 2022).

198. Azad F, Rifat MA, Manir MZ, Biva NA. Breastfeeding support through wet nursing during nutritional emergency: a cross sectional study from Rohingya refugee camps in Bangladesh. PLOS One. 2019;14(10):e0222980. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0222980.

199. Lenters L, Wazny K, Bhutta ZA. Management of severe and moderate acute malnutrition in children. In: Black RE, Laxminarayan R, Temmerman M, Walker N, editors. Reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health: disease control priorities, third edition (volume 2). Washington (DC): The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, The World Bank; 2016 (https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/books/NBK361900/, accessed 29 March 2022).

200. Hoddinott J, Dorosh P, Filipski M, Rosenbach G, Tiburcio E. Food transfers, electronic food vouchers and child nutritional status among Rohingya children living in Bangladesh. PLOS One. 2020;15(4):e0230457. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0230457.

201. Rahman MT. Rohingya crisis in Bangladesh and health sector challenges. Anwer Khan Mod Med Coll J. 2018;9(1):3–4. doi:10.3329/akmmcj.v9i1.35814.

202. Islam K, Kundu C, Rahman MF, Alam N, Mohsin SS, Mohsin FM et al. Nutritional status of under-5 children of forcibly migrated people living in Ukhia, Cox Bazar, Bangladesh. J Nutr Health Sci. 2018;5(4):409–13 (http://www.annexpublishers.com/articles/JNH/5409-Nutritional-Status-of-Under-5-Children-of-Forcibly-Migrated-People-Living-in-Ukhia-Cox-Bazar-Bangladesh.pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

203. Vakos A, Khalil N, Kumar A, Menezes L, Ahson M. Assessment of growth in pediatric Syrian refugee populations in Jordan. Avicenna J Med. 2021;11(4):167–71. doi:10.1055/s-0041-1736544.

204. Lwin SWW, Geater AF. Ethnic groups and father's job influencing nutritional status of children (0–30 months) from Myanmar migrant community in southern Thailand. J Racial Ethn Health Disparities. 2019;6(5):944–52. doi:10.1007/s40615-019-00595-8.

205. Baauw A, Holthe JK van, Slattery B, Heymans M, Chinapaw M, van Goudoever H. Health needs of refugee children identified on arrival in reception countries: a systematic review and meta-analysis. BMJ Paediatr Open. 2019;3(1):e000516. doi:10.1136/bmjpo-2019-000516.

206. Aakre I, Lilleengen AM, Lerseth Aarsand M, Strand TA, Barikmo I, Henjum S. Infant feeding practices in the Saharawi refugee camps Algeria, a cross-sectional study among children from birth to six months of age. Int Breastfeed J. 2017;12:8. doi:10.1186/s13006-016-0098-1.

207. Altare C, Delbiso TD, Guha-Sapir D. Child wasting in emergency pockets: a meta-analysis of small-scale surveys from Ethiopia. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2016;13(2):178. doi:10.3390/ijerph13020178.

208. Grammatikopoulou MG, Theodoridis X, Poulimeneas D, Maraki MI, Gkiouras K, Tirodimos I et al. Malnutrition surveillance among refugee children living in reception centres in Greece: a pilot study. Int Health. 2019;11(1):30–5. doi:10.1093/inthealth/ihy053.

209. Hashmi AH, Nyein PB, Pilaseng K, Paw MK, Darakamon MC, Min AM et al. Feeding practices and risk factors for chronic infant undernutrition among refugees and migrants along the Thailand-Myanmar border: a mixed-methods study. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):1586. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-7825-7.

210. Kim SY, Choi SW. Double burden of malnutrition and obesity in children and adolescents from North Korean refugee families. PLOS One. 2020;15(11):e0241963. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0241963.

211. Massad S, Deckelbaum RJ, Gebre-Medhin M, Holleran S, Dary O, Obeidi M et al. Double burden of undernutrition and obesity in Palestinian schoolchildren: a cross-sectional study. Food Nutr Bull. 2016;37(2):144–52. doi:10.1177/0379572116637720.

212. Chelwa NM, Likwa RN, Banda J. Under-five mortality among displaced populations in Meheba refugee camp, Zambia, 2008–2014. Arch Public Health. 2016;74:49. doi:10.1186/s13690-016-0161-9.

213. Health of refugee and migrant children: technical guidance. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/342285, accessed 29 March 2022).

214. Garcia-Tizon Larroca S, Arevalo-Serrano J, Duran Vila A, Pintado Recarte MP, Cueto Hernandez I, Solis Pierna A et al. Human development index (HDI) of the maternal country of origin as a predictor of perinatal outcomes - a longitudinal study conducted in Spain. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2017;17(1):314. doi:10.1186/s12884-017-1515-1.

215. Marrone R, Baglio G, Bruscino G, Costanzo G, Cavani A, Mirisola C. Prevalence of latent tuberculosis infection, hepatitis B, hepatitis C, and syphilis among newly arrived unaccompanied minors living in reception centers in Rome. Int J Infect Dis. 2020;101:126–30. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2020.09.020.

216. Oliván-Gonzalvo G. Health status and infectious diseases in male unaccompanied immigrant minors from Africa in Spain. Enferm Infecc Microbiol Clin (Engl Ed). 2021;39(7):340–4. doi:10.1016/j.eimce.2020.05.018.

217. Muñoz-Pino N, Vives-Cases C, Agudelo-Suárez AA, Ronda-Pérez E. Comparing oral health services use in the Spanish and immigrant working population. J Immigr Minor Health. 2018;20(4):809–15. doi:10.1007/s10903-017-0630-4.

218. Makan R, Gara M, Awwad MA, Hassona Y. The oral health status of Syrian refugee children in Jordan: an exploratory study. Spec Care Dentist. 2019;39(3):306–9. doi:10.1111/scd.12377.

219. Smadi L, Azab R, Khlaifat F, Rodan R, Abdalmohdi A, Maata R et al. Prevalence and severity of dental caries in school students aged 6-12 years in Mafraq governorate: northeast of Jordan. J Oral Health Oral Epidemiol. 2017;6(1):40–7 (https://johoe.kmu.ac.ir/article_84868.html, accessed 29 March 2022).

220. Khadri FA, Gopinath VK, Hector MP, Davenport ES. Evaluating the risk factors that link obesity and dental caries in 11-17-year-old school going children in the United Arab Emirates. Eur J Dent. 2018;12(2):217–24. doi:10.4103/ejd.ejd_29_18.

221. Ferrazzano GF, Cantile T, Sangianantoni G, Ingenito A, Rengo S, Alcidi B et al. Oral health status and unmet restorative treatment needs (UTN) in disadvantaged migrant and not migrant children in Italy. Eur J Paediatr Dent. 2019;20(1):10–14. doi:10.23804/ejpd.2019.20.01.02.

222. Child migration [website]. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/topic/child-migration-and-displacement/migration/, accessed 29 March 2022).

223. Child displacement [website]. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/topic/child-migration-and-displacement/displacement/, accessed 29 March 2022).

224. Health and children on the move. New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2022 (Thematic-brief; https://www.unicef.org/media/119926/file/Health-and-Children-on-the-Move-Thematic-Brief-2022%20.pdf, accessed 20 June 2022).

225. van Hook J, Landale N, Hillemeier M. Is the United States bad for children's health? Risk and resilience among young children of immigrants. Washington (DC): Migration Policy Institute; 2013 (https://www.migrationpolicy.org/research/united-states-bad-children%E2%80%99s-health-risk-and-resilience-among-young-children-immigrants, accessed 29 March 2022).

226. von Werthern M, Grigorakis G, Vizard E. The mental health and wellbeing of unaccompanied refugee minors (URMs). Child Abuse Negl. 2019;98:104146. doi:10.1016/j.chiabu.2019.104146.

227. Mental health and psychosocial support (MHPSS) for families at the US-Mexico border. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2020 (https://www.unicef.org/media/89621/file/MHPSS%20Field%20Guide%20(English).pdf, accessed 29 March 2022).

228. Ahmad A, Sofi MA, Sundelin-Wahlsten V, von Korring AL. Posttraumatic stress disorder in children after the military operation "Anfal" in Iraqi Kurdistan. Eur Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2000;9(4):235–43. doi:10.1007/s007870070026.

229. Lebano A, Hamed S, Bradby H, Gil-Salmerón A, Durá-Ferrandis E, Garcés-Ferrer J et al. Migrants' and refugees' health status and healthcare in Europe: a scoping literature review. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1039. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08749-8.

230. Health of refugees and migrants: regional situation analysis, practices, experiences, lessons learned and ways forward. New Delhi: WHO Regional Office for South-East Asia; 2018 (https://www.who.int/docs/default-source/documents/publications/health-of-refugees-and-migrants-searo-2018.pdf?sfvrsn=b7c1ad1f_1, accessed 29 March 2022).

231. COVID-19 has led to dramatic reduction in essential services and protection for migrant and displaced children in countries around the world. New York: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); 2020 (https://www.unicef.org/press-releases/covid-19-has-led-dramatic-reduction-essential-services-and-protection-migrant-and, accessed 29 March 2022).

232. Doocy S, Lyles E, Hanquart B, Woodman M; Lebanon Health Access Survey (LHAS) Study Team. Prevalence, care-seeking, and health service utilization for non-communicable diseases among Syrian refugees and host communities in Lebanon. Confl Health. 2016;10:21. doi:10.1186/s13031-016-0088-3.

233. Bilal PI, Chan CKY, Somerset SM. Depression mediates association between perceived ethnic discrimination and elevated blood glucose levels among sub-Saharan African migrants in Australia. J Immigr Minor Health. 2021;23(2):199–206. doi:10.1007/s10903-020-01131-1.

234. Nagamatsu Y, Barroga E, Sakyo Y, Igarashi Y, Hirano O Y. Risks and perception of non-communicable diseases and health promotion behavior of middle-aged female immigrants in Japan: a qualitative exploratory study. BMC Womens Health. 2020;20(1):88. doi:10.1186/s12905-020-00955-1.

235. Jin K, Gullick J, Neubeck L, Koo F, Ding D. Acculturation is associated with higher prevalence of cardiovascular disease risk-factors among Chinese immigrants in Australia: evidence from a large population-based cohort. Eur J Prev Cardiol. 2017;24(18):2000–8. doi:10.1177/2047487317736828.

236. Reuven Y, Dreiher J, Shvartzman P. The prevalence of diabetes, hypertension and obesity among immigrants from East Africa and the former Soviet Union: a retrospective comparative 30-year cohort study. Cardiovasc Diabetol. 2016;15:74. doi:10.1186/s12933-016-0392-7.

237. Lê-Scherban F, Albrecht SS, Bertoni A, Kandula N, Mehta N, Diez Roux AV. Immigrant status and cardiovascular risk over time: results from the Multi-Ethnic Study of Atherosclerosis. Ann Epidemiol. 2016;26(6):429-435.e1. doi:10.1016/j.annepidem.2016.04.008.

238. Ververs M, Muriithi JW, Burton A, Burton JW, Lawi AO. Scurvy outbreak among South Sudanese adolescents and young men — Kakuma Refugee Camp, Kenya, 2017–2018. MMWR Morb Mortal Wkly Rep. 2019;68(3):72–5. doi:10.15585/mmwr.mm6803a4.

239. Style S, Tondeur M, Grijalva-Eternod C, Pringle J, Kassim I, Wilkinson C et al. Assessment of the effectiveness of a small quantity lipid-based nutrient supplement on reducing anaemia and stunting in refugee populations in the Horn of Africa: secondary data analysis. PLOS One. 2017;12(6):e0177556. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0177556.

240. Shi HY, Levy AN, Trivedi HD, Chan FKL, Ng SC, Ananthakrishnan AN. Ethnicity influences phenotype and outcomes in inflammatory bowel disease: a systematic review and meta-analysis of population-based studies. Clin Gastroenterol Hepatol. 2018;16(2):190-197.e11. doi:10.1016/j.cgh.2017.05.047.

241. Benchimol EI, Manuel DG, Mojaverian N, Mack DR, Nguyen GC, To T et al. Health services utilization, specialist care, and time to diagnosis with inflammatory bowel disease in immigrants to Ontario, Canada: a population-based cohort study. Inflamm Bowel Dis. 2016;22(10):2482–90. doi:10.1097/MIB.0000000000000905.

242. Carroll MW, Hamilton Z, Gill H, Simkin J, Smyth M, Espinosa V et al. Pediatric inflammatory bowel disease among South Asians living in British Columbia, Canada: a distinct clinical phenotype. Inflamm Bowel Dis. 2016;22(2):387–96. doi:10.1097/MIB.0000000000000651.

243. Van Biesen W, Vanholder R, Ernandez T, Drewniak D, Luyckx V. Caring for migrants and refugees with end-stage kidney disease in Europe. Am J Kidney Dis. 2018;71(5):701–9. doi:10.1053/j.ajkd.2017.10.015.

244. Wändell P, Carlsson AC, Li X, Gasevic D, Ärnlöv J, Sundquist J et al. End-stage kidney diseases in immigrant groups: a nationwide cohort study in Sweden. Am J Nephrol. 2019;49(3):186–92. doi:10.1159/000497063.

245. Cappuccio FP, Modesti PA, Parati G, editors. Ethnic diversities, hypertension and global cardiovascular risk: updates in hypertension and cardiovascular protection. Cham: Springer International Publishing; 2018.

246. Modesti PA, Reboldi G, Cappuccio FP, Agyemang C, Remuzzi G, Rapi S et al. Panethnic differences in blood pressure in Europe: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS One. 2016;11(1):e0147601. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0147601.

247. George J, Mathur R, Shah AD, Pujades-Rodriguez M, Denaxas S, Smeeth L et al. Ethnicity and the first diagnosis of a wide range of cardiovascular diseases: associations in a linked electronic health record cohort of 1 million patients. PLOS One. 2017;12(6):e0178945. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0178945.

248. Fedeli U, Avossa F, Ferroni E, Schievano E, Bilato C, Modesti PA et al. Diverging patterns of cardiovascular diseases across immigrant groups in northern Italy. Int J Cardiol. 2018;254:362–7. doi:10.1016/j.ijcard.2017.12.014.

249. Fedeli U, Cestari L, Ferroni E, Avossa F, Saugo M, Modesti PA. Ethnic inequalities in acute myocardial infarction hospitalisation rates among young and middle-aged adults in northern Italy: high risk for South Asians. Intern Emerg Med. 2018;13(2):177–82. doi:10.1007/s11739-017-1631-y.

250. Fedeli U, Pigato M, Avossa F, Ferroni E, Nardetto L, Giometto B et al. Large variations in stroke hospitalization rates across immigrant groups in Italy. J Neurol. 2016;263(3):449–54. doi:10.1007/s00415-015-7995-x.

251. Fang J, Yuan K, Gindi RM, Ward BW, Ayala C, Loustalot F. Association of birthplace and coronary heart disease and stroke among US adults: National Health Interview Survey, 2006 to 2014. J Am Heart Assoc. 2018;7(7):e008153. doi:10.1161/JAHA.117.008153.

252. dos Santos Pereira P, Valeriano Alves S, Sales Moreira de Souza T. Relatório informativo sobre a população migrante internacional e a rede de saúde do Estado de Goiás [Report on the international migrant population and the health network of the State of Goiás]. Goiânia: Secretaria Estadual de Saúde de Goiás; 2020 (in Portuguese; https://www.saude.go.gov.br/files/boletins/informativos/populacao-migrante/RelatorioPopMigranteInternacionalGERPOP.pdf, accessed 30 March 2022).

253. Health services inequalities affecting the Venezuelan migrant and refugee population in Colombia. Bogatá: Profamilia; Washington (DC): United States Agency for International Development (USAID); 2020 (https://profamilia.org.co/wp-content/uploads/2020/06/Health-services-inequalities-affecting-the-Venezuelan-migrant-and-refugee-population-in-Colombia-how-to-improve-the-local-response-to-the-humanitarian-emergency.pdf, accessed 30 March 2022).

254. Collins DRJ, Jobanputra K, Frost T, Muhammed S, Ward A, Shafei AA et al. Cardiovascular disease risk and prevention amongst Syrian refugees: mixed methods study of Médecins Sans Frontières programme in Jordan. Confl Health. 2017;11:14. doi:10.1186/s13031-017-0115-z.

255. Mansour Z, Said R, Dbaibo H, Mrad P, Torossian L, Rady A et al. Non-communicable diseases in Lebanon: results from World Health Organization STEPS survey 2017. Public Health. 2020;187:120–6. doi:10.1016/j.puhe.2020.08.014.

256. Cheung MC, Earle CC, Fischer HD, Camacho X, Liu N, Saskin R et al. Impact of immigration status on cancer outcomes in Ontario, Canada. J Oncol Pract. 2017;13(7):e602–12. doi:10.1200/JOP.2016.019497.

257. Oyarte M, Delgado I, Pedrero V, Agar L, Cabieses B. Hospitalizaciones por cáncer en migrantes internacionales y población local en Chile [Cancer admissions in international migrants and the local population in Chile]. Rev Saude Publica. 2018;52:36 (in Spanish). doi:10.11606/S1518-8787.2018052000222.

258. Schlumbrecht M, Cerbon D, Castillo M, Jordan S, Butler R, Pinto A et al. Race and ethnicity influence survival outcomes in women of Caribbean nativity with epithelial ovarian cancer. Front Oncol. 2020;10:880. doi:10.3389/fonc.2020.00880.

259. Aldridge RW, Nellums LB, Bartlett S, Barr AL, Patel P, Burns R et al. Global patterns of mortality in international migrants: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet. 2018;392(10164):2553–66. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)32781-8.

260. Nisar M, Kolbe-Alexander TL, Burton NW, Khan A. A longitudinal assessment of risk factors and chronic diseases among immigrant and non-immigrant adults in Australia. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2021;18(16):8621. doi:10.3390/ijerph18168621.

261. Si S, Peters S, Reid A. Variations in mesothelioma mortality rates among migrants to Australia and Australian-born. Ethn Health. 2018;23(5):480–7. doi:10.1080/13557858.2017.1280138.

262. Thøgersen H, Møller B, Åsli LM, Bhargava S, Kvåle R, Fjellbirkeland L et al. Waiting times and treatment following cancer diagnosis: comparison between immigrants and the Norwegian host population. Acta Oncol. 2020;59(4):376–83. doi:10.1080/0284186X.2019.1711167.

263. Campari C, Fedato C, Iossa A, Petrelli A, Zorzi M, Anghinoni E et al. Cervical cancer screening in immigrant women in Italy: a survey on participation, cytology and histology results. Eur J Cancer Prev. 2016;25(4):321–8. doi:10.1097/CEJ.0000000000000173.

264. Spiegel PB, Cheaib JG, Aziz SA, Abrahim O, Woodman M, Khalifa A et al. Cancer in Syrian refugees in Jordan and Lebanon between 2015 and 2017. Lancet Oncol. 2020;21(5):e280–91. doi:10.1016/S1470-2045(20)30160-1.

265. Spiegel P, Khalifa A, Mateen FJ. Cancer in refugees in Jordan and Syria between 2009 and 2012: challenges and the way forward in humanitarian emergencies. Lancet Oncol. 2014;15(7):e290–7. doi:10.1016/S1470-2045(14)70067-1.

266. Adoch W, Garimoi CO, Scott SE, Okeny GG, Moodley J, Komakech H et al. Knowledge of cervical cancer risk factors and symptoms among women in a refugee settlement: a cross-sectional study in northern Uganda. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):85. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00328-3.

267. Lieber M, Afzal O, Shaia K, Mandelberger A, Preez CD, Beddoe AM. Cervical cancer screening in HIV-positive farmers in South Africa: mixed-method assessment. Ann Glob Health. 2019;85(1):58. doi:10.5334/aogh.37.

268. Hailemariam G, Gebreyesus H, Wubayehu T, Gebregyorgis T, Gebrecherkos K, Teweldemedhin M et al. Magnitude and associated factors of VIA positive test results for cervical cancer screening among refugee women aged 25–49 years in North Ethiopia. BMC Cancer. 2020;20(1):858. doi:10.1186/s12885-020-07344-9.

269. Petrelli A, Rossi PG, Francovich L, Giordani B, Napoli AD, Zappa M et al. Geographical and socioeconomic differences in uptake of Pap test and mammography in Italy: results from the National Health Interview Survey. BMJ Open. 2018;8(9):e021653. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-021653.

270. Bakkal Temi Y, Murat Sedef A, Gokcay S, Coskun H, Oskeroglu Kaplan S, Ozkul O et al. A study on basic demographic and disease characteristics of cancer-diagnosed Syrian refugees treated in the border city of Turkey, Sanliurfa; a hospital-based retrospective case series study. J BUON. 2017;22(6):1591–4. PMID:29332358.

271. Gallo F, Caprioglio A, Castagno R, Ronco G, Segnan N, Giordano L. Inequalities in cervical cancer screening utilisation and results: a comparison between Italian natives and immigrants from disadvantaged countries. Health Policy. 2017;121(10):1072–8. doi:10.1016/j.healthpol.2017.08.005.

272. Balcilar M. Health status survey of Syrian refugees in Turkey: non-communicable disease risk factor surveillance among Syrian refugees living in Turkey. Ankara: Disaster and Emergency Management (AFAD) and Ministry of Health; 2016 (https://hsgm.saglik.gov.tr/depo/birimler/kronik-hastaliklar-engelli-db/hastaliklar/kronik_havayolu/raporlar/HEALT_STATUS_SURVEY_of_SYRIAN_REFUGEES_in_TURKEY.pdf, accessed 30 March 2022).

273. Napolitano F, Gualdieri L, Santagati G, Angelillo IF. Knowledge and attitudes toward HPV infection and vaccination among immigrants and refugees in Italy. Vaccine. 2018;36(49):7536–41. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2018.10.050.

274. McComb E, Ramsden V, Olatunbosun O, Williams-Roberts H. Knowledge, attitudes and barriers to human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccine uptake among an immigrant and refugee catch-up group in a western Canadian province. J Immigr Minor Health. 2018;20(6):1424–8. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0709-6.

275. Wilson LA, Quan AML, Bota AB, Mithani SS, Paradis M, Jardine C et al. Newcomer knowledge, attitudes, and beliefs about human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination. BMC Fam Pract. 2021;22(1):17. doi:10.1186/s12875-020-01360-1.

276. Ghebrendrias S, Pfeil S, Crouthamel B, Chalmiers M, Kully G, Mody S. An examination of misconceptions and their impact on cervical cancer prevention practices among sub-Saharan African and Middle Eastern refugees. Health Equity. 2021;5(1):382–9. doi:10.1089/heq.2020.0125.

277. Riza E, Karakosta A, Tsiampalis T, Lazarou D, Karachaliou A, Ntelis S et al. Knowledge, attitudes and perceptions about cervical cancer risk, prevention and human papilloma virus (HPV) in vulnerable women in Greece. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(18):E6892. doi:10.3390/ijerph17186892.

278. Gebre H, Ghamli S, Jackson F, Chavan B, Kingori C. Knowledge, perception and utilization of cervical cancer screening and human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination among immigrants and refugees in Central Ohio. Columbia Univ J Glob Health. 2021;11(1). doi:10.52214/cujgh.v11i1.7225.

279. Dalla V, Panagiotopoulou E-K, Deltsidou A, Kalogeropoulou M, Kostagiolas P, Niakas D et al. Level of awareness regarding cervical cancer among female Syrian refugees in Greece. J Cancer Educ. Epub 2020 Sep 22. doi:10.1007/s13187-020-01873-4.

280. Netfa F, King C, Davies C, Rashid H, Tashani M, Booy R et al. Knowledge, attitudes, and perceptions of the Arabic-speaking community in Sydney, Australia, toward the human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination program: a qualitative study. Vaccines (Basel). 2021;9(9):940. doi:10.3390/vaccines9090940.

281. Allen EM, Lee HY, Pratt R, Vang H, Desai JR, Dube A et al. Facilitators and barriers of cervical cancer screening and human papilloma virus vaccination among Somali refugee women in the United States: a qualitative analysis. J Transcult Nurs. 2019;30(1):55–63. doi:10.1177/1043659618796909.

282. Vamos CA, Kline N, Vázquez-Otero C, Lockhart EA, Lake PW, Wells KJ et al. Stakeholders' perspectives on system-level barriers to and facilitators of HPV vaccination among Hispanic migrant farmworkers. Ethn Health. Epub 2021 Mar 18. doi:10.1080/13557858.2021.1887820.

283. Vamos CA, Vázquez-Otero C, Kline N, Lockhart EA, Wells KJ, Proctor S et al. Multi-level determinants to HPV vaccination among Hispanic farmworker families in Florida. Ethn Health. 2021;26(3):319–36. doi:10.1080/13557858.2018.1514454.

284. Kenny DX, Hsueh K, Walters RW, Coté JJ. Human papillomavirus vaccination and Pap smear rates among Burmese refugee girls in a healthcare system in Omaha, Nebraska. J Community Health. 2021;46(6):1170–6. doi:10.1007/s10900-021-01003-1.

285. Møller SP, Kristiansen M, Norredam M. Human papillomavirus immunization uptake among girls with a refugee background compared with Danish-born girls: a national register-based cohort study. Eur J Cancer Prev. 2018;27(1):42–5. doi:10.1097/CEJ.0000000000000274.

286. Morgan R, Cassidy M, DeGeus SWL, Tseng J, McAneny D, Sachs T. Presentation and survival of gastric cancer patients at an urban academic safety-net hospital. J Gastrointest Surg. 2019;23(2):239–46. doi:10.1007/s11605-018-3898-3.

287. Garcia S, Pruitt SL, Singal AG, Murphy CC. Colorectal cancer incidence among Hispanics and non-Hispanic Whites in the United States. Cancer Causes Control. 2018;29(11):1039–46. doi:10.1007/s10552-018-1077-1.

288. Ashhab AA, Rodin H, Powell J, Debes JD. Impact of immigration in presentation and outcomes of hepatocellular carcinoma in the USA. Eur J Gastroenterol Hepatol. 2019;31(1):24–8. doi:10.1097/MEG.0000000000001212.

289. Hypertension. In: Fact sheets. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://www.who.int/news-room/fact-sheets/detail/hypertension, accessed 30 March 2022).

290. Agyemang C, Nyaaba G, Beune E, Meeks K, Owusu-Dabo E, Addo J et al. Variations in hypertension awareness, treatment, and control among Ghanaian migrants living in Amsterdam, Berlin, London, and nonmigrant Ghanaians living in rural and urban Ghana - the RODAM study. J Hypertens. 2018;36(1):169–77. doi:10.1097/HJH.0000000000001520.

291. Ratnayake R, Rawashdeh F, Abualrub R, Al-Ali N, Fawad M, Hani MB et al. Access to care and prevalence of hypertension and diabetes among Syrian refugees in northern Jordan. JAMA Netw Open. 2020;3(10):e2021678. doi:10.1001/jamanetworkopen.2020.21678.

292. Sulaiman N, Elbadawi S, Hussein A, Abusnana S, Madani A, Mairghani M et al. Prevalence of overweight and obesity in United Arab Emirates expatriates: the UAE National Diabetes and Lifestyle Study. Diabetol Metab Syndr. 2017;9:88. doi:10.1186/s13098-017-0287-0.

293. Al-Hashel JY, Ismail II, Ibrahim M, John JK, Husain F, Kamel WA et al. Demographics, clinical characteristics, and management of idiopathic intracranial hypertension in Kuwait: a single-center experience. Front Neurol. 2020;11:672. doi:10.3389/fneur.2020.00672.

294. Akhtar N, Salam A, Kamran S, Bourke P, Joseph S, Santos M et al. Ethnic variation in acute cerebrovascular disease: analysis from the Qatar stroke registry. Eur Stroke J. 2016;1(3):231–41. doi:10.1177/2396987316663776.

295. Boulle P, Sibourd-Baudry A, Ansbro É, Prieto Merino D, Saleh N, Zeidan RK et al. Cardiovascular disease among Syrian refugees: a descriptive study of patients in two Médecins Sans Frontières clinics in northern Lebanon. Confl Health. 2019;13(1):37. doi:10.1186/s13031-019-0217-x.

296. Shah SM, Loney T, Sheek-Hussein M, El Sadig M, Al Dhaheri S, El Barazi I et al. Hypertension prevalence, awareness, treatment, and control, in male South Asian immigrants in the United Arab Emirates: a cross-sectional study. BMC Cardiovasc Disord. 2015;15:30. doi:10.1186/s12872-015-0024-2.

297. Shahin W, Kennedy GA, Stupans I. A qualitative exploration of the impact of knowledge and perceptions about hypertension in medication adherence in Middle Eastern refugees and migrants. Explor Res Clin Social Pharm. 2021;3:100038.

298. Gallegos D, Do H, To QG, Vo B, Goris J, Alraman H. Differences in cardiometabolic risk markers among ethnic groups in Queensland, Australia. Health Soc Care Community. 2019;27(4):e449–58. doi:10.1111/hsc.12745.

299. Commodore-Mensah Y, Selvin E, Aboagye J, Turkson-Ocran R-A, Li X, Himmelfarb CD et al. Hypertension, overweight/obesity, and diabetes among immigrants in the United States: an analysis of the 2010–2016 National Health Interview Survey. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):773. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5683-3.

300. Rehr M, Shoaib M, Ellithy S, Okour S, Ariti C, Ait-Bouziad I et al. Prevalence of non-communicable diseases and access to care among non-camp Syrian refugees in northern Jordan. Confl Health. 2018;12:33. doi:10.1186/s13031-018-0168-7.

301. Shah SM, Jaacks LM, Al-Maskari F, Al-Kaabi J, Aziz F, Soteriades E et al. Association between duration of residence and prevalence of type 2 diabetes among male South Asian expatriate workers in the United Arab Emirates: a cross-sectional study. BMJ Open. 2020;10(12):e040166. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2020-040166.

302. Sulaiman N, Albadawi S, Abusnana S, Mairghani M, Hussein A, Al-Awadi F et al. High prevalence of diabetes among migrants in the United Arab Emirates using a cross-sectional survey. Sci Rep. 2018;8(1):6862. doi:10.1038/s41598-018-24312-3.

303. Motlhale M, Ncayiyana JR. Migration status and prevalence of diabetes and hypertension in Gauteng province, South Africa: effect modification by demographic and socioeconomic characteristics—a cross-sectional population-based study. BMJ Open. 2019;9(9):e027427. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-027427.

304. Meeks KAC, Freitas-Da-Silva D, Adeyemo A, Beune EJAJ, Modesti PA, Stronks K et al. Disparities in type 2 diabetes prevalence among ethnic minority groups resident in Europe: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Intern Emerg Med. 2016;11(3):327–40. doi:10.1007/s11739-015-1302-9.

305. Li LJ, Zhang J, Shub A, Aris I, Tan KH. Exploring abnormal glucose metabolism in pregnancy among Australian Chinese migrants. BMJ Open Diabetes Res Care. 2020;8(1):e000903. doi:10.1136/bmjdrc-2019-000903.

306. Jirojwong S, Brownhill S, Dahlen HG, Johnson M, Schmied V. Going up, going down: the experience, control and management of gestational diabetes mellitus among Southeast Asian migrant women living in urban Australia. Health Promot J Austr. 2017;28(2):123–31. doi:10.1071/HE15130.

307. Wan CS, Abell S, Aroni R, Nankervis A, Boyle J, Teede H. Ethnic differences in prevalence, risk factors, and perinatal outcomes of gestational diabetes mellitus: a comparison between immigrant ethnic Chinese women and Australian-born Caucasian women in Australia. J Diabetes. 2019;11(10):809–17. doi:10.1111/1753-0407.12909.

308. Pierola D, Rodriguez Chatruc M. Migrants in Latin America: disparities in health status and in access to healthcare. Rochester (NY): Social Science Research Network; 2021 (https://papers.ssrn.com/abstract=3682760, accessed 30 March 2022).

309. Wilson A, Renzaho A. Intergenerational differences in acculturation experiences, food beliefs and perceived health risks among refugees from the Horn of Africa in Melbourne, Australia. Public Health Nutr. 2015;18(1):176–88. doi:10.1017/S1368980013003467.

310. Alzubaidi H, McNarmara K, Kilmartin GM, Kilmartin JF, Marriott J. The relationships between illness and treatment perceptions with adherence to diabetes self-care: a comparison between Arabic-speaking migrants and Caucasian English-speaking patients. Diabetes Res Clin Pract. 2015;110(2):208–17. doi:10.1016/j.diabres.2015.08.006.

311. Eh K, McGill M, Wong J, Krass I. Cultural issues and other factors that affect self-management of type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2D) by Chinese immigrants in Australia. Diabetes Res Clin Pract. 2016;119:97–105. doi:10.1016/j.diabres.2016.07.006.

312. Fernández A, Quan J, Moffet H, Parker MM, Schillinger D, Karter AJ. Adherence to newly prescribed diabetes medications among insured Latino and White patients with diabetes. JAMA Intern Med. 2017;177(3):371–9. doi:10.1001/jamainternmed.2016.8653.

313. Baghikar S, Benitez A, Fernandez Piñeros P, Gao Y, Baig AA. Factors impacting adherence to diabetes medication among urban, low income Mexican-Americans with diabetes. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(6):1334–41. doi:10.1007/s10903-019-00867-9.

314. Lyles BE, Chua S, Barham Y, Pfieffer-Mundt K, Spiegel P, Burton A et al. Improving diabetes control for Syrian refugees in Jordan: a longitudinal cohort study comparing the effects of cash transfers and health education interventions. Confl Health. 2021;15(1):41. doi:10.1186/s13031-021-00380-7.

315. Elliott JA, Das D, Cavailler P, Schneider F, Shah M, Ravaud A et al. A cross-sectional assessment of diabetes self-management, education and support needs of Syrian refugee patients living with diabetes in Bekaa Valley Lebanon. Confl Health. 2018;12(1):40. doi:10.1186/s13031-018-0174-9.

316. Commercial determinants of health. In: Fact sheets. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://www.who.int/news-room/fact-sheets/detail/commercial-determinants-of-health, accessed 21 April 2022).

317. Harris S, Dykxhoorn J, Hollander A-C, Dalman C, Kirkbride JB. Substance use disorders in refugee and migrant groups in Sweden: a nationwide cohort study of 1.2 million people. PLOS Med. 2019;16(11):e1002944. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1002944.

318. Damiri BR. The use of psychoactive substances in a conflict area in the West Bank: drug use risk factors and practices in Palestinian refugee camps. Int J Ment Health Addict. 2020;18(6):1507–20. doi:10.1007/s11469-019-00183-1.

319. Ali R, Loney T, Al-Houqani M, Blair I, Aziz F, Al Dhaheri S et al. Cigarette smoking and smokeless tobacco use among male south Asian migrants in the United Arab Emirates: a cross-sectional study. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):815. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08942-9.

320. Widmann M, Apondi B, Musau A, Warsame AH, Isse M, Mutiso V et al. Comorbid psychopathology and everyday functioning in a brief intervention study to reduce khat use among Somalis living in Kenya: description of baseline multimorbidity, its effects of intervention and its moderation effects on substance use. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2017;52(11):1425–34. doi:10.1007/s00127-017-1368-y.

321. Chiumento A, Rutayisire T, Sarabwe E, Hasan MT, Kasujja R, Nabirinde R et al. Exploring the mental health and psychosocial problems of Congolese refugees living in refugee settings in Rwanda and Uganda: a rapid qualitative study. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):77. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00323-8.

322. Amosu SM, Onifade PO, Adamson TA. Psychoactive substance use and general mental health among refugees in a Nigerian camp. J Subst Use. 2016;21(3):230–6. doi:10.3109/14659891.2013.820800.

323. Sharma V, Papaefstathiou S, Tewolde S, Amobi A, Deyessa N, Relyea B et al. Khat use and intimate partner violence in a refugee population: a qualitative study in Dollo Ado, Ethiopia. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):670. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08837-9.

324. Shaw PM, Chandra V, Escobar GA, Robbins N, Rowe V, Macsata R. Controversies and evidence for cardiovascular disease in the diverse Hispanic population. J Vasc Surg. 2018;67(3):960–9. doi:10.1016/j.jvs.2017.06.111.

325. Qureshi SA, Straiton M, Gele AA. Associations of socio-demographic factors with adiposity among immigrants in Norway: a secondary data analysis. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):772. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08918-9.

326. Damiri B, Abualsoud MS, Samara AM, Salameh SK. Metabolic syndrome among overweight and obese adults in Palestinian refugee camps. Diabetol Metab Syndr. 2018;10:34. doi:10.1186/s13098-018-0337-2.

327. Ross WL, Gallego-Pérez DF, Lartey A, Sandow A, Pérez-Escamilla R, Hromi-Fiedler A. Dietary patterns in Liberian refugees in Buduburam, Ghana. Matern Child Nutr. 2017;13(4):e12401. doi:10.1111/mcn.12401.
328. Aung TNN, Shirayama Y, Moolphate S, Lorga T, Yuasa M, Aung MN. Acculturation and its effects on health risk behaviors among Myanmar migrant workers: a cross-sectional survey in Chiang Mai, northern Thailand. Int J Env Res Public Health. 2020;17(14):5108. doi:10.3390/ijerph17145108.
329. El Masri A, Kolt GS, George ES. The perceptions, barriers and enablers to physical activity and minimising sedentary behaviour among Arab-Australian adults aged 35–64 years. Health Promot J Aust. 2021;32(2):312–21. doi:10.1002/hpja.345.
330. Babatunde-Sowole OO, Power T, Davidson P, Ballard C, Jackson D. Exploring the diet and lifestyle changes contributing to weight gain among Australian West African women following migration: a qualitative study. Contemp Nurse. 2018;54(2):150–9. doi:10.1080/10376178.2018.1459760.
331. Casali ME, Borsari L, Marchesi I, Borella P, Bargellini A. Lifestyle and food habits changes after migration: a focus on immigrant women in Modena (Italy). Ann Ig. 2015;27(5):748–59. doi:10.7416/ai.2015.2067.
332. Maqoud F, Vacca E, Tommaseo-Ponzetta M. From Morocco to Italy: how women's bodies reflect their change of residence. Coll Antropol. 2016;40(1):9–15. PMID:27301231.
333. Lendorfer J, Etang-Ndip A, Hoogeveen J. Socio-economic impact of the crisis in northern Mali on displaced people. J Refug Stud. 2016;29:315–40. doi:10.1093/jrs/few011.
334. Morseth MS, Grewal NK, Kaasa IS, Hatloy A, Barikmo I, Henjum S. Dietary diversity is related to socioeconomic status among adult Saharawi refugees living in Algeria. BMC Public Health. 2017;17(1):621. doi:10.1186/s12889-017-4527-x.
335. Campostrini S, Carrozzi G, Severoni S, Masocco M, Salmaso S. Migrant health in Italy: a better health status difficult to maintain - country of origin and assimilation effects studied from the Italian risk factor surveillance data. Popul Health Metr. 2019;17(1):14. doi:10.1186/s12963-019-0194-8.
336. Stronks K, Kunst AE. The complex interrelationship between ethnic and socio-economic inequalities in health. J Public Health (Oxf). 2009;31(3):324–5. doi:10.1093/pubmed/fdp070.
337. Hamad R, Öztürk B, Foverskov E, Pedersen L, Sørensen HT, Bøtker HE et al. Association of neighborhood disadvantage with cardiovascular risk factors and events among refugees in Denmark. JAMA Netw Open. 2020;3(8):e2014196. doi:10.1001/jamanetworkopen.2020.14196.
338. Commodore-Mensah Y, Agyemang C, Aboagye JA, Echouffo-Tcheugui JB, Beune E, Smeeth L et al. Obesity and cardiovascular disease risk among Africans residing in Europe and Africa: the RODAM study. Obes Res Clin Pract. 2020;14(2):151–7. doi:10.1016/j.orcp.2020.01.007.
339. Carlsson AC, Wändell P, Riserus U, Ärnlöv J, Borné Y, Engström G et al. Differences in anthropometric measures in immigrants and Swedish-born individuals: results from two community-based cohort studies. Prev Med. 2014;69:151–6. doi:10.1016/j.ypmed.2014.09.020.
340. Sproston K, Mindell J. Health survey for England 2004: the health of minority ethnic groups. London: National Centre for Social Research; 2006 (https://digital.nhs.uk/data-and-information/publications/statistical/health-survey-for-england/health-survey-for-england-2004-health-of-ethnic-minorities-headline-results, accessed 23 June 2022).
341. Waist circumference and waist-hip ratio: report of a WHO expert consultation, Geneva, 8-11 December 2008. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2011 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/44583, accessed 29 March 2022).
342. Amstutz D, Gonçalves D, Hudelson P, Stringhini S, Durieux-Paillard S, Rolet S. Nutritional status and obstacles to healthy eating among refugees in Geneva. J Immigr Minor Health. 2020;22(6):1126–34. doi:10.1007/s10903-020-01085-4.
343. Jeong H, Lee S-K, Kim S-G. Changes in body weight and food security of adult North Korean refugees living in South Korea. Nutr Res Pract. 2017;11(4):307–18. doi:10.4162/nrp.2017.11.4.307.
344. Childhood Obesity Surveillance Initiative (COSI): severe obesity among children aged 6–9 years. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2019 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/346474, accessed 23 June 2022).
345. Esteban-Gonzalo L, Veiga OL, Gómez-Martínez S, Regidor E, Martínez D, Marcos A et al. Adherencia a las recomendaciones nutricionales entre adolescentes españoles e inmigrantes residentes en España; estudio AFINOS [Adherence to dietary recommendations among Spanish and immigrant adolescents living in Spain; the AFINOS study]. Nutr Hosp. 2013;28(6):1926–36. doi:10.3305/nh.2013.28.6.6836.
346. Moreira S, Gonçalves L. Overweight and obesity in children of immigrant versus native parents: exploring a local setting in Portugal. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(21):7897. doi:10.3390/ijerph17217897.
347. Kobel S, Lämmle C, Wartha O, Kesztyüs D, Wirt T, Steinacker JM. Effects of a randomised controlled school-based health promotion intervention on obesity related behavioural outcomes of children with migration background. J Immigr Minor Health. 2017;19(2):254–62. doi:10.1007/s10903-016-0460-9.
348. Iguacel I, Fernández-Alvira JM, Ahrens W, Bammann K, Gwozdz W, Lissner L et al. Prospective associations between social vulnerabilities and children's weight status. Results from the IDEFICS study. Int J Obes (Lond). 2018;42(10):1691–703. doi:10.1038/s41366-018-0199-6.

349. Tsujimoto T, Kajio H, Sugiyama T. Obesity, diabetes, and length of time in the United States: analysis of National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey 1999 to 2012. Medicine (Baltimore). 2016;95(35):e4578. doi:10.1097/MD.0000000000004578.

350. Zulfiqar T, Strazdins L, Dinh H, Banwell C, D'Este C. Drivers of overweight/obesity in 4-11 year old children of Australians and immigrants; evidence from growing up in Australia. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(4):737–50. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0841-3.

351. Lane G, Farag M, White J, Nisbet C, Vatanparast H. Chronic health disparities among refugee and immigrant children in Canada. Appl Physiol Nutr Metab. 2018;43(10):1043–58. doi:10.1139/apnm-2017-0407.

352. Programme for international student assessment (PISA): PISA 2018 database. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2018 ([https://www.oecd.org/pisa/data/2018database/#d.en.516012; accessed 5 May 2022).

353. Obesity. In: Health topics. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2022 (https://www.who.int/health-topics/obesity#tab=tab_1, accessed 5 May 2022).

354. Dawson-Hahn E, Pak-Gorstein S, Matheson J, Zhou C, Yun K, Scott K et al. Growth trajectories of refugee and nonrefugee children in the United States. Pediatrics. 2016;138(6):e20160953. doi:10.1542/peds.2016-0953.

355. Al-Thani M, Al-Thani A, Alyafei S, Al-Chetachi W, Khalifa SE, Ahmed A et al. The prevalence and characteristics of overweight and obesity among students in Qatar. Public Health. 2018;160:143–9. doi:10.1016/j.puhe.2018.03.020.

356. Garemo M, Elamin A, Gardner A. Weight status and food habits of preschool children in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates: NOPLAS project. Asia Pac J Clin Nutr. 2018;27(6):1302–14. doi:10.6133/apjcn.201811_27(6).0018.

357. Charlson F, van Ommeren M, Flaxman A, Cornett J, Whiteford H, Saxena S. New WHO prevalence estimates of mental disorders in conflict settings: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Lancet. 2019;394(10194):240–8. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(19)30934-1.

358. Ao T, Shetty S, Sivilli T, Blanton C, Ellis H, Geltman PL et al. Suicidal ideation and mental health of Bhutanese refugees in the United States. J Immigr Minor Health. 2016;18(4):828–35. doi:10.1007/s10903-015-0325-7.

359. Meyerhoff J, Rohan KJ, Fondacaro KM. Suicide and suicide-related behavior among Bhutanese refugees resettled in the United States. Asian Am J Psychol. 2018;9(4):270–83. doi:10.1037/aap0000125.

360. Kateri E, Kalaitzaki A, Karademas E. The role of self-esteem in the relationship between anxiety and depression of Albanian and Indian immigrants in Greece. Psychiatriki. 2021;32:23–33. doi:10.22365/jpsych.2021.002.

361. Lindheimer N, Karnouk C, Hahn E, Churbaji D, Schilz L, Rayes D et al. Exploring the representation of depressive symptoms and the influence of stigma in Arabic-speaking refugee outpatients. Front Psychiatry. 2020;11:579057. doi:10.3389/fpsyt.2020.579057.

362. Markova V, Sandal GM, Pallesen S. Immigration, acculturation, and preferred help-seeking sources for depression: comparison of five ethnic groups. BMC Health Serv Res. 2020;20(1):648. doi:10.1186/s12913-020-05478-x.

363. Poole DN, Hedt-Gauthier B, Liao S, Raymond NA, Bärnighausen T. Major depressive disorder prevalence and risk factors among Syrian asylum seekers in Greece. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):908. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5822-x.

364. Solmaz F, Karataş H, Kandemir H, Solmaz A. Depression, loneliness and factors influencing in Syrian refugee children. Int J Clin Pract. 2021;75(5):e14039. doi:10.1111/ijcp.14039.

365. Eiset AH, Loua AS, Kruse A, Norredam M. The health status of newly arrived asylum-seeking minors in Denmark: a nationwide register-based study. Int J Public Health. 2020;65(9):1763–72. doi:10.1007/s00038-020-01501-4.

366. Erausquin JT, Song E, Rhodes SD. Gender norms, discrimination, acculturation, and depressive symptoms among Latino men in a new settlement state. Ethn Dis. 2020;30(4):519–24. doi:10.18865/ed.30.4.519.

367. Kim I-H, Noh S. Racial/ethnic variations in the main and buffering effects of ethnic and nonethnic supports on depressive symptoms among five ethnic immigrant groups in Toronto. Ethn Health. 2016;21(3):215–32. doi:10.1080/13557858.2015.1061101.

368. Sangalang CC, Becerra D, Mitchell FM, Lechuga-Peña S, Lopez K, Kim I. Trauma, post-migration stress, and mental health: a comparative analysis of refugees and immigrants in the United States. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(5):909–19. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0826-2.

369. Thomas J, Humeidan M, Barrack C, Huffman KL. Mindfulness, stress reactivity, and depressive symptoms among "third culture kids" in the United Arab Emirates. J Cross-Cult Psychol. 2021;52(2):192–208. doi:10.1177/0022022120987620.

370. Stevenson K, Alameddine R, Rukbi G, Chahrouri M, Usta J, Saab B et al. High rates of maternal depression amongst Syrian refugees in Lebanon - a pilot study. Sci Rep. 2019;9(1):11849. doi:10.1038/s41598-019-48247-5.

371. Eastwood J, Wang A, Khanlari S, Montgomery A, Yang JYH. Psychosocial stratification of antenatal indicators to guide population-based programs in perinatal depression. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2021;21(1):277. doi:10.1186/s12884-021-03722-8.

372. Meyer SR, Steinhaus M, Bangirana C, Onyango-Mangen P, Stark L. The influence of caregiver depression on adolescent mental health outcomes: findings from refugee settlements in Uganda. BMC Psychiatry. 2017;17(1):405. doi:10.1186/s12888-017-1566-x.

373. Sabry W, Mostafa N, Wahdan M. Screening for depression and anxiety symptoms among a sample of working Syrian refugees in Egypt. Egypt J Community Med. 2020;38(1):103–11. doi:10.21608/EJCM.2020.68625.

374. Blackmore R, Boyle JA, Fazel M, Ranasinha S, Gray KM, Fitzgerald G et al. The prevalence of mental illness in refugees and asylum seekers: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS Med. 2020;17(9):e1003337. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003337.

375. Henkelmann J-R, de Best S, Deckers C, Jensen K, Shahab M, Elzinga B et al. Anxiety, depression and post-traumatic stress disorder in refugees resettling in high-income countries: systematic review and meta-analysis. BJPsych Open. 2020;6(4):e68. doi:10.1192/bjo.2020.54.

376. Björkenstam E, Helgesson M, Norredam M, Sijbrandij M, de Montgomery CJ, Mittendorfer-Rutz E. Common mental disorders among young refugees in Sweden: the role of education and duration of residency. J Affect Disord. 2020;266:563–71. doi:10.1016/j.jad.2020.02.015.

377. Priebe Rocha L, Soares C, McGregor A, Chen S, Kaplan A, Rose RR et al. Understanding health priorities, behaviors, and service utilization among Brazilian immigrant women: implications for designing community-based interventions. J Racial Ethn Health Disparities. 2022;9(1):135–45. doi:10.1007/s40615-020-00936-y.

378. Im H, Swan LE, Warsame AH, Isse MM. Risk and protective factors for comorbidity of PTSD, depression, and anxiety among Somali refugees in Kenya. Int J Soc Psychiatry. 2022;68(10):134–46. doi:10.1177/0020764020978685.

379. Akinyemi OO, Owoaje ET, Cadmus EO. In their own words: mental health and quality of life of West African refugees in Nigeria. J Int Migr Integr. 2016;17(1):273–87. doi:10.1007/s12134-014-0409-6.

380. Labys CA, Dreyer C, Burns JK. At zero and turning in circles: refugee experiences and coping in Durban, South Africa. Transcult Psychiatry. 2017;54(5–6):696–714. doi:10.1177/1363461517705570.

381. Thela L, Tomita A, Maharaj V, Mhlongo M, Burns JK. Counting the cost of Afrophobia: post-migration adaptation and mental health challenges of African refugees in South Africa. Transcult Psychiatry. 2017;54(5–6):715–32. doi:10.1177/1363461517745472.

382. Alfaro-Velcamp T, McLaughlin RH. Rape without remedy: Congolese refugees in South Africa. Cogent Med. 2019;6(1):1697502. doi:10.1080/2331205X.2019.1697502.

383. Riley A, Varner A, Ventevogel P, Taimur Hasan MM, Welton-Mitchell C. Daily stressors, trauma exposure, and mental health among stateless Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Transcult Psychiatry. 2017;54(3):304–31. doi:10.1177/1363461517705571.

384. Riley A, Akther Y, Noor M, Ali R, Welton-Mitchell C. Systematic human rights violations, traumatic events, daily stressors and mental health of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Confl Health. 2020;14:60. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00306-9.

385. Khan S, Haque S. Trauma, mental health, and everyday functioning among Rohingya refugee people living in short- and long-term resettlements. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2021;56(3):497–512. doi:10.1007/s00127-020-01962-1.

386. Kesornsri S, Sitthimongkol Y, Punpuing S, Vongsirimas N, Hegadoren K. Mental health and related factors among migrants from Myanmar in Thailand. J Popul Soc Stud. 2019;27(2):124–38. doi:10.25133/JPSSv27n2.008.

387. Meyer SR, Decker MR, Tol WA, Abshir N, Mar AA, Robinson WC. Workplace and security stressors and mental health among migrant workers on the Thailand–Myanmar border. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2016;51(5):713–23. doi:10.1007/s00127-015-1162-7.

388. Poudel OP, Thapa B, Bhandary S. Pre-departure psychological distress and associated factors among migrant workers of Nepal. Scientific Communication and Education; 2020 (http://biorxiv.org/lookup/doi/10.1101/2020.12.14.422661, accessed 2 April 2022).

389. Regmi PR, Aryal N, van Teijlingen E, Simkhada P, Adhikary P. Nepali migrant workers and the need for pre-departure training on mental health: a qualitative study. J Immigr Minor Health. 2020;22(5):973–81. doi:10.1007/s10903-019-00960-z.

390. Anjara SG, Nellums LB, Bonetto C, Van Bortel T. Stress, health and quality of life of female migrant domestic workers in Singapore: a cross-sectional study. BMC Womens Health. 2017;17(1):98. doi:10.1186/s12905-017-0442-7.

391. Miller R, Ong KIC, Choi S, Shibanuma A, Jimba M. Seeking connection: a mixed methods study of mental well-being and community volunteerism among international migrants in Japan. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1272. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09381-2.

392. Chen W, Hall BJ, Ling L, Renzaho AM. Pre-migration and post-migration factors associated with mental health in humanitarian migrants in Australia and the moderation effect of post-migration stressors: findings from the first wave data of the BNLA cohort study. Lancet Psychiatry. 2017;4(3):218–29. doi:10.1016/S2215-0366(17)30032-9.

393. Kessler RC, Aguilar-Gaxiola S, Alonso J, Benjet C, Bromet EJ, Cardoso G et al. Trauma and PTSD in the WHO World Mental Health Surveys. Eur J Psychotraumatol. 2017;8(suppl 5):1353383. doi:10.1080/20008198.2017.1353383.

394. Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (US). Trauma-informed care in behavioral health services. Rockville (MD): Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration; 2014 (Treatment Improvement Protocol series no. 57; https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/books/NBK207201/, accessed 2 April 2022).

395. Al-Awaida W, Al-Ameer HJ, Al-Turk H, Al bawareed O, Khalil R, Al Deek A et al. Psychological effects of quarantine on Syrian refugees, compared to the Jordanian populations. Int Migr. 2022;60(1):219–27. doi:10.1111/imig.12847.

396. Bajbouj M, Panneck P, Winter SM, Ajami C, Alabdullah J, Burger MB et al. A central clearing clinic to provide mental health services for refugees in Germany. Front Public Health. 2021;9:635474. doi:10.3389/fpubh.2021.635474.

397. Georgiadou E, Morawa E, Erim Y. High manifestations of mental distress in Arabic asylum seekers accommodated in collective centers for refugees in Germany. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2017;14(6):612. doi:10.3390/ijerph14060612.

398. Solberg Ø, Vaez M, Johnson-Singh CM, Saboonchi F. Asylum-seekers' psychosocial situation: a diathesis for post-migratory stress and mental health disorders? J Psychosom Res. 2020;130:109914. doi:10.1016/j.jpsychores.2019.109914.

399. Sareen J. Posttraumatic stress disorder in adults: impact, comorbidity, risk factors, and treatment. Can J Psychiatry. 2014;59(9):460–7. doi:10.1177/070674371405900902.

400. de Arellano MA, Andrews AR, Reid-Quiñones K, Vasquez D, Doherty LS, Danielson CK et al. Immigration trauma among Hispanic youth: missed by trauma assessments and predictive of depression and PTSD symptoms. J Lat Psychol. 2018;6(3):159–74. doi:10.1037/lat0000090.

401. Schlaudt VA, Bosson R, Williams MT, German B, Hooper LM, Frazier V et al. Traumatic experiences and mental health risk for refugees. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(6):1943. doi:10.3390/ijerph17061943.

402. Wright AM, Talia YR, Aldhalimi A, Broadbridge CL, Jamil H, Lumley MA et al. Kidnapping and mental health in Iraqi refugees: the role of resilience. J Immigr Minor Health. 2017;19(1):98–107. doi:10.1007/s10903-015-0340-8.

403. Ainamani HE, Elbert T, Olema DK, Hecker T. Gender differences in response to war-related trauma and posttraumatic stress disorder - a study among the Congolese refugees in Uganda. BMC Psychiatry. 2020;20(1):17. doi:10.1186/s12888-019-2420-0.

404. Haer R, Scharpf F, Hecker T. The social legacies of conflict: the mediating role of mental health with regard to the association between war exposure and social capital of Burundian refugees. Psychol Violence. 2021;11(1):40–9. doi:10.1037/vio0000348.

405. Scharpf F, Mkinga G, Masath FB, Hecker T. A socio-ecological analysis of risk, protective and promotive factors for the mental health of Burundian refugee children living in refugee camps. Eur Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2021;30(10):1651–62. doi:10.1007/s00787-020-01649-7.

406. Keller A, Joscelyne A, Granski M, Rosenfeld B. Pre-migration trauma exposure and mental health functioning among Central American migrants arriving at the US border. PLOS One. 2017;12(1):e0168692. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0168692.

407. Rodin D, van Ommeren M. Commentary: explaining enormous variations in rates of disorder in trauma-focused psychiatric epidemiology after major emergencies. Int J Epidemiol. 2009;38(4):1045–8. doi:10.1093/ije/dyp203.

408. Al-Amin H, Singh R, Abdulrazzak M, Ghuloum S. Psychosocial and clinical profiles of the cases visiting the emergency department due to accidental self-harm and suicide attempts in Doha, Qatar: a retrospective study. Community Ment Health J. 2021;57(2):315–24. doi:10.1007/s10597-020-00650-3.

409. Itani T, Jacobsen KH, Kraemer A. Suicidal ideation and planning among Palestinian middle school students living in Gaza Strip, West Bank, and United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) camps. Int J Pediatr Adolesc Med. 2017;4(2):54–60. doi:10.1016/j.ijpam.2017.03.003.

410. Bukuluki P, Kisaakye P, Wandiembe SP, Besigwa S. Suicide ideation and psychosocial distress among refugee adolescents in Bidibidi settlement in West Nile, Uganda. Discov Psychol. 2021;1(1):3. doi:10.1007/s44202-021-00003-5.

411. Joarder T, Sutradhar I, Hasan MI, Bulbul MMI. A record review on the health status of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Cureus. 2020;12(8):e9753. doi:10.7759/cureus.9753.

412. Rahman MR, Faiz MA, Nu MY, Hassan MR, Chakrabarty AK, Kabir I et al. A rapid assessment of health literacy and health status of Rohingya refugees living in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh following the August 2017 exodus from Myanmar: a cross-sectional study. Trop Med Infect Dis. 2020;5(3):110. doi:10.3390/tropicalmed5030110.

413. Fischer L, Zarate A, Mozumder K, Elshazly M, Rosenbaum S. Barriers, attitudes, confidence and knowledge of mental health and psychosocial humanitarian staff in Cox's Bazar in responding to suicide risk. Intervention. 2021;19(2):242–8. doi:10.4103/INTV.INTV_53_20.

414. Björkenstam E, Helgesson M, Amin R, Mittendorfer-Rutz E. Mental disorders, suicide attempt and suicide: differences in the association in refugees compared with Swedish-born individuals. Br J Psychiatry. 2020;217(6):679–85. doi:10.1192/bjp.2019.215.

415. Sankaranarayanan A, Al-Amin H, Ghuloum S. Correlates of near-fatal deliberate self-harm in Qatar: a retrospective study of psychiatric admissions for suicidal behaviors. Crisis. 2020;41(2):121–7. doi:10.1027/0227-5910/a000613.

416. McMahon EM, Corcoran P, Keeley H, Cannon M, Carli V, Wasserman C et al. Mental health difficulties and suicidal behaviours among young migrants: multicentre study of European adolescents. BJPsych Open. 2017;3(6):291–9. doi:10.1192/bjpo.bp.117.005322.

417. Tarricone I, D'Andrea G, Jongsma HE, Tosato S, Gayer-Anderson C, Stilo SA et al. Migration history and risk of psychosis: results from the multinational EU-GEI study. Psychol Med. Epub 2021 Feb 10. doi:10.1017/S003329172000495X.

418. Morgan C, Charalambides M, Hutchinson G, Murray RM. Migration, ethnicity, and psychosis: toward a sociodevelopmental model. Schizophr Bull. 2010;36(4):655–64. doi:10.1093/schbul/sbq051.

419. Terhune J, Dykxhoorn J, Mackay E, Hollander AC, Kirkbride JB, Dalman C. Migrant status and risk of compulsory admission at first diagnosis of psychotic disorder: a population-based cohort study in Sweden. Psychol Med. 2020;52(2):362–71. doi:10.1017/S0033291720002068.

420. Dykxhoorn J, Hollander A-C, Lewis G, Magnusson C, Dalman C, Kirkbride JB. Risk of schizophrenia, schizoaffective, and bipolar disorders by migrant status, region of origin, and age-at-migration: a national cohort study of 1.8 million people. Psychol Med. 2019;49(14):2354–63. doi:10.1017/S0033291718003227.

421. Brandt L, Henssler J, Müller M, Wall S, Gabel D, Heinz A. Risk of psychosis among refugees: a systematic review and meta-analysis. JAMA Psychiatry. 2019;76(11):1133–40. doi:10.1001/jamapsychiatry.2019.1937.

422. Maguire J, Mifsud N, Seiler N, Nguyen T, Sizer H, McGorry P et al. Symptomatic, functional and service utilization outcomes of migrants with a first episode of psychosis. Soc Psychiatry Psychiatr Epidemiol. 2021;56(8):1389–97. doi:10.1007/s00127-020-02011-7.

423. Beni Yonis O, Khader Y, Jarboua A, Al-Bsoul MM, Al-Akour N, Alfaqih MA et al. Post-traumatic stress disorder among Syrian adolescent refugees in Jordan. J Public Health. 2020;42(2):319–24. doi:10.1093/pubmed/fdz026.

424. Escot R, Mahfouz M, Feghaly Saade I, Varady CJ. Insights into Syrian refugee children's mental health status & coping mechanisms. Beirut: Caritas Lebanon Migrant Center; 2016 (https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Final-Mental.pdf, accessed 2 April 2022).

425. Shah SM, Al Dhaheri F, Albanna A, Al Jaberi N, Al Eissaee S, Alshehhi NA et al. Self-esteem and other risk factors for depressive symptoms among adolescents in United Arab Emirates. PLOS One. 2020;15(1):e0227483. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0227483.

426. MacLean SA, Agyeman PO, Walther J, Singer EK, Baranowski KA, Katz CL. Mental health of children held at a United States immigration detention center. Soc Sci Med. 2019;230:303–8. doi:10.1016/j.socscimed.2019.04.013.

427. Blackmore R, Gray KM, Boyle JA, Fazel M, Ranasinha S, Fitzgerald G et al. Systematic review and meta-analysis: the prevalence of mental illness in child and adolescent refugees and asylum seekers. J Am Acad Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2020;59(6):705–14. doi:10.1016/j.jaac.2019.11.011.

428. Polanczyk GV, Salum GA, Sugaya LS, Caye A, Rohde LA. Annual research review: a meta-analysis of the worldwide prevalence of mental disorders in children and adolescents. J Child Psychol Psychiatry. 2015;56(3):345–65. doi:10.1111/jcpp.12381.

429. Meyer SR, Yu G, Hermosilla S, Stark L. Latent class analysis of violence against adolescents and psychosocial outcomes in refugee settings in Uganda and Rwanda. Glob Ment Health. 2017;4:e19. doi:10.1017/gmh.2017.17.

430. Hirani K, Cherian S, Mutch R, Payne DN. Identification of health risk behaviours among adolescent refugees resettling in Western Australia. Arch Dis Child. 2018;103(3):240–6. doi:10.1136/archdischild-2017-313451.

431. Fernandez E, Lee J-S, McNamara P. "Uprooted from everything that attaches you": long-term outcomes of former child migrants in care in the twentieth century in Australia. Br J Soc Work. 2019;49(2):523–45. doi:10.1093/bjsw/bcy070.

432. Arega NT. Posttraumatic stress among Eritrean unaccompanied refugee minors in Ethiopia. Int J Migr Health Soc Care. 2021;17(1):1–15. doi:10.1108/IJMHSC-02-2020-0016.

433. Emedo M, Habeeb S, Joyce M, Anderson S, Lorek A. Adverse experiences of unaccompanied asylum seeking children and the impact on their emotional wellbeing and mental health needs. Arch Dis Child. 2018;103(1). doi:10.1136/archdischild-2018-rcpch.4.

434. Jarlby F, Goosen S, Derluyn I, Vitus K, Jervelund SS. What can we learn from unaccompanied refugee adolescents' perspectives on mental health care in exile? Eur J Pediatr. 2018;177(12):1767–74. doi:10.1007/s00431-018-3249-0.

435. Jensen TK, Skar A-MS, Andersson ES, Birkeland MS. Long-term mental health in unaccompanied refugee minors: pre- and post-flight predictors. Eur Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2019;28(12):1671–82. doi:10.1007/s00787-019-01340-6.

436. Longobardi C, Veronesi TG, Prino LE. Abuses, resilience, behavioural problems and post-traumatic stress symptoms among unaccompanied migrant minors: an Italian cross-sectional exploratory study. Psychiatr Psychol Klin. 2017;17(2):87–92. doi:10.15557/PiPK.2017.0009.

437. Sarkadi A, Ådahl K, Stenvall E, Ssegonja R, Batti H, Gavra P et al. Teaching recovery techniques: evaluation of a group intervention for unaccompanied refugee minors with symptoms of PTSD in Sweden. Eur Child Adolesc Psychiatry. 2018;27(4):467–79. doi:10.1007/s00787-017-1093-9.

438. Jakobsen M, Meyer DeMott MA, Wentzel-Larsen T, Heir T. The impact of the asylum process on mental health: a longitudinal study of unaccompanied refugee minors in Norway. BMJ Open. 2017;7(6):e015157. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2016-015157.

439. Davies A, Basten A, Frattini C. Migration: a social determinant of the health of migrants. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2009 (https://migrationhealthresearch.iom.int/migration-social-determinant-health-migrants, accessed 21 April 2022).

440. Gurrola MA, Ayón C. Immigration policies and social determinants of health: is immigrants' health at risk? Race Soc Probl. 2018;10(3):209–20. doi:10.1007/s12552-018-9239-z.

441. Agu J, Lobo R, Crawford G, Chigwada B. Migrant sexual health help-seeking and experiences of stigmatization and discrimination in Perth, Western Australia: exploring barriers and enablers. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2016;13(5):485. doi:10.3390/ijerph13050485.

442. Ziersch A, Walsh M, Baak M, Rowley G, Oudih E, Mwanri L. "It is not an acceptable disease": a qualitative study of HIV-related stigma and discrimination and impacts on health and wellbeing for people from ethnically diverse backgrounds in Australia. BMC Public Health. 2021;21(1):779. doi:10.1186/s12889-021-10679-y.

443. Khatoon S, Budhathoki SS, Bam K, Thapa R, Bhatt LP, Basnet B et al. Socio-demographic characteristics and the utilization of HIV testing and counselling services among the key populations at the Bhutanese refugee camps in Eastern Nepal. BMC Res Notes. 2018;11(1):535. doi:10.1186/s13104-018-3657-2.

444. Pinehas LN, van Wyk NC, Leech R. Healthcare needs of displaced women: Osire refugee camp, Namibia. Int Nurs Rev. 2016;63(1):139–47. doi:10.1111/inr.12241.

445. Steenberg B. Patients and personhood: perceptions of HIV in Mozambican immigrants in South Africa. Med Anthropol. 2020;39(3):211–24. doi:10.1080/01459740.2019.1677646.

446. Steenberg B. HIV-positive Mozambican migrants in South Africa: loneliness, secrecy and disclosure. Cult Health Sex. 2020;22(1):48–63. doi:10.1080/13691058.2019.1571230.

447. Ojikutu BO, Nnaji C, Sithole-Berk J, Masongo D, Nichols K, Weeks N et al. African born women living with HIV in the United States: unmet needs and opportunities for intervention. AIDS Care. 2018;30(12):1542–50. doi:10.1080/09540121.2018.1497767.

448. Tohme J, Egan JE, Stall R, Wagner G, Mokhbat J. HIV prevalence and demographic determinants of unprotected anal sex and HIV testing among male refugees who have sex with men in Beirut, Lebanon. AIDS Behav. 2016;20 (suppl 3):408–16. doi:10.1007/s10461-016-1484-9.

449. Gosselin A, Ravalihasy A, Pannetier J, Lert F, Desgrées du Loû A; Parcours Study Group. When and why? Timing of post-migration HIV acquisition among sub-Saharan migrants in France. Sex Transm Infect. 2020;96(3):227–31. doi:10.1136/sextrans-2019-054080.

450. Ndumbi P, del Romero J, Pulido F, Velasco Arribas M, Dronda F, Blanco Ramos JR et al. Barriers to health care services for migrants living with HIV in Spain. Eur J Public Health. 2018;28(3):451–7. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckx225.

451. Dana DP, Gumbie T, Grinker R. Access to HIV/AIDS health services by refugees in the Eastern Cape, South Africa. South Africa: Eastern Cape Socio-Economic Consultative Council; 2018 (https://www.ecsecc.org/datarepository/documents/ecsecc-wp-access-to-hiv-wp-22_95890.pdf, accessed 2 April 2022).

452. Musumari PM, Chamchan C. Correlates of HIV testing experience among migrant workers from Myanmar residing in Thailand: a secondary data analysis. PLOS One. 2016;11(5):e0154669. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0154669.

453. Thapa S, Bista N, Hannes K, Buve A, Vermandere M, Mathei C. Vulnerability of wives of Nepalese labor migrants to HIV infection: integrating quantitative and qualitative evidence. Women Health. 2016;56(7):745–66. doi:10.1080/03630242.2015.1118726.

454. Correa-Agudelo E, Kim H-Y, Musuka GN, Mukandavire Z, Akullian A, Cuadros DF. Associated health and social determinants of mobile populations across HIV epidemic gradients in southern Africa. J Migr Health. 2021;3:100038. doi:10.1016/j.jmh.2021.100038.

455. Tohme J, Egan JE, Friedman MR, Stall R. Psycho-social correlates of condom use and HIV testing among MSM refugees in Beirut, Lebanon. AIDS Behav. 2016;20 (suppl 3):417–25. doi:10.1007/s10461-016-1498-3.

456. Rebolledo-Ponietsky K, Munayco CV, Mezones-Holguín E. Migration crisis in Venezuela: impact on HIV in Peru. J Travel Med. 2019;26(2):tay155. doi:10.1093/jtm/tay155.

457. Zhang Y, Liang B, Liu D, Wei G, Mo S, Nong A et al. Migrant female sex workers working at the Sino-Vietnamese border for a short time have a higher risk of HIV transmission: a consecutive cross-sectional study. AIDS Res Ther. 2020;17(1):4. doi:10.1186/s12981-020-0260-0.

458. Tschirhart N, Thi SS, Swe LL, Nosten F, Foster AM. Treating the invisible: gaps and opportunities for enhanced TB control along the Thailand–Myanmar border. BMC Health Serv Res. 2017;17(1):29. doi:10.1186/s12913-016-1954-9.

459. Infante C, Aggleton P, Pridmore P. Forms and determinants of migration and HIV/AIDS-related stigma on the Mexican-Guatemalan border. Qual Health Res. 2009;19(12):1656–68. doi:10.1177/1049732309353909.

460. HIV/AIDS surveillance in Europe 2020 (2019 data). Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2020 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/en/publications-data/hivaids-surveillance-europe-2020-2019-data, accessed 2 April 2022).

461. Kerani RP, Satcher Johnson A, Buskin SE, Rao D, Golden MR, Hu X et al. The epidemiology of HIV among people born outside the United States, 2010–2017. Public Health Rep. 2020;135(5):611–20. doi:10.1177/0033354920942623.

462. Demeke HB, Johnson AS, Wu B, Nwangwu-Ike N, King H, Dean HD. Differences between U.S.-born and non-U.S.-born black adults reported with diagnosed HIV infection: United States, 2008–2014. J Immigr Minor Health. 2019;21(1):30–8. doi:10.1007/s10903-018-0699-4.

463. Taylor TN, DeHovitz J, Hirshfield S. Intersectional stigma and multi-level barriers to HIV testing among foreign-born black men from the Caribbean. Front Public Health. 2020;7:373. doi:10.3389/fpubh.2019.00373.

464. Pannetier J, Ravalihasy A, Lydié N, Lert F, Desgrées du Loû A, Parcours Study Group. Prevalence and circumstances of forced sex and post-migration HIV acquisition in sub-Saharan African migrant women in France: an analysis of the ANRS-PARCOURS retrospective population-based study. Lancet Public Health. 2018;3(1):e16–23. doi:10.1016/S2468-2667(17)30211-6.

465. Desgrees-du-Lou A, Pannetier J, Ravalihasy A, Le Guen M, Gosselin A, Panjo H et al. Is hardship during migration a determinant of HIV infection? Results from the ANRS PARCOURS study of sub-Saharan African migrants in France. AIDS. 2016;30(4):645–56. doi:10.1097/QAD.0000000000000957.

466. Alvarez-del Arco D, Fakoya I, Thomadakis C, Pantazis N, Touloumi G, Gennotte A-F et al. High levels of postmigration HIV acquisition within nine European countries. AIDS. 2017;31(14):1979–88. doi:10.1097/QAD.0000000000001571.

467. Ayuttacorn A, Tangmunkongvorakul A, Musumari PM, Srithanaviboonchai K, Jirattikorn A, Aurpibul L. Disclosure of HIV status among Shan female migrant workers living with HIV in Northern Thailand: a qualitative study. PLOS One. 2019;14(5):e0216382. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0216382.

468. Kwena Z, Nakamanya S, Nanyonjo G, Okello E, Fast P, Ssetaala A et al. Understanding mobility and sexual risk behaviour among women in fishing communities of Lake Victoria in East Africa: a qualitative study. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):944. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09085-7.

469. Shannon K, Crago A-L, Baral SD, Bekker L-G, Kerrigan D, Decker MR et al. The global response and unmet actions for HIV and sex workers. Lancet. 2018;392(10148):698–710. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)31439-9.

470. Medland NA, Chow EPF, Read THR, Ong JJ, Chen M, Denham I et al. Incident HIV infection has fallen rapidly in men who have sex with men in Melbourne, Australia (2013–2017) but not in the newly-arrived Asian-born. BMC Infect Dis. 2018;18(1):410. doi:10.1186/s12879-018-3325-0.

471. Blackshaw LCD, Chow EPF, Varma R, Healey L, Templeton DJ, Basu A et al. Characteristics of recently arrived Asian men who have sex with men diagnosed with HIV through sexual health services in Melbourne and Sydney. Aust N Z J Public Health. 2019;43(5):424–8. doi:10.1111/1753-6405.12926.

472. Hu J, Gu X, Tao X, Qian Y, Babu GR, Wang G et al. Prevalence and trends of HIV, syphilis, and HCV in migrant and resident men who have sex with men in Shandong, China: results from a serial cross-sectional study. PLOS One. 2017;12(1):e0170443. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0170443.

473. Nelson LE, Tharao W, Husbands W, Sa T, Zhang N, Kushwaha S et al. The epidemiology of HIV and other sexually transmitted infections in African, Caribbean and Black men in Toronto, Canada. BMC Infect Dis. 2019;19(1):294. doi:10.1186/s12879-019-3925-3.

474. Migrant health: access to HIV prevention, treatment and care for migrant populations in EU/EEA countries. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control, 2009 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/sites/default/files/media/en/publications/Publications/0907_TER_Migrant_health_HIV_Access_to_treatment.pdf, accessed 26 June 2022).

475. Masebo W. Accessing ART in Malawi while living in South Africa - a thematic analysis of qualitative data from undocumented Malawian migrants. Glob Public Health. 2019;14(5):621–35. doi:10.1080/17441692.2018.1524920.

476. Faturiyele I, Karletsos D, Ntene-Sealiete K, Musekiwa A, Khabo M, Mariti M et al. Access to HIV care and treatment for migrants between Lesotho and South Africa: a mixed methods study. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):668. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5594-3.

477. Been SK, Vijver DAMC, Nieuwkerk PT, Is B, Stutterheim SE, Bos AER. Risk factors for non-adherence to cART in immigrants with HIV living in the Netherlands: results from the ROtterdam ADherence (ROAD) Project. PLOS One. 2016;11(10):e0162800. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0162800.

478. Marukutira T, Yin D, Cressman L, Kariuki R, Malone B, Spelman T et al. Clinical outcomes of a cohort of migrants and citizens living with human immunodeficiency virus in Botswana: implications for Joint United Nation Program on HIV and AIDS 90-90-90 targets. Medicine (Baltimore). 2019;98(23):e15994. doi:10.1097/MD.0000000000015994.

479. Been SK, Yildiz E, Nieuwkerk PT, Pogány K, van de Vijver DAMC, Verbon A. Self-reported adherence and pharmacy refill adherence are both predictive for an undetectable viral load among HIV-infected migrants receiving cART. PLOS One. 2017;12(11):e0186912. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0186912.

480. Kronfli N, Linthwaite B, Sheehan N, Cox J, Hardy I, Lebouché B et al. Delayed linkage to HIV care among asylum seekers in Quebec, Canada. BMC Public Health. 2019;19(1):1683. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-8052-y.

481. Gray C, Lobo R, Narciso L, Oudih E, Gunaratnam P, Thorpe R et al. Why I can't, won't or don't test for HIV: insights from Australian migrants born in sub-Saharan Africa, Southeast Asia and Northeast Asia. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(6):1034. doi:10.3390/ijerph16061034.

482. Shakya P, Tanaka M, Shibanuma A, Jimba M. Nepalese migrants in Japan: What is holding them back in getting access to healthcare? PLOS One. 2018;13(9):e0203645. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0203645.

483. Ryan KE, Wilkinson AL, Asselin J, Leitinger DP, Locke P, Pedrana A et al. Assessment of service refinement and its impact on repeat HIV testing by client's access to Australia's universal healthcare system: a retrospective cohort study. J Int AIDS Soc. 2019;22(8):e25353. doi:10.1002/jia2.25353.

484. Ravicz M, Muhongayire B, Kamagaju S, Klabbers RE, Faustin Z, Kambugu A et al. Using intervention mapping methodology to design an HIV linkage intervention in a refugee settlement in rural Uganda. AIDS Care. 2022;34(4):446–58. doi:10.1080/09540121.2021.1900532.

485. Gray RT, Watson J, Cogle AJ, Smith DE, Hoy JF, Bastian LA et al. Funding antiretroviral treatment for HIV-positive temporary residents in Australia prevents transmission and is inexpensive. Sex Health. 2018;15(1):13–19. doi:10.1071/SH16237.

486. Global tuberculosis programme [website]. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://www.who.int/teams/global-tuberculosis-programme/data, accessed 4 May 2022).

487. Ali F, Shafee M, Akbar A, Khan N, Khetran MA, Rahman F et al. Frequency of pulmonary tuberculosis in Afghan assylum seekers dwelling in Balochistan, Pakistan. Rawal Med J. 2018;43(4):577–80.

488. Chan EYY, Chiu CP, Chan GKW. Medical and health risks associated with communicable diseases of Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh 2017. Int J Infect Dis. 2018;68:39–43. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2018.01.001.

489. Aldridge RW, Zenner D, White PJ, Williamson EJ, Muzyamba MC, Dhavan P et al. Tuberculosis in migrants moving from high-incidence to low-incidence countries: a population based cohort study. Lancet. 2016;388(10059):2510–18. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(16)31008-X.

490. Tuberculosis surveillance and monitoring in Europe 2021: 2019 data. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/340210, accessed 2 April 2022).

491. Boyd AT, Cookson ST, Almashayek I, Yaacoub H, Qayyum MS, Galev A. An evaluation of a tuberculosis case-finding and treatment program among Syrian refugees - Jordan and Lebanon, 2013–2015. Confl Health. 2019;13(1):32. doi:10.1186/s13031-019-0213-1.

492. Global tuberculosis report 2021. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/rest/bitstreams/1379788/retrieve, accessed 21 April 2022).

493. Ali S, Rao MB, Sahly AA, Alfageeh A, Bakari A. A retrospective study to investigate the impact of immigration on tuberculosis control program by DOTS strategy in Gazan Province, Saudi Arabia. J Public Health. 2018;26(2):163–75. doi:10.1007/s10389-017-0838-8.

494. van den Boogaard J, Slump E, Schimmel HJ, van der Hoek W, van den Hof S, de Vries G. High incidence of active tuberculosis in asylum seekers from Eritrea and Somalia in the first 5 years after arrival in the Netherlands. Emerg Infect Dis. 2020;26(4):675–81. doi:10.3201/eid2604.190123.

495. Vo LNQ, Codlin AJ, Forse RJ, Nguyen HT, Vu TN, Van Truong V et al. Tuberculosis among economic migrants: a cross-sectional study of the risk of poor treatment outcomes and impact of a treatment adherence intervention among temporary residents in an urban district in Ho Chi Minh City, Viet Nam. BMC Infect Dis. 2020;20(1):134. doi:10.1186/s12879-020-4865-7.

496. Aldridge RW, Zenner D, White PJ, Muzyamba MC, Loutet M, Dhavan P et al. Prevalence of and risk factors for active tuberculosis in migrants screened before entry to the UK: a population-based cross-sectional study. Lancet Infect Dis. 2016;16(8):962–70. doi:10.1016/S1473-3099(16)00072-4.

497. Benjumea-Bedoya D, Becker M, Haworth-Brockman M, Balakumar S, Hiebert K, Lutz J-A et al. Integrated care for latent tuberculosis infection (LTBI) at a primary health care facility for refugees in Winnipeg, Canada: a mixed-methods evaluation. Front Public Health. 2019;7:57. doi:10.3389/fpubh.2019.00057.

498. Tschirhart N, Sein T, Nosten F, Foster AM. Refugee and migrant patient perspectives on travel and tuberculosis along the Thailand–Myanmar border: a qualitative study. PLOS One. 2016;11(8):e0160222. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0160222.

499. Pawlowski A, Jansson M, Sköld M, Rottenberg ME, Källenius G. Tuberculosis and HIV co-infection. PLOS Pathog. 2012;8(2):e1002464. doi :10.1371/journal.ppat.1002464.

500. Legesse T, Admenur G, Gebregzabher S, Woldegebriel E, Fantahun B, Tsegay Y et al. Tuberculosis (TB) in the refugee camps in Ethiopia: trends of case notification, profile, and treatment outcomes, 2014 to 2017. BMC Infect Dis. 2021;21(1):139. doi:10.1186/s12879-021-05828-y.

501. Ejeta E, Beyene G, Balay G, Bonsa Z, Abebe G. Factors associated with unsuccessful treatment outcome in tuberculosis patients among refugees and their surrounding communities in Gambella Regional State, Ethiopia. PLOS One. 2018;13(10):e0205468. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0205468.

502. Confronting inequalities: lessons for pandemic responses from 40 years of AIDS. Global AIDS update. Geneva: UNAIDS; 2021 (https://www.unaids.org/sites/default/files/media_asset/2021-global-aids-update_en.pdf, accessed 30 June 2022).

503. Orozco-Andrade I, Acosta-Loya JA, Bravo-Rodríguez G, Martínez-Lozano FN, Espinoza-Hernández ME, Enríquez-Porras A et al. Patrones de farmacorresistencia en población migrante con tuberculosis pulmonar [Drug resistance patterns in migrant population with pulmonary tuberculosis]. Neumol Cir Tórax. 2018;77(4):247–57 (in Spanish).

504. Pandey S, Lavu E, Congdon J, Moke R, Bainomugisa A, Coulter C. Characterization of pncA mutations in multi-drug and pyrazinamide resistant Mycobacterium tuberculosis isolates cultured from Queensland migrants and Papua New Guinea residents. Tuberculosis. 2018;111:109–13. doi:10.1016/j.tube.2018.06.006.

505. Helbling P, Kröger S, Haas W, Brusin S, Cirillo DM, Groenheit R et al. Screening of migrants for tuberculosis identifies patients with multidrug-resistant tuberculosis but is not sufficient. Clin Microbiol Infect. 2018;24(8):918–19. doi:10.1016/j.cmi.2018.03.015.

506. Riccardi N, Pontarelli A, Alagna R, Saderi L, Ferrarese M, Castellotti P et al. Epidemiology and treatment outcome of MDR and pre-XDR TB in international migrants at two reference centers in the north of Italy: a cross-sectional study coordinated by Stop TB Italia Onlus. Public Health. 2020;180:17–21. doi:10.1016/j.puhe.2019.10.022.

507. Jensenius M, Winje BA, Blomberg B, Mengshoel AT, von der Lippe B, Hannula R et al. Multidrug-resistant tuberculosis in Norway: a nationwide study, 1995–2014. Int J Tuberc Lung Dis. 2016;20(6):786–92. doi:10.5588/ijtld.15.0895.

508. Ködmön C, Zucs P, van der Werf MJ. Migration-related tuberculosis: epidemiology and characteristics of tuberculosis cases originating outside the European Union and European Economic Area, 2007 to 2013. Euro Surveill. 2016;21(12). doi:10.2807/1560-7917.ES.2016.21.12.30164.

509. Furukawa NW, Haider MZ, Allen SJ, Carlson SL, Lindquist SW. Resistance to first-line antituberculosis drugs in Washington state by region of birth and implications for latent tuberculosis treatment among foreign-born individuals. Am J Trop Med Hyg. 2017;96(3):543–49. doi:10.4269/ajtmh.16-0662.

510. Ali M, Howady F, Munir W, Karim H, Al-Suwaidi Z, Al-Maslamani M et al. Drug-resistant tuberculosis: an experience from Qatar. Libyan J Med. 2020;15(1):1744351. doi:10.1080/19932820.2020.1744351.

511. Al-Ghafli H, Varghese B, Enani M, Alrajhi A, Johani SA, Albarrak A. Demographic risk factors for extra-pulmonary tuberculosis among adolescents and adults in Saudi Arabia. PLOS One. 2019;14(3):e0213846. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0213846.

512. Varghese B, Enani M, Alrajhi A, Al Johani S, Albarak A, Althawadi S et al. Impact of Mycobacterium tuberculosis complex lineages as a determinant of disease phenotypes from an immigrant rich moderate tuberculosis burden country. Respir Res. 2018;19(1):259. doi:10.1186/s12931-018-0966-x.

513. Hayward SE, Rustage K, Nellums LB, van der Werf MJ, Noori T, Boccia D et al. Extrapulmonary tuberculosis among migrants in Europe, 1995 to 2017. Clin Microbiol Infect. 2021;27(9):1347. doi:10.1016/j.cmi.2020.12.006.

514. Dale KD, Trauer JM, Dodd PJ, Houben RMGJ, Denholm JT. Estimating the prevalence of latent tuberculosis in a low-incidence setting: Australia. Eur Respir J. 2018;52(6):1801218. doi:10.1183/13993003.01218-2018.

515. Yap P, Tan KHX, Lim WY, Barkham T, Tan LWL, Chen MI-C et al. Prevalence of and risk factors associated with latent tuberculosis in Singapore: a cross-sectional survey. Int J Infect Dis. 2018;72:55–62. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2018.05.004.

516. Kawatsu L, Uchimura K, Ohkado A. Trend and treatment outcomes of latent tuberculosis infection among migrant persons in Japan: retrospective analysis of Japan tuberculosis surveillance data. BMC Infect Dis. 2021;21(1):42. doi:10.1186/s12879-020-05712-1.

517. Dara M, Solovic I, Sotgiu G, D'Ambrosio L, Centis R, Tran R et al. Tuberculosis care among refugees arriving in Europe: a ERS/WHO Europe Region survey of current practices. Eur Respir J. 2016;48(3):808–17. doi:10.1183/13993003.00840-2016.

518. Public health guidance on screening and vaccination for infectious diseases in newly arrived migrants within the EU/EEA. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2018 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/sites/default/files/documents/Public%20health%20guidance%20on%20screening%20and%20vaccination%20of%20migrants%20in%20the%20EU%20EEA.pdf, accessed 30 June 2022).

519. Latent tuberculosis infection: updated and consolidated guidelines for programmatic management. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/260233, accessed 2 April 2022).

520. Pampaloni A, Locatelli ME, Rullo EV, Alaimo S, Cosentino F, Marino A et al. "Diagnosis on the Dock" project: a proactive screening program for diagnosing pulmonary tuberculosis in disembarking refugees and new SEI model. Int J Infect Dis. 2021;106:98–104. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2021.03.032.

521. Pittalis S, Piselli P, Contini S, Gualano G, Alma MG, Tadolini M et al. Socioeconomic status and biomedical risk factors in migrants and native tuberculosis patients in Italy. PLOS One. 2017;12(12):e0189425. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0189425.

522. Campbell JR, Johnston JC, Cook VJ, Sadatsafavi M, Elwood RK, Marra F. Cost-effectiveness of latent tuberculosis infection screening before immigration to low-incidence countries. Emerg Infect Dis. 2019;25(4):661–71. doi:10.3201/eid2504.171630.

523. Hargreaves S, Nellums LB, Johnson C, Goldberg J, Pantelidis P, Rahman A et al. Delivering multi-disease screening to migrants for latent TB and blood-borne viruses in an emergency department setting: a feasibility study. Travel Med Infect Dis. 2020;36:101611. doi:10.1016/j.tmaid.2020.101611.

524. Öhd JN, Lönnroth K, Abubakar I, Aldridge RW, Erkens C, Jonsson J et al. Building a European database to gather multi-country evidence on active and latent TB screening for migrants. Int J Infect Dis. 2019;80S:S45–9. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2019.02.041.

525. Trauer JM, Williams B, Laemmle-Ruff I, Horyniak D, Caplice LVS, McBryde ES et al. Tuberculosis in migrants to Australia: outcomes of a national screening program. Lancet Reg Health West Pac. 2021;10:100135. doi:10.1016/j.lanwpc.2021.100135.

526. Peghin M, Rodriguez-Pardo D, Sanchez-Montalva A, Pellisé F, Rivas A, Tortola T et al. The changing epidemiology of spinal tuberculosis: the influence of international immigration in Catalonia, 1993–2014. Epidemiol Infect. 2017;145(10):2152–60. doi:10.1017/S0950268817000863.

527. Broderick C, Hopkins S, Mack DJF, Aston W, Pollock R, Skinner JA et al. Delays in the diagnosis and treatment of bone and joint tuberculosis in the United Kingdom. Bone Joint J. 2018;100-B(1):119–24. doi:10.1302/0301-620X.100B1.BJJ-2017-0357.R1.

528. Kentley J, Ooi JL, Potter J, Tiberi S, O'Shaughnessy T, Langmead L et al. Intestinal tuberculosis: a diagnostic challenge. Trop Med Int Health. 2017;22(8):994–9. doi:10.1111/tmi.12908.

529. Doğru S, Döner P. Frequency and outcomes of new patients with pulmonary tuberculosis in Hatay province after Syrian civil war. Indian J Tuberc. 2017;64(2):83–8. doi:10.1016/j.ijtb.2016.11.034.

530. El Guamri Y, Amahmid O, Zenjari K, Bouhout S, Ait Mouh M, Ait Melloul A et al. [Imported malaria in the region of Marrakech-Safi, Morocco, between 1996 and 2016]. Bull Soc Pathol Exot. 2018;111(2):104–8. doi:10.3166/bspe-2018-0014.

531. Farag E, Bansal D, Chehab MAH, Al-Dahshan A, Bala M, Ganesan N et al. Epidemiology of malaria in the State of Qatar, 2008–2015. Mediterr J Hematol Infect Dis. 2018;10(1):e2018050. doi:10.4084/MJHID.2018.050.

532. Ismail KA, Abdelwahab MM, Rezk HM, Khalifa AM. Hyalournan role in pathophysiology of different species of Plasmodium. Infect Dis Clin Pract. 2016;24(5):280–2. doi:10.1097/IPC.0000000000000412.

533. Izri A, Cojean S, Leblanc C, Cohen Y, Bouchaud O, Durand R. Plasmodium vivax severe imported malaria in two migrants in France. Malar J. 2019;18(1):422. doi:10.1186/s12936-019-3067-5.

534. Roggelin L, Tappe D, Noack B, Addo MM, Tannich E, Rothe C. Sharp increase of imported Plasmodium vivax malaria seen in migrants from Eritrea in Hamburg, Germany. Malar J. 2016;15:325. doi:10.1186/s12936-016-1366-7.

535. Pérez-Molina JA, López-Polín A, Treviño B, Molina I, Goikoetxea J, Díaz-Menéndez M et al. 6-year review of +Redivi: a prospective registry of imported infectious diseases in Spain. J Travel Med. 2017;24(5). doi:10.1093/jtm/tax035.

536. Boga JA, Casado L, Fernàndez-Suarez J, Moran N, Rodríguez-Perez M, Martínez-Sela M et al. Screening program for imported diseases in immigrant women: analysis and implications from a gender-oriented perspective. Am J Trop Med Hyg. 2020;103(1):480–4. doi:10.4269/ajtmh.19-0687.

537. Jovanovic S, Dakic Z, Lavadinović L, Poluga J, Malinic J, Karić U et al. Changing trend of imported Plasmodium malaria cases by origins and species in Serbia. J Infect Public Health. 2020;13:365–6. doi:10.1016/j.jiph.2020.01.161.

538. Brindicci G, Santoro CR, Loconsole D, Martinelli D, Prato R, Lonero G et al. A cluster of cryptic Plasmodium falciparum malaria in African migrants in southern Italy, October 2017. Vector Borne Zoonotic Dis. 2020;20(12):927–31. doi:10.1089/vbz.2019.2607.

539. Iqbal J, Al-Awadhi M, Ahmad S. Decreasing trend of imported malaria cases but increasing influx of mixed P. falciparum and P. vivax infections in malaria-free Kuwait. PLOS One. 2020;15(12):e0243617. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0243617.

540. Al-Rumhi A, Al-Hashami Z, Al-Hamidhi S, Gadalla A, Naeem R, Ranford-Cartwright L et al. Influx of diverse, drug resistant and transmissible Plasmodium falciparum into a malaria-free setting in Qatar. BMC Infect Dis. 2020;20(1):413. doi:10.1186/s12879-020-05111-6.

541. Alshahrani AM, Abdelgader TM, Saeed I, Al-Akhshami A, Al-Ghamdi M, Al-Zahrani MH et al. The changing malaria landscape in Aseer region, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia: 2000–2015. Malar J. 2016;15(1):538. doi:10.1186/s12936-016-1581-2.

542. Yang C, Zhang H, Zhou R, Qian D, Liu Y, Zhao Y et al. Polymorphisms of Plasmodium falciparum k13-propeller gene among migrant workers returning to Henan Province, China from Africa. BMC Infect Dis. 2017;17(1):560. doi:10.1186/s12879-017-2634-z.

543. Smith JL, Ghimire P, Rijal KR, Maglior A, Hollis S, Andrade-Pacheco R et al. Designing malaria surveillance strategies for mobile and migrant populations in Nepal: a mixed-methods study. Malar J. 2019;18(1):158. doi:10.1186/s12936-019-2791-1.

544. Wen S, Harvard KE, Gueye CS, Canavati SE, Chancellor A, Ahmed B-N et al. Targeting populations at higher risk for malaria: a survey of national malaria elimination programmes in the Asia Pacific. Malar J. 2016;15(1):271. doi:10.1186/s12936-016-1319-1.

545. Kheang ST, Lin MA, Lwin S, Naing YH, Yarzar P, Kak N et al. Malaria case detection among mobile populations and migrant workers in Myanmar: comparison of 3 service delivery approaches. Glob Health Sci Pract. 2018;6(2):384–9. doi:10.9745/GHSP-D-17-00318.

546. Ariza-Abril JS, Marcela-Cifuentes Á, Calderón-Jaramillo M, Rivera D, Rivillas-García JC. Uso de servicios de salud y enfermedades transmisibles de la población migrante y refugiada Venezolana [Use of health services and communicable diseases in the Venezuelan migrant and refugee population]. Salud UIS. 2020;52(4):392–401 (in Spanish). doi:10.18273/revsal.v52n4-2020006.

547. Refugee health report Uganda, June 2019. Ministry of Health Knowledge Management Portal. Kampala: Ministry of Health of Uganda; 2019 (http://library.health.go.ug/publications/refugees/refugee-health-report-uganda-june-2019, accessed 3 April 2022).

548. Ahmed A, Mulatu K, Elfu B. Prevalence of malaria and associated factors among under-five children in Sherkole refugee camp, Benishangul-Gumuz region, Ethiopia. A cross-sectional study. PLOS One. 2021;16(2):e0246895. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0246895.

549. Coldiron ME, Lasry E, Bouhenia M, Das D, Okui P, Nyehangane D et al. Intermittent preventive treatment for malaria among children in a refugee camp in Northern Uganda: lessons learned. Malar J. 2017;16(1):218. doi:10.1186/s12936-017-1869-x.

550. iRHIS: integrated refugee health information system [website]. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2022 (https://his.unhcr.org/home, accessed 4 May 2022).

551. Standardised expanded nutrition survey: data dashboard [website]. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2022 (https://sens.unhcr.org/data-dashboard/, accessed 4 May 2022).

552. Canavati SE, Quintero CE, Lawford HLS, Yok S, Lek D, Richards JS et al. High mobility, low access thwarts interventions among seasonal workers in the Greater Mekong Sub-region: lessons from the malaria containment project. Malar J. 2016;15(1):434. doi:10.1186/s12936-016-1491-3.

553. Population mobility and malaria. Geneva: World Health Organization; International Organization for Migration; 2017 (http://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/255816, accessed 3 April 2022).

554. Tatem AJ, Jia P, Ordanovich D, Falkner M, Huang Z, Howes R et al. The geography of imported malaria to non-endemic countries: a meta-analysis of nationally reported statistics. Lancet Infect Dis. 2017;17(1):98–107. doi:10.1016/S1473-3099(16)30326-7.

555. Rakprasit J, Nakamura K, Seino K, Morita A. Healthcare use for communicable diseases among migrant workers in comparison with Thai workers. Ind Health. 2017;55(1):67–75. doi:10.2486/indhealth.2016-0107.

556. Inkochasan M, Gopinath D, Vicario E, Lee A, Duigan P. Access to health care for migrants in the Greater Mekong Subregion: policies and legal frameworks and their impact on malaria control in the context of malaria elimination. WHO South-East Asia J Public Health. 2019;8(1):26–34. doi:10.4103/2224-3151.255346.

557. Molnarova S, Wolf S, Tenna M. Highland malaria at the Kiziba UNHCR refugee camps (1950 m.a.s.). Clin Soc Work Health Interv. 2016;7(3):19–24. doi:10.22359/cswhi_7_3_05.

558. Aschale Y, Mengist A, Bitew A, Kassie B, Talie A. Prevalence of malaria and associated risk factors among asymptomatic migrant laborers in West Armachiho District, Northwest Ethiopia. Res Rep Trop Med. 2018;9:95–101. doi:10.2147/RRTM.S165260.

559. Camuset G, Lafarge S, Borgherini G, Gerber A, Pouderoux N, Foucher A et al. Leprosy on Reunion Island, 2005–2013: situation and perspectives. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2016;10(4):e0004612. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0004612.

560. Ostera G, Blum J, Cornejo C, Burgula S, Jeun R, Bryan PE et al. Strongyloidiasis in Latin American immigrants: a pilot study. J Helminthol. 2017;91(2):262–6. doi:10.1017/S0022149X16000213.

561. Humphrey JM, Al-Absi ES, Hamdan MM, Okasha SS, Al-Trmanini DM, El-Dous HG et al. Dengue and chikungunya seroprevalence among Qatari nationals and immigrants residing in Qatar. PLOS One. 2019;14(1):e0211574. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0211574.

562. Crawshaw AF, Pareek M, Were J, Schillinger S, Gorbacheva O, Wickramage KP et al. Infectious disease testing of UK-bound refugees: a population-based, cross-sectional study. BMC Med. 2018;16:143. doi:10.1186/s12916-018-1125-4.

563. Cooper CL, Read D, Vachon M-L, Conway B, Wong A, Ramji A et al. Hepatitis C virus infection characteristics and treatment outcomes in Canadian immigrants. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1345. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09464-0.

564. Klok S, van Dulm E, Boyd A, Generaal E, Eskander S, Joore IK et al. Hepatitis B virus (HBV), hepatitis C virus (HCV) and human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infections among undocumented migrants and uninsured legal residents in the Netherlands: a cross-sectional study, 2018–2019. PLOS One. 2021;16(10):e0258932. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0258932.

565. Kim JU, Ingiliz P, Shimakawa Y, Lemoine M. Improving care of migrants is key for viral hepatitis elimination in Europe. Bull World Health Organ. 2021;99(4):280–6. doi:10.2471/BLT.20.260919.

566. Nazareth J, Baggaley RF, Divall P, Pan D, Martin CA, Volik M et al. What is the evidence on existing national policies and guidelines for delivering effective tuberculosis, HIV and viral hepatitis services for refugees and migrants among Member States of the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/352055/, accessed 26 April 2022).

567. Nasrallah GK, Al-Absi ES, Ghandour R, Ali NH, Taleb S, Hedaya L et al. Seroprevalence of hepatitis E virus among blood donors in Qatar (2013-2016). Transfusion. 2017;57(7):1801–7. doi:10.1111/trf.14116.

568. Bizri AR, Fares J, Musharrafieh U. Infectious diseases in the era of refugees: hepatitis A outbreak in Lebanon. Avicenna J Med. 2018;8(4):147–52. doi:10.4103/ajm.AJM_130_18.

569. Al Mahtab M, Akbar SMF, Takahashi K, Adnan ABM, Alam MA, Noor-E-Alam SM et al. Alarming levels of hepatitis C virus prevalence among Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh: emergency national and international actions warranted. Euroasian J Hepatogastroenterol. 2019;9(1):55–6. doi:10.5005/jp-journals-10018-1297.

570. Ayele A, Abera D, Hailu M, Birhanu M, Desta K. Prevalence and associated risk factors for hepatitis B and C viruses among refugees in Gambella, Ethiopia. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):721. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-08893-1.

571. Robotin MC, Wallace J, Gallego G, George J. Hepatitis B and liver cancer: community awareness, knowledge and beliefs of Middle Eastern Migrants in Sydney, Australia. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2021;18(16):8534. doi:10.3390/ijerph18168534.

572. Özbilgin A, Gencoglan G, Tunali V, Çavuş İ, Yıldırım A, Gündüz C et al. Refugees at the crossroads of continents: a molecular approach for cutaneous leishmaniasis among refugees in Turkey. Acta Parasitol. 2020;65(1):136–43. doi:10.2478/s11686-019-00139-4.

573. Amr ZS, Kanani K, Shadfan B, Hani RB. Cutaneous leishmaniasis among Syrian refugees in Jordan: a retrospective study. Bull Soc Pathol Exot . 2018;111(5):295–300. doi:10.3166/bspe-2019-0057.

574. de Lima Junior MM, Rodrigues GA, de Lima MR. Evaluation of emerging infectious disease and the importance of SINAN for epidemiological surveillance of Venezuelans immigrants in Brazil. Braz J Infect Dis. 2019;23(5):307–12. doi:10.1016/j.bjid.2019.07.006.

575. Aschale Y, Ayehu A, Worku L, Tesfa H, Birhanie M, Lemma W. Malaria-visceral leishmaniasis co-infection and associated factors among migrant laborers in West Armachiho district, North West Ethiopia: community based cross-sectional study. BMC Infect Dis. 2019;19(1):239. doi:10.1186/s12879-019-3865-y.

576. Zanjirani Farahani L, Mohebali M, Akhoundi B, Saghafipour A, Kakooei Z. Seroepidemiological study on visceral leishmaniasis in an endemic focus of central Iran during 2017. J Parasit Dis. 2019;43(1):22–7. doi:10.1007/s12639-018-1049-0.

577. Abdalla NM, Abdelgani AM, Osman AA, Mohamed MN. Demographical and population dynamics impact on public health of cutaneous leishmaniasis in Al-Madinah Almonawra, Saudi Arabia. Afr Health Sci. 2019;19(3):2421–30. doi:10.4314/ahs.v19i3.16.

578. Alarfaj YY, Alghanim NI, Alkhalifah RH, Balghonaim MS, Ali MB. Incidence of cutaneous leishmaniasis in Al-Ahsa, Saudi Arabia from 2011 to 2013. Indo Am J Pharm Sci. 2019;6(1):801–7. doi:10.5281/zenodo.2537605.

579. Yentur Doni N, Gurses G, Dikme R, Aksoy M, Yildiz Zeyrek F, Simsek Z et al. Cutaneous leishmaniasis due to three Leishmania species among Syrian refugees in Sanliurfa, southeastern Turkey. Acta Parasitol. 2020;65(4):936–48. doi:10.2478/s11686-020-00227-w.

580. Lindner AK, Richter J, Gertler M, Nikolaus M, Equihua Martinez G, Müller K et al. Cutaneous leishmaniasis in refugees from Syria: complex cases in Berlin 2015–2020. J Travel Med. 2020;27(7):taaa161. doi:10.1093/jtm/taaa161.

581. Meymandi SK, Forsyth CJ, Soverow J, Hernandez S, Sanchez D, Montgomery SP et al. Prevalence of Chagas disease in the Latin American-born population of Los Angeles. Clin Infect Dis. 2017;64(9):1182–8. doi:10.1093/cid/cix064.

582. Basile L, Jansa JM, Carlier Y, Salamanca DD, Angheben A, Bartoloni A et al. Chagas disease in European countries: the challenge of a surveillance system. Euro Surveill. 2011;16(37):19968. doi:10.2807/ese.16.37.19968-en.

583. González Sanz M, De Sario M, García-Mingo D, Dawood N, Álvarez-Martínez MJ, Daly R et al. Chagas disease in the United Kingdom: a review of cases managed at the Hospital for Tropical Diseases London 1995–2018. The current state of detection of Chagas disease in the UK. Travel Med Infect Dis. 2020;36:101760. doi:10.1016/j.tmaid.2020.101760.

584. Aith FMA, Forsyth C, Shikanai-Yasuda MA. Chagas disease and healthcare rights in the Bolivian immigrant community of São Paulo, Brazil. Trop Med Infect Dis. 2020;5(2):62. doi:10.3390/tropicalmed5020062.

585. Luna EJ, Furucho CR, Silva RA, Wanderley DM, Carvalho NB, Satolo CG et al. Prevalence of Trypanosoma cruzi infection among Bolivian immigrants in the city of São Paulo, Brazil. Mem Inst Oswaldo Cruz. 2017;112(1):70–4. doi:10.1590/0074-02760160384.

586. Requena-Méndez A, Aldasoro E, Lazzari E, Sicuri E, Brown M, Moore DA et al. Prevalence of Chagas disease in Latin-American migrants living in Europe: a systematic review and meta-analysis. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2015;9(2):e0003540. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0003540.

587. Cobo F, Salas-Coronas J, Cabezas-Fernández MT, Vázquez-Villegas J, Cabeza-Barrera MI, Soriano-Pérez MJ. Infectious diseases in immigrant population related to the time of residence in Spain. J Immigr Minor Health. 2016;18(1):8–15. doi:10.1007/s10903-014-0141-5.

588. Romay-Barja M, Boquete T, Martinez O, Benito A, Blasco-Hernández T. Factors associated with Chagas screening among immigrants from an endemic country in Madrid, Spain. PLOS One. 2020;15(3):e0230120. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0230120.

589. Vargas-Machuca R, Rojas-Dávila CE, Jiménez MM, Piscoya-Magallanes CR, Razuri H, Ugaz ME. Situación nutricional de los niños migrantes venezolanos a su ingreso al Perú y las acciones emprendidas para proteger su salud y nutrición [Nutritional situation of Venezuelan migrant children upon entry into Peru and the actions taken to protect their health and nutrition]. Rev Peru Med Exp Salud Publica. 2019;36(3):504–10. doi:10.17843/rpmesp.2019.363.4676.

590. Mekonnen GK, Mengistie B, Sahilu G, Kloos H, Mulat W. Etiologies of diarrhea and drug susceptibility patterns of bacterial isolates among under-five year children in refugee camps in Gambella Region, Ethiopia: a case control study. BMC Infect Dis. 2019;19(1):1008. doi:10.1186/s12879-019-4599-6.

591. Kisera N, Luxemburger C, Tornieporth N, Otieno G, Inda J. A descriptive cross-sectional study of cholera at Kakuma and Kalobeyei refugee camps, Kenya in 2018. Pan Afr Med J. 2020;37:197. doi:10.11604/pamj.2020.37.197.24798.

592. Mekonnen GK, Alemu BM, Mulat W, Sahilu G, Kloos H. Risk factors for acute childhood diarrhea: a cross-sectional study comparing refugee camps and host communities in Gambella Region, Ethiopia. Travel Med Infect Dis. 2019;31:101385. doi:10.1016/j.tmaid.2019.02.003.

593. Watts NS, Mizinduko MM, Barnett ED, White LF, Hochberg NS. Association between parasitic infections and tuberculin skin test results in refugees. Travel Med Infect Dis. 2017;16:35–40. doi:10.1016/j.tmaid.2017.03.007.

594. Boughattas S, Behnke JM, Al-Sadeq D, Ismail A, Abu-Madi M. Cryptosporidium spp., prevalence, molecular characterisation and socio-demographic risk factors among immigrants in Qatar. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2019;13(10):e0007750. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0007750.

595. Chernet A, Kling K, Sydow V, Kuenzli E, Hatz C, Utzinger J et al. Accuracy of diagnostic tests for Schistosoma mansoni infection in asymptomatic Eritrean refugees: serology and point-of-care circulating cathodic antigen against stool microscopy. Clin Infect Dis. 2017;65(4):568–74. doi:10.1093/cid/cix366.

596. Global leprosy strategy 2016−2020: accelerating towards a leprosy-free world. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/208824, accessed 3 April 2022).

597. Muga GO, Onyango-Ouma W, Sang R, Affognon H. Indigenous knowledge of Rift Valley fever among Somali nomadic pastoralists and its implications on public health delivery approaches in Ijara sub-County, north eastern Kenya. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2021;15(2):e0009166. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0009166.

598. Sanders AM, Abdalla Z, Elshafie BE, Nute AW, Long EF, Aziz N et al. Prevalence of trachoma within refugee camps serving South Sudanese refugees in White Nile State, Sudan: results from population-based surveys. PLOS Negl Trop Dis. 2019;13(6):e0007491. doi:10.1371/journal.pntd.0007491.

599. Mathur R, Rentsch CT, Morton CE, Hulme WJ, Schultze A, MacKenna B et al. Ethnic differences in SARS-CoV-2 infection and COVID-19-related hospitalisation, intensive care unit admission, and death in 17 million adults in England: an observational cohort study using the OpenSAFELY platform. Lancet. 2021;397(10286):1711–24. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(21)00634-6.

600. Fabiani M, Mateo-Urdiales A, Andrianou X, Bella A, Del Manso M, Bellino S et al. Epidemiological characteristics of COVID-19 cases in non-Italian nationals notified to the Italian surveillance system. Eur J Public Health. 2021;31:37–44. doi:10.1093/eurpub/ckaa249.

601. Giorgi Rossi P, Marino M, Formisano D, Venturelli F, Vicentini M, Grilli R et al. Characteristics and outcomes of a cohort of COVID-19 patients in the Province of Reggio Emilia, Italy. PLOS One. 2020;15(8):e0238281. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0238281.

602. COVID-19-epidemien: kunnskap, situasjon, prognose, risiko og respons i Norge etter uke 51. Oslo: Norwegian Institute of Public Health; 2020 (in Norwegian; https://www.fhi.no/contentassets/c9e459cd7cc24991810a0d28d7803bd0/vedlegg/covid-19-epidemien-kunnskap-situasjon-prognose-risiko-og-respons-i-norge-etter-uke-51-publisert-21.12.2020.pdf, accessed 4 May 2022).

603. Demographic description of confirmed COVID-19 cases in Sweden from 13 March to 7 May. Stockholm: Swedish Public Health Agency; 2020 (in Swedish; https://www.folkhalsomyndigheten.se/contentassets/d6538f6c359e448ba39993a41e1116e7/covid-19-demografisk-beskrivning-bekraftade-covid-19-fall.pdf, accessed 4 May 2022).

604. COVID-19 og herkomst - opdateret fokusrapport. Copenhagen: Statens Serum Institut; 2020 (in Danish; https://files.ssi.dk/COVID19-og-herkomst-oktober-2020, accessed 4 May 2022).

605. Hayward SE, Deal A, Cheng C, Crawshaw A, Orcutt M, Vandrevala TF et al. Clinical outcomes and risk factors for COVID-19 among migrant populations in high-income countries: a systematic review. J Migr Health. 2021;3:100041. doi:10.1016/j.jmh.2021.100041.

606. Pan H, Fokkema T, Switsers L, Dury S, Hoens S, De Donder L. Older Chinese migrants in coronavirus pandemic: exploring risk and protective factors to increased loneliness. Eur J Ageing. 2021;18(2):207–15. doi:10.1007/s10433-021-00625-7.

607. A claim to dignity: ageing on the move. New York: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.acnur.org/60ad9f544, accessed 21 April 2022).

608. Reducing COVID-19 transmission and strengthening vaccine uptake among migrant populations in the EU/EEA. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2021 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/sites/default/files/documents/covid-19-reducing-transmission-and-strengthening-vaccine-uptake-in-migrants.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

609. Guidance on infection prevention and control of COVID-19 in migrant and refugee reception and detention centres in the EU/EEA and the UK. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2020 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/sites/default/files/documents/COVID-19-guidance-refugee-asylum-seekers-migrants-EU.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

610. Epidemiological surveillance in points of care for refugees/migrants: weekly report: week 19/2020 (04/05 to 10/05). Athens: Ministry of Health of Greece; 2020 (https://eody.gov.gr/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/Surveillance-refugees-weekly-EN-2020-19.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

611. Preparedness, prevention and control of coronavirus disease (COVID-19) for refugees and migrants in non-camp settings: interim guidance, 17 April 2020. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/331777, accessed 3 April 2022).

612. Sisti LG, Di Napoli A, Petrelli A, Rossi A, Diodati A, Menghini M et al. COVID-19 impact in the Italian reception system for migrants during the nationwide lockdown: a national observational study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2021;18(23):12380. doi:10.3390/ijerph182312380.

613. Hamadah H, Alahmad B, Behbehani M, Al-Youha S, Almazeedi S, Al-Haddad M et al. COVID-19 clinical outcomes and nationality: results from a nationwide registry in Kuwait. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1384. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09490-y.

614. Tan IB, Tan C, Hsu LY, Dan YY, Aw A, Cook AR et al. Prevalence and outcomes of SARS-CoV-2 infection among migrant workers in Singapore. JAMA. 2021;325(6):584–5. doi:10.1001/jama.2020.24071.

615. Zhang M, Gurung A, Anglewicz P, Yun K. COVID-19 and immigrant essential workers: Bhutanese and Burmese refugees in the United States. Public Health Rep. 2021;136(1):117–23. doi:10.1177/0033354920971720.

616. COVID-19 dashboard. WHO Cox's Bazar data hub. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2022 (https://cxb-epi.netlify.app/post/covid-19-dashboard/, accessed 3 April 2022).

617. Least protected, most affected: migrants and refugees facing extraordinary risks during the COVID-19 pandemic. Geneva: International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies; 2021 (https://www.ifrc.org/document/least-protected-most-affected-migrants-and-refugees-facing-extraordinary-risks-during, accessed 3 April 2022).

618. Åhlberg M. No viable alternatives: social (in)security and risk of labour exploitation during COVID-19. London: Independent Workers Union of Great Britain and United Voices of the World; 2021 (https://www.labourexploitation.org/sites/default/files/publications/Full%20report_Social%20Insecurity_Final.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

619. The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on jobs and incomes in G20 economies. Geneva: International Labour Organization; 2020 (https://www.ilo.org/wcmsp5/groups/public/---dgreports/---cabinet/documents/publication/wcms_756331.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

620. Refugees and migrants in times of COVID-19: mapping trends of public health and migration policies and practices. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/341843, accessed 3 April 2022).

621. Hajjar MS, Abu-Sittah GS. The multidimensional burden of COVID-19 on Syrian refugees in Lebanon. J Glob Health. 2021;11:05003. doi:10.7189/jogh.11.05003.

622. Benton M, Batalova J, Davidoff-Gore S, Schmidt T. COVID-19 and the state of global mobility in 2020. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2021 (https://publications.iom.int/books/covid-19-and-state-global-mobility-2020, accessed 3 April 2022).

623. Kumar K, Mehra A, Sahoo S, Nehra R, Grover S. The psychological impact of COVID-19 pandemic and lockdown on the migrant workers: a cross-sectional survey. Asian J Psychiatry. 2020;53:102252. doi:10.1016/j.ajp.2020.102252.

624. Mukumbang FC, Ambe AN, Adebiyi BO. Unspoken inequality: how COVID-19 has exacerbated existing vulnerabilities of asylum-seekers, refugees, and undocumented migrants in South Africa. Int J Equity Health. 2020;19(1):141. doi:10.1186/s12939-020-01259-4.

625. ApartTogether survey: preliminary overview of refugees and migrants self-reported impact of COVID-19. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/337931, accessed 3 April 2022).

626. From insights to action: gender equality in the wake of COVID-19. New York: United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN Women); 2020 (https://www.unwomen.org/en/digital-library/publications/2020/09/gender-equality-in-the-wake-of-covid-19, accessed 3 April 2022).

627. The impact of COVID-19 on refugee and migrant women in Tunisia. Mixed Migration Centre; 2021 (https://reliefweb.int/report/tunisia/impact-covid-19-refugee-and-migrant-women-tunisia, accessed 3 April 2022).

628. Impact of COVID-19 on gender-based violence: refugee and migrant response. New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2021 (https://www.unicef.org/eca/media/15751/file, accessed 3 April 2022).

629. COVID-19 pandemic worsening gender inequalities for refugee women and girls. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/news/press/2021/3/604524674/covid-19-pandemic-worsening-gender-inequalities-refugee-women-girls.html, accessed 3 April 2022).

630. A web of insecurity: gendered risks and vulnerabilities for children on the move during the COVID-19 pandemic. New York: United Nations Children's Fund; 2021 (https://data.unicef.org/resources/a-web-of-insecurity-gendered-risks-vulnerabilities-children-on-the-move-covid-19/, accessed 3 April 2022).

631. 10 million additional girls at risk of child marriage due to COVID-19. New York: United Nations Childrens Fund; 2021 (https://www.unicef.org/press-releases/10-million-additional-girls-risk-child-marriage-due-covid-19, accessed 25 June 2022).

632. Lusambili AM, Martini M, Abdirahman F, Asante A, Ochieng S, Guni JN et al. "We have a lot of home deliveries." A qualitative study on the impact of COVID-19 on access to and utilisation of reproductive, maternal, newborn and child health care among refugee women in urban Eastleigh, Kenya. J Migr Health. 2020;2:100025. doi:10.1016/j.jmh.2020.100025.

633. Landini C. Child marriage in the context of COVID-19: analysis of trends, programming and alternative approaches in the Middle East and North Africa. New York: United Nations Population Fund; 2021 (https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/document/child-marriage-context-covid-19-analysis-trends-programming-and-alternative-approaches/, accessed 3 April 2022).

634. Ubeysekara I. Sri Lankan women migrant workers: more risks, more trafficking during COVID-19. Colombo: Helvetas Sri Lanka; 2020 (https://www.shareweb.ch/site/Migration/focus-area/Pages/Sri-Lankan-women-migrant-workers--more-risks%2C-more-trafficking-during-COVID-19.aspx, accessed 3 April 2022).

635. Gender-based violence risk assessment Azraq Camp. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/DJ3_SGBV%20Risk%20Assessment_Azraq_Final.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

636. Bukuluki P, Mwenyango H, Kato F, Kyamulabi A, Bagabo A. Chapter 4 – The psychosocial effect of COVID-19 on urban refugees: narratives from Congolese refugees living in Kampala. In: Moustafa AA, editor. Mental health effects of COVID-19. New York: Academic Press; 2021 (https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/B9780128242896000064, accessed 3 April 2022).

637. Bukuluki P, Mwenyango H, Katongole SP, Sidhva D, Palattiyil G. The socio-economic and psychosocial impact of COVID-19 pandemic on urban refugees in Uganda. Soc Sci Humanit Open. 2020;2(1):100045. doi:10.1016/j.ssaho.2020.100045.

638. Kizilhan JI, Noll-Hussong M. Psychological impact of COVID-19 in a refugee camp in Iraq. Psychiatry Clin Neurosci. 2020;74(12):659–60. doi:10.1111/pcn.13142.

639. Rees S, Fisher J. COVID-19 and the mental health of people from refugee backgrounds. Int J Health Serv. 2020;50(4): 415–17. doi:10.1177/0020731420942475.

640. The impact of COVID-19 on mental, neurological and substance use services: results of a rapid assessment. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/335838, accessed 3 April 2022).

641. Manirambona E, Uwizeyimana T, Uwiringiyimana E, Reddy H. Impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the food rations of refugees in Rwanda. Int J Equity Health. 2021;20(1):107. doi:10.1186/s12939-021-01450-1.

642. Karim MR, Islam MT, Talukder B. COVID-19's impacts on migrant workers from Bangladesh: in search of policy intervention. World Dev. 2021;136:105123. doi:10.1016/j.worlddev.2020.105123.

643. Chowdhury MB, Chakraborty M. The impact of COVID-19 on the migrant workers and remittances flow to Bangladesh. South Asian Surv. 2021;28(1):38–56. doi:10.1177/0971523121995365.

644. Alemi Q, Stempel C, Siddiq H, Kim E. Refugees and COVID-19: achieving a comprehensive public health response. Bull World Health Organ. 2020;98(8):510. doi:10.2471/BLT.20.271080.

645. IOM Myanmar COVID-19 response situation report 3. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/report/myanmar/iom-myanmar-covid-19-response-situation-report-3-1-may-2020, accessed 3 April 2022).

646. Chung RY-N, Li MM. Anti-Chinese sentiment during the 2019-nCoV outbreak. Lancet. 2020;395(10225):686–7. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(20)30358-5.

647. Devakumar D, Shannon G, Bhopal SS, Abubakar I. Racism and discrimination in COVID-19 responses. Lancet. 2020;395(10231):1194. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(20)30792-3.

648. Adhanom Ghebreyesus T. WHO Director-General's opening remarks at the media briefing on COVID-19. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2020 (https://www.who.int/director-general/speeches/detail/who-director-general-s-opening-remarks-at-the-media-briefing-on-covid-19---11-march-2020, accessed 3 April 2022).

649. Connor P. More than nine-in-ten people worldwide live in countries with travel restrictions amid COVID-19. Washington (DC): Pew Research Center; 2020 (https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2020/04/01/more-than-nine-in-ten-people-worldwide-live-in-countries-with-travel-restrictions-amid-covid-19/, accessed 3 April 2022).

650. International migration 2020 highlights. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs, Population Division; 2021 (https://www.un.org/en/desa/international-migration-2020-highlights, accessed 21 April 2022).

651. International Migration Outlook 2020. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2020 (https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/social-issues-migration-health/international-migration-outlook-2021_29f23e9d-en, accessed 3 April 2022).

652. 2020 annual international migration and forced displacement trends and policies report to the G20. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2021 (https://www.oecd.org/els/mig/FINAL-2020-OECD-ILO-UNHCR-IOM-G20-report.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

653. COVID-19 impact on stranded migrants Return and Reintegration Platform. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2020 (https://returnandreintegration.iom.int/en/resources/report/covid-19-impact-stranded-migrants, accessed 3 April 2022).

654. Labor migration in Asia: impacts of the COVID-19 crisis and the post-pandemic future. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2021 (https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/social-issues-migration-health/labor-migration-in-asia_a5d6e6aa-en, accessed 3 April 2022).

655. Laczko F. COVID-19 and migration in 2020: five key trends. Migr Policy Pract. 2021;XI(1):5–9 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/mpp-44.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

656. Greenaway C, Hargreaves S, Barkati S, Coyle CM, Gobbi F, Veizis A et al. COVID-19: exposing and addressing health disparities among ethnic minorities and migrants. J Travel Med. 2020;27(7):taaa113. doi:10.1093/jtm/taaa113.

657. Redditt V, Wright V, Rashid M, Male R, Bogoch I. Outbreak of SARS-CoV-2 infection at a large refugee shelter in Toronto, April 2020: a clinical and epidemiologic descriptive analysis. CMAJ Open. 2020;8(4):E819–24. doi:10.9778/cmajo.20200165.

658. Subbaraman N. "Distancing is impossible": refugee camps race to avert coronavirus catastrophe. Nature. 2020;581(7806):18. doi:10.1038/d41586-020-01219-6.

659. Bozorgmehr K, Hintermeier M, Razum O, Mohsenpour A, Biddle L, Oertelt-Prigione S et al. SARS-CoV-2 in aufnahmeeinrichtungen und gemeinschaftsunterkünften für geflüchtete: epidemiologische und normativ-rechtliche aspekte. Competence Network Public Health COVID-19; 2020 (in German; https://www.public-health-covid19.de/images/2020/Ergebnisse/FactSheet_PHNetwork-COVID19_Aufnahmeeinrichtungen_v1_inkl_ANNEX.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

660. Gilman RT, Mahroof-Shaffi S, Harkensee C, Chamberlain AT. Modelling interventions to control COVID-19 outbreaks in a refugee camp. BMJ Glob Health. 2020;5(12):e003727. doi:10.1136/bmjgh-2020-003727.

661. Easton-Calabria E. A restriction of responsibility-sharing: exploring the impact of COVID-19 on the global compact on refugees. Copenhagen: Danish Refugee Council; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/report/world/restriction-responsibility-sharing-exploring-impact-covid-19-global-compact-refugees, accessed 3 April 2022).

662. Alkhamis MA, Youha SA, Khajah MM, Haider NB, Alhardan S, Nabeel A et al. Spatiotemporal dynamics of the COVID-19 pandemic in the State of Kuwait. Int J Infect Dis. 2020;98:153–60. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2020.06.078.

663. Measures to contain the COVID-19 outbreak in migrant worker dormitories. Singapore Ministry of Health; 2020 (https://www.moh.gov.sg/news-highlights/details/measures-to-contain-the-covid-19-outbreak-in-migrant-worker-dormitories, accessed 3 April 2022).

664. Chersich MF, Gray G, Fairlie L, Eichbaum Q, Mayhew S, Allwood B et al. COVID-19 in Africa: care and protection for frontline healthcare workers. Global Health. 2020;16(1):46. doi:10.1186/s12992-020-00574-3.

665. Reid A, Ronda-Perez E, Schenker MB. Migrant workers, essential work, and COVID-19. Am J Ind Med. 2021;64(2):73–7. doi:10.1002/ajim.23209.

666. Editorial. The plight of essential workers during the COVID-19 pandemic. Lancet. 2020;395(10237):1587. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(20)31200-9.

667. Kerwin D, Warren R. US foreign-born workers in the global pandemic: essential and marginalized. J Migr Hum Secur. 2020;8(3):282–300. doi:10.1177/2331502420952752.

668. Migration data relevant for the COVID-19 pandemic. Migration data portal. Global Migration Data Analysis Centre; 2021 (https://www.migrationdataportal.org/themes/migration-data-relevant-covid-19-pandemic, accessed 3 April 2022).

669. Contribution of migrant doctors and nurses to tackling COVID-19 crisis in OECD countries. Paris: Organisation for Economic Development and Co-operation; 2020 (https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/social-issues-migration-health/contribution-of-migrant-doctors-and-nurses-to-tackling-covid-19-crisis-in-oecd-countries_2f7bace2-en, accessed 21 April 2022).

670. Mutambudzi M, Niedzwiedz C, Macdonald EB, Leyland A, Mair F, Anderson J et al. Occupation and risk of severe COVID-19: prospective cohort study of 120 075 UK Biobank participants. Occup Environ Med. 2020;78(5):307–14. doi:10.1136/oemed-2020-106731.

671. Gholizadeh P, Sanogo M, Oumarou A, Mohamed MN, Cissoko Y, Sow MS et al. Fighting COVID-19 in west Africa after experiencing the Ebola epidemic. Health Promot Perspect. 2021;11(1):5–11. doi:10.34172/hpp.2021.02.

672. Onoma AK. The making of dangerous communities: the "Peul-Fouta" in Ebola-weary Senegal. Afr Spectr. 2017;52(2):29–51. doi:10.1177/000203971705200202.

673. Onoma AK. Xenophobia's contours during an Ebola epidemic: proximity and the targeting of Peul migrants in Senegal. Afr Stud Rev. 2020;63(2):353–74. doi:10.1017/asr.2019.38.

674. Al-Ghalib Alsharif FL, Malit FT. Migration and the COVID-19 pandemic in the Gulf Report No. 15. Bonn: Konrad Adenauer Stiftung; 2020 (https://www.kas.de/documents/286298/8668222/Policy+Report+No+15+Migration+and+The+COVID-19+Pandemic+in+the+Gulf.pdf/87dd88bd-ed47-41c7-be23-48c5a5eb8d7c?version=1.0&t=1603448109241, accessed 3 April 2022).

675. Alsharif F. Undocumented migrants in Saudi Arabia: COVID-19 and amnesty reforms. Int Migr. 2022;60(1):188–204. doi:10.1111/imig.12838.

676. Rahman MM. COVID-19 and migrants in the GCC States: challenges, responses and key lessons. Doha: Qatar University Gulf Studies Center; 2021 (Working Paper 1; http://www.qu.edu.qa/static_file/qu/research/Gulf%20Studies/documents/Working%20paper%201%20-%20Mizanur%20Rahman%20-%202021.pdf, accessed 26 April 2022).

677. WHO Country Office: Libya: annual report 2020. Cairo: WHO Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean; 2021 (https://applications.emro.who.int/docs/9789290225959-eng.pdf?ua=1, accessed 26 April 2022).

678. Riggirozzi P, Grugel J, Cintra N. Perspective on migrants' right to health in Latin America during COVID-19. London: University College London–Lancet Commission on Migration and Health; 2020 (https://1bec58c3-8dcb-46b0-bb2a-fd4addf0b29a.filesusr.com/ugd/188e74_543cbb0400824084abcea99479dfa124.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

679. Fernández-Niño JA, Cubillos-Novella A, Bojórquez L, Rodríguez M. Recommendations for the response against COVID-19 in migratory contexts under a closed border: the case of Colombia. Biomedica. 2020;40:68–72. doi:10.7705/biomedica.5512.

680. Remote assessment COVID-19: Venezuelan migrants in Colombia, Ecuador and Peru. In: ReliefWeb [website]. New York: United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/report/colombia/remote-assessment-covid-19-venezuelan-migrants-colombia-ecuador-and-peru, accessed 29 March 2022).

681. Del Monte JA, Irwin RM. Personas migrantes en Tijuana frente al COVID-19: impactos y consecuencias de las medidas sanitarias desde la perspectiva de los actores [Migrants in Tijuana facing COVID-19: impacts and consequences of health measures from the perspective of the actors]. Tijuana: Colegio de la Frontera Norte; 2020 (in Spanish; https://www.colef.mx/wp-content/uploads/2020/06/8_Personasmigrantes.pdf, accessed 3 April 2022).

682. Ulrich MR, Crosby SS. Title 42, asylum, and politicising public health. Lancet Reg Health - Am. 2022;7:100124. doi:10.1016/j.lana.2021.100124.

683. Bojorquez-Chapela I, Infante C, Larrea-Schiavon S, Vieitez-Martinez I. In-transit migrants and asylum seekers: inclusion gaps in Mexico's COVID-19 health policy response. Health Aff (Millwood). 2021;40(7):1154–61. doi:10.1377/hlthaff.2021.00085.

684. Alabdulla M, Reagu SM, Al-Khal A, Elzain M, Jones RM. COVID-19 vaccine hesitancy and attitudes in Qatar: a national cross-sectional survey of a migrant-majority population. Influenza Other Respir Viruses. 2021;15(3):361–70. doi:10.1111/irv.12847.

685. Crawshaw AF, Deal A, Rustage K, Forster AS, Campos-Matos I, Vandrevala T et al. What must be done to tackle vaccine hesitancy and barriers to COVID-19 vaccination in migrants? J Travel Med. 2021;28(4):taab048. doi:10.1093/jtm/taab048.

686. Priebe Rocha L, Rose R, Hoch A, Soares C, Fernandes A, Galvão H et al. The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the Brazilian immigrant community in the U.S: results from a qualitative study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2021;18(7):3355. doi:10.3390/ijerph18073355.

687. COVID-19 situation reports. Cairo: WHO Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean; 2020 (http://www.emro.who.int/health-topics/corona-virus/situation-reports.html, accessed 3 April 2022).

688. Knipper M, Sedas AC, Keshavjee S, Abbara A, Almhawish N, Alashawi H et al. The need for protecting and enhancing TB health policies and services for forcibly displaced and migrant populations during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. Int J Infect Dis. 2021;113(suppl 1):S22–7. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2021.03.047.

689. The COVID-19 vaccines and undocumented migrants: what are European countries doing? Brussels: Platform for International Cooperation on Undocumented Migrants (PICUM); 2021 (https://picum.org/covid-19-vaccines-undocumented-migrants-europe/, accessed 3 April 2022).

690. Spiegel PB, Hering H, Paik E, Schilperoord M. Conflict-affected displaced persons need to benefit more from HIV and malaria national strategic plans and Global Fund grants. Confl Health. 2010;4(1):2. doi:10.1186/1752-1505-4-2.

691. WHO SAGE roadmap for prioritizing uses of COVID-19 vaccines. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/rest/bitstreams/1406385/retrieve, accessed 3 April 2022).

692. Sköld N. UNHCR calls for inclusion of refugees in vaccination plans. UNHCR Nordic and Baltic Countries. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://www.unhcr.org/neu/51787-unhcr-calls-for-inclusion-of-refugees-in-vaccination-plans.html, accessed 3 April 2022).

693. UNHCR COVID-19 response [website]. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; 2021 (https://reporting.unhcr.org/document/925#_ga=2.174892007.43253892.1639994982-1175060295.1621948336, accessed 3 April 2022).

694. Wickramage K, Gostin LO, Friedman E, Prakongsai P, Suphanchaimat R, Hui C et al. Missing: where are the migrants in pandemic influenza preparedness plans? Health Hum Rights. 2018;20(1):251–8. PMID:30008567.

695. The COVAX Humanitarian Buffer. New York: Inter-Agency Standing Committee; 2022 (https://interagencystandingcommittee.org/inter-agency-standing-committee/covax-humanitarian-buffer, accessed 25 June 2022).

696. Over 1.6 million COVID-19 vaccines delivered to Islamic Republic of Iran to increase protection of Afghan refugees. Tehran: United Nations Children's Fund; 2021 (http://www.emro.who.int/iran/news/over-16-million-donated-covid-19-vaccines-land-in-islamic-republic-of-iran-to-increase-protection-of-afghan-refugees.html, accessed 25 June 2022).

Although health is at the core of any ministry of health, the multifaceted nature of health and migration necessitates working not only across government agencies but also with many other national sectors to ensure effective and quality health services for all refugees and migrants. It also entails adopting a regional perspective, connecting migrants to health services along migration routes within and between countries. As a Minister, I also need to consider three specific dimensions: the long term of infrastructure, the medium term of policy and the short term of politics.

Migration can occur regularly yet go unnoticed over decades but can also be unexpected and rapid as a result of major weather events, outbreak of conflict or war, or ethnic cleansing. All can displace tens of thousands in a short timespan, which places great stress on host health systems.

This report demonstrates that the most efficient way to meet the health needs of refugees and migrants in the short, medium and long term is by integrated health systems and by including refugees and migrants within systems that serve the host communities. In spite of the significant resources and technical improvements this may require, a more inclusive health system has proven to be hugely beneficial for all, refugees, migrants and host communities alike. To make this happen, those in charge need to work in synergy with other sectors of government and society.

Midori de Habich,
Former Minister of Health, Peru

CHAPTER 4

Refugee- and migrant-sensitive health systems

Face shield
Direct Splash protection

A nurse at a Severe Acute Respiratory Infection Isolation and Treatment Center (SARI ITC) in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, supporting COVID-19 preparedness and response for vulnerable Rohingya refugees and host communities. © WHO / Blink Media – Fabeha Monir

4.1 Introduction

This chapter is structured according to the six building blocks of health systems defined by WHO: service delivery; the health workforce; access to medical products, vaccines and technologies; HIS; financing; and leadership and governance (Fig. 4.1). These building blocks are used to describe opportunities and challenges for a health system that is sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants (1), in line with UHC, including PHC. As described in the 2010 global consultation on migrant health, "sensitive health systems and programmes" seek to systematically integrate the needs of refugees and migrants "into all aspects of health services financing, policy, planning, implementation, and evaluation" (2). For health systems to be sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants, these populations need to be included in the system not only as patients but also as providers, decision-makers and facilitators. Moreover, making health systems sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants is part of the process of health systems strengthening, which also benefits the host population.

Aerial view of the entrance of the new site of Moria reception and identification centre for asylum seekers and refugees on Lesvos, Greece, in September 2020. It replaced the previous centre that burned down in a catastrophic fire. © WHO

Fig. 4.1. WHO health systems building blocks applied to refugee and migrant health

LEADERSHIP AND GOVERNANCE

- Policies and regulations that are inclusive of refugees and migrants
- Ensuring whole-of-government and whole-of-society approaches, working with all relevant ministries, stakeholders and sectors, not just health

FINANCING

- Eligibility and enrolment in health insurance schemes and other alternative health financing schemes
- Cross-border health and social insurance schemes
- Dedicated finances to achieve refugee- and migrant-inclusive universal health coverage

SERVICE DELIVERY

- Services that are adapted to (language, culture, administrative, proximity, health-seeking behaviour) and appropriate for the refugee and migrant population
- Essential health packages accessible for refugees and migrants, regardless of legal status

Refugee- and migrant-sensitive health systems

ACCESS TO MEDICAL PRODUCTS, VACCINES AND TECHNOLOGIES

- Availability of and access to essential medicines and technologies for refugee and migrant patients
- Evidence-based and cost-effective use of services such as health screening

HEALTH INFORMATION SYSTEMS

- Inclusion of refugees and migrants in health information systems
- Inclusion of essential variables in data collection tools to facilitate disaggregation by migratory status and comparability of data
- Ensuring data confidentiality and protection of refugee and migrant health data
- Availability of anonymized data for research purposes
- Timely availability of evidence for policy-making and public health interventions

HEALTH WORKFORCE

- Capacity building and training on aspects such as competencies to provide people-centred and culturally sensitive health services to refugees and migrants, and address the health conditions associated with migration and displacement
- Addition of roles such as interpreters and cultural mediators to health workforce
- Inclusion of refugees and migrants in the health workforce

Source: Adapted with permission from Legido-Quigley et al. (1).

4.2 Service delivery

- Refugees and migrants face many of the same barriers in accessing health services as the local population, although these may be intensified by their migratory status.
- The most common barriers include institutional and administrative, language and cultural, provider discrimination, transportation and financial factors. Direct and indirect health costs also present major barriers.
- Several regions report a lack of health services tailored to the particular needs of refugees and migrants.

Good-quality health services – those that deliver effective, safe, personal and non-personal health interventions to those who need them, when and where needed, with minimum waste of resources – are integral to achieving UHC. Strengthening health service delivery is key in ensuring better health outcomes for all, including refugee and migrant populations, whether in camps, communities, detention centres or elsewhere. Improving the health and well-being of refugees and migrants ultimately means ensuring they have access to health services and addressing barriers to their use. This section also highlights good practices and the models for service delivery required to meet the health needs of refugee and migrant health across regions.

4.2.1 Common barriers

Refugees and migrants may face many of the same barriers in accessing health services as the local population, including cost, proximity and general gaps in the health systems. However, they also face barriers specific to their migratory status, or limited recognition of their status (1,3,4). Although the use of health services varies significantly across and within regions, by types of service and by migrant group, thematic barriers are generally similar across regions and include institutional or administrative, language, cultural, discrimination and transport barriers.

Institutional barriers. Navigating an unfamiliar health system in another country is challenging for refugees and migrants, who may not be able to access or understand coverage and registration instructions. This is exacerbated by, for example, health policies that are not inclusive of refugees and migrants and inadequate training of the health care professionals who interact with refugee and migrant populations. For example, studies in sub-Saharan African countries highlighted administrative and organizational barriers, such as a lack of proper paperwork or documentation (5). Similarly, lack of awareness of health system processes and their navigation, as well as a low level of health literacy, are notable barriers that increase difficulties in accessing health services. An example is the lack of awareness among some refugees and migrants as to when and how to seek primary or preventive care services. A qualitative study with sub-Saharan African migrant women in the Basque Country, Spain, revealed that the perception of institutional barriers was compounded by other major barriers to access. These included difficulties in fulfilling the legal conditions for access, a lack of documentation, poor communication with health centre staff and perceptions of negative staff attitudes or stereotypes (6). A qualitative study with asylum seekers in Denmark found that unfamiliarity with the health system, combined with interpersonal miscommunication and perceived cultural insensitivity among health professionals, undermined trust in the health system and reduced their motivation to seek health services (7). A qualitative study with Syrian refugees in Jordan showed that given the complexity and fragmentation of care (i.e. across government, NGO and private services), refugees faced barriers in access to health services (8). Many of these barriers are created or exacerbated, instead of addressed, by policies and practices that do not include refugees and migrants. This is discussed further in section 4.7.

> For health systems to be sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants, these populations need to be included in the system not only as patients but also as providers, decision-makers and facilitators.

Language and communication barriers. Language barriers when communicating with health service providers are a widespread problem across WHO regions for refugees and various types of migrants (9–21). For example, studies in the WHO South-East Asia Region noted that language influenced access to health services among refugees and migrants; communication difficulties and misunderstandings during medical treatment were reported as a significant barrier to seeking health services (16,22). In the United States, Spanish-speaking patients with poor English-language skills were less likely than English speakers to receive an appointment that matched their needs, especially in emerging destinations within the country (17). In Switzerland, more than 90% of the 599 PHC providers in a nationwide cross-sectional study reported facing language barriers with their patients at least once per year, and 30% reported that this occurred once per week (23). In Kenya, providers of SGBV-related health services struggled to communicate directly with refugees, which had negative effects on service provision; health care providers reported a need for skills in relevant languages or sign language, as well as for access to interpreters (10). Refugees with visual or hearing impairments or other disabilities faced reduced access to the health system, and may even have been excluded from health system research and data collection, according to research from the WHO African and European regions. Improving this would require participatory design as well as tools such as personal assistants, sign language, Braille documents and the creation of supporter roles for the process (24,25).

Cultural barriers. In addition to language barriers, miscommunication may be caused by cultural barriers. For example, health providers in industrialized countries may mistakenly conclude that refugees and migrants from developing countries have low levels of health literacy, when in fact the differences are cultural (26). For example, a study based in the United States concluded that African-born women were three times less likely to have attended a clinic for a cervical smear test in the past three years than African-American women born in the United States, highlighting the need for further research on educational and cultural aspects of care (27). Providing culturally sensitive and adaptive care for refugees and migrants is especially important in SRH, for SGBV survivors (28–31), and for mental health and psychosocial support services (32–36), areas in which sensitivities or stigma exist. In a study conducted in Italy, the lack of cultural mediators and interpreters was reported to contribute to the communication barriers faced by refugees at service points; many refugees, including survivors of sexual violence, cited this as having deterred them from accessing care (31).

Evidence on acceptable low-intensity group psychological interventions for Syrian refugees indicated that previously recommended relaxation techniques, such as yoga, should be replaced with more culturally appropriate activities, such as listening to music or prayer (34).

Discrimination. Discrimination by health providers towards refugees and migrants, or a lack of sensitivity from other personnel within the health system, is reported as a key barrier to good-quality and acceptable care, as well as to health-seeking behaviour across regions (3,13,36–39). In two countries in the WHO Region of the Americas, refugees and migrants reported being dissatisfied with the delivery of health services by providers during medical encounters; the reasons reported included miscommunication as a result of cultural and language gaps, discrimination, lack of trust, dissatisfaction regarding recommended treatments or referrals to specialists, and dissatisfaction related to short, impersonal appointments (40,41). In many countries in the WHO Region of the Americas (38,42,43) and WHO European Region (39,44), refugees and migrants experienced discrimination from health professionals who were not aware of, doubted or even disregarded their right to access health services.

HIV-positive migrants reported discrimination because of their nationality or language and, as a result, preferred to return to their country of origin for their HIV medication (45). A study on barriers to adherence to TB treatment for non-nationals found that refugees and migrants blamed their non-national status for the discrimination that they experienced when seeking care (46). A qualitative study exploring the experiences of African migrant workers in a country in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region found that the workers faced interpersonal discrimination from hospital staff, including racial discrimination, and that their migratory status further affected the inequities they faced when seeking health care (47). A nationally representative survey in France found that the occurrences of reporting discrimination by health services and deciding to forego care in the 12 months prior to the survey were highest among women (migrant and non-migrant), children born to migrants in host countries (second-generation migrants), migrants from Africa (northern and sub-Saharan countries) or overseas territories, and Muslim populations (48).

A longitudinal study in Ontario, Canada, found that migrants from Bangladesh, China, India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka in the last 6 months of their lives were more likely to receive invasive and aggressive care and to die in intensive care units compared with the general population (49). Afghan refugee women received suboptimal maternal care in comparison to non-migrant women in a neighbouring host country (50).

Restrictive immigration policies. Restrictive entry and integration policies have been linked to poor refugee and migrant health outcomes, thereby creating a dynamic in which migrants face disincentives and barriers to accessing and utilizing health care. Migrants, especially irregular migrants, reported a fear of repatriation or deportation resulting from accessing health services, high health care costs compared with local populations, and employer gatekeeping of health care across multiple WHO regions (9), including the Region of the Americas (51), the European Region (52,53) and the Western Pacific Region (3). The detection of certain communicable diseases, such as HIV, STIs or TB, in foreign residents can sometimes lead to cancellation of their residence permit and deportation (54–56). However, since 2015, several countries have made progress in lifting HIV-related travel restrictions, including Belarus, Lithuania, the Republic of Korea and Uzbekistan (57,58).

Even where policies to support access to health services exist, fear of deportation because of insufficient documentation and lack of trust in the health system may still prevent refugees and migrants from using health services, as was the case among Chinese migrants in Kenya (9) and migrants living in Sweden (53). In research across 14 countries of the WHO European Region, migrants reported poorer health in countries with exclusionist or assimilationist policies than in countries that were more multicultural (59).

Transportation barriers. Difficulties with transportation or geographical barriers also affect access to health services. In Australia and New Zealand, agricultural migrant workers from Pacific Island countries were deterred from seeking treatment because of language and cultural barriers, as well as the geographical isolation of their work (60). Sri Lankan Tamil refugees in India live in remote and rural camps that are distant from health services; they also reported delays in receiving benefits from health coverage schemes because of complicated application procedures (61).

Refugees and migrants may face many of the same barriers in accessing health services as the local population, including cost, proximity and general gaps in the health systems.
They also face barriers specific to their migratory status, such as out-of-pocket expenses or limited recognition of their status.

4.2.2 Service models to meet refugee and migrant health needs

As is the case with culturally sensitive care, several regions report a lack of quality health services tailored to the requirements of refugees and migrants. Studies from the WHO South-East Asia (62,63) and Eastern Mediterranean (33,64) regions acknowledged the need for specialized service models, including increased health services for those who have experienced conflict and insecurity. A train-the-trainer model in Greece improved the use of trauma-informed practices of care among refugees (65).

The literature on delivering refugee- and migrant-sensitive health services focuses on interventions promoting good-quality, patient-centred care and patient satisfaction, in which the priorities, preferences and perspectives of refugees and migrants are used to improve health service delivery (66). The 2018 WHO European Region scoping review on communication barriers for refugees and migrants in health service settings identified four key strategies: cultural mediation, interpretation, translation of health information, and guidance and training for health care providers (18). A cross-sectional study of 251 migrant patients in South Africa revealed the importance of incorporating their perceptions of the health system into national planning for UHC (67). The study found that migrant patients' satisfaction with nurses depended on being given information about their condition, receiving polite treatment, the time spent in the facility and whether they received prescribed medicines.

In Italy, the results of a participatory research project with the Chinese community, many of whom hold irregular status, suggested that direct participation in health promotion efforts may improve their engagement with health interventions such as screening for hypertension (68).

Research reviewed in the WHO Region of the Americas and South-East Asia Region focused on key public health approaches, including health education, access to information and improving health literacy (63,69).

In the literature on the WHO Region of the Americas, many interventions and initiatives were identified as having culturally sensitive approaches for migrants or refugees. Some of these were specifically designed to improve the relevance and acceptability of services or health information materials, and others were designed to promote culturally and linguistically relevant solutions to gaps in the health system for migrants. The most common interventions involved providing health education and access to information regarding the overall health system and its specific services, and improving health literacy. For example, a Canadian health education programme improved navigation and knowledge of the Canadian health system among refugees and migrants (70). In the United States, an intervention reduced unnecessary visits to emergency departments for young Spanish-speaking children through Spanish-language text messages aimed at parents (71). In Chile, a 2016 programme focused on promoting migrants' access to health care and adherence to medical follow-up by providing them with information on the Chilean health system and their right to health (72).

Bew, a 45-year-old migrant worker from Myanmar, is vaccinated against COVID-19 in Mae Sot, Thailand, in November 2021. The vaccination campaign, which followed a survey exercise carried out by the Ministry of Public Health, aimed to ensure that migrant workers returning to Thailand were protected against COVID-19 as the country reopened its borders. © WHO / Anat Duangjan Governmental agencies in Canada, Chile, Honduras, the United States and other countries, often acting in partnership with community organizations, have developed websites to provide migrants with key information about how to access health services. Other initiatives in Canada and the United States demonstrated the effectiveness of community-based health promotion models, for example, that targeted sites frequented by refugees or migrants, such as a Sikh temple (73), Asian-migrant churches (74), or specific supermarkets or media outlets, as well as those using various communication technologies (75). In Amsterdam, faith-based organizations were reported to be important settings for the implementation of public health programmes for African migrants; migrant community leaders were also crucial players in initiating and supporting community-based health awareness and health promotion programmes (76).

An emerging area of research in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region focuses on continuity of care and cross-border health care provision, including the migration of patients for health care purposes when health systems collapse as a result of conflict in the Region (77).

One study addressing cross-border care between Libya and Tunisia identified "how four key geopolitical periods shaped medical travel to [Sfax]: initial diasporic exchanges facilitated by bilateral agreements; an emerging medical tourism industry within private health services arising from the United Nations embargo on Libya; the 2011 political crisis and arrival of war-wounded; and therapeutic circulations and emerging transnational spaces of care resulting from the context of war" (78). Cross-border health care provision also arose in the WHO African Region, ensuring continuity of care for HIV-positive migrants between South Africa and Lesotho (45).

In 2018 the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control developed evidence-based guidance on preventing priority infectious diseases among newly arrived migrants, including active TB and LTBI, HIV, HBV infection, HCV infection, schistosomiasis, strongyloidiasis and VPDs (79).

Significant variations in data collection within the WHO European Region exist, including in approaches to TB control. Consequently, TB elimination targets for the Region will not be met unless discrepancies in access to screening and treatment of refugees and migrants are addressed (80). Various studies have also demonstrated the effectiveness and cost–effectiveness of screening adult and adolescent refugees and migrants for active TB and LTBI and for other key infectious diseases, particularly when targeting those from high-incidence countries, making clear the importance of linking HIS to public health outcomes (81). Studies of surveillance data on outbreaks of cholera in refugee camps in Uganda (82) and of measles in refugee camps in Cameroon (83) both demonstrated the importance of early detection, treatment and rapid response to contain the spread within refugee settlements and local communities.

4.3 Health workforce

- Across every WHO region, efforts are under way to strengthen the capacities of the health workforce to serve refugees and migrants, including by ensuring sufficient staffing levels, training and resources.
- To deliver refugee- and migrant-sensitive health services, the health workforce must be able to provide culturally competent care and address health issues associated with displacement and migration; however, resources are often insufficient.
- Even in high-income countries, there are not enough health professionals with the necessary skills to provide culturally sensitive care to refugees and migrants.
- On a project level, some health workforces have successfully integrated refugees and migrants, including as cultural mediators, thereby both making services more effective and relieving staff shortages.
- The literature notes three key issues for migrant health care workers: the impact of displacement on the health workforce, the need for mechanisms to incorporate refugee and migrant health professionals, and the case of countries where large parts of the health workforce are migrants.

A well performing health workforce is one that works in ways that are responsive, fair and efficient to achieve the best health outcomes possible, given the available resources and circumstances. To deliver health services that are sensitive to the needs of refugees and migrants, the health workforce must be able to provide culturally competent care and address health issues associated with displacement and migration (2). This section explores the findings of regional literature on sufficient health workforce staffing levels, training and resources for culturally competent care, and support for the use of refugee and migrant health workers.

4.3.1 Sufficient staffing levels, training and resources

Efforts to strengthen the capacities of the health workforce to serve refugees and migrants are under way across every region. They include specific training on cultural competencies, and on the staffing, support and resources the workforce will need if it is to provide sustained, good-quality care to refugee and migrant populations (14,69,84–88). In a qualitative study in Jordan, local health care providers for Syrian refugees with cancer described the "moral distress" of feeling they could not uphold their duty of care and humanitarian values given funding and other constraints (89). Another study addressed the impact of the Syrian refugee crisis on nursing in Lebanon, with the nurses and nursing directors interviewed citing fatigue, burnout and depleted capacity for compassionate care at individual level; rationing and stressed

Refugee and migrant patients will experience patient-centred care when, despite cultural differences, health professionals take the time to explain procedures, include culturally relevant references, appreciate the needs of the patients and involve patients in decision-making.

interpersonal relationships at practice level; and shortages in resources and poor performance at health system level (86).

Experiences in the WHO European Region highlight that movement of large populations requires swift recruitment and deployment of human resources, including all types of health professionals. Although ad hoc recruitment can address the immediate health and humanitarian needs of arriving refugees and migrants, a report found that this must be weighed against challenges to the sustainability and quality of service provision (85). The report concluded that adequate training and intercultural mediation was necessary to facilitate people-centred care in multicultural displacement contexts and even in settings of rapid service provision, such as during mass arrivals.

Many guidance documents and tools have been developed to support health care providers across refugee and migrant groups and regions. The existing health workforce should be trained in health coverage eligibility and migratory status, as well as in delivering cross-cultural health service to reduce discrimination (90). Training in cultural competence can strengthen the ability of providers to connect with refugee and migrant groups; this provider connection and attitude can have a positive influence on the trust and health-seeking behaviour of refugees and migrants (69,91–95). More specifically, refugee and migrant patients will experience patient-centred care when, despite cultural differences, health professionals take the time to explain procedures, include culturally relevant references, appreciate the needs of the patients and involve patients in decision-making (96).

A low-cost training, skill-building, practice and feedback programme designed to improve the capacity of physicians working at UNRWA clinics in Jordan led to significant improvement in the knowledge assessments and clinical checklist scores of trainees; trainees also reported high satisfaction with the training (97). The Operational Refugee and Migrant Maternal Approach project developed cultural competence training for health professionals and midwives to help provide perinatal care for migrant women in Greece, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom; a key aspect of the curriculum involved follow-up training sessions over many months, recognizing that it takes time to change attitudes (94). Research from the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region focused on cultural competency training for the migrant health workforce, especially migrant nurses, to enable them to provide quality services to the host population; this issue was particularly relevant in Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates (98–100).

In border areas of Myanmar and Thailand, strengthening the health workforce by using village malaria workers has proven to be more effective in reaching migrant populations than other methods of malaria control, such as mobile malaria clinics and screening checkpoints for migrants. Such workers can reach hard-to-access malaria-endemic villages with a higher malaria prevalence, enabling them to test more community members and resulting in high rates of case-finding. These strategies are particularly important given the diversity of malaria knowledge in this region, where only half of short-term migrants are aware of the disease (101).

In the United States, studies collating the perspectives of providers highlighted the lack of adequate resources, support and training required to deliver acceptable care to refugee and migrant populations, such as the need for multilingual health education materials and interpretive services (102). Providers of health services for refugees in the United States felt unable to fill structural gaps that require policy change; this impeded access to and the delivery of adequate and acceptable care (103). In other WHO regions, inefficiencies in the health system, such as weak infrastructure, lack of staff or staff support, and work overload were identified by providers as barriers to providing migrant-sensitive care (104–106).

4.3.2 Supporting refugee and migrant health workers

In every WHO region, studies present evidence highlighting the importance of including cultural liaisons, intercultural mediators, peer educators, CHWs, or volunteers from refugee and migrant communities (107–112). Thailand's health system has included interpretation and cultural services since 2003 to reduce language and cultural barriers between health personnel and refugee and migrant populations. This is conducted through migrant health workers and volunteers in public health facilities, as well as through CHWs within migrant communities who serve as cultural mediators and provide basic health education (107).

In Italy, a national referral centre for transcultural mediation in the health system was established by law in 2013 (113). In Brazil, Bolivian health agents were deployed to reach Bolivian migrants who faced barriers in accessing health services (114). In the United States, peer counsellors and CHWs were used to promote vaccination (108) and colorectal cancer screening (115) among Asian migrant communities. For Spanish-speaking populations, promotoras were widely deployed, for example, to prevent NCDs through lifestyle changes (116). In Chile, cross-cultural facilitators reduced communication gaps caused by cultural and linguistic differences between mostly Creole-speaking Haitian patients and their health providers (117). By comparison in projects based in Canada and the United States, where third-party medical consultants were used: providers did not always trust interpreters to translate without moral, cultural or gender bias; there were disruptions linked to interpreting via phone; and some hired interpreters may have had limited knowledge of medical terms (118). An innovative approach used in Türkiye was found to increase the number of primary care consultations among Syrian refugees living there. The Ministry of Health of Türkiye worked together with WHO to select, train and deploy Syrian doctors, nurses and medical translators among the Syrian refugee population to serve in primary health care services for Syrian refugees (119).

In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, evidence has highlighted that migrant health care professionals need adequate training to provide culturally sensitive care to the host populations. In the United Arab Emirates, expatriate nurses working in palliative care were required to develop their skills in advanced communication and spiritual practices, in addition to acquiring knowledge of local cultural and religious norms (120). Migrant nurses in the Region expressed communication challenges and a lack of cultural awareness, partly the result of the unavailability of cultural education, indicating the need for education and orientation programmes, particularly those relating to end-of-life care, cultural values and family matters (98,99). The provision of such educational programmes for migrant health care professionals is critical as, among non-Muslim expatriate nurses in Saudi Arabia, cultural competency has been found to positively correlate with patient-centred care (100).

Refugee community workers were used in the Dadaab Refugee Complex in Kenya, working under the supervision of professional SGBV service providers to provide support to SGBV survivors (111). Experiences from this humanitarian context showed that refugee community workers had tense relationships with the professional service providers, low pay, opposition from some community members and a lack of preparedness for the task ahead, as well as a lack of personal security because of subregional conflict and violence.

Intercultural mediators are employed to perform a variety of functions, e.g. linguistic facilitation and interpretation; bridging sociocultural gaps; preventing conflict and supporting resolution between health providers and patients; supporting integration and empowerment and providing advocacy to refugees and migrants about social and health services and their rights and entitlements to these services; building trust and facilitating the therapeutic relationship for services; providing psychosocial support, health education and counselling; and, depending on the situation, providing intercultural mediation versus interpretation (109). They have had a positive impact on health systems in 17 Member States of the WHO European Region. However, the positive impact may be limited by a lack of resources and processes for gaining professional qualification, insufficient training and the inconsistent implementation of intercultural mediation programmes. In 2016 the Government of Türkiye enacted a law allowing Syrian health professionals to work in the Turkish health system, with training supported by WHO. This was designed to integrate Syrian professionals into the health system and to ensure that Syrian refugees were able to receive health care without encountering language or cultural barriers (121).

Many countries of the WHO Western Pacific Region have experienced shortages of health care workers in remote and underserved areas, where international migrants may reside (122): this is partly because highly skilled health care personnel may be working elsewhere. The refugee and migrant health workforce abroad face various physical, emotional and professional hardships in terms of displacement and migration and of work transition before they can operate effectively within a new health system: training and language capacities are required for acculturation to take place (123–126). Studies of refugee and migrant nurses and doctors employed in Australia have indicated both positive experiences (mostly related to income and autonomy) and negative experiences (a lack of cultural awareness or linguistic abilities) (126,127). As more refugee and migrant health professionals are recruited and fill gaps in the health workforce, understanding these challenges is important to support their work transition and needs as professionals (128). The WHO South-East Asia Region is also one from which health care workers primarily migrate. Research conducted within the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region addresses the health of expatriate health workers, especially their mental health (121,129–136).

The literature raises three overarching issues related to the topic of migrant health care workers: the impact of displacement of the health workforce, the need for mechanisms to leverage the use of refugee and migrant health professionals, and the case of countries where large proportions of the health workforce are migrants.

4.3.3 Impact of migration

Although migration can have a detrimental effect on health systems, it can also bring opportunities. For example, as a result of advances in information and communication technologies, such as using telehealth and other digital health technologies, migration can allow the possibility of a diaspora health workforce to contribute from a distance to health care in their country of origin (131–133,137). The literature highlights the economic benefits and also the excess mortality costs associated with physician migration and the absence of policies to prevent intraregional brain drain from low- and middle-income countries to higher-income countries (132,133). Economic modelling indicates that the countries incurring the greatest economic cost as a result of physician migration are India, Nigeria, Pakistan and South Africa, with the WHO African Region experiencing the greatest effect of all WHO regions (132,137,138).

On an individual level, migrants may also face numerous challenges upon returning to their home countries. Migrant health care workers returning to Botswana from high-income countries reported family ties and missing home as reasons for returning, but some said that they had experienced difficulties in reintegrating into the health system (139). Migrant nurses from Indonesia who worked as caregivers in Japan reported a variety of challenges upon returning home, including deskilling and struggling to re-enter the field of nursing (134). The diaspora of health care providers from Sudan is reported to have built links to overseas institutions and specialist clinical services, and has provided physical and monetary donations to public facilities (131). Health care providers choose their destination countries based on factors such as an ageing population, a better school system, good remuneration and lower rates of unemployment (137,138).

4.3.4 Better use of health professionals

The literature indicates that ways need to be found to improve the use of refugee and migrant health professionals in various contexts. When establishing themselves in host countries, refugee and migrant health workers face the problem of not having evidence of their diplomas and other accreditation. This problem is recognized in the literature in many regions (140–142).

Migrant nurses and doctors can experience prolonged processes to obtain visas and validate their medical qualifications, leading them to accept less-skilled work in the interim (143). Such workers may also have migrated or been displaced for other reasons, and they may not be entitled to work legally in their profession in their host countries. In such circumstances, they may practice informally to fill gaps in their communities, for example, Syrian refugee health providers in Lebanon (144). In another example, a nursing school has been created in the setting of Sahrawi refugee camps as a means of mobilizing their limited resources to address the lack of health care professionals serving the refugee populations (145). As part of the Triple Win project, Germany is recruiting nurses from countries such as Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Philippines, Serbia and Tunisia, which educate a larger number of nurses than can be employed within their respective labour markets (143).

4.3.5 Countries with a large migrant health workforce

Migrant health care workers often play important roles in countries in which migrants are a significant component of the health workforce, although host country governments may have varying reactions to this reliance and may not collect adequate information to monitor it (Box 4.1). Evidence from the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region documents the impact of government-induced efforts to encourage the employment of nationals in health care sectors that have been largely dominated by migrants. In Oman, a labour localization programme known as Omanization aims to promote the employment of nationals in the nursing field, which has raised concerns about the job security of migrant health workers (152).

Box 4.1.

Global patterns of health worker migration

Many countries do not have a dedicated policy or plan regarding health worker migration. Monitoring health worker migration, and the resulting impact on the composition of the health workforce, is key to ensuring sufficient national capacity to provide adequate and efficient health services. This is recognized by instruments such as World Health Assembly resolutions WHA63.16 and WHA69.19 (146,147), the WHO global code of practice on the international recruitment of health personnel (148) and the Global strategy on human resources for health (149).

Tools such as the National Reporting Instrument and National Health Workforce Accounts (NHWA) contribute to monitoring the migration of global health workers and generating evidence for policy dialogue (150). NHWA provides a standardized mechanism to strengthen health workforce information systems in countries, thereby building capacity and stakeholder cooperation at the national level with regards to health workforce data. NHWA also facilitates the improvement of health workforce data at global level. Since its adoption 5 years ago, more than 170 countries have been engaged in implementation of the NHWA.

Although there are various approaches to monitoring health worker migration, they are built on the main concepts of foreign-trained and foreign-born health workers. As shown in Fig. 4.2, the proportion of migrant doctors employed by the health systems of countries in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development has risen during the past two decades (151). Around two thirds of all foreign-born or foreign-trained doctors originated from within the OECD area and upper-middle-income countries, whereas lower-middle-income countries and low-income countries accounted for around 30% and 3–4%, respectively, of foreign-born doctors.

However, unpublished data collected by WHO show that the presence of foreign-trained health personnel is not restricted to any particular region and varies for each health occupation and between WHO regions. The WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region has the highest proportion of foreign-trained health workers. All regions show a higher percentage of foreign-trained medical doctors than of foreign-trained nursing personnel. Note that some countries do not have medical training facilities and, therefore, send their nationals to train abroad; this may be understood as having health workers that are all foreign-trained but not necessarily as health worker movement or brain drain. Some other countries actively recruit foreign-born, foreign-trained health workers to deliver health services. Adding to this mix is the voluntary movement of health workers seeking better career opportunities and the subsequent movement of health workers as a result of the migration of entire families. These points all highlight the fact that health worker mobility is difficult to measure using any single metric.

In Saudi Arabia the "Saudization" of the country's pharmacy workforce has also been considered, given that less than 20% of pharmacists are Saudi nationals and the country has an unmet need to train and retain nationals as pharmacists (153). Such a disparity is also apparent among other health care professions in Saudi Arabia, including physical therapists (64,154). Some countries have had to rely on their migrant health workforce, particularly during the COVID-19 pandemic. Australia, where more than half of doctors and more than one third of nurses are born elsewhere, strengthened its reliance on migrant health workers during the pandemic by lifting its restrictions on working hours for international nursing students: the burden on the health workforce was reduced by allowing nursing students to work for more than 40 h per week; this practice should be monitored to avoid any negative effects (112,137). The Maldives, which is still developing its national medical education, has relied heavily on expatriates in building its health workforce (155).

Fig. 4.2. Foreign-born doctors working within the OECD countries during 2000–2001, 2010–2011 and 2015–2016

Source: Socha-Dietrich & Dumont (151).

4.4 Access to medical products, vaccines and technologies

- Refugees and migrants have limited access to medications in some camp settings and informal settlements, often as a result of supply chain difficulties, cost, lack of adequate diagnostics and medication, and discrimination.
- Limited access to essential medications may lead refugees and migrants to resort to self-medication or to use non-prescribed medicines, such as antibiotics, resulting in possible antimicrobial resistance.
- Vaccination coverage policies for refugees and migrants vary widely and lack clarity, and are sometimes complicated by limitations and challenges connected to migratory status.
- In many places, screening services urgently require improvement to protect both people on the move and local communities in countries of transit or destination.

A correctly functioning health system ensures equitable access to essential medical products, vaccines and technologies of assured quality, safety, efficacy and cost–effectiveness, and their scientifically sound and cost-effective use. This section addresses refugee and migrant access to good-quality and affordable medicines and vaccinations.

4.4.1 Access to good-quality and affordable medicines

Refugees and migrants may have limited access to medication. One study in Australia showed that resettled refugees had limited health literacy, were at a greater risk of mismanaging their medication than their host population, and faced difficulties in accessing medicine and pharmacy services (156). Literature related to the WHO Region of the Americas is scarce. Migrants from Latin American countries in the United States reported feeling that options for pharmaceutical pain management were not offered because the provider may have assumed they were unable to pay for them; in such cases, migrants may have borrowed medication from other migrants (41). A study shows that Nicaraguan migrants in Costa Rica reported using the black market for medication because of the various barriers to accessing health services (157).

Different refugee settings may present different barriers to medicine access. There are indications that at the onset of the emergency, Rohingya refugees in camps in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, experienced very low levels of access to essential medicines for both acute and chronic conditions because, among other factors, mobile clinics in the camps lacked diagnostic and refrigeration infrastructure (158). Among Rohingya refugees with serious health conditions, evidence indicates that 70% were prescribed ineffective pain treatments that were largely ineffective; no nearby pharmacy was found to have morphine available and only 1 out of 17 had suitable oral opioids (159). Although there is a significant lack of basic pain medicines at health facilities and pharmacies, additional barriers include health care providers being unaware of how to use pain medicine, believing they can be misused, or displaying reluctance to prescribe them. Pharmacies may also employ staff with very little to no formal training in the field of pharmacy (160).

In another example, an evaluation of a pharmacist-delivered home medication management service for Syrian refugees in Jordan found that the programme was effective on several levels: it decreased treatment-related problems, physician approval rates of pharmacist recommendations were high and satisfaction rates among refugees were high (161). An evaluation of community-based primary care for NCDs delivered to Syrian refugees in Lebanon and Lebanese nationals showed satisfaction with the programme among patients and health providers; the greatest problems experienced were interruptions in the supply of medicines (162). In a vulnerability assessment of Syrian refugees in Lebanon, the cost of medicines was cited as a barrier for 77% of the respondents included in the 2015–2020 UNHCR health access and utilization surveys. As shown in Fig. 4.3, the proportion of Syrian respondents reporting access to care or medication for chronic conditions increased from 2016 to 2017, and then gradually decreased to 68% in 2020 (163–168).

The idea that refugees and migrants may self-medicate because of barriers to accessing medicines is discussed in regional research. Obstacles including perceived barriers and cost may lead refugees and migrants to seek medicines elsewhere if they cannot acquire them through the health system. Among Chinese migrants in Australia, the use of non-prescribed antibiotics was influenced by their experiences with PHC access; one study showed that migrants with positive experiences and perceptions of health services were at a lower risk of using non-prescribed antibiotics (169).

Fig. 4.3. Proportion of Syrian refugees in non-camp settings who accessed care or medication for a chronic condition during the 3 months prior to survey, 2015–2020

Source: UNHCR (163–168).

Using non-prescribed antibiotics contributes to antimicrobial resistance. In the WHO South-East Asia Region, artemisinin-resistant malaria was present but migrants living near the Thailand–Myanmar border had low levels of awareness of the disease (101). In the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, a study of methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus found no statistically significant differences in its carrier rate between the Iraqi host community and Syrian refugees (170). A study of antimicrobial resistance to cholera in the Islamic Republic of Iran showed that most cases were detected among male migrants aged 16–30 years from Afghanistan and Pakistan who had travelled without work authorization to Iran for job opportunities (171). It is important to build awareness among refugees and migrants regarding the rational and safe use of such medicines. In Uganda, records documented inappropriate antibiotic-prescribing practices in a refugee setting: these practices included the excessive use of antibiotics and a failure by health workers to diagnose (27%) and prescribe (47%) in line with treatment guidelines (172).

Vaccination is an important health service for refugees and migrants because vaccines protect both them and local communities in countries of transit or destination, and also prevent outbreaks and the spread of vaccine-preventable diseases.

4.4.2 Access to vaccines

Vaccination is an important public health measure and service for refugees and migrants because vaccines protect both them and local communities in countries of transit or destination, and also prevent outbreaks and the spread of VPDs. In some cases, vaccination services may be the first contact with the health system for a refugee or migrant. (See section 3.8.10 for details of COVID-19 vaccination programmes for refugees and migrants).

Many recent surveys in the WHO European Region assessed the seroprevalence of VPDs and of non-vaccine-preventable infections in refugees and migrants (173–177). One study in Swiss hospitals found that refugee and migrant children older than 5 years from certain countries in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region were mostly seronegative for hepatitis A and at risk of clinical infection (178). Two Italian studies showed heterogeneity in vaccination coverage from VPDs among children born to migrant women, although this varied according to the geographical context, antigen, birth cohort and area of origin (179,180). Two other Italian studies showed that adult migrants at risk for influenza-related complications had lower influenza vaccination coverage than Italian citizens (181,182).

Across the WHO European Region, there is a lack of clarity and consistency in national guidelines and policies for access to immunization programmes by refugees and migrants (183). Comprehensive national immunization plans exist in 42 Member States in the Region but, as of 2017, only 11 Member States have included recommendations in their plans for refugees and migrants (184). This lack of coordination across the Region could lead to confusion among some health care professionals about whether to immediately vaccinate refugees and migrants who have an unknown or unclear vaccination history or to first conduct serological testing (185). There is also a lack of clarity about which vaccinations to prioritize upon arrival (186). To address these challenges, the Region identified three critical elements that are applicable beyond the Region to ensure high vaccination coverage among refugees and migrants: (i) the provision of appropriate vaccination services to new arrivals, (ii) the delivery of immunization services to refugees and migrants as part of mainstream health services, and (iii) the provision of targeted and culturally appropriate immunization services to reach particular refugee and migrant communities (184).

IOM is partnering with various countries in the WHO Western Pacific Region and beyond in a comprehensive vaccination programme for arriving migrants (187). This programme is facilitated by the IOM's migration health assessment centres for more than 15 VPDs. The National Immunization Programme in Thailand is a good example of providing vaccinations to hard-to-reach migrant populations, with migrant children near the Thailand–Myanmar border receiving timely and appropriate vaccines at the following rates: 92.3% for TB (bacille Calmette–Guérin, BCG); 85.3% for three doses of oral poliovirus vaccine (OPV); 63.8% for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis vaccine; 72.2% for three doses of hepatitis B vaccine; and 90.9% for measles vaccine (188). However, the same data suggest that overall vaccine coverage in migrant populations is low.

Literature published by the WHO African Region suggests strengthening cross-border vaccination and seasonal migration surveillance, including permanent vaccination points at transit points and vaccination on market days (189–191). With a focus on polio outbreaks in the Horn of Africa and Kenya, responses have been evaluated and successful strategies presented, notably the establishment of permanent vaccination points coupled with timely intervention and coordination (192). A study of the spatial heterogeneity of measles vaccination coverage in 10 sub-Saharan African countries identified clusters of low levels of coverage linked to border areas with highly mobile transborder populations. Such clustering was associated with low levels of health education and limited access to health services (193). According to a study based in the WHO African Region, the recognized need for improved and accessible systems for serological immunoassays in remote settings is being addressed (194).
In the WHO Region of the Americas, a report on 10 Caribbean island countries and territories (Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Dominica, Grenada, Jamaica, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, and Trinidad and Tobago) indicated an interest in ensuring that migrants entering the countries received the required vaccinations; however, current screening processes are weak, hindering the effectiveness of the programme (195).

In the United States, vaccination rates for refugees and migrants are lower than for those born in the country (109,196,197), with the exception of influenza and hepatitis A and B among specific age subgroups and among people with NCDs (198). Refugees and migrants from various eastern African countries living in Australia indicated that they had limited access to immunizations, mostly because of language barriers; this could be addressed by increasing community-led information dissemination and reminders about immunizations to these groups (199). In New Zealand, less than 50% of migrant children were found to have at least one recorded vaccination event in the National Immunisation Register; even among migrant children who had been in New Zealand for at least 2 years, only 60% had a record in the register (200). Similarly, children born in China to refugees from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea had lower immunization rates than both the host population and other migrant children (201). Inequities in vaccine access can affect the prevalence of VPDs; in New Zealand, children from refugee backgrounds experienced a higher incidence of VPD-related hospitalizations than the host population (202).

A study estimating vaccine coverage among refugee populations in Jordan and Lebanon found that only about 35% of Syrian refugee children in Jordan and less than 15% in Lebanon were fully immunized through routine vaccination services (see Fig. 4.4, which summarizes UNHCR health access and utilization survey data for Lebanon) (203). The same study noted that although household surveys may be the most reliable way of assessing need, they are limited by information bias (e.g. absent or unreadable vaccination cards, or recall bias of mothers) and a lack of sampling frames for mobile populations. The study recommended conducting research on the validity of recall methods and on links between campaigns and routine immunization programmes and that vaccine access for hard-to-reach populations be improved. Another study in Lebanon reported that although Lebanese children had higher levels of antigens than Syrian children at baseline for a vaccination programme, this difference was substantially

Fig. 4.4. Proportion of Syrian refugee children in Lebanon who received oral polio vaccination and injectable vaccines reduced by the campaign (204). UNHCR health access and utilization survey data for Lebanon (163–168) confirmed these gaps in full vaccination coverage (Fig. 4.4). The proportion of children who received oral poliovirus vaccine increased from 69% in 2016 to 83% in 2017, and the proportion of children who received injectable vaccines fluctuated between 84% and 88% from 2017 to 2020 (Fig. 4.4).

Source: UNHCR (163–168).

4.5 Health information systems

- Significant limitations to refugee and migrant health data exist in HIS, such as an absence of epidemiological data, a lack of standardization of data within countries and regions, comparability across databases or time of data collection, and an inability to disaggregate data by migratory status.
- Data collection efforts may also place too great an emphasis on monitoring for infectious diseases, while neglecting comprehensive public health monitoring.
- The protection and privacy of refugee and migrant health data are major concerns. The inappropriate sharing of data can have serious consequences, such as limiting access to health care and other services, or even deportation.

Correctly functioning HIS ensure the production, analysis, dissemination and use of reliable and timely information and data on health determinants, health systems performance and health status. Data and evidence for a report on health should predominantly come from HIS; however, this report predominantly uses information from peer-reviewed and grey literature from around the world because of a lack of systematically collected and comparable data through national HIS or common reporting frameworks. There are some comparable data from major household surveys, but these data have their own challenges (Chapter 5). A comprehensive set of information and data from HIS around the world and their thorough analysis is essential to gain in-depth knowledge of refugee and migrant health (Box 4.2; Chapters 5 and 6).

4.5.1 Data collection on refugee and migrant health

Data collection related to epidemiological surveillance and screening and migratory status has been reported across several WHO regions. Because there is a need to collect epidemiological data effectively in cross-border areas among highly mobile populations who have difficulties completing treatment, research on HIS in the WHO South-East Asia Region was based on the coordination of malaria and TB surveillance. One of the major issues for TB control in Thai border areas is incomplete surveillance data as a result of migrant patient mobility and loss to follow-up, which can lead to multidrug-resistant TB (209). Initiatives for multicountry coordination around malaria data collection and information-sharing platforms include the WHO Mekong Malaria Elimination Programme (210) and the Asia Pacific Malaria Elimination Network (211). The Mekong Programme has helped many participating countries move towards their malaria elimination objectives. The Asia Pacific programme is an example of an effective mechanism for gathering country-specific information on high-risk populations to target patterns of displacement and migration and other data from 21 partner countries (211). Identifying the health needs of refugees and migrants during the reception pathway, while respecting human rights and confidentiality, requires effective and efficient screening systems that are integrated with HIS and health

Box 4.2.

Global frameworks and regional guidelines that support harmonized data for refugee and migrant health

Although global frameworks and regional guidelines are not binding, they are useful in mobilizing countries to actively collect and harmonize data on displacement and migration health. These frameworks and guidelines are examples of how such documents could facilitate the disaggregation of health data by migratory status and integration with HIS.

Global indicator framework for the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)
The Inter-Agency and Expert Group on SDG Indicators developed a set of 231 unique indicators in 2017 (205), to be refined and reviewed annually: 24 indicators should be disaggregated by migratory status (e.g. 1.1, 3.2, 3.c and 5.5); several indicators are directly related to migration (4.b.1, 10.7.1, 10.7.2, 10.7.3, 10.7.4, 10.c.1 and 16.2.2); and two indicators explicitly require disaggregation by migratory status (8.8.1 and 8.8.2).

The WHO Strategy and action plan for refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region
The strategy and action plan was presented to the WHO Regional Committee for Europe in 2016 to "promote the inclusion of migrant [and refugee] variables in existing data collection systems" (206). A progress report in 2020 found that most Member States that do not currently collect information about variables related to displacement and migration had plans to incorporate such data into their routine HIS. This encouraging trend highlights how guidelines can support better integration of data on displacement and migration health (207).

The WHO Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants, 2019–2023
The global action plan advises the strengthening of HIS to ensure that standardized and comparable records on refugee and migrant health are available at the global, regional and country levels (208).

care delivery (212). For example, border health-check procedures must be evidence based with data shared across countries, risk specific and include a guaranteed treatment linkage to the national health system in the case that a disease is detected (213). However, national policies on screening and identifying the health needs of refugees and migrants differ among countries, creating challenges across the EU, EEA and other regions (214). Of the 30 countries for which data were collected, three reported no systematic health assessments for newly arrived migrant children (Greece, Portugal and Spain), and insufficient information was retrieved in health assessments in three other countries (France, Liechtenstein and Luxembourg).

Some of the major gaps in HIS across most regions include the absence of epidemiological data, lack of standardization, comparability issues across locations or time, and the inability to disaggregate data by migratory status (4,89,122,215–217). The WHO European Region notes that region-wide indicators generally do not exist, so there are no comparable data to use in a regional overview of refugee and migrant health. Health Evidence Network synthesis report 66 examined HIS in the Region and found that the lack of clear regional and national strategies prevents the collection of relevant data and that existing data collection processes favour infectious disease monitoring over comprehensive public health monitoring (4). In 2020 a task force on the collection and integration of data on refugee and migrant health in the Region developed various national and regional policy recommendations, including ensuring adequate personnel for HIS, financing, logistics and information technology, as well as regulatory and legislative components (Box 4.3). Data protection and privacy, as well as the ethical use of data, are special considerations for refugee and migrant populations; firewalls are necessary for sharing data between governmental bodies that could affect legal status or deportation (207).

A recent WHO report highlighted differences in the capacity of HIS between high- and low-income countries: although low-income countries have weaker HIS, these are the countries in which most refugees are hosted (Chapter 1) (218). The management of health data in refugee-hosting districts of Uganda highlights the multiple challenges of integrating refugee stakeholder data at national level, including collection, analysis and reporting (215). The Ugandan model seeks to integrate the UNHCR Integrated Refugee Health Information System with the Ugandan National Health Management Information System by streamlining data to inform policy and programming in the field. Countries in the WHO Western Pacific Region have established a regional monitoring framework for UHC and the SDGs, which includes making improvements to civil registration, vital statistics and surveillance systems; however, the data collected do not yet include migratory status (122). Research identified several key challenges across the Region – fragmented and independent information systems, limited availability of data, insufficient disaggregation of data, and poor data quality and reliability – that would remain even if migratory status was captured.

An article on the SRH of migrants in the United States identified 29 publicly available sources of national, state and local data on immigration, race and ethnicity; SRH; and health service use (216). Key challenges included restricted access to disaggregated data, variations in the type of information collected over time across sources, changes in race and ethnicity categories or measures of immigration, and a lack of detailed data on both migration and SRH.

Literature published in the WHO Region of the Americas describes the implementation of electronic health records (EHR) and other HIS technologies in migrant health contexts. One study focused on implementing EHR to promote hypertension management in migrant-serving primary care practices in New York City (219). The intervention focused on training staff to generate routine hypertension registry reports, as well as to develop and implement medical alerts and order sets (i.e. treatment guidelines). This would require implementing standardized and mandatory fields within the EHR for race and ethnicity subgroup documentation, training in the codes used for billing and improving reporting practices. The intervention succeeded in improving health outcomes for migrant patients, and participating primary care practices reported both satisfaction with and adherence to the implementation of EHR. This successful intervention can inform future interventions to implement EHR in other settings in the Region. Another study in the United States used a multicomponent health

Box 4.3.

An interoperable health information system for refugees and migrants

SAVe (Support Asylum and Vulnerabilities through e-health, or electronic health) software is an electronic health information system developed by the Italian National Institute for Health, Migration and Poverty in 2019 (207). It allows national health system staff, including those working in the reception system, to enter and access data about the health of migrants, even those whose status is irregular and who are not registered with the national health service.

SAVe is designed both for rapid initial health assessment at or just after arrival and for later phases of the reception path. It provides tools to investigate traumas, mental health needs and vulnerabilities.

The system is now being implemented by local health authorities in those Italian regions where more than 14 000 migrants are hosted, and further rollout to all first-reception centres and hotspots is planned. The health records of a single patient can be saved on demand to external storage devices, facilitating continuity of care even if the patient moves to another country. The system is compliant with rules on personal data protection and privacy.

A unique migrant identifier code included within the SAVe system will allow the files to be linked to the electronic health record. Data from the SAVe system are anonymous and will be made available only for epidemiological and research purposes, permitting the regular release of data sheets and epidemiological reports on the status of migrant health.

information technology screening tool for the diagnosis and treatment of major depressive disorder and PTSD in primary care settings among migrant patients from Cambodia (220). The tool is programmed to use evidence-based clinical algorithms and guidelines to facilitate evidence-based care. It helped to improve the diagnosis and treatment of migrant patients suffering from both disorders, and will be used to inform future interventions based on information systems to enhance mental health services for migrant patients. HIS-based low-cost tools – electronic health (e-health) and mobile health (m-health) – are used in refugee settings, particularly for data collection related to NCDs, and have proven effective for diabetes and hypertension detection, regulation and referrals among refugees from occupied Palestinian territory, including east Jerusalem, in Lebanon (221). However, service delivery methods that rely on technology or mobile devices, such as smart phones and digital applications, were considered expensive by Syrian refugees accessing electronic mental health services (222).

4.5.2 Dissemination and use of refugee and migrant health data

Standardized, good-quality data must be collected and then shared across government entities at the national and global levels to inform evidence-based policies and programmes (207). The grey literature across WHO regions includes examples of extensive reports on various issues related to refugee and migrant health status and access to health care. These reports use national databases or registrations, or were commissioned by research institutions and international organizations, including United Nations agencies (122,195,210,215,207,223–225). Such reports are used to inform policy-makers and to develop guidance and programmes for practitioners that promote health among refugee and migrant populations. For example, a report on the potentially harmful effects of migratory status on the health of migrants in Mexico, including exposure to poor living conditions and insecurity as well as risks related to sexual exploitation and human trafficking, provided key information for policy-makers (226).

IOM and UNHCR conducted various types of data collection activities and household surveys with refugees and migrants in the WHO Region of the Americas and other WHO regions, including information relevant for health systems such as the Displacement Tracking Matrix (227). For example, IOM collected, analysed and shared information on human mobility in these countries through the Northern Triangle Migration Management Information Initiative, which covers El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras (228). Issues related to collecting and synthesizing better-quality refugee and migrant health data are discussed in Chapter 5.

4.6 Financing

- Direct and indirect health costs are major barriers to accessing health care in all WHO regions, especially where refugees and migrants are not covered by national health systems or by social security or insurance schemes.
- Refugees and migrants often cannot afford the out-of-pocket costs of accessing health services, and so spend less overall on health care than host populations.
- Some countries have successfully integrated refugees and migrants into their public health and social protection strategies and services.
- Although many countries might perceive a lack of incentives to include refugees and migrants in UHC, evidence clearly indicates that it may actually be more costly to exclude them from health coverage.

An effective health financing system raises adequate funds for health in ways that ensure that people can use the services they require but are protected from the financial catastrophe or impoverishment associated with having to pay for them. This section discusses the mechanisms for and challenges of financing a health system inclusive of refugees and migrants. It includes public, private and mixed systems, as well as information about the health costs and expenditures for refugee and migrant populations and estimated costs for the host country health systems.

4.6.1 Refugee and migrant expenditure

The out-of-pocket costs or financial burden of accessing health services are often prohibitive for refugees and migrants (3,229–233). Even when refugees or migrants are legally entitled to certain health services, there are often hidden costs (e.g. transportation or hiring translators) or co-payments that hinder seeking or accessing care. For example, among non-camp Syrian refugees in Jordan with chronic health conditions such as hypertension and diabetes, only 84.7% received treatment; the gap was linked to the out-of-pocket payments necessary in seeking care (232). However, the host community also reported high out-of-pocket payments; these were sometimes higher than those of the refugee population because, in some cases, refugees received financial aid from agencies such as UNHCR. This study illustrates the importance of financial protection for health equity between host and migrant population groups. Another study of Syrian refugees in Jordan found that preventive and primary health services were indeed more accessible than higher-level services, but that structural and financial barriers limited their access (234).

Identifying the health needs of refugees and migrants during the reception pathway, while respecting human rights and confidentiality, requires effective and efficient screening systems that are integrated with health information systems and health care delivery.

Although low-income countries have weaker HIS, these are the countries in which most refugees are hosted.

In some contexts, refugee and migrant populations spend less overall on health services. A study in the United States showed that out-of-pocket spending by migrants on health services was significantly lower than that of the host population with equivalent health needs, mostly attributable to less spending on private insurance (235). Similarly, a study in Colombia focusing on health-related expenditure among migrants and non-migrants living with HIV (and in contact with a medical facility) found that the average per capita expenditure was lower for migrants, at US$ 859, than for non-migrants, at US$ 1796, when adjusted for age and clinical characteristics (236). This trend holds among refugees and migrants in Kuwait, whose out-of-pocket expenses on health consultations were generally lower than those of nationals, mostly because refugees and migrants tend to seek more care at public (i.e. lower-cost) facilities (237).

These results do not mean that refugees and migrants have fewer health care needs. As indicated in section 4.2.1, there exist several barriers that prevent access to health care systems. This is the case for Venezuelan migrants who, lacking refugee status, do not have access to public health services. Many in Colombia and Peru reported seeking alternatives, such as telemedicine, local pharmacies and extra-legal care networks, the costs of which then affect their ability to pay for their basic needs such as food and housing (238).

4.6.2 Public health coverage

Insufficient financing of health systems that cover refugees and migrants can create significant barriers to access (239), leading to inadequate health services and health promotion or to a lack of training among providers and CHWs. Financial constraints are the primary challenge towards meeting the health care needs of refugees and migrants in many countries. At the same time, existing national health policies also carry implications for addressing the health needs of refugees and migrants. For instance, in Malaysia, medical fees for migrants have been noted to have increased, influencing their access to health services (239). Except for Sri Lanka and Thailand, most other countries in the WHO South-East Asia Region do not have specific policies for the health of refugees and migrants, and these groups are excluded from health insurance programmes. The health service card possessed by migrants in Thailand is used most often by those with poorer health or those seeking treatment for chronic illness, many of whom face high costs for health services (Box 4.4). Sri Lanka has enacted multiple policies such as the 2009 National Labour Law, which provides HIV and reproductive health care to labour migrants; the 2013 National Migration Health Policy, which promotes the health of outbound and inbound migrants; and the Child Health Protection Plan, which covers the children of migrant workers and emphasizes psychological and mental health needs (210).

Although Syrian refugees in Jordan have access to public health services for children, nearly half reported paying out-of-pocket fees for either the consultation or medication, possibly because they lacked awareness of subsidized care (232). As shown in Fig. 4.5, the proportion of Syrian refugee households in Lebanon who reported knowing that subsidized services were available at public health centres sharply declined from 75% in 2015 to 57% in 2016, and then fluctuated until it reached 68% in 2020 (163–168). Knowledge of free access to vaccinations for children at public health centres and free medications for acute conditions decreased from 2015 to 2017, followed by a steady increase to 2020. These results take into account the multiple political and economic crises faced by the Lebanese population in recent years.

Despite differences within and between countries, several countries in the WHO Western Pacific Region have enacted policies to provide health service entitlements to migrants, specifically migrant workers (249). EU countries on the periphery of the WHO European Region, which are often the first countries of arrival, face disproportionate financial costs to cover the health needs of asylum seekers. A study concluded that given widespread political controversies about national security and economic austerity, among other issues, countries in the EU lacked incentives to honour health as a human right and to provide UHC for people who have been forcibly displaced (250).

A 2015 study in Germany concluded that the cost of excluding refugees and asylum seekers from public health coverage was higher overall than that of allowing regular access (251). However, a 2018 study following up on the rapid acceptance of more than 1 million refugee applications in Germany during the Syrian refugee crisis showed that the average expenditure by refugees was 10% higher than for the regularly insured; although these increased costs were mostly because of higher hospital expenditure and a lack of awareness of outpatient and preventive care, they were reported to quickly decrease with increasing time living in Germany (252).

Removing legal restrictions to health coverage may improve access to and use of PHC by refugees and migrants, particularly for irregular migrants (253), thereby reducing their reliance on or need for more costly emergency care or hospitalization (254). A study in Cameroon

Box 4.4.

Inclusion of refugees and migrants in Thailand's health system as a part of UHC

All workers in formal industries in Thailand have mandatory health coverage through the national social security scheme, which is financed by workers, employers and the state. However, for many years irregular migrant workers were not eligible for state social security schemes and had to either forego health services or pay out of pocket for them. In 2001, the acute need for migrant labour led the Thai Ministry of Public Health to introduce a new public insurance scheme that included irregular migrants from neighbouring Cambodia, Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar. The voluntary health insurance card scheme (HICS) is funded by an annual premium paid by workers, enabling access to public health care facilities and reduced catastrophic health expenses. However, with no contribution from employers or government, it was not possible to make it mandatory, some migrant workers remain outside both schemes (240–244).

Some of the major barriers faced by migrant workers in accessing migrant health insurance schemes include their irregular status, nationality verification, the voluntary or semivoluntary nature of health insurance schemes, administrative delays in enrolment, poorly responsive services, lack of portability with respect to employer or location, and the resistance of employers to hiring migrants. The voluntary nature of the scheme encouraged the participation of those who were ill, while healthy migrants tended to abstain, given the extra cost to the household. Nationality verification and enrolment in insurance schemes require effective communication and coordination among various ministries, such as the Ministry of the Interior, Ministry of Labour and Ministry of Health, but deficiencies in communication and coordination were among the major bureaucratic hurdles that reduced the uptake of health insurance by workers. The low levels of enrolment by migrants inhibited large pooling of risks, which affected the financial viability of the scheme (242,243).

Despite these barriers, enrolment increased. In 2011, less than 10% of migrants in Thailand were insured. However, this number had increased to 64.0% by 2019. One of the major reasons was the inclusion of health volunteers, who were recruited from migrant communities and workplaces (245,246).

While a one-size-fits-all service was introduced to simplify migrants' access to health insurance, several challenges persist, such as ambiguous policy messages from other government departments and authorities, and slow progress of nationality verification. However, Thailand is one of the few countries to have made remarkable progress in financing migrant health: the HICS significantly reduced the costs of inpatient care and out-of-pocket expenditures for migrant workers (247). Some of the factors that helped reduce these expenses were insurance status, residence close to facilities and a history of visiting health facilities after 2013 (when the HICS expanded its benefit package); conversely, severe illness and advanced age increased inpatient care and out-of-pocket costs (245).

The Migrant Fund is another mechanism that provides protection to migrant workers who are not covered by existing government insurance schemes: this voluntary, non-profit health insurance scheme has been operating along the Thailand–Myanmar border since 2017. It was especially important for irregular migrants who were otherwise excluded from insurance schemes as a result of unclear policies (245). Other low-cost insurance schemes for migrants on the Thailand–Myanmar border also exist (248).

Fig. 4.5. Awareness of available subsidized PHC services within Syrian refugee households in Lebanon, 2015–2020 found that MCH service indicators did not deteriorate with the inclusion of refugees into the health system (255). Globally, more research is needed on the economic costs of including refugees and migrants in public health systems.

Source: UNHCR (163–168).

4.6.3 Mixed or private health insurance coverage

A variety of factors affect access to public insurance, most notably migratory status and whether a person is recognized as a refugee. Social health insurance is often linked to employment status and therefore individuals without the legal right to work cannot access insurance. Populations in vulnerable situations, such as elderly migrants, may be excluded from health insurance, and lack of awareness about how to enrol can be an obstacle for migrants of all ages. Chile, Mexico and the United States are examples of countries with health systems that are divided between the public and private sectors. Although compulsory or voluntary prepaid insurance schemes are an important component of health system financing in Chile, in 2017 18% of migrants in Chile reported no health insurance coverage, a proportion

A variety of factors affect access to public insurance, notably migratory status and whether a person is recognized as a refugee.

more than four times higher than that of the Chilean-born population (256). Evidence in Chile showed that migrants do not enjoy sufficient public sector health coverage and lack the opportunity to access private health coverage, mostly because of migratory status, employment status and lack of financial resources (257). Children born in the United States to Mexican parents who then returned to Mexico were significantly more likely to be uninsured than Mexican-born children (39% versus 13%). Such children were also less likely to be affiliated to any of the public schemes, a disparity that decreased over time (258). Within the mixed health system of the United States, some policy-makers have called for limits on access to public health coverage by migrants, particularly to Medicaid. Irregular migrants in the United States were found to have contributed US$ 2.2–3.8 billion more to the Medicare Trust Fund than they withdrew annually during 2000–2011, generating a total surplus of US$ 35.1 billion (259).

Singapore requires employers of documented migrant workers to provide health insurance for them under the Employment of Foreign Manpower Act and to cover health care costs resulting from work-related injuries through the Work Injury Compensation Act (14). Despite these worker insurance schemes, gaps still exist in access to health services among migrant workers. Some schemes cover only labour-related health costs, and various other perceived barriers discourage migrant workers from using insurance schemes (3).

A study in Jordan, the Kurdistan region of Iraq, and Lebanon found that Syrian refugees and the host community (as well as IDPs in the Kurdistan region) relied on both the public and private sectors for health services, although with significant variation across the three settings (260). Public health services were accessed roughly equally by refugees and their host communities in Lebanon, accessed more by host communities than by Syrian refugees in Jordan, and accessed more by Syrian refugees than by both host communities and IDPs in the Kurdistan region. Disparities were also apparent between refugees living inside and outside of camps. In the Kurdistan region, Syrian refugees living outside of camps were more likely to use private health care facilities than those living in camps. In Jordan, camp residents were more likely to report receiving external financial assistance, such as from the United Nations or NGOs, for medical visits than refugees living outside camps. This demonstrates that both public and private health care services are used by refugees and host populations, underscoring the vital importance of integrating health services and avoiding parallel systems.

4.7 Leadership and governance

- Across the WHO regions, innovations in service and financing show that health systems can be made more inclusive and effective for populations on the move.
- Levels of health coverage for refugees and migrants vary among WHO regions. In some, levels of coverage are similar to those of the host population. Although data in several regions are scarce, they seem to indicate that equal access is not the norm.
- A number of solutions exist that could strengthen health systems and help to deliver UHC that includes refugees and migrants.

Leadership and governance involve ensuring that strategic policy frameworks exist and are combined with effective oversight, coalition building, the provision of appropriate regulations and incentives, attention to system design, and accountability. Leadership and governance at all levels of the health system play a critical role in enacting the political or institutional changes necessary to improve the delivery of care to refugees and migrants.

4.7.1 Legal access and entitlement: national policies

A critical issue is the right to access health services through legal entitlements. At national level, policies, plans and resource allocation must meet the health needs of refugees and migrants. Ideally, these would address multisectoral needs that acknowledge the determinants of health by involving sectors such as employment, education, housing and immigration. Subnationally, local governments and community leaders have key roles in service delivery across all sectors and in promoting the effective integration and well-being of refugees and migrants within communities (2).

Literature on access to and the use of health services by refugees and migrants is often limited or inconsistent in most WHO regions. Tracking access to and use by refugees and migrants is particularly challenging in highly fragmented public and private health systems. However, several initiatives have been set up to collect data on the migration policies of countries, including the UNHCR Public Health Services Survey, which examines the inclusion of refugees within national health services, policies and financing. The 2020 survey collected data on a wide range of issues, such as the inclusion of refugees in national health plans, plans for nutrition and WASH, and the financing of and access to public health services. Of the 47 countries (out of the 48 included in the survey) that have a national health policy or plan, 29 reported that refugees were included in their policy or plan and one reported that coverage was only partial (261).

Similarly, but covering the wider field of refugees and migrants, the IOM's Migration Governance Framework provides a set of Migration Governance Indicators (MGIs) to help countries to assess the comprehensiveness of their migration governance structures (Box 4.5). The MGIs aim to offer insight on policy measures and advance the conversation on migration governance by clarifying what well-governed migration might look like in the context of SDG Target 10.7 (facilitate orderly, safe, and responsible migration and mobility of people, including through the implementation of planned and well-managed migration policies) (265).

Using data from the Migrant Integration Policy Index (MIPEX) Health Strand for 2015, a 2018 report from the WHO European Region (266) showed significant variation in levels of entitlement to health services over 34 Member States. Recent changes to these entitlements were largely associated with a change of government. MIPEX 2020 reported increased involvement of migrants in information provision and health service design and delivery in some countries in the region (267). Box 4.6 summarizes the MIPEX findings for the WHO European Region; this level of aggregated regional data on refugee and migrant entitlement to health services is not available for other WHO regions (268).

In 2020, Ireland carried out a COVID-19 assessment from a migration governance perspective, for which the MGI team developed a set of questions specific to COVID-19 to be added to standard MGI assessments. The resultant report revealed that all migrants have access to all government-funded health services under the same conditions as nationals, including migrants in irregular situations. This includes access to COVID-19-related health services, such as testing, treatment and vaccinations, with access to vaccinations

Box 4.5.

Assessing migration health policies using the Migration Governance Indicators

The International Organization for Migration (IOM) developed its Migration Governance Framework in 2015, accompanied by a set of 94 Migration Governance Indicators (MGIs) (262).

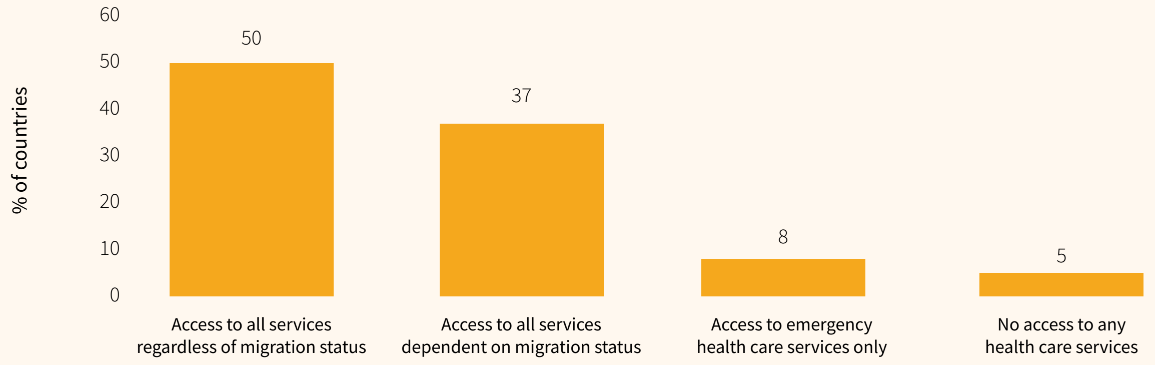
The MGIs are divided into six domains: the rights of migrants; whole-of-government approach; partnerships; well-being of migrants; mobility dimensions of crises; and safe, orderly and dignified migration. The first assesses the adherence of countries to international standards and fulfilment of the rights of migrants, using indicators related to access to certain social services by refugees and migrants, particularly whether all migrants have the same status as citizens in accessing government-funded health services.

Data collected in 84 countries between 2018 and 2021 show that in half of the assessed countries, all migrants have access to all government-funded health services under the same conditions as nationals, regardless of their migratory status (Fig. 4.6). In just over one third of the countries, access depends on migratory status; in 8% of countries, migrants have access only to emergency health care services; and in 5% of countries they have no access to any government-funded health services (263).

Also assessed is the extent to which in a non-discriminatory manner migrants can access social security, equal pay, unemployment benefits, old-age pension, invalidity benefits, maternity leave, family benefits and social assistance. In 32% of the countries, all migrants have access to social protection. In comparison, in 38% of countries, social protection is available for long-term residents and residents on family reunion permits or for certain categories of residents on temporary work permits. In 12% of countries, social protection is available only for long-term residents, while in 18% no migrants have access to social protection (IOM, unpublished data, 2022).

In addition to these aggregate data, country examples of MGI data can highlight the connection between migration governance and health issues, including in the context of COVID-19. In Cambodia, the MGI process influenced the development of a new migration health policy, making clear how important it is for all refugees and migrants to access essential health care. The policy addresses the well-being of migrants and their rights in accessing health care services (264).

Fig. 4.6. Do refugees and migrants have the same status as citizens in accessing government health services? Information from 84 countries, 2018–2021



Source: IOM, unpublished data.

Box 4.6.

Measuring health policies and the integration of migrants

The Migrant Integration Policy Index (MIPEX) has measured the level of integration of refugees and migrants within policies in countries across six continents since 2004. Its research covers eight policy areas of integration: labour market mobility, family reunification, education, political participation, permanent residence, access to nationality, antidiscrimination protections and health (268).

The 2020 edition (268) noted that:

> [t]he inclusion of migrants into the health system of destination countries is coming to be seen as an essential component of their integration… How governments treat refugees and migrants strongly influences how well refugees and migrants feel both in terms of their mental and physical health. Under inclusive integration policies, refugees and migrants and host populations end up with similar health outcomes in terms of their reported health, chronic illnesses, elderly diabetes and frailty and, even, mortality. Under restrictive policies, refugees and migrants are much more likely than the host population to suffer from these poor health outcomes. For refugees' and migrants' health, a country's overall approach to integration seems more determinant than any specific area of integration policy.

Key findings on access to health care have been published on the following topics.

Entitlements. (i) For migrants with valid residence permit/visa, conditions vary significantly across countries: in some countries, legal residents may have unconditional entitlements but be limited only to emergency care, while in others they have conditional access to the same range of services as for national citizens. Beyond these legal conditions, 27 MIPEX countries present no administrative barriers to migrants with a valid residence permit or visa (the corresponding figures for asylum seekers and irregular migrants are 15 and 2, respectively). (ii) For asylum seekers, conditions of coverage may include remaining in an assigned location or having inadequate financial resources. As per MIPEX data, Germany imposes the condition that entitlement to more than emergency care is granted only to asylum seekers or refugees who have been in the country for longer than 15 months. Only 15 countries impose no administrative barriers for asylum seekers. (iii) Irregular migrants face the greatest legal and administrative barriers to obtaining coverage. Although not all aspects of their entitlements were measured in 2019, there are few signs that these have improved since 2015. Only two countries – Chile and Switzerland – do not impose any administrative barriers for irregular migrants. Where coverage for this group is limited to emergency care, a barrier always exists in the form of a discretionary judgement about whether the health problem constitutes an emergency.

Accessibility of health services. Refugees and migrants are regularly reached with targeted information about entitlements and use of health services in only 19 of the 56 MIPEX countries. In 23 countries, all three groups are regularly reached with targeted information about health education and health promotion.

Responsive services. Qualified interpretation services for patients with inadequate proficiency in the official language (or languages) are provided free of charge in 19 countries, but are not available in 20 countries. In the other 17 countries, interpretation can be arranged, but the individual using the service must pay for it. In 31 countries, migrant patients and communities are involved to some extent in designing and providing health information and services; community involvement is greatest in Australia, Austria, Czechia, Ireland, New Zealand, Spain and the United Kingdom.

Policies to promote change. Most countries (44/56) have funding bodies that have supported refugee and migrant health research in the last 5 years. The most extensive support is found in western European and traditional destination countries. Comprehensive policies to include refugees and migrants within health care services have emerged in Australia, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom and the United States, whereas in 33 countries the health system does not systematically address migrant or ethnic minority health issues.

supported by the translation of resources into several languages (269).

The United Kingdom has unconditional inclusion in health services for asylum seekers. Since 2017, many services have been free to all migrants, including sexual health, family planning, primary health care, emergency departments and walk-in centres, and the treatment of mental and physical conditions caused by torture, FGM, and domestic or sexual violence (270,271). By law, Italy guarantees health care to all migrants with or without regular status, and irregular migrants are entitled to urgent and essential preventive or curative care (272). However, as discussed in section 4.2, there exist barriers to accessing care for refugees and migrants, even when they are entitled to receive such care.

Entitlement to health services for migrant children (including UASC) is also well documented in the WHO European Region. The report of the European Commission (273) compared the entitlements of migrant children with those of children from the host population and compared entitlements across the different categories of migrant children. In 20 countries, child asylum seekers are entitled to the same level of care as children

A South Sudanese refugee and community leader lives in an "open area" settlement on the outskirts of Khartoum. The cost of transport to the nearest hospital means that, despite the fact that refugees are entitled to equal access to health services in Sudan, health is out of reach for many in his camp. Transport to the nearest cemetery is also prohibitively expensive. "We can't even afford to bury our dead," he said. © WHO / Lindsay Mackenzie from the host population. They are enrolled in the national health system, which includes emergency, primary and secondary health services. However, in a few countries, such as Germany and Slovakia, entitlements are restricted compared with those of nationals. The document also reported entitlements for children of irregular migrants (and the migrants themselves) and compared them with those of children from the host population. In 11 countries, children of irregular migrants are generally entitled by law to the same health services as children from the host population, with some differences in the level of specific entitlements. In 15 countries (Austria, Bulgaria, Czechia, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Ireland, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland, Slovakia, Slovenia and the United Kingdom), entitlements for children of irregular migrants are more restricted than those of national children. In most of these countries, anything beyond emergency care is available only at full cost. In a different report, a longitudinal cohort study of children and adolescent refugees in Germany showed that unaccompanied or separated children had a greater need for PHC services than other refugee children (274). In the WHO Region of the Americas, levels of health coverage are generally lower for refugees and migrants than for the host population. This is especially true for more recently arrived migrants, irregular migrants and those in transit (275,276). In Chile, however, health coverage for various vulnerable migrant groups has steadily expanded in recent decades. This began with providing prenatal care for irregular migrants, followed by emergency care for labour migrants and their families (277). In 2016, a landmark decree provided coverage for irregular migrants by the public health insurance system (257). Chile launched the International Migrant Health Policy in 2018 to provide strategic guidelines to promote the health of migrants in Chile (278), based on a series of community dialogues undertaken during the drafting process. In another example of inclusive policy in the Region, Costa Rica developed a framework for the right to health of migrants, guaranteed by the Ministry of Health (279). In Peru, Secretarial Resolution No. 266-2020 established the Functional Health Unit for Migrant and Border Populations, attached for oversight to the Vice-Ministerial Office of Public Health (280).

In the United States, health system policy reforms have been adopted on a state-by-state basis to expand public health coverage (Medicaid) for citizens and non-citizens (those deemed lawfully present and children of irregular migrant parents). The results in states that have expanded coverage have been positive, with increased access to health care observed among racial and ethnic minorities (281). However, the policy reforms do not include irregular migrants. A 2020 cross-sectional study found that 47.1% of irregular migrants in the United States were uninsured, a proportion three times higher than that of documented migrants and eight times higher than that of the host population (282). According to another study, migrant children in the United States had lower levels of health insurance coverage than non-migrant children (283).

However, the governance mechanisms needed to ensure that policies and frameworks lead to full or greater access to health care are not always in place. In Canada, for example, the Interim Federal Health Program provides temporary limited benefits to specific groups not covered by provincial, territorial or private health services. However, in practice, access to health for asylum seekers is subject to political discretion; claimants from a country deemed safe by the government may have restricted access (284).

In addition to general guarantees of health services for the migrant population in Colombia, the government issued a specific decree in 2018 guaranteeing access to health services for both documented and irregular Venezuelan refugees and migrants (285). However, in another example of policy not being converted to practice, restrictive migration policies hinder the ability of irregular migrants to access health care services in Colombia (286).

In the WHO Western Pacific Region, countries with a high proportion of migrants, including Australia, New Zealand, the Republic of Korea and Singapore, have implemented systems and laws to grant refugees and migrants access to national health systems. For example, the Republic of Korea's Employment Permit System provides universal national health insurance and industrial accident compensation to migrant workers (287,288). In Singapore, the Work Injury Compensation Act and the Employment of Foreign Manpower Act are two policies that facilitate access to health care for migrant workers. The former requires employees to cover health care costs for injuries sustained during work, while the latter mandates employers of low-wage migrant workers with a Work Permit or S Pass to cover the costs of their medical treatment (14). The Seasonal Workers Program in Australia and New Zealand's Recognised Seasonal Employer scheme are required to provide seasonal migrant workers with health insurance (60). The New Zealand scheme has recently expanded coverage to provide a more comprehensive insurance option for workers, offering wide-ranging medical treatments.

In the WHO South-East Asia Region, information about access to health services for refugees and migrants is limited. Thailand is one of the few countries in the Region to make significant progress towards including migrants in its UHC system, but it still faces issues of low utilization and inadequate financing (242). Most literature published on refugees within the Region involves Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Although government, international and national organizations have supported and coordinated health service provision to Rohingya refugees, the health situation in Rohingya refugee camps remains suboptimal: service delivery is poor, mainly because of a lack of resources and inadequate health facilities; accessing health services and essential medicines is difficult because of a lack of finances, low levels of health literacy and sociocultural barriers; and the refugees experience poor-quality overall living conditions (289).

Evidence is similarly limited in the WHO African Region, although the need for health services and facilities in refugee and humanitarian contexts is clear. A study from Rwanda reported that refugee access to palliative care services was extremely limited in this refugee-hosting country, and research on refugee camps in South Sudan has highlighted the need for the integration of comprehensive neonatal interventions within national policies (290,291). A policy review of documents addressing access to health care services for refugees in South Africa found policies to be contradictory or not implemented, or to contain ambiguous language. Only 5 of 12 reviewed policy documents outlining services for refugees were found to have been implemented and were in operation (292).

4.7.2 Refugee-hosting contexts

Leadership and governance should ensure that the inclusion both of the ideals of the UNHCR Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework (293) and of refugee needs in national policies lead to improvements in health services and health outcomes.

Although Uganda has an integrated refugee policy that includes refugees in public health interventions, ethnographic research in western Uganda highlighted that, in reality, implementation of these interventions inadvertently resulted in excluding refugees from programming and disease surveillance, in this case around African sleeping sickness (human African trypanosomiasis) (294). Some of the implementation challenges leading to the exclusion of refugees were donor pressure to reduce the scope of the programme, challenges in building local supervision capacity, barriers to using rapid diagnostic tests, and high staff turnover. Additionally, studies in South Africa documented the importance of multisectoral and multilevel (including local) approaches for delivering coordinated responses to refugee and migrant health (295,296).

The current war in Syria and subsequent refugee crisis have provided important insights into the international support required for greater inclusion of refugees in the health systems of refugee-hosting countries. Such support includes governance mechanisms to ensure that international aid translates into inclusive policies and that the policies themselves lead to increased access to health services for refugees (297).

In February 2019, the Ethiopian Government approved a new Refugees Proclamation (No. 1110/2019) that provides access to health services for refugees and asylum seekers (298). In addition, the Federal Ministry of Health in Ethiopia signed a memorandum of understanding with the Administration for Refugee and Returnee Affairs, UNHCR and UNICEF to ensure that all refugees and migrants have the right to basic health services and to be treated in the same way as members of the host community (299).

4.7.3 Regional leadership and strategies

There exist many examples of regional strategies and frameworks designed to improve access to inclusive health services by refugees and migrants.

Two publications for sub-Saharan African countries indicated the need to develop migration-aware governance responses to HIV (300,301). Focus areas for future research and intervention on HIV and migration in the subregion include recognition of population movements related to improved livelihoods, urbanization and conflict, and access to treatment and care. In addition, they recognized the need to build the governance and capacity of health systems to respond to both HIV and migration with standardized, multisectoral and evidence-informed approaches.

At subregional level, the ministries of health of six Andean countries – Plurinational State of Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – established the Andean health plan for migrants 2019–2022, which aims to ensure good-quality and coordinated health services for migrants who transit through those countries (302). The Central American Integration System of 2019 – which includes Belize, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama – provides strategic guidelines for comprehensive health care and public health surveillance for migrants in transit, returnees and fragmented families in the subregion (303). Many similar examples of regional strategies exist, although evaluations of the effectiveness of these regional efforts are not well documented.

In the WHO South-East Asia Region, the Safe and Fair programme (2018–2022) supported by the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women and the ILO has been implemented, representing a partnership between several countries with large numbers of citizens migrating for work, namely Cambodia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, the Philippines and Viet Nam. The initiative aims to ensure that the rights of migrants are enforced and to end violence against female migrant workers in particular (304).

The Strategy and action plan for refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region and subsequent progress reports provide a framework for collaborative regional action, focusing on, as priorities, advocating for the right to health, addressing the social determinants of health, achieving public health preparedness and response, strengthening health systems and their resilience, preventing communicable and noncommunicable diseases, ensuring ethical and effective health screening and assessment, and improving health information and communication systems (206). Developed in response to the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (205), this strategy and action plan also includes clear considerations for follow-up and monitoring of its implementation (206,266).

The most recent example of responsive leadership in the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region is the inclusion of refugees and migrants in the COVID-19 vaccination scheme in Jordan (Box 4.7).

Box 4.7.
Leadership by example: Jordan includes refugees and migrants in COVID-19 vaccination

In mid-January 2021, at a public health clinic in the town of Irbid, Jordan became one of the first countries in the world to offer COVID-19 vaccinations to refugees and migrants (305). This initiative – at a time when 313 557 cases and 4137 deaths attributed to the disease had been reported in the country (306) – was a striking example of leadership in providing equitable access to health care regardless of migratory status and of decisive action in the face of a health crisis (307).

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, and with the support of WHO, the Jordanian Ministry of Health rapidly produced the National COVID-19 Preparedness and Response Plan (308). The Plan emphasized a whole-of-society approach, with beneficiaries including Jordanians and non-Jordanians residing in both host communities and refugee camps. This was followed in December 2020 by the multisectoral COVID-19 National Deployment and Vaccination Plan (308), which was designed to extend free-of-charge, equitable access to all individuals in Jordan.

The challenge facing Jordan was a daunting one. Approximately two fifths of Jordan's resident population are migrants (309); in 2021, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees had registered a total of 658 000 Syrian refugees in the country (310). According to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, more than 2 million registered refugees, including those recently displaced from the Syrian Arab Republic as well as the majority who have lived there for decades (311), reside in Jordan, which also hosts tens of thousands of refugees from other countries such as Iraq, Sudan and Yemen (310).

In the WHO Western Pacific Region, many frameworks have made advances towards achieving both UHC and the SDGs, taking into consideration disadvantaged groups such as refugees and migrants. Examples of such frameworks include the Regional action agenda on achieving the Sustainable Development Goals in the Western Pacific (312), the Regional framework for urban health in the Western Pacific 2016–2020 (313), the Western Pacific regional framework for action for disaster risk management for health (314) and Universal health coverage: moving towards better health – action framework for the Western Pacific Region (315).

4.8 Summary

There are major and widespread gaps in the six building blocks covered in this chapter, but solutions do exist that can help to deliver UHC that includes refugees and migrants.

Refugees and migrants may face many of the same barriers to accessing health services as the local population, including cost, proximity and general gaps in health systems. However, they also face barriers specific to their migratory status, such as out-of-pocket expenses or limited recognition of their status.

When refugees and migrants do access health services, they may face a workforce that is insufficiently trained to deliver health services that are sensitive to refugee and migrant health; efforts to strengthen these capacities are now under way across every WHO region.

Refugees and migrants often have limited access to essential medication and may resort to self-medication or the use of non-prescribed medicines, such as antibiotics, resulting in possible antimicrobial resistance. Vaccination coverage varies widely for refugees and migrants, especially upon arrival in their host countries or in border areas, while their immunization rates have often been found to be lower than those of host communities.

The collection and processing of accurate and relevant health information is essential for delivering high-quality health services to refugees and migrants. However, the literature indicates widespread gaps in HIS, including the absence of epidemiological data (both from general surveillance and from arrival or border screening), a lack of standardization of data within countries and regions, comparability issues across locations or time of data collection, and an inability to disaggregate data by migratory status.

Direct and indirect health costs are major barriers to accessing health care across regions, and refugees and migrants often cannot afford the out-of-pocket costs. As a result, they tend to spend less overall on health services than host populations. Some studies, however, show that it costs more to exclude refugees and migrants from health coverage than to include them, an area that requires more research.

Finally, leadership and governance play an essential role by providing the necessary policy frameworks and adjusting them as required to deliver health care to refugees and migrants.

References

1. Legido-Quigley H, Pocock N, Tan ST, Pajin L, Suphanchaimat R, Wickramage K et al. Healthcare is not universal if undocumented migrants are excluded. BMJ. 2019;366:14160. doi:10.1136/bmj.14160.
2. Health of migrants: the way forward: report of a global consultation, Madrid, Spain, 3–5 March 2010. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2011:3–5 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/44336, accessed 7 April 2022).
3. Rajaraman N, Yip TW, Kuan BYH, Lim JFY. Exclusion of migrant workers from national UHC systems: perspectives from HealthServe, a non-profit organisation in Singapore. Asian Bioeth Rev. 2020;12(3):363–74. doi:10.1007/s41649-020-00138-y.
4. Bozorgmehr K, Biddle L, Rohleder S, Puthoopparambil SJ, Jahn R. What is the evidence on availability and integration of refugee and migrant health data in health information systems in the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2019 (Health Evidence Network Synthesis report no. 66; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/328634, accessed 7 April 2022).
5. Chekero T, Ross FC. "On paper" and "having papers": Zimbabwean migrant women's experiences in accessing healthcare in Giyani, Limpopo province, South Africa. Anthropol South Afr. 2018;41(1):41–54. doi:10.1080/23323256.2018.1442729.
6. Pérez-Urdiales I, Goicolea I, San Sebastián M, Irazusta A, Linander I. Sub-Saharan African immigrant women's experiences of (lack of) access to appropriate healthcare in the public health system in the Basque Country, Spain. Int J Equity Health. 2019;18(1):59. doi:10.1186/s12939-019-0958-6.
7. Barghadouch A, Norredam M. Psychosocial responses to healthcare: a study on asylum-seeking families' experiences in Denmark. J Immigr Minor Health. 2022;24(2):551–5. doi:10.1007/s10903-021-01183-x.
8. McNatt ZZ, Freels PE, Chandler H, Fawad M, Qarmout S, Al-Oraibi AS et al. "What's happening in Syria even affects the rocks": a qualitative study of the Syrian refugee experience accessing noncommunicable disease services in Jordan. Confl Health. 2019;13(1):26. doi:10.1186/s13031-019-0209-x.
9. Qiu J, Song D, Nie J, Su M, Hao C, Gu J et al. Utilization of healthcare services among Chinese migrants in Kenya: a qualitative study. BMC Health Serv Res. 2019;19(1):995. doi:10.1186/s12913-019-4846-y.
10. Jemutai J, Muraya K, Che PC, Mulupi S. A situation analysis of access to refugee health services in Kenya: gaps and recommendations: a literature review. York: Centre for Health Economics; 2021 (CHE Research Paper no. 178; https://www.york.ac.uk/media/che/documents/papers/researchpapers/CHERP178_refugee_health_services_kenya.pdf, accessed 7 April 2022).
11. Hunter-Adams J, Rother H-A. A qualitative study of language barriers between South African health care providers and cross-border migrants. BMC Health Serv Res. 2017;17(1):97. doi:10.1186/s12913-017-2042-5.
12. Zihindula G, Meyer-Weitz A, Akintola O. Lived experiences of Democratic Republic of Congo refugees facing medical xenophobia in Durban, South Africa. J Asian Afr Stud. 2015;52(4):458–70. doi:10.1177/0021909615595990.
13. Takbiri A, Takian A, Foroushani AR, Jaafaripooyan E. The challenges of providing primary health care to Afghan immigrants in Tehran: a key global human right issue. Int J Hum Rights Healthc. 2020;13(3):259–73. doi:10.1108/IJHRH-06-2019-0042.
14. Ang JW, Koh CJ, Chua BW, Narayanaswamy S, Wijaya L, Chan LG et al. Are migrant workers in Singapore receiving adequate healthcare? A survey of doctors working in public tertiary healthcare institutions. Singapore Med J. 2020;61(10):540–7. doi:10.11622/smedj.2019101.
15. Inci MG, Kutschke N, Nasser S, Alavi S, Abels I, Kurmeyer C et al. Unmet family planning needs among female refugees and asylum seekers in Germany - is free access to family planning services enough? Results of a cross-sectional study. Reprod Health. 2020;17(1):115. doi:10.1186/s12978-020-00962-3.
16. Jeffries R, Abdi H, Ali M, Bhuiyan ATMRH, El Shazly M, Harlass S et al. The health response to the Rohingya refugee crisis post August 2017: reflections from two years of health sector coordination in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. PLOS One. 2021;16(6):e0253013. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0253013.
17. Nathenson RA, Saloner B, Richards MR, Rhodes KV. Spanish-speaking immigrants' access to safety net providers and translation services across traditional and emerging US destinations. Milbank Q. 2016;94(4):768–99. doi:10.1111/1468-0009.12231.
18. McGarry O, Hannigan A, De Almeida MM, Severoni S, Puthoopparambil J, MacFarlane A. What strategies to address communication barriers for refugees and migrants in health care settings have been implemented and evaluated across the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326238, accessed 7 April 2022).
19. Yelland J, Riggs E, Szwarc J, Casey S, Duell-Piening P, Chesters D et al. Compromised communication: a qualitative study exploring Afghan families and health professionals' experience of interpreting support in Australian maternity care. BMJ Qual Saf. 2016;25(4):e1–e1. doi:10.1136/bmjqs-2014-003837.

20. Sampson AK, Hassani-Mahmooei B, Collie A. Lack of English proficiency is associated with the characteristics of work-related injury and recovery cost in the Victorian working population. Work. 2020;67(3):741–52. doi:10.3233/WOR-203323.

21. Shakya P, Tanaka M, Shibanuma A, Jimba M. Nepalese migrants in Japan: what is holding them back in getting access to healthcare? PLOS One. 2018;13(9):e0203645. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0203645.

22. Adhikary P, Aryal N, Dhungana RR, Kc RK, Regmi PR, Wickramage KP et al. Accessing health services in India: experiences of seasonal migrants returning to Nepal. BMC Health Serv Res. 2020;20(1):992. doi:10.1186/s12913-020-05846-7.

23. Jaeger FN, Pellaud N, Laville B, Klauser P. The migration-related language barrier and professional interpreter use in primary health care in Switzerland. BMC Health Serv Res. 2019;19(1):429. doi:10.1186/s12913-019-4164-4.

24. The risks that refugees with disabilities face in Turkey: how to mitigate risks and challenges to shape an apt humanitarian response. York: Euro-Mediterranean for Human Rights Monitor, York University; 2020 (https://euromedmonitor.org/uploads/reports/pwden.pdf, accessed 7 April 2022).

25. Tanabe M, Pearce E, Krause SK. “Nothing about us, without us”: conducting participatory action research among and with persons with disabilities in humanitarian settings. Action Res. 2018;16(3):280–98. doi:10.1177/1476750316685878.

26. Khuu BP, Lee HY, Zhou AQ, Shin J, Lee RM. Healthcare providers’ perspectives on parental health literacy and child health outcomes among Southeast Asian American immigrants and refugees. Child Youth Serv Rev. 2016;67:220–9. doi:10.1016/j.childyouth.2016.06.006.

27. Forney-Gorman A, Kozhimannil KB. Differences in cervical cancer screening between African-American versus African-born black women in the United States. J Immigr Minor Health. 2016;18(6):1371–7. doi:10.1007/s10903-015-0267-0.

28. Lugova H, Samad N, Haque M. Sexual and gender-based violence among refugees and internally displaced persons in the Democratic Republic of the Congo: post-conflict scenario. Risk Manag Healthc Policy. 2020;13:2937–48. doi:10.2147/RMHP.S283698.

29. Lilleston P, Winograd L, Ahmed S, Prime DS, Alam DA, Stoebenau K et al. Evaluation of a mobile approach to gender-based violence service delivery among Syrian refugees in Lebanon. Health Policy Plan. 2018;33(7):767–76. doi:10.1093/heapol/czy050.

30. Gausman J, Othman A, Dababneh A, Dabobe M, Hamad I, Daas I et al. A social-ecological examination into the research, policy and health service delivery environment related to early marriage and sexual and gender-based violence among youth in Jordan. BMC Int Health Hum Rights. 2020;20(1):16. doi:10.1186/s12914-020-00234-y.

31. Chynoweth SK, Buscher D, Martin S, Zwi AB. A social ecological approach to understanding service utilization barriers among male survivors of sexual violence in three refugee settings: a qualitative exploratory study. Confl Health. 2020;14(1):43. doi:10.1186/s13031-020-00288-8.

32. Tol WA, Augustinavicius J, Carswell K, Brown FL, Adaku A, Leku MR et al. Translation, adaptation, and pilot of a guided self-help intervention to reduce psychological distress in South Sudanese refugees in Uganda. Glob Ment Health. 2018;5:e25. doi:10.1017/gmh.2018.14.

33. Yassin N, Taha AA, Ghantous Z, Atoui MM, Forgione F. Evaluating a mental health program for Palestinian refugees in Lebanon. J Immigr Minor Health. 2018;20(2):388–98. doi:10.1007/s10903-017-0657-6.

34. Akhtar A, Engels M, Bawaneh A, Bird M, Bryant R, Cuijpers P et al. Cultural adaptation of a low-intensity group psychological intervention for Syrian refugees. Intervention. 2021;19(1):48–57. doi:10.4103/INTV.INTV_38_20.

35. Noubani A, Diaconu K, Ghandour L, El Koussa M, Loffreda G, Saleh S. A community-based system dynamics approach for understanding factors affecting mental health and health seeking behaviors in Beirut and Beqaa regions of Lebanon. Glob Health. 2020;16(1):28. doi:10.1186/s12992-020-00556-5.

36. Kesornsri S, Sitthimongkol Y, Punpuing S, Vongsirimas N, Hegadoren KH. Mental health and related factors among migrants from Myanmar in Thailand. J Popul Soc Stud. 2019 Mar 28;27(2):124–38. doi:10.25133/JPSSv27n2.008.

37. Radi S. Hospital interactions in Morocco: access to health care policies from a patient perspective. Mondes Dev. 2019;187(3):71–84. doi:10.3917/med.187.0071.

38. Llanes-García YE, Ghys T. Barriers to access healthcare for Middle American migrants during transit in Mexico. Política Glob Ciudad. 2021;7(13):182–204. doi:10.29105/10.29105/pgc7.13-7.

39. Borrell C, Palència L, Bartoll X, Ikram U, Malmusi D. Perceived discrimination and health among immigrants in Europe according to national integration policies. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2015;12(9):10687–99. doi:10.3390/ijerph120910687.

40. Guruge S, Sidani S, Illesinghe V, Younes R, Bukhari H, Altenberg J et al. Healthcare needs and health service utilization by Syrian refugee women in Toronto. Confl Health. 2018;12(1):46. doi:10.1186/s13031-018-0181-x.

41. Torres CA, Thorn BE, Kapoor S, DeMonte C. An examination of cultural values and pain management in foreign-born Spanish-speaking Hispanics seeking care at a federally qualified health center. Pain Med. 2017;18(11):2058–69. doi:10.1093/pm/pnw315.

42. Arrieta JDR. Banca, salud y estímulo del empleo: servicios públicos desde la óptica de los refugiados y solicitantes en Costa Rica [Banking, health and employment stimulus: public services from the perspective of refugees and asylum seekers in Costa Rica]. Rev Cienc Soc. 2017;155:111–29 (in Spanish). doi:10.15517/RCS.V0I155.30258.

43. Gurrola MA, Ayón C. Immigration policies and social determinants of health: is immigrants' health at risk? Race Soc Probl. 2018;10(3):209–20. doi:10.1007/s12552-018-9239-z.

44. Dzúrová D, Winkler P, Drbohlav D. Immigrants' access to health insurance: no equality without awareness. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2014;11(7):7144–53. doi:10.3390/ijerph110707144.

45. Faturiyele I, Karletsos D, Ntene-Sealiete K, Musekiwa A, Khabo M, Mariti M et al. Access to HIV care and treatment for migrants between Lesotho and South Africa: a mixed methods study. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):668. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5594-3.

46. Lohiniva AL, Mokhtar A, Azer A, Elmoghazy E, Kamal E, Benkirane M et al. Qualitative interviews with non-national tuberculosis patients in Cairo, Egypt: understanding the financial and social cost of treatment adherence. Health Soc Care Community. 2016;24(6):e164–72. doi:10.1111/hsc.12280.

47. Fernandez B. Health inequities faced by Ethiopian migrant domestic workers in Lebanon. Health Place. 2018;50:154–61. doi:10.1016/j.healthplace.2018.01.008.

48. Rivenbark JG, Ichou M. Discrimination in healthcare as a barrier to care: experiences of socially disadvantaged populations in France from a nationally representative survey. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):31. doi:10.1186/s12889-019-8124-z.

49. Yarnell CJ, Fu L, Bonares MJ, Nayfeh A, Fowler RA. Association between Chinese or South Asian ethnicity and end-of-life care in Ontario, Canada. CMAJ. 2020;192(11):E266–74. doi:10.1503/cmaj.190655.

50. Mohammadi S, Gargari SS, Fallahian M, Källestål C, Ziaei S, Essén B. Afghan migrants face more suboptimal care than natives: a maternal near-miss audit study at university hospitals in Tehran, Iran. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2017;17(1):64. doi:10.1186/s12884-017-1239-2.

51. Yu M, Kelley AT, Morgan AU, Duong A, Mahajan A, Gipson JD. Challenges for adult undocumented immigrants in accessing primary care: a qualitative study of health care workers in Los Angeles County. Health Equity. 2020;4(1):366–74. doi:10.1089/heq.2020.0036.

52. Müllerschön J, Koschollek C, Santos-Hövener C, Kuehne A, Müller-Nordhorn J, Bremer V. Impact of health insurance status among migrants from sub-Saharan Africa on access to health care and HIV testing in Germany: a participatory cross-sectional survey. BMC Int Health Hum Rights. 2019;19(1):10. doi:10.1186/s12914-019-0189-3.

53. Kalengayi FNK, Hurtig A-K, Ahlm C, Krantz I. Fear of deportation may limit legal immigrants' access to HIV/AIDS-related care: a survey of Swedish language school students in northern Sweden. J Immigr Minor Health. 2012;14(1):39–47. doi:10.1007/s10903-011-9509-y.

54. Mikhaylova YuV, Nechaeva OB, Shikina IB, Sorokin VN. Influence of migration factor on TB and HIV epidemic situation in Russia. Social Asp Popul Health. 2018;(62):4. doi:10.21045/2071-5021-2018-62-4-4.

55. Kiyutin v. Russia, 2700/10. Strasbourg: European Court of Human Rights; 2011 (https://hudoc.echr.coe.int/Eng#{%22itemid%22:[%22001-103904%22]}, accessed 16 April 2022).

56. Kashnitsky D, Richter JM. 'In short, we will deport you': disrupted temporalities of migrants with HIV in Russia. Glob Public Health. 2021;11:1–13. doi:10.1080/17441692.2021.2002923.

57. Deported, denied access, discriminated against because of their HIV status. Geneva: Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS; 2019 (https://www.unaids.org/en/resources/presscentre/featurestories/2019/june/20190627_deported, accessed 7 April 2022).

58. UNAIDS and UNDP call on 48 countries and territories to remove all HIV-related travel restrictions. Geneva: Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS; 2019 (https://www.unaids.org/en/resources/presscentre/pressreleaseandstatementarchive/2019/june/20190627_hiv-related-travel-restrictions, accessed 7 April 2022).

59. Malmusi D. Immigrants' health and health inequality by type of integration policies in European countries. Eur J Public Health. 2015;25(2):293–9. doi:10.1093/eurpub/cku156.

60. Bailey R. Health care management in Australia's and New Zealand's seasonal worker schemes. Canberra: Department of Pacific Affairs (Working Paper 2020/2; https://dpa.bellschool.anu.edu.au/sites/default/files/publications/attachments/2020-03/dpa_working_paper_2020_2_bailey_final.pdf, accessed 7 April 2022).

61. Maneesh P, Divyarani R, Remya S, Nisha P, Vilvijayan C, Dhinakaran D. Barriers to healthcare for Sri Lankan Tamil refugees in Tamil Nadu, India. Turk J Comput Math Educ. 2021;12:4075–83 (https://www.turcomat.org/index.php/turkbilmat/article/download/8213/6416/14730, accessed 7 April 2022).

62. Riley A, Varner A, Ventevogel P, Hasan MMT, Welton-Mitchell C. Daily stressors, trauma exposure, and mental health among stateless Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. Transcult Psychiatry. 2017;54(3):304–31. doi:10.1177/1363461517705571.

63. Tarannum S, Elshazly M, Harlass S, Ventevogel P. Integrating mental health into primary health care in Rohingya refugee settings in Bangladesh: experiences of UNHCR. Intervention. 2019;17(2):130–9. doi:10.4103/INTV_INTV_34_19.

64. Alghadir AH, Zafar H, Iqbal ZA. Experiences of overseas trained physical therapists working in Saudi Arabia: an observational study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(10):3406. doi:10.3390/ijerph17103406.

65. Fragkiadaki E, Ghafoori B, Triliva S, Sfakianaki R. A pilot study of a trauma training for healthcare workers serving refugees in Greece: perceptions of feasibility of task-shifting trauma informed care. J Aggress Maltreatment Trauma. 2020;29(4):442–60. doi:10.1080/10926771.2019.1662866.

66. Al-Rousan T, Schwabkey Z, Jirmanus L, Nelson BD. Health needs and priorities of Syrian refugees in camps and urban settings in Jordan: perspectives of refugees and health care providers. East Mediterr Health J. 2018;24(3):243–53. doi:10.26719/2018.24.3.243.

67. White JA, Levin J, Rispel LC. Migrants' perceptions of health system responsiveness and satisfaction with health workers in a South African province. Glob Health Action. 2020;13(1):1850058. doi:10.1080/16549716.2020.1850058.

68. Modesti PA, Calabrese M, Marzotti I, Bing H, Malandrino D, Boddi M et al. Prevalence, awareness, treatment, and control of hypertension among Chinese first-generation migrants and Italians in Prato, Italy: the CHIP study. Int J Hypertens. 2017;2017:6402085. doi:10.1155/2017/6402085.

69. McMichael C, Healy J. Health equity and migrants in the Greater Mekong Subregion. Glob Health Action. 2017;10(1):1271594. doi:10.1080/16549716.2017.1271594.

70. Ghahari S, Burnett S, Alexander L. Development and pilot testing of a health education program to improve immigrants' access to Canadian health services. BMC Health Serv Res. 2020;20(1):321. doi:10.1186/s12913-020-05180-y.

71. DeCamp LR, Godage SK, Araujo DV, Cortez JD, Wu L, Psoter KJ et al. A texting intervention in Latino families to reduce ED use: a randomized trial. Pediatrics. 2020;145(1):e20191405. doi:10.1542/peds.2019-1405.

72. Chepo M, Astorga-Pinto S, Cabieses B. Atención inicial de migrantes en Chile: iniciativa en atención primaria de salud a un año de su implementación [Initial care for migrants in Chile: status of a primary health care initiative after one year of implementation]. 2019;43:e71 (in Spanish). doi:10.26633/RPSP.2019.71.

73. Agarwal G, Bhandari M, Pirrie M, Angeles R, Marzanek F. Feasibility of implementing a community cardiovascular health promotion program with paramedics and volunteers in a South Asian population. BMC Public Health. 2020;20(1):1618. doi:10.1186/s12889-020-09728-9.

74. Choi YJ, Orpinas P, Kim I, Ko KS. Korean clergy for healthy families: online intervention for preventing intimate partner violence. Glob Health Promot. 2019;26(4):25–32. doi:10.1177/1757975917747878.

75. Lee H, Ghebre R, Le C, Jang YJ, Sharratt M, Yee D. Mobile phone multilevel and multimedia messaging intervention for breast cancer screening: pilot randomized controlled trial. JMIR mHealth uHealth. 2017;5(11):e154. doi:10.2196/mhealth.7091.

76. Agyemang C, Meeks K, Boateng R, Beune E. Your health is your wealth: faith-based community action on the health of African migrant communities in Amsterdam. J Epidemiol Community Health. 2018;72(5):409–12. doi:10.1136/jech-2017-209130.

77. Dewachi O, Skelton M, Nguyen V-K, Fouad FM, Sitta GA, Maasri Z et al. Changing therapeutic geographies of the Iraqi and Syrian wars. Lancet. 2014;383(9915):449–57. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(13)62299-0.

78. Rouland B, Jarraya M. From medical tourism to regionalism from the bottom up: emerging transnational spaces of care between Libya and Tunisia. J Ethn Migr Stud. 2020;46(20):4248–63. doi:10.1080/1369183X.2019.1597475.

79. Public health guidance on screening and vaccination for infectious diseases in newly arrived migrants within the EU/EEA. Stockholm: European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control; 2018 (https://www.ecdc.europa.eu/sites/default/files/documents/Public%20health%20guidance%20on%20screening%20and%20vaccination%20of%20migrants%20in%20the%20EU%20EEA.pdf, accessed 7 April 2022).

80. Hargreaves S, Rustage K, Nellums LB, Powis J, Milburn J, Severoni S et al. What constitutes an effective and efficient package of services for the prevention, diagnosis, treatment and care of tuberculosis among refugees and migrants in the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2018 (Health Evidence Network synthesis report 56; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326256, accessed 7 April 2022).

81. Shedrawy J, Deogan C, Öhd JN, Hergens M-P, Bruchfeld J, Jonsson J et al. Cost–effectiveness of the latent tuberculosis screening program for migrants in Stockholm Region. Eur J Health Econ. 2021;22(3):445–54. doi:10.1007/s10198-021-01265-5.

82. Bwire G, Orach CG, Aceng FL, Arianitwe SE, Matseketse D, Tumusherure E et al. Refugee settlements and cholera risks in Uganda, 2016–2019. Am J Trop Med Hyg. 2021;104(4):1225–31. doi:10.4269/ajtmh.20-0741.

83. Ndombo PK, Ndze VN, Mbarga FD, Anderson R, Acho A, Chia JE et al. Molecular characterisation of measles virus strains among refugees from Central African Republic in Cameroon in 2014. Epidemiol Infect. 2018;146(3):319–23. doi:10.1017/S0950268817002990.

84. Isadru VR, Nanyonga RC, Alege JB. Health facilities' readiness to manage hypertension and diabetes cases at primary health facilities in Bidibidi refugee settlement, Yumbe District, Uganda. J Trop Med. 2021;2021:e1415794. doi:10.1155/2021/1415794.

85. Gottlieb N, Weinstein T, Mink J, Ghebrezghiabher HM, Sultan Z, Reichlin R. Applying a community-based participatory research approach to improve access to healthcare for Eritrean asylum-seekers in Israel: a pilot study. Isr J Health Policy Res. 2017;6(1):61. doi:10.1186/s13584-017-0185-9.

86. Dumit NY, Honein-AbouHaidar G. The impact of the Syrian refugee crisis on nurses and the healthcare system in Lebanon: a qualitative exploratory study. J Nurs Scholarsh. 2019;51(3):289–98. doi:10.1111/jnu.12479.

87. Veliz-Rojas L, Bianchetti-Saavedra AF, Silva-Fernández M. Competencias interculturales en la atención primaria de salud: un desafío para la educación superior frente a contextos de diversidad cultural [Intercultural skills in primary health care: a challenge for higher education in contexts of cultural diversity]. Cad Saúde Publica. 2019;35(1):e00120818 (in Spanish). doi:10.1590/0102-311x00120818.

88. Mengesha ZB, Perz J, Dune T, Ussher J. Preparedness of health care professionals for delivering sexual and reproductive health care to refugee and migrant women: a mixed methods study. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2018;15(1):174. doi:10.3390/ijerph15010174.

89. Marzouk M, Kelley M, Fadhil I, Slama S, Longuere KS, Ariana P et al. "If I have a cancer, it is not my fault I am a refugee": a qualitative study with expert stakeholders on cancer care management for Syrian refugees in Jordan. PLOS One. 2019;14(9):e0222496. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0222496.

90. McHenry MS, Nutakki K, Swigonski NL. Effectiveness of cross-cultural education for medical residents caring for Burmese refugees. Educ Health. 2016;29(3):250–4. doi:10.4103/1357-6283.204217.

91. Gagliardi AR, Kim C, Jameel B. Physician behaviours that optimize patient-centred care: focus groups with migrant women. Health Expect. 2020;23(5):1280–8. doi:10.1111/hex.13110.

92. Fellmeth G, Plugge E, Fazel M, Nosten S, Oo MM, Pimanpanarak M et al. Perinatal depression in migrant and refugee women on the Thai–Myanmar border: does social support matter? Philos Trans R Soc B Biol Sci. 2021;376(1827):20200030. doi:10.1098/rstb.2020.0030.

93. Young S, Guo KL. Cultural diversity training: the necessity of cultural competence for health care providers and in nursing practice. Health Care Manag. 2016;35(2):94–102. doi:10.1097/HCM.0000000000000100.

94. Fair F, Soltani H, Raben L, van Streun Y, Sioti E, Papadakaki M et al. Midwives' experiences of cultural competency training and providing perinatal care for migrant women a mixed methods study: operational refugee and migrant maternal approach (ORAMMA) project. BMC Pregnancy Childbirth. 2021;21(1):340. doi:10.1186/s12884-021-03799-1.

95. Bapolisi A, Crabtree K, Jarolimova J, Kelly C, Kentoffio K, Patel P et al. Assessment of attitudes and targeted educational needs for refugee care providers in a Ugandan hospital. Int J Med Educ. 2018;9:221–5. doi:10.5116/ijme.5b64.9630.

96. Richter S, Vallianatos H, Green J, Obuekwe C. Intersection of migration and access to health care: experiences and perceptions of female economic migrants in Canada. Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2020;17(10):3682. doi:10.3390/ijerph17103682.

97. Al Shdaifat A, Zink T. Pilot study to build capacity for family medicine with abbreviated, low-cost training programme with minimal impact on patient care for a cohort of 84 general practitioners caring for Palestinian refugees in Jordan. BMJ Open. 2019;9(8):e028240. doi:10.1136/bmjopen-2018-028240.

98. Abudari G, Hazeim H, Ginete G. Caring for terminally ill Muslim patients: lived experiences of non-Muslim nurses. Palliat Support Care. 2016;14(6):599–611. doi:10.1017/S1478951516000249.

99. Brunton M, Cook C, Kuzemski D, Brownie S, Thirlwall A. Internationally qualified nurse communication: a qualitative cross country study. J Clin Nurs. 2019;28(19–20):3669–79. doi:10.1111/jocn.14968.

100. Albougami AS, Alotaibi JS, Alsharari AF, Albagawi BS, Almazan JU, Maniago JD et al. Cultural competence and perception of patient-centered care among non-Muslim expatriate nurses in Saudi Arabia: a cross sectional study. Pak J Med Health Sci. 2019;13(3):933–8 (https://www.pjmhsonline.com/2019/july_sep/pdf/933.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

101. Kheang ST, Lin MA, Lwin S, Naing YH, Yarzar P, Kak N. Malaria case detection among mobile populations and migrant workers in Myanmar: comparison of 3 service delivery approaches. Glob Health Sci Pract. 2018;6(2):384–9. doi:10.9745/GHSP-D-17-00318.

102. Alpern JD, Davey CS, Song J. Perceived barriers to success for resident physicians interested in refugee and migrant health. BMC Med Educ. 2016;16:178. doi:10.1186/s12909-016-0696-z.

103. Reece MJ, Rubin S. Qualitative pilot study: challenges for primary healthcare providers caring for refugees in Northeast Ohio. Cureus. 2021;13(1):e12572. doi:10.7759/cureus.12572.

104. de Arruda-Barbosa L, Sales AFG, de Souza ILL. Reflexos da imigração venezuelana na assistência em saúde no maior hospital de Roraima: análise qualitativa [The impact of Venezuelan immigration on health care in Roraima's largest hospital: qualitative analysis]. Saúde Soc. 2020;29(2):e190730 (in Portuguese). doi:10.1590/S0104-12902020190730.

105. Schininá G, Nunes N, Birot P, Giardinelli L, Kios G. Mainstreaming mental health and psychosocial support in camp coordination and camp management. The experience of the International Organization for Migration in the north east of Nigeria and South Sudan. Intervention. 2016;14(3):232–44 (https://www.interventionjournal.com/sites/default/files/Mainstreaming_mental_health_and_psychosocial.7.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

106. Abbott KL, Woods CA, Halim DA, Qureshi HA. Pediatric care during a short-term medical mission to a Syrian refugee camp in northern Jordan. Avicenna J Med. 2017;7(4):176–81. doi:10.4103/ajm.AJM_100_17.

107. Kosiyaporn H, Julchoo S, Phaiyarom M, Sinam P, Kunpeuk W, Pudpong N et al. Strengthening the migrant-friendliness of Thai health services through interpretation and cultural mediation: a system analysis. Glob Health Res Policy. 2020;5(1):53. doi:10.1186/s41256-020-00181-0.

108. Juon H-S, Strong C, Kim F, Park E, Lee S. Lay health worker intervention improved compliance with hepatitis B vaccination in Asian Americans: randomized controlled trial. PLOS One. 2016;11(9):e0162683. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0162683.

109. Verrept H. What are the roles of intercultural mediators in health care and what is the evidence on their contributions and effectiveness in improving accessibility and quality of care for refugees and migrants in the WHO European Region? Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2019 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/327321, accessed 8 April 2022).

110. Naal H, Mendelsohn R, Brome D, Noubani A, Nabulsi D, Muhieddine D et al. Evaluating a capacity building program on women's health for displaced community health workers in fragile settings in Lebanon. Hum Resour Health. 2021;19(1):37. doi:10.1186/s12960-021-00585-0.

111. Izugbara C, Muthuri S, Muuo S, Egesa C, Franchi G, McAlpine A et al. "They say our work is not halal": experiences and challenges of refugee community workers involved in gender-based violence prevention and care in Dadaab, Kenya. J Refug Stud. 2020;33(3):521–36. doi:10.1093/jrs/fey055.

112. Asia-Pacific migration report 2020: assessing implementation of the global compact for migration. Bangkok: United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; 2020 (https://www.unescap.org/resources/asia-pacific-migration-report-2020, accessed 8 April 2022).

113. Regolamento recante disposizioni sul funzionamento e l'organizzazione dell'Istituto Nazionale per la promozione della salute delle popolazioni migranti e per il contrasto delle malattie della poverta [Regulation outlining provisions on the functioning and organisation of the National Institute for Health Promotion of Migrant Populations and for combating poverty-related diseases]. Rome: Ministero della Salute; 2013 (in Italian; https://www.inmp.it/index.php/ita/content/download/14884/119029/file/Decreto%2022%20febbraio%202013%20n.%2056.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

114. Losco LN, Gemma SFB. Health subjects, territory agents: the community health agent in immigrant primary care. Interface. 2019;23:e180589. doi:10.1590/Interface.180589.

115. Nguyen TT, Tsoh JY, Woo K, Stewart SL, Le GM, Burke A et al. Colorectal cancer screening and Chinese Americans: efficacy of lay health worker outreach and print materials. Am J Prev Med. 2017;52(3):e67–76. doi:10.1016/j.amepre.2016.10.003.

116. Ross SET, Gibbs BB, Documet PI, Pate RR. ANDALE Pittsburgh: results of a promotora-led, home-based intervention to promote a healthy weight in Latino preschool children. BMC Public Health. 2018;18(1):360. doi:10.1186/s12889-018-5266-3.

117. Sepúlveda C, Cabieses B. Rol del facilitador intercultural para migrantes internacionales en centros de salud chilenos: perspectivas de cuatro grupos de actores clave [Role of the intercultural facilitator for international migrants in Chilean health centres: perspectives from four groups of key actors]. Rev Peru Med Exp Salud Publica. 2019;36(4):592–600 (in Spanish). doi:10.17843/rpmesp.2019.364.4683.

118. MacFarlane A, Huschke S, Pottie K, Hauck FR, Griswold K, Harris MF. Barriers to the use of trained interpreters in consultations with refugees in four resettlement countries: a qualitative analysis using normalisation process theory. BMC Fam Pract. 2020;21(1):259. doi:10.1186/s12875-020-01314-7.

119. Ursu P, Nitzan D, Şener S, Sucaklı B, Şimşek M, Beqiri M et al. Protracted emergency in Turkey: supporting provision of essential health services to Syrians under temporary protection. Public Health Panor. 2018;04(01):120–5 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/325072, accessed 8 April 2022).

120. Oakley S, Grealish L, Coyne E. Telling their story: a qualitative descriptive study of the lived experience of expatriate palliative care nurses in the United Arab Emirates. Eur J Oncol Nurs. 2020;48:101793. doi:10.1016/j.ejon.2020.101793.

121. World Refugee Day: WHO training enables Syrian doctors and nurses to provide health care in Turkey. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2017 (https://www.euro.who.int/en/countries/turkey/news/news/2017/06/world-refugee-day-who-training-enables-syrian-doctors-and-nurses-to-provide-health-care-in-turkey, accessed 8 April 2022).

122. Primary health care in the Western Pacific Region: looking back and future directions. Manila: WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/276248, accessed 8 April 2022).

123. Healee D, Inada K. Working with difference: thematic concepts of Japanese nurses working in New Zealand. Nurs Health Sci. 2016;18(1):91–6. doi:10.1111/nhs.12246.

124. Jenkins B, Huntington A. "We are the international nurses": an exploration of internationally qualified nurses' experiences of transitioning to New Zealand and working in aged care. Nurs Prax N Z. 2016;32(2):9–20. doi:10.36951/ngpxnz.2016.006.

125. Joseph B, Olasoji M, Moss C, Cross W. Transition experiences of Indian nurses into Australian mental health system. J Transcult Nurs. 2022;33(1):41–8. doi:10.1177/10436596211026373.

126. Timilsina Bhandari KK, Xiao LD, Belan I. Job satisfaction of overseas-qualified nurses working in Australian hospitals. Int Nurs Rev. 2015;62(1):64–74. doi:10.1111/inr.12146.

127. Aggar C, Shinners L, Thomas T, Stockhausen L. Experiences of internationally qualified registered nurses enrolled in a bridging program in Australia: a pilot study. Collegian. 2020;27(3):298–303. doi:10.1016/j.colegn.2019.09.003.

128. Marcus K, Purwaningrum F, Short S. Towards more effective health workforce governance: the case of overseas-trained doctors. Aust J Rural Health. 2021;29(1):52–60. doi:10.1111/ajr.12692.

129. Wells R, Abo-Hilal M, Steel Z, Hunt C, Plested B, Hassan M et al. Community readiness in the Syrian refugee community in Jordan: a rapid ecological assessment tool to build psychosocial service capacity. Am J Orthopsychiatry. 2020;90(2):212–22. doi:10.1037/ort0000404.

130. Gatter M. Preserving order: narrating resilience as threat in Jordan's Azraq refugee camp. Territ Polit Gov. 2021;1:1–17. doi:10.1080/21622671.2020.1860812.

131. Abdalla FM, Omar MA, Badr EE. Contribution of Sudanese medical diaspora to the healthcare delivery system in Sudan: exploring options and barriers. Hum Resour Health. 2016;14:28. doi:10.1186/s12960-016-0123-x.

132. Saluja S, Rudolfson N, Massenburg BB, Meara JG, Shrime MG. The impact of physician migration on mortality in low and middle-income countries: An economic modelling study. BMJ Glob Health. 2020;5(1):e001535. doi:10.1136/bmjgh-2019-001535.

133. Policy brief for the global policy advisory council: the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) and health worker migration. Washington (DC): Aspen Institute; 2008 (https://www.aspeninstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/files/content/images/GCC%20and%20HWM%20Policy%20Brief.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

134. Kurniati A, Chen C-M, Efendi F, Ogawa R. A deskilling and challenging journey: the lived experience of Indonesian nurse returnees. Int Nurs Rev. 2017;64(4):494–501. doi:10.1111/inr.12352.

135. Tangcharoensathien V, Travis P, Tancarino AS, Sawaengdee K, Chhoedon Y, Hassan S et al. Managing in- and out-migration of health workforce in selected countries in South East Asia region. Int J Health Policy Manag. 2018;7(2):137–43. doi:10.15171/ijhpm.2017.49.

136. Efendi F, Oda H, Kurniati A, Hadjo SS, Nadatien I, Ritonga IL. Determinants of nursing students' intention to migrate overseas to work and implications for sustainability: the case of Indonesian students. Nurs Health Sci. 2021;23(1):103–12. doi:10.1111/nhs.12757.

137. Contribution of migrant doctors and nurses to tackling COVID-19 crisis in OECD countries. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2020 (https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/social-issues-migration-health/contribution-of-migrant-doctors-and-nurses-to-tackling-covid-19-crisis-in-oecd-countries_2f7bace2-en, accessed 8 April 2022).

138. Botezat A, Ramos R. Physicians' brain drain - a gravity model of migration flows. Glob Health. 2020;16(1):7. doi:10.1186/s12992-019-0536-0.

139. Motlhatlhedi K, Nkomazana O. Home is home: Botswana's return migrant health workers. PLOS One. 2018;13(11):e0206969. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0206969.

140. WHO guideline on health workforce development, attraction, recruitment and retention in rural and remote areas: a summary. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/341130, accessed 8 April 2022).

141. Recognition of qualifications and competences of migrants. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2015 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/recognition_qualifications_competencesofmigrants.pdf, accessed 16 April 2022).

142. What a waste: ensure migrants and refugees' qualifications and prior learning are recognized. Paris: United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization; 2018 (https://unesdoc.unesco.org/ark:/48223/pf0000366312, accessed 16 April 2022).

143. Human mobility, shared opportunities: a review of the 2009 human development report and the way ahead. New York: United Nations Development Programme; 2020 (https://www.undp.org/sites/g/files/zskgke326/files/publications/UNDP-IOM-Human-Mobility-Shared-Opportunities.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

144. Honein-Abouhaidar G, Noubani A, El Arnaout N, Ismail S, Nimer H, Menassa M et al. Informal healthcare provision in Lebanon: an adaptive mechanism among displaced Syrian health professionals in a protracted crisis. Confl Health. 2019;13(1):40. doi:10.1186/s13031-019-0224-y.

145. López-Entrambasaguas OM, Martínez-Linares JM, Linares-Abad M, Calero-García MJ. Is it possible to become a nurse in a refugee camp? Int J Environ Res Public Health. 2019;16(18):3414. doi:10.3390/ijerph16183414.

146. Resolution WHA63.16. WHO global code of practice on the international recruitment of health personnel. In: Sixty-third World Health Assembly, Geneva, 17–21 May 2010. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2010:31 (WHA63/2010/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA63-REC1/WHA63_REC1-en.pdf).

147. Resolution WHA69.19. Global strategy on human resources for health: workforce 2030. In: Sixty-ninth World Health Assembly, Geneva, 23–28 May 2016. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2016:43–46 (WHA69/2016/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA69-REC1/A69_2016_REC1-en.pdf#page=1).

148. WHO global code of practice on the international recruitment of health personnel. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2021 (https://www.who.int/publications/m/item/nri-2021, accessed 16 April 2022).

149. Global strategy on human resources for health: workforce 2030. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2016 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/250368/, accessed 16 April 2022).

150. National health workforce accounts: a handbook. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2017 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/259360, accessed 16 April 2022).

151. Socha-Dietrich K, Dumont JC. International migration and movement of doctors to and within OECD countries - 2000 to 2018: developments in countries of destination and impact on countries of origin. Paris: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; 2021 (OECD Health Working Papers no. 126; https://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/social-issues-migration-health/international-migration-and-movement-of-doctors-to-and-within-oecd-countries-2000-to-2018_7ca8643e-en, accessed 16 April 2022).

152. Ennis CA, Walton-Roberts M. Labour market regulation as global social policy: the case of nursing labour markets in Oman. Glob Soc Policy. 2018;18(2):169–88. doi:10.1177/1468018117737990.

153. AlRuthia Y, Alsenaidy MA, Alrabiah HK, AlMuhaisen A, Alshehri M. The status of licensed pharmacy workforce in Saudi Arabia: a 2030 economic vision perspective. Hum Resour Health. 2018;16(1):28. doi:10.1186/s12960-018-0294-8.

154. Gillani SW, Rahman SA, Mohammad Abdul MI, Sulaiman SAS. Assessment of community pharmacists' perceptions of healthcare services in Saudi Arabia. J Pharm Health Serv Res. 2017;8(4):269–74. doi:10.1111/jphs.12183.

155. Usman SK, Moosa S, Abdullah AS. Navigating the health system in responding to health workforce challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic: the case of Maldives (short case). Int J Health Plann Manage. 2021;36(suppl 1):182–9. doi:10.1002/hpm.3136.

156. Bellamy K, Ostini R, Martini N, Kairuz T. Insights from the coalface: barriers to accessing medicines and pharmacy services for resettled refugees from Africa. Aust J Prim Health. 2019;25(2):118–24. doi:10.1071/PY18092.

157. Fouratt CE, Voorend K. Esquivando al estado: prácticas privadas en el uso de los servicios de salud entre inmigrantes nicaragüenses en Costa Rica [Evading the state: private practices in the use of health services among Nicaraguan migrants in Costa Rica]. Anu Estud Centroam. 2019;45:373–403 (in Spanish). doi:10.15517/aeca.v45i0.36863.

158. Saiyed S, Siddiqui F, Gunja A. Providing healthcare in the camps of the Rohingya. London: British Medical Association; 2018 (https://blogs.bmj.com/bmj/2018/12/31/providing-healthcare-in-the-camps-of-the-rohingya/, accessed 8 April 2022).

159. Doherty M, Power L, Petrova M, Gunn S, Powell R, Coghlan R et al. Illness-related suffering and need for palliative care in Rohingya refugees and caregivers in Bangladesh: a cross-sectional study. PLOS Med. 2020;17(3):e1003011. doi:10.1371/journal.pmed.1003011.

160. Doherty M, Khan F. Neglected suffering: The unmet need for palliative care in Cox's Bazar. London: World Child Cancer; 2018 (https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Neglected%20Suffering.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

161. Al Alawneh M, Nuaimi N, Basheti IA. Pharmacists in humanitarian crisis settings: assessing the impact of pharmacist-delivered home medication management review service to Syrian refugees in Jordan. Res Soc Adm Pharm. 2019;15(2):164–72. doi:10.1016/j.sapharm.2018.04.008.

162. Sethi S, Jonsson R, Skaff R, Tyler F. Community-based noncommunicable disease care for Syrian refugees in Lebanon. Glob Health Sci Pract. 2017;5(3):495–506. doi:10.9745/GHSP-D-17-00043.

163. At a glance: health access and utilization survey among non-camp refugees in Lebanon – November 2015. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2015 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/glance-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-non-camp-refugees-lebanon-november, accessed 29 April 2022).

164. At a glance: health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon – September 2016. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2016 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/glance-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-september, accessed 29 April 2022).

165. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon – November 2017. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2017 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-november-2017, accessed 29 April 2022).

166. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon – December 2018. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2018 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-december-2018, accessed 29 April 2022).

167. Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon – November 2019. Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2019 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-november-2019, accessed 29 April 2022).

168. United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees: Health access and utilization survey among Syrian refugees in Lebanon (October 2020). Geneva: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Public Health; 2020 (https://reliefweb.int/report/lebanon/unhcr-health-access-and-utilization-survey-among-syrian-refugees-lebanon-october-2020, accessed 29 April 2022).

169. Hu J, Wang Z. Non-prescribed antibiotic use and general practitioner service utilisation among Chinese migrants in Australia. Aust J Prim Health. 2016;22(5):434–9. doi:10.1071/PY15076.

170. Rasheed NA, Hussein NR. Methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus carriage rate and molecular characterization of the staphylococcal cassette chromosome mec among Syrian refugees in Iraq. Int J Infect Dis. 2020;91:218–22. doi:10.1016/j.ijid.2019.12.006.

171. Masoumi-Asl H, Gouya MM, Rahbar M, Sabourian R. The epidemiology and antimicrobial resistance of cholera cases in Iran during 2013. Iran J Microbiol. 2016;8(4):232–7. PMID:28210461.

172. Bonniface M, Nambatya W, Rajab K. An evaluation of antibiotic prescribing practices in a rural refugee settlement district in Uganda. Antibiotics. 2021;10(2):172. doi:10.3390/antibiotics10020172.

173 Freidl GS, Tostmann A, Curvers M, Ruijs WLM, Smits G, Schepp R et al. Immunity against measles, mumps, rubella, varicella, diphtheria, tetanus, polio, hepatitis A and hepatitis B among adult asylum seekers in the Netherlands, 2016. Vaccine. 2018;36(12):1664–72. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2018.01.079.

174. Napolitano F, Gualdieri L, Santagati G, Angelillo IF. Knowledge and attitudes toward HPV infection and vaccination among immigrants and refugees in Italy. Vaccine. 2018;36(49):7536–41. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2018.10.050.

175. Jablonka A, Solbach P, Wöbse M, Manns MP, Schmidt RE, Wedemeyer H et al. Seroprevalence of antibodies and antigens against hepatitis A-E viruses in refugees and asylum seekers in Germany in 2015. Eur J Gastroenterol Hepatol. 2017;29(8):939–45. doi:10.1097/MEG.0000000000000889.

176. Hvass AMF, Norredam M, Sodemann M, Thomsen MK, Christian W. Are refugees arriving in Denmark an under-immunised group for measles? A cross-sectional serology study. Vaccine. 2020;38(13):2788–94. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2020.02.025.

177. Marek E, D'Cruz G, Katz Z, Szilard I, Berenyi K, Feiszt Z. Improving asylum seekers' health awareness in a Hungarian refugee reception centre. Health Promot Int. 2019;34(5):e35–46. doi:10.1093/heapro/day066.

178. Fahrni O, Posfay-Barbe KM, Nm W. Immunisation against hepatitis A in migrant children: three vaccination strategies, a retrospective study. Pediatr Infect Dis J. 2020;39(2):164–9. doi:10.1097/INF.0000000000002526.

179. Spadea T, Fano V, Piovesan C, Rusciani R, Salamina G, Greco G et al. Early childhood vaccination coverage and timeliness by macro-area of origin in children born to foreign women residing in Italy. Public Health. 2021;196:138–45. doi:10.1016/j.puhe.2021.05.025.

180. Fabiani M, Fano V, Spadea T, Piovesan C, Bianconi E, Rusciani R et al. Comparison of early childhood vaccination coverage and timeliness between children born to Italian women and those born to foreign women residing in Italy: a multi-centre retrospective cohort study. Vaccine. 2019;37(16):2179–87. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2019.03.023.

181. Fabiani M, Di Napoli A, Riccardo F, Gargiulo L, Declich S, Petrelli A. [Differences in influenza vaccination coverage among subgroups of adult immigrants residing in Italy at risk for complications (2012–2013)]. Epidemiol Prev. 2017;41(3-4 suppl 1):50–6 (in Italian). doi:10.19191/EP17.3-4S1.P050.065.

182. Fabiani M, Riccardo F, Napoli AD, Gargiulo L, Declich S, Petrelli A. Differences in influenza vaccination coverage between adult immigrants and Italian citizens at risk for influenza-related complications: a cross-sectional study. PLOS One. 2016;11(11):e0166517. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0166517.

183. De Vito E, de Waure C, Specchia ML, Ricciardi W. Public health aspects of migrant health: a review of the evidence on health status for undocumented migrants in the European region. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2015 (Health Evidence Network synthesis report 42; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326342, accessed 8 April 2022).

184. De Vito E, Parente P, de Waure C, Poscia A, Ricciardi W. A review of evidence on equitable delivery, access and utilization of immunization services for migrants and refugees in the WHO European Region. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2017 (Health Evidence Network synthesis report 53; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/326288, accessed 8 April 2022).

185. Jablonka A, Happle C, Grote U, Schleenvoigt BT, Hampel A, Dopfer C. Measles, mumps, rubella, and varicella seroprevalence in refugees in Germany in 2015. Infection. 2016;44(6):781–7. doi:10.1007/s15010-016-0926-7.

186. Hargreaves S, Nellums LB, Ramsay M, Saliba V, Majeed A, Mounier-Jack S et al. Who is responsible for the vaccination of migrants in Europe? Lancet. 2018;391(10132):1752–4. doi:10.1016/S0140-6736(18)30846-8.

187. Migration health annual report 2017. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2017 (https://publications.iom.int/system/files/pdf/mhd_ar2017.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

188. Kaji A, Parker DM, Chu CS, Thayatkawin W, Suelaor J, Charatrueangrongkun R et al. Immunisation coverage in migrant school children along the Thailand-Myanmar border. J Immigr Minor Health. 2016;18(5)1038–45. doi:10.1007/s10903-015-0294-x.

189. Harvey B, Dalal W, Amin F, McIntyre E, Ward S, Merrill RD et al. Planning and implementing a targeted polio vaccination campaign for Somali mobile populations in northeastern Kenya based on migration and settlement patterns. Ethn Health. 2022;27(4):817–32. doi:10.1080/13557858.2020.1838455.

190. Positioning demand generation in national EPI planning and implementation process: a quick guide to assist immunization and communication planners and managers. Brazzaville: WHO Regional Office for Africa; 2018 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/273314, accessed 8 April 2022).

191. Masters NB, Wagner AL, Carlson BF, Muuo SW, Mutua MK, Boulton ML. Childhood vaccination in Kenya: socioeconomic determinants and disparities among the Somali ethnic community. Int J Public Health. 2019;64(3):313–22. doi:10.1007/s00038-018-1187-2.

192. Okiror S, Toure B, Davis B, Hydarov R, Ram B, Nwogu C et al. Lessons learnt from interregional and interagency collaboration in polio outbreak response in the Horn of Africa. J Immunol Sci. 2021;Special Issue(2):40–7. doi:10.29245/2578-3009/2021/S2.1112.

193. Brownwright TK, Dodson ZM, van Panhuis WG. Spatial clustering of measles vaccination coverage among children in sub-Saharan Africa. BMC Public Health. 2017;17(1):957. doi:10.1186/s12889-017-4961-9.

194. Ng AHC, Fobel R, Fobel C, Lamanna J, Rackus DG, Summers A et al. A digital microfluidic system for serological immunoassays in remote settings. Sci Transl Med. 2018;10(438):eaar6076. doi:10.1126/scitranslmed.aar6076.

195. Migration governance in the Caribbean: report on the island states of the commonwealth Caribbean. Geneva: International Organization for Migration; 2018 (https://caribbeanmigration.org/sites/default/files/repository/regional_report_on_migration_governance_in_the_island_states_of_the_commonwealth_caribbean.pdf, accessed 8 April 2022).

196. Allen EM, Lee HY, Pratt R, Vang H, Desai JR, Dube A et al. Facilitators and barriers of cervical cancer screening and human papilloma virus vaccination among Somali refugee women in the United States: a qualitative analysis. J Transcult Nurs. 2019;30(1):55–63. doi:10.1177/1043659618796909.

197. Mitchell T, Dalal W, Klosovsky A, Yen C, Phares C, Burkhardt M et al. An immunization program for US-bound refugees: development, challenges, and opportunities 2012–present. Vaccine. 2021;39(1):68–77. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2020.10.047.

198. Williams WW, Lu P-J, O'Halloran A, Kim DK, Grohskopf LA, Pilishvili T et al. Surveillance of vaccination coverage among adult populations: United States, 2015. MMWR Surveill Summ. 2017;66(11):1–28. doi:10.15585/mmwr.ss6611a1.

199. Abdi I, Menzies R, Seale H. Barriers and facilitators of immunisation in refugees and migrants in Australia: an east-African case study. Vaccine. 2019;37(44):6724–9. doi:10.1016/j.vaccine.2019.09.025.

200. Charania NA, Paynter J, Lee AC, Watson DG, Turner NM. Exploring immunisation inequities among migrant and refugee children in New Zealand. Hum Vaccines Immunother. 2018;14(12):3026–33. doi:10.1080/21645515.2018.1496769.

201. Chung HJ, Han SH, Kim H, Finkelstein JL. Childhood immunisations in China: disparities in health care access in children born to North Korean refugees. BMC Int Health Hum Rights. 2016;16(1):13. doi:10.1186/s12914-016-0085-z.

202. Charania NA, Paynter J, Lee AC, Watson DG, Turner NM. Vaccine-preventable disease-associated hospitalisations among migrant and non-migrant children in New Zealand. J Immigr Minor Health. 2020;22(2):223–31. doi:10.1007/s10903-019-00888-4.

203. Roberton T, Weiss W, Doocy S; Jordan Health Access Survey Team; Lebanon Health Access Survey Team. Challenges in estimating vaccine coverage in refugee and displaced populations: results from household surveys in Jordan and Lebanon. Vaccines. 2017;5(3):22. doi:10.3390/vaccines5030022.

204. Rossi R, Assaad R, Rebeschini A, Hamadeh R. Vaccination coverage cluster surveys in middle Dreib – Akkar, Lebanon: comparison of vaccination coverage in children aged 12–59 months pre- and post-vaccination campaign. PLOS One. 2016;11(12):e0168145. doi:10.1371/journal.pone.0168145.

205. SDG indicators: global indicator framework for the Sustainable Development Goals and targets of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. New York: United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (https://unstats.un.org/sdgs/indicators/indicators-list/, accessed 30 April 2022).

206. Strategy and action plan for refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region. In: Sixty-sixth Regional Committee for Europe: Copenhagen, 12–15 September 2016. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2016 (EUR/RC66/8; https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/338085, accessed 9 April 2022).

207. Collection and integration of data on refugee and migrant health in the WHO European Region. Copenhagen: WHO Regional Office for Europe; 2020 (https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/337694, accessed 9 April 2022).

208. Global action plan on promoting the health of refugees and migrants, 2019–2023. In: Seventy-second World Health Assembly, Geneva, 20–28 May 2019. Resolutions and decisions, annexes. Geneva: World Health Organization; 2019:Annex 5 (WHA72/2019/REC/1; https://apps.who.int/gb/ebwha/pdf_files/WHA72-REC1/A72_2019_REC1-en.pdf).

209. Tschirhart N, Thi SS, Swe LL, Nosten F, Foster AM. Treating the invisible: gaps and opportunities for enhanced TB control along the Thailand-Myanmar border. BMC Health Serv Res. 2017;17(1):29. doi:10.1186/s12913-016-1954-9.

210. Health of refugees and migrants: regional situation analysis, practices, experiences, lessons learned and ways forward. New Delhi: WHO Regional Office for South-East Asia; 2018 (https://www.who.int/docs/default-source/documents/publications/health-of-refugees-and-migrants-searo-2018.pdf?sfvrsn=b7c1ad1f_1, accessed 29 April 2022).

211. Wen S, Harvard KE, Gueye CS, Canavati SE, Chancellor A, Ahmed B-N et al. Targeting populations at higher risk for malaria: a survey of national malaria elimination programmes in the Asia Pacific. Malar J. 2016;15(1):271. doi:10.1186/s12936-016-1319-1.

212. Zenner D, Méndez AR, Schillinger S, Val E, Wickramage K. Health and illness in migrants and refugees arriving in Europe: analysis of the electronic Personal Health Record system. J Travel Med. 2022;2:taac035. doi:10.1093/jtm/taac035.

